

TIGHT BINDING BOOK

text problem book

UNIVERSAL
LIBRARY

OU_166653

UNIVERSAL
LIBRARY

THE BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

FORTY-SECOND ANNUAL CUMULATION

MARCH 1946 TO FEBRUARY 1947 INCLUSIVE
WITH CUMULATED INDEX, 1942-1946

EDITED BY MERTICE M. JAMES

AND DOROTHY BROWN

MANAGING EDITOR
GLADYS M. DUNN

NEW YORK
THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY

1947

Published 1947
Printed in the United States of America

PREFACE

The forty-second annual volume of the Book Review Digest contains information on approximately 3500 books, published during 1945 and 1946 in the United States, with a few published in England and Canada.

No books of 1947 imprint are included here, but reviews from January and February periodicals have been used when available. The volume also contains the cumulated subject and title index to books entered in the Book Review Digest from March 1942 thru February 1947.

This year The San Francisco Chronicle has been added to the list of publications from which reviews are clipped. Owing to a newspaper strike in Springfield, Massachusetts, no numbers of the Springfield Republican have been received since September, but numbers for the earlier months of the year are entered.

In April, Miss Gladys Dunn from the Paterson, New Jersey, Library, joined the staff of the Book Review Digest as managing editor.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

- Am Anthropol—American Anthropologist. $6. American Anthropological Association, B. Weltzner, American Museum of Natural History, New York
- Am Chem Soc J—Journal of the American Chemical Society. $8.50. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.
- Am Econ R—American Economic Review. Paul T. Homan, managing ed. $5; free to members. American Economic Assn, Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill.
- Am Hist R—American Historical Review. Guy Stanton Ford, managing ed. $5; free to members of the American Historical Assn. Macmillan Co, 60 Fifth Av, New York 11
- Am J Psychol—American Journal of Psychology. $6.50. Morrill Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.
- Am J Pub Health—American Journal of Public Health and The Nation's Health. C.-E. A. Winslow, ed. $5. American Public Health Assn, 1790 Broadway, New York 19
- Am J Soc—American Journal of Sociology. Herbert Blumer, ed. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Am Pol Sci R—American Political Science Review. Frederic A. Ogg, managing ed. $5; free to members. American Political Science Assn, 450-458 Ahnapp St, Menasha, Wis.
- Am Soc R—American Sociological Review. $4 (to libraries $3; to students $2.50) American Sociological Society, C. Taeuber, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D.C.
- Ann Am Acad—Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Thorsten Sellin, ed. $5; free to members. 3457 Walnut St, Philadelphia 4
- Atlantic—Atlantic Monthly. $5. Atlantic Monthly Co, 8 Arlington St, Boston 16
- Book Week—Chicago Sun, 400 W. Madison St, Chicago, Ill.
- Booklist—Booklist. $3. American Library Assn, 520 N Michigan Av, Chicago 11
- Bookmark—Bookmark. 50c New York State Library, University of the State of New York press, Albany
- Canadian Forum—Canadian Forum. Eleanor Godfrey, managing ed. $2. Canadian Forum, Ltd, 16 Huntley St, Toronto 5
- Canadian Hist R—Canadian Historical Review. $2. University of Toronto Press, Toronto 5
- Cath World—Catholic World. James M. Gillis, ed. $4. Missionary Society of St Paul the Apostle, 401 W 59th St, New York 19
- Chem & Eng N—Chemical and Engineering News. $2. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.
- Chem & Met Eng—Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering. $3. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc. 330 W 42d St, New York 18
Changed title to Chemical Engineering with August, 1946, issue
- Chem Eng—Chemical Engineering (formerly Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering)
- Christian Century—Christian Century. Charles Clayton Morrison, ed. $5. Christian Century Press, 407 S Dearborn St, Chicago 5
- Christian Science Monitor (Atlantic ed)—Christian Science Monitor. $12. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston 15
- Churchman—Churchman. Guy Emery Shipley, ed. $5. Churchman Co, 425 Fourth Av, New York 16
- Class Philol—Classical Philology. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Commonweal—Commonweal. Edward Skillin, Jr. and Philip Burnham, eds. $5. Commonweal Pub. Co, Inc, 386 Fourth Av, New York 16
- Crozer Q—Crozer Quarterly. $1.50. Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa.
- Current Hist—Current History. D. G. Redmond, ed. $3. Events Pub. Co, Inc, 185 S Second St, Philadelphia 6
- El School J—Elementary School Journal. R. W. Tyler and others, eds. $2.50. Dept. of Education Publications, University of Chicago, 5835 Kimbark Av, Chicago 37
- Eng N—Engineering News-Record. $5. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York 18
- Eng Hist R—English Historical Review. 20s. Longmans, Green & Co, Ltd, 43 Albert Drive, London, SW 19 ($7.50. 55 Fifth Av, New York 3)
- Ethics—Ethics. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Foreign Affairs—Foreign Affairs. Hamilton Fish Armstrong, ed. $5. Council on Foreign Relations, Inc, 58 E 68th St, New York 21
- Geog R—Geographical Review. $5. American Geographical Society, Broadway & 156th St, New York 32
- Harvard Business R—Harvard Business Review. $5. Harvard Business Review, Soldiers Field, Boston 63
- Hibbert J—Hibbert Journal. 10s. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd, 40 Museum St, London, WC 1 ($2.50. Leroy Phillips, 178 Tremont St, Boston)
- Horn Bk—Horn Book. Bertha E. Mahony, ed. $2.50. Horn Book, Inc, 243 Boylston St, Boston 16
- J Geol—Journal of Geology. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- J Home Econ—Journal of Home Economics. Helen P. Hostetter, ed. $3. American Home Economics Assn, 620 Mills Bldg, Washington 6, D.C.
- J Philos—Journal of Philosophy. $4. 515 W 116th St, New York 37
- J Phys Chem—The Journal of Physical Chemistry. $10. Williams & Wilkins Co, Mt Royal & Guilford Aves, Baltimore 2
- J Pol Econ—Journal of Political Economy. Jacob Viner and F. H. Knight, eds. $3.50 University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- J Religion—Journal of Religion. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Kirkus—Bulletin from Virginia Kirkus' Bookshop Service. Service basis, 38 Bank St, New York
- Library J—Library Journal. Karl Brown, ed. $5. R. R. Bowker Co, 62 W 45th St, New York 19
- Library Q—Library Quarterly. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Management R—Management Review. James O. Rice, ed. $5. American Management Assn, 330 W 42d St, New York 18
- Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 78s. Manchester Guardian, 3 Cross St, Manchester; Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 229 W 42d St, New York
- Mod Philol—Modern Philology. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37
- Nation—Nation. Freda Kirchwey, ed. $5. Nation Associates, Inc, 20 Vesey St, New York 7
- New Eng Q—New England Quarterly. $4. M. Ellis, 200 Stevens Hall, Orono, Me.
- New Repub—New Republic. Bruce Bliven and others, eds. $5. Editorial Publications, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York 17

New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation, 32s 6d. 10 Great Turnstile, London, WC 1 (£7 International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)

N Y New Tech Bks—New York Public Library New Technical Books, 250 N Y Public Library, Fifth Av & 43d St, New York

N Y Times—New York Times Book Review, $2. N Y Times Co, Pub, Times Square, New York 18

New Yorker—New Yorker, H. W. Ross, ed. $6. F.R. Pub. Corp, 25 W 43d St, New York 18

Pacific Affairs—Pacific Affairs, $2. 1 E 54th St, New York 22

Poetry—Poetry, Peter DeVries and Marion Strobel, eds, $3. 232 E Erie St, Chicago 11

Pol Sci Q—Political Science Quarterly, John A. Krout, managing ed. $5; free to members. Academy of Political Science, Columbia University, New York 27

San Francisco Chronicle—San Francisco Chronicle, P. C. Smith, ed. $21. Chronicle Pub co, 901 Mission St, San Francisco (19)

Sat R of Lit—Saturday Review of Literature. Norman Cousins, ed. $6. Saturday Review Associates, Inc, 25 W 45th St, New York 19

School & Society—School and Society, $5; free to members. Society for the Advancement of Education, Inc, 15 Amsterdam Av, New York 23

School Arts—School Arts, Pedro deLemos, ed. $4. School Arts, Printers Bldg, 44 Portland St, Worcester 8, Mass.

School R—School Review, R. W. Tyler and others, eds, $2.50 University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Scientific Bk Club R—Scientific Book Club Review, Subscription. Scientific Book Club, Inc, 80 Lafayette St, New York

Social Educ—Social Education, $2. 1201 Sixteenth St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.

Social Forces—Social Forces, $4. Williams & Wilkins Co, Baltimore 2

Social Studies—Social Studies, Arthur C. Bining, ed. $2. McKinley Publishing Co, 809-811 N 19th St, Philadelphia

Special Libraries—Special Libraries, $5. Special Libraries Assn, 31 East Tenth St, New York 3

Spec—Spectator, The Spectator, Ltd. 30s. 99 Gower St, London, WC 1 (£7 International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)

Springf'd Republican—Springfield Republican, $14. Republican Publishing Co, 32 Cypress St, Springfield, Mass.

Subscription Bks Bul—Subscription Books Bulletin, $2. American Library Assn, 520 N Michigan Av, Chicago 11

Survey—Survey Midmonthly, Paul Kellogg, ed. $3. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York 3

Survey G—Survey Graphic, Paul Kellogg, ed. $3. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York 3

Theatre Arts—Theatre Arts, Rosamond Glider, ed. $3.50. Theatre Arts, Inc, 130 W 56th St, New York 19

Time—Time, Henry R. Luce, ed. $5. Time, Inc, 330 E 22d St, Chicago 16

Times [London] Lit Sup—Times Literary Supplement, 17s 4d. Times Publishing Co. Ltd, Printing House Square, London, E.C. 4; $4.15. The Times (London), North American Office, 280 Broadway, New York

U S Quarterly Bkl—United States Quarterly Book List, Joseph P. Blicksenderfer, ed. $1.25 Supt. of Documents, U S Govt Printing Off, Washington 25, D.C.

Weekly Book Review—New York Herald Tribune Weekly Book Review, $1. N Y Tribune, Inc, Publisher, 230 W 41st St, New York

Yale R n s—Yale Review, Helen MacAfee, managing ed. $3. Yale Review, 143 Elm St, New Haven 7, Conn.

In addition to the above list the Book Review Digest sometimes quotes from Cleveland Open Shelf; Columbia Law Review; Harvard Law Review; Publishers' Weekly; Review of Scientific Instruments; Wisconsin Library Bulletin; Yale Law Journal; and other bulletins and papers.

Explanations

The descriptive note is separated from critical notices of a book by a dash.

The plus and minus signs preceding the name of the magazine indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the entire review.

In the reference to a magazine, the first number refers to the volume, the next to the page, the letters to the date and the last figures to the number of words in the review.

Publishers' Directory will be found at the end of this number.

Book Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Literature

Cumulation of monthly numbers March 1946—February 1947

ABAYA, HERNANDO J. Betrayal in the Philippines; with an introd. by Harold L. Ickes. 272p $3 Wyn

991.4 Philippine islands—Politics and government 46-8075

"A native journalist lifts the 'iron curtain' that has obscured the political scene in the Philippines since the war's end. In a strongly-worded document author accuses President Roxas and his associates of imposing a dictatorial regime on the Philippine people. Central theme of book is the struggle between peasant resistance movement (The Hukbala-hap) and the Roxas government. The peasant party's radical request for far-reaching agrarian and social reforms is bitterly opposed by 'strong man' Roxas, who, author claims, is backed by General MacArthur and American industrial interests." (Library J) No index.

"As a book this important volume is poorly written and wretchedly edited. The author's style is obscure and diffuse, and chapter after chapter consists of poorly co-ordinated quotations from official documents and newspaper articles and editorials. If the sensational charges contained in this volume can be substantiated it will prove to be a tragedy that the facts of the case have been so inexpertly presented." Hallett Abend

— Book Week p14 D 1 '46 470w

Booklist 43:130 Ja 1 '47

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 15 '47 360w

Kirkus 14:532 O 15 '46 130w

Reviewed by R. H. McDonough

Library J 71:1460 O 15 '46 110w

"It must be stated in all fairness that the book is in spots not well written, particularly in the earlier chapters. Some of the material is not well organized; there are some minor inaccuracies of date. . . Mr. Abaya has been a newspaperman for a number of years. He served the late President Quezon as confidential secretary before the war. He was a member of the Free Philippines guerrilla organization during the Japanese occupation. The picture he has presented I know to be a true and factual one. His book should be read by all Americans who are not aware of the existence of this American imperialist 'iron curtain' in the Philippines or of what lies behind it. For those Americans who are less naive, or better informed, 'Betrayal in the Philippines' is an excellent and absorbing sourcebook, in fact the only sourcebook." R. F. Million

+ — Nation 163:732 D 21 '46 850w

"Betrayal in the Philippines would have benefited from compression and rearrangement, for it is badly organized. But in a book of this sort, written by an earnest eye-witness, the story is more important than the trimmings. Abaya has written a forceful, angry account of Philippine conditions which deserves a wide reading and should have the effect of making many Americans sit up and take notice of our own activities in the colonial world." L. K. Rosinger

New Repub 115:771 D 9 '46 650w

"Due to the time-lag between writing and publishing, much of Mr. Abaya's material is already outdated. Thus the repeated charges that President Roxas collaborated with the enemy are made absurd by General of the Army Douglas MacArthur's revelation that Roxas was engaged in espionage work for the United States Army. And since MacArthur didn't issue the statement until after Roxas had been elected President, the author's contention that MacArthur threw his weight behind Roxas in the election becomes untenable. . . 'Betrayal in the Philippines' is special pleading of the first order. Anyone who reads it without that fact clearly in mind will get a badly distorted picture of conditions in the Philippines." F. S. Marquardt

— N Y Times p31 D 15 '46 1200w

"A sober and even depressing book."

New Yorker 22:143 N 30 '46 110w

"All that the reviewer knows, directly and by analogy, forces him to accept 'Betrayal in the Philippines' as essentially accurate, essentially just. It is an alarming, a deeply depressing realization. . . The situation is not irredeemable, and the United States is not done with the Philippines. Abaya's book not only is painful reading; it is difficult reading because its torrent of facts roars too insistently; there is too much angry passion in it. But the book is 'must' reading, because the Philippines are with us yet." John Collier

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 Ja 11 '47 800w

Reviewed by W. W. Fertig

— Sat R of Lit 30:15 Ja 11 '47 1550w

"Manuel Acuna Roxas today is President of the Philippine Republic, and it is of dubious value to expound on his alleged collaborationist activities. In this, Mr. Abaya's book is late. However, if it focuses public attention on the pending trials of indicted officials of the Japanese puppet government and helps secure their determined prosecution, it will serve a purpose. Author Hernando Abaya will have earned a 'well done' for his reporting. . . It is the first comprehensive summary of collaborationism in the Philippines, with its political and economic ramifications noted, to reach American readers. As such it deserves attention." M. R. Johnson

Weekly Book Review p7 N 17 '46 900w

✓ ABBOT, CHARLES GREELEY. Earth and the stars. [rev ed] 288p il $3.75 Van Nostrand

520 Astronomy 46-7477

"Dr. Charles G. Abbot was director of the astrophysical observatory of the Smithsonian Institution from 1907 to 1944 and is best known for his researches on the sun. In the twenty-one years since the first edition of this book [Book Review Digest, 1926] astronomy has grown and changed. Since his retirement Dr. Abbot has rewritten it to bring it up to date." (Weekly Book Review) The book is for non-technical readers, and not for the professional astronomer. Glossary of commonly used astronomical terms. Index.

ABBOTT, C. G.—Continued

"A well-written informative introduction to many problems that still beset the professional astronomer. It isn't light reading, by any means, but the author takes care to explain technical terminology as he goes along."
H. B. Nichols

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 O 19 '46 500w

"It is a well illustrated and authoritative textbook for the general public, with no effort at entertainment or embellishment, but packed with sound information on the universe and the researches which revealed its details."

+ Weekly Book Review p35 O 6 '46 90w

ABBOTT, CHARLES CORTEZ. Management of the federal debt. 194p $2.50 McGraw

336.34 Debts, Public—U.S. 46-6120

"This book is devoted principally to the meaning and significance of the debt, and attempts to tell the effects of the debt, the relation of debt management to other fiscal policy, and the importance of finding the correct solution. It reviews U.S. Treasury plans and other proposals, but does not put forth any over-all program." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by Hugo Sonnenschein
Book Week p7 D 15 '46 240w

"Although the author raises many questions he leaves unanswered, the book is perhaps the most complete analysis of the problem yet published, and points out why the solution of debt management problems is important to the citizen as well as to the Treasury, banks, insurance companies, and other businesses."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:296 D '46 200w

ABBOTT, LEONARD DALTON, ed. Masterworks of economics; digests of 10 great classics. (Masterworks ser) 754p $4 Doubleday

330.8 Economics 46-3484

Condensations of ten significant books on political economy. Contents: England's treasure by foreign trade, by Thomas Mun; Reflections on the formation and distribution of wealth, by A. R. J. Turgot; The wealth of nations, by Adam Smith; An essay on the principle of population, by T. R. Malthus; Principles of political economy and taxation, by David Ricardo; A new view of society, by Robert Owen; Principles of political economy, by J. S. Mill; Capital, by Karl Marx; Progress and poverty, by Henry George; The theory of the leisure class, by Thorstein Veblen. Biographical notes.

Booklist 42:311 Je 1 '46

"An exceedingly valuable collection of the classics of the literature of economics."
+ Kirkus 14:29 Ja 15 '46 210w

"Will probably be of interest mostly to neophytes and casual readers. People more seriously concerned with economic doctrine are apt to be impatient with the book's catholicity."
New Yorker 22:98 My 11 '46 80w

ABBOTT, NABIA. Two queens of Baghdad. 277p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Khalizuran. Zubaidah A46-3799

The two queens studied in this scholarly volume, are Khalizuran, the mother of "the most renowned of the caliphs of Baghdad," Harun al-Rashid, and Zubaidah, his wife. Index.

Am J Soc 52:379 Ja '47 10w

"Miss Abbott writes with full appreciation of the personalities of Khalizuran and Zubaidah and of the drama of their lives. Though her first purpose is to provide a sound and scholarly history, the lay reader will find in her 'Two Queens of Baghdad' illumination of what is to most of us an unknown field of history, and not a little entertainment as well." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ag 18 '46 550w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p89 D 1 '46 170w

"A volume which throws light on a hitherto unexplored field." P. J. Searles
+ Weekly Book Review p22 O 6 '46 180w

ABEND, HALLETT. Reconquest; its results and responsibilities. 305p $2.75 Doubleday

940.53144 World war, 1939-1945. Reconstruction (1939-) 46-5711

"In mid-1945 Hallett Abend was a member of a party of writers invited by the War Department to make an aerial tour of reconquered territories and rear areas scattered over North Africa, Asia and Europe. On the whole the party, which included both men and women, was of serious disposition and honestly determined to turn the publicity stunt to good account. . . A very competent and likable pilot flew the ship safely to Casablanca, Karachi, Kunming and many other way-points, then back westward to complete a vast loop of 32,000 miles. . . Having had a full year to arrange his impressions, Mr. Abend tells the inside story of this super-junket." N Y Times

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt
Book Week p6 Ag 25 '46 500w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin
Commonweal 44:532 S 13 '46 650w
Foreign Affairs 25:347 Ja '47 50w

"This isn't tops for Abend, but it is provocative and revealing reportage—with definite news value. . . Good reading."

+ Kirkus 14:270 Je 1 '46 340w

"Mr. Abend is 'an old China hand,' as they say, and very much up to the mark. The staccato paragraphs move along as easily as a dog wags his tail. So long, too, as Mr. Abend sticks close to the trip itself, to things actually experienced, he is completely absorbing. . . But when Mr. Abend branches out, and branch out unfortunately he does, as for instance into synopses of Japanese and Chinese history, he suddenly reads like the World Almanac." E. B. Garside

+ — N Y Times p3 Ag 25 '46 800w

"This is a disillusioned and not very cheerful book, but a compelling one."

New Yorker 22:91 Ag 17 '46 80w
San Francisco Chronicle p32 D 1 '46 150w

"It is an excellent account: best when the writer, a former New York Times correspondent in the Far East, and an old China hand, is writing about the Orient. Whisked around the world by the Air Transport Command, he pays his respects to that extraordinary organization. . . I hope this book will be read by our occupation armies overseas, and some of their fellow Americans at home. It might be helpful in closing the disastrous gulf between our brilliant technical competence and our almost incredible political ineptitude. But I despair of it." D. L. Cohn

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 O 12 '46 800w

"An expert piece of journalism, clear, explanatory, shot with despair. It is not a pleasant book, for Mr. Abend refuses to ladle out soothing syrup." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 1 '46 950w

ABRAHAM, GERALD ERNEST HEAL, ed. Music of Tchaikovsky [Eng title: Tchaikovsky: a symposium]. 277p $3.75 Norton [9s 6d Drummond]

780.92 Tchaikovsky, Peter Ilyitch 46-11837

"This is a musical book planned on novel lines; it consists of chapters on various aspects of Tchaikovsky's music contributed by well-known critics. . . The volume has been planned to cover the whole of the composer's output, or at any rate all of it that matters, and the omission of a long biographical section has made possible a much more thorough and detailed discussion of the music than would otherwise be possible in a book of this size." (Pref) Contents: Tchaikovsky the man, by Edward Lockspeiser; The symphonies, by Martin Cooper; Works for solo instrument and orchestra, by Eric Blom; Miscellaneous orchestral works, by R. W. Wood; The chamber music, by Colin Mason; The piano music, by A. E. F. Dickinson; Operas and incidental music, by Gerald Abraham; The ballets, by Edwin Evans; The songs, by A. Alshvang; Religious and other choral music, by Gerald Abraham. Chronology. Bibliography

Reviewed by Viola Wahler

Book Week p22 D 8 '46 450w

Booklist 43:116 D 15 '46

"The writing as a rule, reflects broad scholarship and an approach marked by some perspective. Helpful and suggestive, at times penetrating, and almost always couched in language of literary merit, this book meets the high standard of British criticism set by writers such as Sir Donald Tovey." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 71:1623 N 15 '46 140w

Reviewed by Desmond Shawe-Taylor
New Statesman & Nation 32:304 O 26 '46 440w

"I have never seen a book, supposedly devoted to the exposition of an artist's work, which contains so much drastically unfavorable comment, nor any book in this field which adds up to so little. Only the editor's article on the operas tells you anything worth knowing. The whole is about as perfect an example of scholarly stupidity as the literature on music affords." Alfred Frankenstein

San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 22 '46 230w

"The only important aspect of Tchaikovsky's work that seems to be neglected is its place in the history of music in general. There are occasional references to the influence upon Tchaikovsky of some of his predecessors and to his musical relations with some of his contemporaries but as a rule his music is treated as a more or less isolated phenomenon. A discussion of its effect upon his Russian successor and such composers as Sibelius would have been welcome. Taken as a whole the book should prove to be of great value to anyone interested in Tchaikovsky's music." Nathan Broder

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:38 Ja 25 '47 700w

"The book is valuable for making available serious and thorough criticism of Tchaikovsky's whole large output, but Tchaikovsky hardly seems the best candidate for treatment on the method of the symposium. As a symposium it is as successful as one can expect considering the difficulties inherent in the form, for a symposium is nobody's child."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p93 F 28 '46 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p234 My 18 '46 1000w

"The sad truth is that eight of the nine contributors to this book (including the editor himself) dislike Tchaikovsky the man and have an intolerably superior attitude toward his music. Expression of this attitude takes familiar forms: Tchaikovsky is praised in a tone of surprise, castigated because he was Russian and not German. His crime was his departure from the formal methods by which the great German composers, from Bach to Brahms, had produced their music. The resulting book is reactionary in point of view, moralistic in tone. Its ten chapters (two are by the editor) establish no internal reason why Tchaikovsky's music should be discussed in detail at all. . . The best chapter in the book is 'Songs,' by the Soviet musicologist A. Alshvang. It is non-political, and it eschews the party line as faithfully as it eschews reactionary pro-German criticism. Alshvang has been content to discuss Tchaikovsky's songs as songs. He has illuminating and truly critical things to say of each and of them all. As a totality, then, 'The music of Tchaikovsky' is a disheartening book." Herbert Weinstock

+ — Weekly Book Review p32 N 24 '46 900w

ABRAHAMSEN, DORIS CAROLINE (CARYL BRAHMS, pseud), and SKIDELSKY, SIMON JASHA. (S. J. SIMON, pseud). Six curtains for Natasha [Eng title: Six curtains for Stroganov]. 266p $2.50 Lippincott [8s 6d Joseph, M]

46-5866

Story of the ballet in St Petersburg in 1910. The central characters are a young impresario and his ballerina wife. Some of the famous members of the Russian ballet world appear as characters in the novel.

Booklist 43:16 S '46

Kirkus 14:257 Je 1 '46 250w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 14 '45 100w

"This book is a lot of fun—a spoof at ballet, but (as in every well-known satire) the elements of truth are there as well as real knowledge and understanding. 'Six Curtains for Natasha' has humor and pace and mixes truth and fiction with a delightful abandon." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 18 '46 500w

Reviewed by P. H. Bickerton
Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 18 '46 350w

"A good deal funnier than some of the recent productions of these authors. The fantastic inconsequence which has gained them many admirers is apt to pall; but here there is more continuity and consequently more opportunity for genuine humour of character, with less whimsy of the sort that is well enough in small doses but becomes irritating in a full-length book. This is not to say that there is any lack of absurdity, but it is a consistent absurdity in which each ridiculous character is allowed to develop along its own lines."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p593 D 15 '45 280w

"It is the interplay of character, the battles and back-biting of ballerinas and their moushkas, the animosities between ballet directors and, best of all, the sparkling, mad dialogue, which give this book its heady quality." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 18 '46 600w

ABRAHAMSEN, DAVID. Men, mind, and power. 155p $2 Columbia univ. press

914.3 National characteristics, German. Germany—Nazi movement A46-263

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"Abrahamsen seeks to explain how the Germans and the quislings became so aggressive and inhuman. His explanation is drawn less from what he observed and more from the theories of psychiatry. For this reason, the reader feels that he is getting one man's opinion rather than a statement of facts and implications that must be taken into account. The best chapter is that on Vidkun Quisling, about whom the author knows things that the reader usually will not know." A. M. Rose

Am J Soc 51:490 Mr '46 400w

"A single chapter in any of the works of Fromm and Helden, Cantril and Silone, contributes more to the understanding of Nazi psychology than the author's entire badly written and poorly organized book. His lack of logic and of sound psychological insight goes hand in hand with an amazing absence of general education." O. K. Flechtheim

— Am Pol Sci R 40:399 Ap '46 280w

"Reading the little book leaves one with a reinforced conviction that psychiatry and politics admit of a fruitful alliance. Perhaps it is still greater praise to say that the author has managed to conceal his learning under a most becoming cloak of popular writing—a rare feat indeed. . . As an engaging reconnaissance into the jungle of political motivation, the book has considerable merit. It is much less satisfactory as a demonstration in methodology. The range of utilized data is quite limited, and often conjecture substitutes for fact. . . Moreover, Dr. Abrahamsen appears both too quick and too sure in his conclusions." F. M. Marx

+ — Ann Am Acad 243:166 Ja '46 400w

"It seems a superficial job, not up to the author's usual work and there is little in the way of thought or deduction that is new."

— Current Hist 10:352 Ap '46 60w

Reviewed by E. B. Garside

N Y Times p14 F 10 '46 650w

ABRAHAMSEN, DAVID—Continued

"The author's analyses of Nazi personalities like Hitler, Goebbels and Goering are not too convincing, and reveal nothing new. His portrayals of Quisling and Laval are far more striking." Harry Daum

Spring'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 550w

"Perhaps the most important chapter of the book as far as the future is concerned is the last on remodeling the minds of the Germans. This should be carefully studied by all those who are in any way working on the problem of Germany or Japan." A. L. Brush

Survey G 35:53 F '46 1000w

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:54 Mr '46 240w

"Central thesis of the book is unfortunate. It is based on the unproved assumption that nations, like individuals, can be neurotic, or 'maladjusted,' and that the Germans, both masses and leaders, are mostly maladjusted." Gregory Zilboorg

— + Weekly Book Review p28 Mr 31 '46 300w

ABRAHAMSEN, DAVID. Mind and death of a genius. 228p il $3 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Weininger, Otto A46-6073

A long psychological case study of the life and character of Otto Weininger, a young Viennese, who in 1903 at the age of twenty-two published his Sex and Character, and, a few weeks later committed suicide. The author is a member of the Department of psychiatry at Columbia university.

"Over the years 'Sex and Character' has frequently interested both philosophers and psychologists, and Dr. Abrahamson, with great thoroughness, has undertaken to re-create the picture of Weininger as he could reconstruct it from available records and from questioning members of Otto's family. This study of the morbid mind of a man who has been called a genius is primarily for the special student."

Book Week p8 N 17 '46 120w

Current Hist 12:62 Ja '47 40w

"This is a portrait of an abnormal personality rather than an unusual mind, in constant conflict from childhood on. An interpretation of a life believed significant in the history of mental disease, but only for a professional market and within limitations at that."

Kirkus 14:573 N 1 '46 90w

"One deplores in this otherwise valuable study a certain negligence in the use of terms, some of them being used on one page in the strictly scientific sense, on another in the popular sense." Alfred Werner

N Y Times p20 Ja 12 '47 750w

San Francisco Chronicle p31 D 1 '46 70w

ABRAMOWITZ, ISIDORE, ed. Great prisoners. 879p $4.95 Dutton

808.8 Literature—Collections. Prisons 46-2336

An anthology of literature written while the writers were in prison, on trial, or under sentence of death. Each selection is prefaced by an explanatory headnote about the writer and the occasion for the writing. Selections range from Socrates to Sacco and Vanzetti, from James I of Scotland to François Villon. Fifteen of the sixty-odd men and women included were of the twentieth century. Index.

"'The Great Prisoners' illustrates the fallacy that an anthology, to be good, must be widely inclusive. There is good reading in the book, but one has to hunt for it. I think Abramowitz had an absorbing idea but I think he has muffed the execution of it." H. M. Jones

— + Book Week p3 Mr 31 '46 600w

Booklist 42:313 Je 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 20 '46 500w

"Extraordinary for range of interest and high level of readability. The editorial contribution while valuable seems at times over-intellectualized, and may limit the market to a rather highbrow audience."

+ — Kirkus 14:16 Ja '46 150w

"Unusual and even unique collection, useful for many purposes." J. C. Shipman

+ Library J 71:483 Ap 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by Alan Vrooman

N Y Times p14 Ap 14 '46 600w

"An interesting and even valuable book, because of what has been chosen for it and because of the editor's brief introduction to each entry."

+ New Yorker 22:112 Ap 6 '46 120w

"In more than 170 pages of dispassionate, scholarly, but unacademic assertions and comment, the editor of this anthological experiment displays a refined taste, discerning judgment, a catholic knowledge of his subject colored with a salty sense of humor, and an unfaltering pessimism as regards human tolerance." Kurt Weinberg

+ Sat R of Lit 29:25 Ap 13 '46 1000w

Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 7 '46 480w

"This anthology is physically heavy and hard to handle. It is not a book to be read straight through by the unfettered and the comfortable. Its excerpts are to be read and pondered. Crime in one age may become leadership in the next; and vice versa. The word and the spirit can confound chains and contempt, design the future, endure forever." Ernestine Evans

Weekly Book Review p6 J1 21 '46 1350w

Wis Lib Bul 42:113 J1 '46

ABZUG, MARTIN. Spearhead. 272p $2.50 Dial press

46-6950

Short novel about an American artillery battery, covering the few days during the Battle of the Bulge when the men were retreating on account of the German break-thru. The chief characters are Captain Hollis, a weakling transformed into a killer, and Lieutenant Knupfer, a regular army man.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p2 O 6 '46 330w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 71:1049 Ag '46 100w

"'Spearhead' is a well-paced novel, cleanly written. But dramatically, it fails to achieve its purpose. . . Mr. Abzug makes his captain talk sensibly but act like a fool, while his lieutenant acts sensibly and talks like a fool. The reader will be more than a little confused trying to keep up with them." D. D.

N Y Times p34 S 29 '46 340w

"Unfortunately, the novel does not do well by its theme, although it contains many good scenes and all the realistic detail one could wish." George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 3 '46 120w

"Mr. Abzug has written an honest, unpretentious, sometimes moving novel whose sober worth well merits recognition. It would be a great pity if the current prejudice against war books were to deny this promising young writer the encouragement he deserves. . . The story is lean and alive, stripped of everything but life-in-the-instant." John Barkham

+ Sat R of Lit 29:32 O 5 '46 280w

"In showing how they act in a crisis, and how the men under them react, Mr. Abzug makes a grim and graphic contribution to war fiction." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p30 N 3 '46 100w

ACCENT (periodical). Accent anthology; selections from Accent, a quarterly of new literature, 1940-1945; ed. by Kerker Quinn and Charles Shattuck. 687p $4 Harcourt

810.8 American literature—Collections 46-8520

A selection of the best poems, critical prose, and stories which have appeared in the literary magazine Accent, during its first five years of publication. Brief notes on contributors.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p22 D 1 '46 340w

Christian Century 63:1473 D 4 '46 80w

Kirkus 14:574 N 1 '46 120w

"There is irony here, and small reward. For the occasional brilliant and honest piece it publishes, and for its indisputable part in the 'resistance' against commercialism, the magazine Accent has its raison d'être, as an anthology it has very little." Harvey Breit

N Y Times p7 D 29 '46 850w

"As it happens, the stories by the unknowns who were discovered by the magazine's editors are more impressive than those of the celebrated contributors—probably a healthy sign."

+ New Yorker 22:126 N 9 '46 90w

"One of the year's most outstanding volumes in any field." Arthur Foff

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 24 '46 300w

"The poetry is on an unusually high level of quality; the critical articles are competent or better; the story section would have gained by pruning. As a whole the volume seems somewhat less interesting to this reviewer than the recent and similar anthology of selections from the 'Partisan Review'; less interesting because less experimental and more in the middle of the literary road." R. N. Linscott

+ Weekly Book Review p15 Ja 5 '47 400w

ADAMIC, LOUIS. Dinner at the White House. 276p $2.50 Harper

973.917 World war, 1939-1945—Diplomatic history. Roosevelt. Franklin Delano. Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer 46-6421

"Repercussions from the author's Two Way Passage [Book Review Digest, 1941] which advocated using national groups in the U.S. to propagate democracy in postwar Europe. Adamic reports on an intimate White House dinner in 1942 and the impact of his idea on the guests, including Churchill. In the book's second section, he muses on power politics, then and now, and in the third he restates the principles of 'One World' for a suspicious world." Library J

"It is the book of a generous, intelligent, warmhearted man, and it is filled with tidbits of detail concerning the great. Yet it is in dubious taste, often unreasonably bitter, and frequently naive." D. L. Cohn

+ Atlantic 178:171 N '46 270w

Reviewed by Harold Zyskind

Book Week p3 S 1 '46 500w

Booklist 43:51 O 15 '46

Reviewed by E. D. Canham

Christian Science Monitor p16 S 18 '46 500w

"This is a very attractive little capsule-history of the United States Navy. It should serve as a convenient book of quick reference about ships and men, especially as memories begin once more, as they always do, to grow dim." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 23:393 O '46 230w

Kirkus 14:336 J1 15 '46 110w

"Recommended." Scott Adams

+ Library J 71:1046 Ag '46 120w

"The book will be of some interest to those individuals engaged in observing the ineptitude of the modern mind when confronted with modern experience." D. T. Bazelon

Nation 135:386 O 5 '46 500w

"The real merit of this book is not its impassioned plea for One World but its dramatic picture of three great actors: Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill. Louis Adamic has captured the spirit and personality of Roosevelt, the most controversial of the three, as well as, if not better than anyone else I have read. It is far from the final picture, but it comes as close to the truth, I believe, as any yet drawn." Carroll Kilpatrick

+ New Repub 115:331 S 18 '46 600w

"A fascinating study of three great personalities—Churchill and Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt—written with such feeling and suspense that the reader forgets most of the time how short the dinner was and how little, in fact, anybody said. . . It is too bad that Louis Adamic's ardent and generous feelings, which make his portraiture so vivid, should also make his political thinking so sentimental."

A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ N Y Times p7 S 15 '46 1000w

New Yorker 22:110 S 14 '46 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 27 '46 1000w

"Adamic has written a book which is good theatre but bad history. When he departs from the melodrama with which he invests his one meal, his book is sounder if less arresting. His liberalism is clear, informed, sharply expressed. His fears that democratic hopes may be nearly lost deserve respectful attention. Most of his feelings seem to me sound. It is, I think, throughout an honestly intentioned book and a useful and vivid one. And if one meal is magnified almost to the proportions of one world, that seems an honest man's mistake."

Jonathan Daniels

Sat R of Lit 29:20 N 30 '46 550w

Time 48:34 S 2 '46 1000w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager

Weekly Book Review p2 S 8 '46 1650w

ADAMS, CLIFFORD ROSE, and PACKARD, VANCE OAKLEY. How to pick a mate; the guide to a happy marriage. 215p $2.75 Dutton

392.5 Marriage

46-4967

"Director of Marriage Counseling Service at Pennsylvania State College and a staff writer for The American Magazine collaborate on a popular presentation of facts and opinion on sex, mate selection, love, marriage and divorce. Illustrations are drawn from the marriage clinic records." Library J

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson

Atlantic 178:144 S '46 850w

"Presented in a way that anyone with a high school education should be able to comprehend. A good part of the book is given over to questionnaires in which interested persons can gauge their probable ratings as marriage candidates and can do the same for their actual or prospective mates."

+ Book Week p6 J1 28 '46 90w

Kirkus 14:288 Je 15 '46 190w

"Written simply and brightly, from a mental hygiene viewpoint, the book provides wholesome orientation for young people. Experts may question the validity of some end-of-chapter 'tests' and the more experienced reader may find treatment of some subjects rather superficial and be in disagreement with some of the authors' opinions and conclusions." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 71:975 J1 '46 140w

"Every person contemplating marriage or already married would be well advised to read carefully this unique and authoritative book. He will understand all marriages much better as a result."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 3 '46 300w

Spring'd Republican p6 J1 30 '46 240w

Weekly Book Review p33 S 29 '46 350w

ADAMS, MRS FAY (GREENE). Educating America's children; elementary school curriculum and methods. 490p il $3.75 Ronald 372 Education of children. Teaching. Education—Aims and objectives 46-4540

"Presents an elementary-school curriculum and methods aimed at clarifying objectives, materials, and procedures of education on this level. Indexed." School & Society

School & Society 63:397 Je 1 '46 20w

Social Studies 37:285 O '46 20w

ADAMS, MRS HELEN (SIMMONS) (NANCY BARNES, pseud). The wonderful year; il. by Kate Seredy. 185p $2.50 Messner

46-6103

The year Ellen was eleven her father had to go to Colorado to regain his health. There on a fruit-farming ranch Ellen learned to forget her sorrow at leaving her Eastern friends, and to find excitement in a new kind of life. For grades four to seven.

"It's a story of growing up, well and understandingly done, with no dull moments and with really delightful humor." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:166 D '46 40w

Book Week p24 N 10 '46 200w

"Written with real perceptiveness and natural humor, this story gives every evidence of coming out of the author's own experiences and has a timeless, enduring quality."

+ Booklist 43:19 S '46

"Fresh, natural and entertaining." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 31 '46 240w

"Fresh and spontaneous story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:465 N '46 120w

"It's a book that eleven years and up to maturity will enjoy. Illustrated sympathetically and gaily by Kate Seredy."

+ Kirkus 14:264 Je 1 '46 170w

"Ellen's problems, though having their background picturesquely in the ranching country of Colorado, are the problems of most young girls approaching their teens. Her parents are likable flesh-and-blood people, and the boy Ronnie is sufficiently masculine and non-chalant to whet young feminine appetites. Feeling and atmosphere are especially good." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 71:1211 S 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Florence Crowther

N Y Times p18 Ag 13 '46 370w

"A warm and satisfying story." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:142 D 7 '46 70w

"To us, the outstanding quality in this delightful story is its humor. All of the characters, including the animals, possess an underlying humor that never becomes strained or obvious. Ellen herself, with her self-consciousness, her small problems and frustrations, her innate good sense, is both funny and pathetic. Kate Seredy's expressive drawings confirm the character's attractions." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:48 N 9 '46 230w

"Rarely does a child's book present with such simple, unsentimentalized truth the sort of boy-and-girl companionship that may and sometimes does lead to happy marriage, but that will be remembered even if it goes no further, always with tenderness and gratitude." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 15 '46 350w

Wis Lib Bul 42:134 O '46

ADAMS, JAMES DONALD, ed. Treasure chest; an anthology of contemplative prose. 402p $2.50 Dutton

808.8 Literature—Collections

46-25014

An anthology of brief selections from contemplative prose in English. The book is the first of a new group of books to be known as the Dutton companions. The arrangement is roughly chronological by author, beginning with excerpts from the King James version of the Bible, and coming down to current writers. Author index.

"Generally speaking, 'The Treasure Chest' is an excellent antidote for the tribal frenzies, religious bigotries, class snarling and quarreling which make this year of 'peace' so particularly hideous to the contemplative mind." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 Ja 13 '46 500w

Booklist 42:181 F 1 '46

Bookmark 7:8 Mr '46

"Philosophical, reflective, these extracts were drawn from the editor's wide reading in many fields. . . Adams pores over English and American literature with selective hand and discerning eye, and offers veritable jewels of thought, the lofty reflections of some of the greatest minds of all time."

+ Cath World 163:381 Jl '46 220w

"Mr. Adams' selections are largely on the didactic stress. 'An Anthology of Contemplative Prose' is his subtitle, and the contemplation implied is mostly pretty serious, in 'Hera Novissima' mood, medieval, and here and there oppressive. Puritanic, however, it is not, nor chilly. More than half the book is drawn from the nineteenth and twentieth centuries; and, if the wisdom of it seems as a rule rather quaint, it must be because the form, fashion, and content of wisdom are, after all, valuables that come down." W. P. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 19 '46 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '46

Kirkus 13:551 D 15 '46 190w

"There are those who like to read contemplative prose and for them there is a treasure of silver and gold and precious stones, to which time may add but which time cannot destroy. . . Mr. Adams' taste is excellent, with the possible exception of an item on Page 325. His book is a good companion, to go on a journey with, or to have by one's bedside." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 6 '46 900w

New Yorker 21:76 Ja 5 '46 130w

"Of the older material, there is nothing that should prove unfamiliar to a well-read person; but there is also very little that does not merit being read again and again. And in the selections from contemporaries there are happy surprises. . . Less comprehensive and less elaborately organized than 'The Practical Cogitator,' this anthology is a fine well for dipping. But when you dip, be sure to remember Locke on reading or your dipping will prove to be vanity. And the publishers would be well advised to have proof read carefully for a second edition. As it stands, the volume is speckled with typographical errors." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 F 9 '46 1300w

Spring'd Republican p6 F 21 '46 240w

Wis Lib Bul 42:58 Ap '46

ADAMS, JAMES TRUSLOW, ed. Album of American history; v3, 1853-1893. 435p il maps $7.50 Scribner

973 U.S.—Social life and customs. U.S.—History—1865- (44-706)

The third volume in this pictorial history of the United States covers the years 1853 to 1893. For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest 1944 and 1945.

Book Week p9 N 3 '46 120w

Booklist 43:67 N 1 '46

"This volume is open to the same general criticisms as its predecessors. The arrangement of illustrations is often illogical, the captions are mediocre, and the mechanical aspects leave much to be desired. These criticisms, however, should not be allowed to overshadow the outstanding value which is in the pictures themselves. To Americans who do not have access to, or who seldom visit, our great collections of pictorial history these volumes will be priceless treasures, depicting, in a fascinating variety, the road we Americans have traveled down to the present." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 O 23 '46 450w

"This volume (like the earlier ones) suffers in its typographical appearance. There is again a multiplicity of type faces, a 'scattered' look to the pages and an over-all grayness. And a few maps should have been included. Even with these deficiencies the book is a work of prime value, useful to the student and fascinating to the more casual reader, who will find himself engrossed in its many-faceted presentation of American life." C. E. Palmer

+ N Y Times p23 D 15 '46 800w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 25 '46 550w

"This is a fascinating album, and anyone who goes through it can gain a vivid impression of the richly divergent life—also the chaotic and discordant life—of a vigorous and colorful American generation." Dumas Malone
+ Sat R of Lit 29:56 D 7 '46 650w

"Like its predecessors this volume still lacks something essential to history. Pictures are after all only illustrations and pictorial history must, of necessity, be more or less static. Relationships are hard to show and contrasts are more appealing than likenesses. There is, moreover, a constant temptation to present the unusual and to bring in the commonplace as a kind of afterthought. No way has yet been found to depict things intellectual. Interest and direct appeal are, as a result, the Album's great virtue." Avery Craven
+ — Weekly Book Review p6 O 20 '46 600w

ADAMS, JOHN, and ADAMS, JOHN QUINCY. Selected writings of John and John Quincy Adams; ed. and with an introd. by Adrienne Koch and William Peden. 413p $4.50 Knopf
308.2 U.S.—Politics and government—1783-1865 46-6270

Selections from the diaries, autobiographies, public papers, and letters of John Adams and his son John Quincy Adams. There is a long introduction by the editors which comprises a biographical study of the famous father and son, and an interpretation of their place in American history. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 O 20 '46 360w
Booklist 43:128 Ja 1 '47

"The Selected Writings of two of America's early presidents are in themselves not only interesting to the historian but even inspiring to the Christian. This excellent edition, well edited and well printed, gives us a thorough picture of the minds and views of the Adamses." E. V. Kuehnelt-Leddihn
+ Cath World 164:372 Ja '47 400w

"In spite of the quantity and importance of the Adams manuscripts, no extensive collection of John Adams' papers has appeared for nearly a century, while no adequate collection of his son's writings has ever been made. Thus the appearance of The Selected Writings is assured of a hopefully eager audience. The editors are admirably qualified for their task, Miss Koch being a specialist in eighteenth-century philosophy, while Mr. Peden is a recognized scholar in the literature of the same period." R. A. Brown
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '46 600w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews
Commonweal 45:282 D 27 '46 230w

"Introduced by a sympathetic biographical sketch of the Adams, father and son, these selections are sufficiently varied to show the broad interests and qualifications of the celebrated pair. Some of the extracts are from diaries, correspondence and political statements and some from other sources. Above all, they are closely tied to the politics and statecraft of the day, making an important volume for the student."
+ Current Hist 11:509 D '46 100w

"Public libraries and college libraries chiefly."
Kirkus 14:472 S 15 '46 170w

"In this volume of selections, the documents are well chosen to tell the story even though their variety and the brevity of most of them give an unavoidably choppy effect. The slightly facetious tone of the introduction fails to supply the needed sense of importance and unity in the Adams line. The volume is therefore slightly disappointing, even though it performs its self-appointed task. Perhaps this is the only way it could have been done; at all events, we are the richer for it." R. E. Spiller
+ — New Repub 115:700 N 25 '46 600w

"Miss Koch and Mr. Peden set themselves no mean task in trying to choose from the voluminous writings of the Adamses those passages which most clearly illustrate the progression of their ideas through more than three-quarters of a century. They have been highly successful. Every reader will be grateful to the editors for their scrupulous care in preparing this tempting invitation to read more widely in the original writings. At a moment when we are deeply anxious because of our inability to find the social institutions which will most surely bring us happiness, it is heartening to have a convenient guide to the thought of two Americans who understood so well that the promotion of the public welfare is a slow and arduous task." J. A. Krout

+ N Y Times p4 O 20 '46 850w

"An excellent volume. . . The book provides a valuable firsthand contact with two of the ablest American minds, whose writings, so voluminous and occupied so much with ancient political matters, most people are not likely actually to have explored. Here the exploration has all been done for you, and the siftings are of lively interest and easily assimilable."
+ New Yorker 22:132 N 16 '46 120w

"Selections from the writings of eminent men, brought within the compass of a handy volume, serve an exceedingly useful purpose when carefully chosen and well edited. This book meets those tests admirably and is most welcome." Dumas Malone
+ Sat R of Lit 29:15 O 26 '46 850w

Reviewed by S. F. Bemis
Weekly Book Review p4 D 8 '46 1350w

ADAMS, JOHN PAUL. Milton Caniff: Rembrandt of the comic-strip. 64p il $2 McKay
B or 92 Caniff, Milton Arthur. Comic strips 46-25194

Sketch of the life of a well-known American comic artist, illustrated with photographs and samples of his cartoons. Contains suggestions on how to become a comic artist.

"This well-written little book reveals a lot of hitherto unknown information about one of the most popular comic artists of our time." J. L.
+ Book Week p5 My 26 '46 130w

Booklist 42:327 Je 15 '46

"Here is the pictorial biography of a cartoonist, distinctly laudatory and certainly interesting for the information it presents to young comic artists with ideas or hopes—or both."
+ Weekly Book Review p10 Jl 14 '46 130w

ADAMS, PHILIP RHYS. Auguste Rodin. See Rodin, A.

ADAMSON, HANS CHRISTIAN. Eddie Rick-enbacker. 309p il $2.75 Macmillan
B or 92 Rickenbacker, Edward Vernon 46-657

A biography of the famous auto-racer, and ace of World war I, which stresses his early years, and ends with his return to the United States after his harrowing experiences on a raft in the Pacific ocean. The author has known Eddie Rickenbacker for many years. He says he "loved Rick for a quarter of a century but hated him for twenty-four days"—the days when they both were afloat on that raft.

Book Week p10 Mr 17 '46 70w

"The Adamson book gives a satisfying picture of an interesting personality of the times." M. W. Bayley
+ Christian Science Monitor p20 F 21 '46 420w

"Good material made unexciting either as biography or writing."
+ — Kirkus 13:554 D 15 '45 150w

"Rickenbacker has been a controversial subject, but here he has a convincing champion. Recommended." Barbara Overton
+ Library J 71:279 F 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by Frederick Graham
N Y Times p22 Mr 5 '46 400w
School & Society 63:198 Mr 16 '46 40w

ADAMSON, H. C.—Continued

"A life story that definitely adds to the Rickenbacker build-up. . . . Notwithstanding the fact that it is somewhat overwritten, and possibly a shade too worshipful, this biography of Rickenbacker is excellent reading. Air-minded American youth should eat it up. From first to last Rick has lived dangerously, with a debonaire defiance of death. And he has always come through, often as by a miracle." Stanley Walker

+ — Weekly Book Review p14 F 24 '46 800w
Wls Lib Bul 42:73 My '46

ADDISON, HERBERT. Treatise on applied hydraulics. 3d ed rev & enl 614p il $6.50 Wiley [32s Chapman]

627 Hydraulic engineering. Hydraulic machinery. Pumping machinery [45-4060]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Booklist 42:229 Mr 15 '46

"New material gives the book greater clarity and practical utility, as it explains and interpolates many unduly compressed passages of previous editions."

+ Eng N 136:112 Mr 7 '46

N Y New Tech Bks 30:57 O '45

ADELSON, LEONE. Blowaway hat; pictures by Dorothy Wagstaff. [32p] $1.50 Reynal

46-7969

The hat was new and covered with flower, and belonged to David's mother. On a windy day the hat flew off Mother's head, and David flew after it. The chase and the final capture are described in prose and pictures for ages three to five.

"The illustrations are breezy and bright as the tale itself. It's a made-to-order story for those who love fun and fancy."

+ Book Week p6 N 10 '46 100w

Booklist 43:173 F 1 '47

"Charming word patterns, gay absurdities, and an original idea make this book fun."

+ Kirkus 14:383 Ag 15 '46 90w

"Just enough plot and a nice balance between fact and fancy to satisfy the nursery between kindergarten age." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 71:1807 D 15 '46 70w

"For a text rather on the nursery-school pattern Miss Wagstaff has made pictures in two colors that have real humor and vitality."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 N 9 '46 50w

ADELSON, LEONE. Who blew that whistle? pictures by Oscar Fabrés. 45p $1.25 Scott, W.R.

46-11900

Picture-story book for six-to-seven-year-olds, describing the adventures of a traffic policeman who got uppity, and what happened when his whistle decided to do a little whistling on its own.

Reviewed by Martha King

Book Week p13 O 20 '46 180w

Booklist 43:74 N 1 '46

"Humorous and original yarn for city children."

+ Kirkus 14:455 S 15 '46 100w

"A fairly engaging little story for beginning readers about a nonconforming police whistle. Amusing drawings, plenty of action and (old-fashioned note) a pretty obvious moral." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 71:1466 O 15 '46 70w

"City children from 4 to 8 will find all this confusion very funny indeed, while they will unconsciously absorb the lesson in cooperation which the little whistle learned." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p38 O 13 '46 140w

Reviewed by Florence Little

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 10 '46 90w

Sat R of Lit 29:52 N 9 '46 40w

"I chuckled all the way through this book and if I had been six or seven years old—the age for which it is written—I would have kept laughing out loud." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 29 '46 200w

AINSWORTH, EDWARD MADDIN. Eagles fly west. 447p $3 Macmillan

46-6775

Novel based on the founding of the state of California. The central character is Lieutenant Shane Malone, who started out as a newspaperman on James Gordon Bennett's old Herald in 1846.

Reviewed by E. E. Lelsy

Book Week p9 D 1 '46 230w

Booklist 43:53 O 15 '46

Kirkus 14:282 Je 15 '46 230w

"Real taste and flavor of old California with its Spanish-Mexican heritage. Well recommended." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 71:1049 Ag '46 70w

"The real protagonist of the story is California, and the real plot is history. Mr. Ainsworth, a writer on The Los Angeles Times, is, aside from being the popularizer of the allegedly chronological swallows of Capistrano, an ardent student of California and national history. The romantic elements in his tale are frankly superimposed and occasionally tenuous. But he has a knack of being able to unfold history from a fresh, on-the-spot viewpoint rather than in pat retrospect. 'Eagles Fly West' does the general reader a refreshing service in lifting the 'California legend' out of the mission-and-Gold-Rush rut and throwing the spotlight on the notable facts of the pioneer story often brushed aside by the formal historians." Gladwin Hill

+ N Y Times p4 O 13 '46 490w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 11 '46 350w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p30 O 6 '46 230w

AISTROP, JACK CHARLES RICHARD. Backstage with Joe. 168p $2.50 Roy pubs. [6s Dobson]

[46-19681]

A novel about the war, showing what effect it had upon a group of ordinary people—soldiers, A. T. S. privates, a munitions worker, a music-hall artist, an allied airman, and an American nurse. The scene is England.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Book Week p7 D 15 '46 90w

"In terse, condensed narrative, stripped action, all linked in a flashing montage effect, this is experimental styling for the variegated disasters of wartime living, sometimes effective, sometimes confused."

+ — Kirkus 14:360 Ag 1 '46 120w

"Recommended war story." E. F. Kelly

+ Library J 71:1464 O 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by H. I. A. Faussett

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 26 '46 40w

"Mr. Aistrop has dedicated this unorthodox and, at times, quite brilliant little book to General Patton. But if the general were alive to read it, I think he would find it quite baffling. Unlike his own dashing—and frequently unprintable—prose, Mr. Aistrop's is spare and soldierly and dehydrated, suitable to the wartime England about which he writes. . . . Mr. Aistrop writes with a kind of detached indignation. His prose is as unclothed as his dancer—which is to say it is rather a thing of beauty—and stirs the compassion rather than the libido. If he has written but the synopsis of a novel, instead of the finished product, he has nevertheless given us something closer to the mood and times of his people than many a more ambitious project." David Dempsey

N Y Times p10 N 8 '46 360w

San Francisco Chronicle p36 D 1 '46 100w

"It is pieced, kaleidoscopic, quite vivid in a glittery way; but I believe that on the whole Mr. Aistrop loses as much as he gains. He gains the quick, running, all-over surface view, a bird's-eye view if you like. He loses everything under that. He has stripped his writing clean of all rumination and development; no probing here. But development and probing are the ways to reveal differences and meanings." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 29:95 D 7 '46 360w

"Though too many of the characters are no more than names submerged in one of the many violent happenings in the book, when Mr. Aistrop writes more fully, as of Blackie and Eileen, he is sensitive and sincere."

Times [London] Lit Sup p377 Ag 10 '46 110w

"Apparently Mr. Aistrop did hope to give a broad picture of the shattering effects of war on the English people, in uniform and out—and particularly on the people of London's working-class districts. But he has rationed his own prose too closely to achieve panoramic effects."

Richard Match

Weekly Book Review p20 N 17 '46 600w

AKELEY, MRS MARY LEE (JOBE). Rumble of a distant drum; a true story of the African hinterland; il. by Arthur August Jansson. 364p $2.75 Dodd

916.76 Africa, East—Description and travel 46-11841

"The true story of the high adventure of ten year old Mihigo, native Watusi of royal blood, who traveled with [the author] across half the African continent while [she] was completing the expedition for the Akeley African Hall of the American Museum of Natural History." Foreword

Booklist 43:137 Ja 1 '47

"It is not so much the adventures, though they are thrilling, as the careful details of people and background that give the book its value. The reader who demands swift action can get it by some cutting of his own as he reads; but the reader of almost any age with a taste for the exotic and a curiosity about distant lands and peoples will find it all fascinating. The illustrations are of strong design and feeling." F. S.

+ N Y Times p4 N 10 '46 150w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold

San Francisco Chronicle p26 D 1 '46 210w

AKHILANANDA, SWAMI. Hindu psychology: its meaning for the West; introd. by Gordon W. Allport; foreword by Edgar Sheffield Brightman. 241p $2.50 Harper

150 Psychology. Philosophy, Hindu 46-7759

"An interpretation of Oriental philosophy, with discussions of Occidental values and beliefs, for the student of psychology and searchers in the occult." Current Hist

"This lucidly written volume will be perused with deep interest even by the skeptical reader. It gives a welcome glimpse into the mental world of a great Asiatic nation." Alfred Werner

+ — Christian Century 63:1343 N 6 '46 700w

Current Hist 11:511 D '46 30w

ALAN, MARJORIE. Rue the day [Eng title: Murder in November]. 248p $2 Mill [8s 6d Hale, R]

46-8527

Detective story.

"Tea-table style, but not too strong a dish of English tea."

Kirkus 14:438 S 1 '46 90w

"Each character is drawn with sure, deft strokes. The plotting, too, is superbly done." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p32 N 24 '46 180w

"Pleasant, literate and undistinguished, this is good run-of-the-mill." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 1 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p12 D 22 '46 180w

ALBRAND, MARTHA. Remembered anger. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 178p $2 Little

46-25045

A young American officer who had attempted to join the French Maquis was captured by the Nazis, but managed to escape. The time is 1945, and the officer has returned to Paris under an assumed name to seek his betrayer. There are complications, and then romance and a happy ending.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p12 Mr 10 '46 140w

Booklist 42:300 My 15 '46

"Miss Albrand is adept at turning out quickly moving, smoothly wrought stories of this kind, distinguished by a European background that she knows first-hand from her cosmopolitan heritage and experience—Switzerland, the Netherlands, Italy, or France, as the case may be. This is not the best of her stories, for it seems to lack genuine emotion and the characters are over-simplified; but it can be recommended to readers who enjoy following the solution of a mystery the more if it is described with grace and clarity." W. K. R.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 F 15 '46 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '46

Kirkus 13:533 D 1 '45 150w

"'Remembered Anger' is a shoddy job. . . The book would hardly be worth mentioning if Miss Albrand did not have what it takes to produce Grade-A entries in the field. Next time, let us hope, she will work with fresher lumber." C. V. Terry

— N Y Times p22 Mr 3 '46 500w

"It's all right, if you don't mind writers like Miss Albrand weaving their rather sleazy fabric out of such heroic material."

New Yorker 21:97 F 9 '46 90w

Spring'd Republican p4d F 10 '46 150w

"The narrative has the easy command of background and minor incident which this novelist displays, whether the setting is the Netherlands, Italy or elsewhere on the continent. But she glides over a few details of the plot a bit too casually." George Conrad

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 F 10 '46 600w

ALBRIGHT, HORACE MARDEN, and TAYLOR, FRANK J. Oh, ranger! a book about the national parks; il. by Ruth Taylor. 299p $3 Dodd

719 National parks and reserves—U.S. U.S. National park service. Nature study

46-5148

A revised edition of a book for those interested in travel thru our national parks. "A naturally large part of this volume is devoted to the great parks of the Far West, but there are succinct notes on the national memorials and historic sites in all parts of the country. The revision brings the volume up to date, with endpaper maps showing the location of twenty-four national parks and a useful index to the whole contents of the work." (Weekly Book Review) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1928.

Booklist 42:368 Jl 15 '46

"The revised edition of 'Oh, Ranger!' which was printed eight times between 1934 and 1941, but has had no reprinting since 1941, will be useful for tourists who, with gasoline once more in their cars, can visit the national parks and monuments which have rapidly increased in number and importance since the National Park Service was created in 1916, and since both scenic and historic reserves were brought under one department in 1933. . . The text has a way of being somewhat chatty for my taste, but the information is likely to be precise and sound."

ALBRIGHT, H. M.—Continued

+ — Weekly Book Review p17 J1 14 '46 180w

ALDINGTON, RICHARD, ed. Portable Oscar Wilde. See Wilde, O.

ALDINGTON, RICHARD. Romance of Casanova. 344p $3 Duell

Casanova de Seingalt, Giacomo Girolamo—Fiction 46-5236

The story of the one true love of Casanova, the adventurer and great lover of eighteenth century Venice.

"I confess to finding the book overlong, uneven, and often dull."

— Kirkus 14:182 Je 1 '46 160w

"The book is too long, and Mr. Aldington's ingenuity often tedious, but it is intelligent comedy, and the complicated, almost Jonsonian, plot contrasts with the simplicity of the hero and sets the sophisticated tone of the tour de force." John Farrelly

+ — New Repub 114:908 Je 24 '46 200w

"Mr. Aldington has accomplished the seemingly impossible. He has cast the prince of seducers in the role of a sincere lover, yet has done so without once compromising the true Casanovian essence. . . Mr. Aldington's accomplishment is one requiring very considerable psychological dexterity, but it is carried off with almost complete success." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p5 J1 7 '46 950w

"Richard Aldington has read the 'Memoirs' of Casanova thoroughly and well, digested their substance, made sure of their flavor, and then used them skillfully for his own purpose; that purpose being the production of a lively, entertaining novel which combines the best features of the old cloak-and-sword romance with those of the up-to-date tale of espionage and international intrigue. It even combines another and potent ingredient: at least a fraction of the sexual frankness now permitted serious and not-so-serious story-tellers." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 Je 15 '46 1200w

"Aldington obviously meant it to be hammock reading, and no more. But except for a few writing tricks, and a display of erudition, no summer reader would recognize it as the work of the man who wrote World War I's bitter Death of a Hero, or that first-rate biography of Wellington, The Duke."

Time 47:108 Je 17 '46 250w

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

Weekly Book Review p17 Je 23 '46 1000w

ALDINGTON, RICHARD. Wreath for San Gimignano; with ll. by Netta Aldington. 30p $2 Duell

914.5 San Gimignano. Folgore da San Gimignano 46-1037

Hearing that a well-loved Italian town had been destroyed during the war, the English poet has prepared this small memorial volume. It contains a brief essay on the town and its ancient beauties, and prose translations of a sonnet sequence: A Garland of Months, by a thirteenth century Italian poet, Folgore da San Gimignano.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p9 Ja 20 '46 400w

"Whether or not this Khayyâmesque garland is a fitting wreath for the rubble of San Gimignano—and the point is debatable—Mr. Aldington's translations are pleasant, and convey the literal meaning of the original. To perceive the advantages of the prose rendering over an attempt to use the sonnet form in translation, one might compare the present work with Rossetti's labored reconstructions of the same poems in his 'Early Italian Poets.' To see how much is lost, any comparison with the original will serve." G. R.

+ — Commonweal 43:436 F 8 '46 300w

New Yorker 22:91 F 23 '46 70w

"As a memorial, the Wreath is classifiable with the more perishable souvenirs: the glassware bricabrac from Mallorca, the fragile petate from Taxco, all the useless graceful trinkets that adorn the library side-tables for a season and then are relegated to the attic or the dustbin. Whether San Gimignano deserves more than this toy-homage, I do not know; but it seems clear that Aldington has extracted as much from Folgore as was there to extract." Dudley Pitts

Poetry 68:293 Ag '46 500w

"The little book is a charming one, agreeably illustrated with black-and-white wash drawings, but the reader wonders why the translator should have chosen to render these poems in prose, or, indeed, why he felt that a fresh version was desirable, in view of the admirable English renderings in the sonnet form of the original done long ago by Rossetti." Babette Deutsch

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 F 3 '46 250w

ALDRIDGE, JAMES. Of many men. 307p $2.50 Little [8s 6d Joseph, M.]

46-1869

A correspondent's story as he wanders thru warring Europe on many fronts: Finland, Norway, Greece, North Africa, the Near East, and France. The episodes in Wolfe's career are tragic, humorous, or amorous; sometimes raw and hard. The central theme seems to be that the war started in Spain and will not be over until the situation in Spain is cleared up.

"The dialogue, upon which the author relies mainly for narrating his story, is sparse in the manner of Hemingway and well done. Aldridge has produced an excellent kaleidoscope of the war's incidents, but I do not feel he has plumbed the depths of character and emotion to the degree incumbent upon him as a novelist." N. R.

+ — Book Week p11 Mr 10 '46 180w

"The final impression is of a sprawling, disassociated pattern, thinly plotted, superficially characterized, scattered and choppy in style. Again there are vivid and isolated bits—sparkling highlights, but the whole is disappointing."

— + Kirkus 14:5 Ja 1 '46 90w

"The most stoical of readers will be moved by episodes in Norway, Egypt, outside Stalingrad, near the Oder, and on an old British cruiser covering an American landing. But why drag in that dreadful woman?" Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 25 '46 120w

"The pity is that even when we have had the overwhelming courtesy to accept Mr. Aldridge's style as a means of communication, he appears to have nothing to communicate beyond his central statement; the scenes we visit as we fly from one battle-front to another are stupefyingly machine-made. And though none will doubt the truth of his epigraph, and few will doubt its application to Spain, it is a pretty bald gag to write a book about." Henry Reed

— New Statesman & Nation 31:90 F 2 '46 420w

"Not since Hemingway has the raw material of war been lifted so faithfully and completely onto the level of art. 'Of Many Men' is unquestionably one of the really good novels of the war; possibly it is the best." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 10 '46 1100w

"Mr. Aldridge casts a fresh but not entirely adult glance at the recent fighting in Europe, Asia, and Africa, and the result is an interesting travelogue which he half-heartedly tries to disguise as a novel. There are, however, certain qualities of imagination and a bitter humor that set the book somewhat above the ordinary job of reporting. The forces of democracy come in for some ironic observation, but in the end the author decides that men, if not governments, know what they are fighting for."

+ — New Yorker 22:102 Mr 9 '46 80w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat R of Lit 29:19 Mr 16 '46 850w

"Mr. Aldridge writes flatly and monotonously in a style derived from Mr. Hemingway; he seems not to have heard of the complex sentence. At its best Hemingway's prose is effective and even beautiful, the vehicle of a vision of life, as in such stories as 'The Undeafened.' Mr. Aldridge has no such vision of life, and his style therefore appears unnatural, a pretentious mannerism."

— Spec 176:100 Ja 25 '46 180w

"Mr. Aldridge describes various small scenes and incidents of war, but does not seem able to lend them much significance in the narrative form he has chosen to adopt. He can do much better than this."

Times [London] Lit Sup p41 Ja 26 '46 300w

"As a correspondent for the North American Newspaper Alliance, Mr. Aldridge, an Australian, has covered innumerable battles. His first two novels dealt with the British in Greece. 'Signed With Their Honour' was one of the few good war books we had; 'The Sea Eagle' was one of the many mediocre ones. Unfortunately, 'Of Many Men' is a good deal closer to the latter." Herbert Kupferberg

— + Weekly Book Review p24 Mr 10 '46 400w

ALEICHEM, SHALOM, pseud. See Rabinowitz, S.

ALEXANDER, FRANZ, and others. Psychoanalytic therapy; principles and application. 353p $5 Ronald

131.34 Psychoanalysis. Psychotherapy SG46-116

"The work set forth in this volume is a logical continuation of a trend in psychotherapy which began with Freud's discovery of the phenomenon of transference as the dynamic agent of the curative process." The conclusion is reached that, "in order to be relieved of his neurotic ways of feeling and acting, the patient must undergo new emotional experiences suited to undo the morbid effects of the emotional experiences of his earlier life. Other therapeutic factors—such as intellectual insight, abstraction, recollection of the past, etc.—are all subordinated to this central therapeutic principle." This point of view is illustrated by numerous case histories of deviate personalities, the psychoanalytic treatment used on each and accompanying interpretations." (Am Soc R) Selected reading list. Index.

Reviewed by Scudder Mekeel

Am J Soc 52:277 N '46 550w

Am Soc R 11:376 Je '46 100w

"The book represents a most important contribution and advance in psychiatry. It will be read and discussed by all interested in the field." A. L. Brush

+ Survey 82:274 O '46 550w

"Alexander's and French's lucid presentation of basic therapeutic principles appears in the first part of the book, which contains a description of the dynamics involved in varying the therapeutic technique and manipulating the transference phenomenon. . . . Psychotherapists will find it stimulating and challenging. It marks one of the high points in the maturation of psychotherapy."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:243 S '46 400w

ALGER, JOSEPH. Get in there and paint; ill. by Alfred S. Plane and Norman Tate. 59p $1.50 Crowell

751.4 Painting—Technique 46-4838

Informal study on learning to paint in oils. It is written for the amateur who wants to paint for the fun of it.

Booklist 42:362 Jl 15 '46

"Good hobby book, making painting a challenge anyone would like to take."

+ Kirkus 14:210 My 1 '46 250w

Weekly Book Review p17 Ag 25 '46 270w

Wis Lib Bul 42:147 N '46

ALINSKY, SAUL DAVID. Revell for radicals. 228p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

323.35 Radicals and radicalism. Democracy. Community life A46-2

"The message of this book is that the American Dream is real and achievable. Mr. Alinsky is a passionate believer in democracy. The thesis of the book is that the implementation of American democratic ideals can be achieved by People's Organizations, built from among the people themselves and so built because 'the masses are the substance of society.' To Mr. Alinsky the real radical works at the business of democracy, with and not for the people. . . . But this book is no mere fervid, futile plea for a revival of democracy. He proposes a device, the People's Organization, by which we can rebuild a functioning democracy. It is to be based on the agencies and leaders indigenous in each locality. These organizations use the well-known fact that no matter how disadvantaged an area, there are persons living within it to whom from 20 to 40 families look for advice, leadership, often help. . . . The book ends with a suggested By-Laws for a People's Organization, but, as the author himself says, democracy is not just form and structure, 'real democracy is as disorderly as life itself. It grows, expands, changes to meet the needs of the people.' Therefore two-thirds of the book is given to discussing the building of people's organizations, their programs, native leadership, their tactics, and their educational activities." N Y Times

"Reveille for Radicals is really two books: one, an essay on the 'radical' and his place in American life, the other, a discussion of people's organizations, 'the democratic organization of our people for democracy.' In spite of the author's efforts to show the place of the radical in people's organizations, Reveille for Radicals remains a presentation of two topics rather than an integrated whole. . . . While the techniques of mass organization are not systematically outlined, there is much that can be learned by inference from Alinsky's examples. The sociologist who has ever actively participated in the life of a community or who ever expects to do so would do well to read this book." Ethel Shanas

Am J Soc 52:163 S '46 300w

"This is an honest book, and it should be widely read, even though its excited analysis of Liberalism ignores the basic qualities of its nature, history, procedures, and accomplishments." David Fellman

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:398 Ap '46 470w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee

Am Soc R 11:370 Je '46 1050w

"Mr. Alinsky minces no words or spares no feelings. At times his deep understanding of mankind is almost brutal, but the brutality is tempered with a nobility of purpose and a profound compassion for humanity. The recounting of actual organizational experiences have gripping interest and you are never allowed to forget that these stories concern living, breathing people, fighting against the dehumanizing atmosphere of man-made slums. Many of his tales will be told and retold and referred to for guidance by the people this book has been written to aid. . . . There have been many books written in the past decade glorifying the democratic ideal: good, great and soul-stirring books. But if I were to be asked to choose the one I would like most to have written, I would unhesitatingly choose 'Reveille for Radicals.'" B. J. Sheil

+ Book Week p1 Ja 13 '46 1800w

Booklist 42:177 F 1 '46

Bookmark 7:4 My '46

"This book is of no value to anyone interested in the spiritual concept of society and the religious principle. It is merely another contribution to the Age of Secularism, portraying the purely selfish and materialistic motives which activate a people's movement for better local conditions." H. C. McGinnis

— Cath World 164:89 O '46 400w

"One finds here a sense of urgency, a flow of language and emotional tone, and a consciousness of world emergency. There is also a finality and absoluteness of expression. The frankness is amazing. The sense of leadership and responsibility has a deeply religious flavor. . . This volume has great implications for social settlements, neighborhood houses and all similar institutions financed outside the community in which they work." S. C. Kincheloe

ALINSKY, S. D.—Continued

Christian Century 63:719 Je 5 '46 1250w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin
Commonweal 43:359 Ja 18 '46 1750w
Current Hist 10:350 Ap '46 80w

"Normally one dismisses books as unrealistic as this; for they constitute their own indictment when sober reflection has set in. This one, however, is written with a bravado of spirit, a swagger of style, and a presumptuousness of deprecation which will make (has made) strange appeal to men and women discouraged with what is on the lookout for some hand-me-down perfection. If romantic expectation of salvation through organization is a danger (and I hold it to be the danger of modern democracy), then this book constitutes a menace. It is a romance right out of the horse's mouth—the Trojan Horse's mouth." T. V. Smith

— Ethics 57:69 O '46 1800w

Reviewed by Scott Adams
Library J 71:119 Ja 15 '46 150w

"Mr. Alinsky is a sincere democrat. His love for people, indeed, overflows in the most adjectival manner. But I will say frankly, I fear that in the absence of a hard program his organization would be easily captured by demagogues, and worse. Doubtless he means to regenerate democracy, but the result might be something very different. To be candid, in some parts of the world fascism has made use of exactly this sort of 'radical' talk." Ralph Bates
Nation 162:481 Ap 20 '46 360w

"Mr. Alinsky certainly states the question of our time. But, having stated it, he is unconvincing in his concrete proposal as to how people are to be organized for and by the dream of the future. . . The writing is undistinguished and at times lacking in restraint. . . The book is important not because, as the publisher's blurb states, it is a 'blow-by-blow account of an orderly revolution already under way,' but because it expresses a point of view which runs the risk of developing away from the democracy that the author speaks of with such fervor." H. R. Cayton

— New Repub 114:97 Ja 21 '46 1500w

"There is an excellent chapter on the psychology of mass organization. The generalizations are keen, often stinging. Never do they depart from the basic philosophy of a rugged, courageous, achieving democracy. . . Mr. Alinsky's strictures on many labor leaders, taken out of their context, would delight a Pegler. They, like all liberals, 'are unable to see beyond their own balliwick.' . . But democracy is at work on the farms beyond the other side of the tracks. . . The rural situation is simpler than the urban, but these rural groups have been longer at work. If this book were wholly devoted to an account of the People's Organizations, this omission could be overlooked. But the experience of these organizations is presented as a way of salvation for America. This being so, it is important to recognize that the necessary structural forms to accomplish this end may vary considerably. . . What is important is that such democratically motivated groups should cooperate. This problem is not mentioned." E. De S. Brunner

+ — N Y Times p4 Ja 13 '46 1600w

"Having damned in advance anyone who might be disturbed by the age-old business of using the ends to justify the means, Mr. Alinsky devotes the major portion of his work to demonstrating to his organizers the ways of building people's organizations. Some of us who like to think we subscribe to liberal principles will feel a faint nausea at the tricks advocated for winning friends and influencing people. Dale Carnegie is still the same old boy, even when he chooses to speak in the phrases of Tom Paine. But the author has taken care of that criticism in advance by placing in that very convenient ivory tower all those who 'relax in luxurious security' and criticize the tactics and weapons he endorses. Rhetoric and name calling has never yet really met an argument. . . 'Reveille for Radicals' urges a good cause. Its trumpeter is on the side of the angels, a side with skirmishes already won. Finicky listeners are going to wish some of the notes were clearer." W. S. Lynch

Sat R of Lit 29:10 Ja 19 '46 900w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Social Educ 10:238 My '46 300w

Reviewed by A. E. Fink
Social Forces 25:107 O '46 340w

"His book is divided into two parts. The first section, entitled 'Call Me Rebel,' is as fanciful a bit of hard-hitting, stinging, vitriolic prose as one would wish to read on the subject. And Mr Alinsky knows his subject well. In many ways his sincerity will remind the reader of the pleadings of Thomas Paine, although no suggestion is made of comparing the two men. In the second section of his book, entitled 'The Building of People's Organizations,' Mr Alinsky proposes ways to put his theories into practice. Some will disapprove of his opportunistic methods but many who read this book will come away from its pages with the feeling that here is a man whose zeal for America and its people cuts through the patriotic chauvinism of flag waving to the heart and core of those principles underlying the democratic impulse of free men everywhere." Emanuel Slotnick

Springf'd Republican p4 D 27 '45 480w

"An interesting, valuable, and convincing book might be written of people's organizations and their activities. Mr. Alinsky's effort, due to his impatience and over-zealousness, falls short of the standard that might have been achieved." Joel Seidman

Survey G 35:174 My '46 650w

Time 47:98 F 25 '46 600w

Reviewed by J. R. Walsh

Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 20 '46 1350w

"Alinsky has written not only a most stirring and thought-provoking book, but one which also is truly a pleasure to read." J. J. O'Leary

+ Yale R n s 35:553 spring '46 280w

ALLAN, DENNIS. Dead to rights. 213p $2 Mill 46-21054

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p4 O 6 '46 90w

Booklist 43:71 N 1 '46

Kirkus 14:311 Jl 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p28 S 15 '46 180w

"Good story idea, not helped by flat writing and some just-barely-legitimate tricks of deception." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p10 S 29 '46 50w

"Begins well enough but soon explodes into chaotic hash of hoary mystery-yarn clichés. Debonair, lady-chasing European sleuth complete dope."

Sat R of Lit 29:41 S 21 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p19 S 15 '46 70w

ALLAN, DOUG. Gamblers with fate. 306p $3
McBride

910.4 Adventure and adventures 45-10061

Sequel to the author's Lightning Strikes Once (Book Review Digest, 1944). These are further tales of adventure which the author has rounded up for his radio program: Thrills and chills from everywhere.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p13 N 4 '45 300w

Kirkus 13:389 S 1 '45 110w

N Y Times p26 F 24 '46 180w

ALLAN, DOUG. How to write for television. 244p il $2.75 Dutton

791.4 Television programs 46-1753

This volume begins with a report on television today, discusses its future field, and provides several sample scripts and a dramatized commercial. The author is the producer of the television program: "Thrills and chills with Doug Allan." Partial contents: Why write for television; Types of programs; Writing the commercial; Programming; Films in television; Studio procedure; Television scenery; Color in costumes and makeup; Writing to fit the television stage. Glossary of terms used in studio.

Book Week p6 Mr 17 '46 70w

Booklist 42:243 Ap 1 '46

"For the many to whom television opens up a whole new field of creative and technical and executive and administrative opportunity, this book will be a bonanza. . . . The author is probably the most successful television script writer at present, and has boundless faith in its future."

+ Kirkus 14:116 Mr 1 '46 170w

"This volume will undoubtedly answer many questions for the busy librarian, but it is recommended with distinct reservations until something better comes along." George Freedley

Library J 71:343 Mr 1 '46 140w

Spring'd Republican p6 F 25 '46 150w

"Suffers from the author's exposure to a limited variety of programs and stations. Yet, while the book is not a major work in its field, it does contain much of use to the writer, particularly the many sample scripts (comprising nearly half of the book) which give the reader some indication of the visual material to accompany dialog. Even in these, the visual cues are often adumbrated by technical terms and abbreviations which may prove of limited value to the lay reader." A. W. Bernsohn

Theatre Arts 30:368 Je '46 80w

ALLAN, GLENN. Boysi himself. 267p $2.50 Curl

46-2894

Boysi, a Negro houseboy, who cooks superbly and gets into all manner of difficulties on the side, is the hero of these stories, some of which have appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

"Allan's fun is amiable and persuasive. He should appeal to that large group of householders—male or female—who have not yet forgotten the exigencies of wartime living." A. J. Hiken

+ Book Week p17 Ap 7 '46 150w

Booklist 42:265 Ap 15 '46

Kirkus 13:528 D 1 '45 150w

"Some of these family sketches verge on caricature, but they are redeemed by the warmth and wit of Boysi himself." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p24 Ap 26 '46 100w

ALLEN, CARLETON KEMP. Law and orders; an inquiry into the nature and scope of delegated legislation and executive powers in England. 385p 15s Stevens [English publication]

342.42 Delegation of powers. Executive power 45-7809

"In this scholarly study Dr. Allen, who holds to the Liberal view of the state, wrestles with the problem of how a proper balance between the legislative and executive powers in Britain's government can be restored and maintained." Foreign Affairs

"On the larger issues of political theory, and of the substantive problems out of which these procedural and organizational problems arise, [the author] has little in this book to give us. But he does present most usefully an account of the procedural developments, the problems they raise, and some practical suggestions for reform. The book is valuable for students not only of British and comparative government, but also of our own, since the problems are universal." J. M. Gaus

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:592 Je '46 1300w

Foreign Affairs 24:359 Ja '46 60w

"Dr. Allen has produced a book which the specialist cannot ignore and the general reader can peruse with interest. Much of his information, however, is paper information, not modified by any of the results of that practical experience which is of such great assistance in estimating the social value of any branch of law." R. A. Eastwood

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 4 '45 480w

"Law and Orders is an able and scholarly book, and Dr. Allen takes great pains to be as fair as he can. It contains little which is new, except the many recent examples, drawn mainly from wartime experience, with which the author illustrates and enlivens his theme. But the book suffers from more serious defects than lack of originality. In the first place, it is a purely horizontal study of executive action based, not on the ends which are sought to be attained but on the means which are employed. . . . A second defect in the book is the author's apparent lack of an adequate social or political philosophy by which to interpret the trends of which he complains."

+ New Statesman & Nation 30:29 Jl 14 '45 700w

Reviewed by R. L. Schuyler

Pol Sci Q 61:285 Je '46 1600w

"The most valuable part of a book which is always stimulating and provocative is the author's consideration of practical means by which administrative regulations can be simplified and more closely supervised by Parliament. . . . Appearing, as it has, at a moment when public attention has been focused on the question of controls, this authoritative work may do something towards getting them adopted. It will be none too soon for the good health of our constitution." David Thomson

+ Spec 175.88 Jl 27 '45 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p349 Jl 28 '45 3250w

ALLEN, EDITH LOUISE. Rugmaking craft. 96p il $2 Manual arts

746.7 Rugs 46-956

"Simple directions for making rugs of various kinds: braided, crocheted, knitted; rugs made by sewing surface materials on base; hooked, embroidered, and loom-woven rugs. Explanatory diagrams." Booklist

Book Week p6 Ag 11 '46 70w

Booklist 42:209 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7.8 My '46

"The instructions are clear, and the lists of tools and materials complete and suggestive. It should be very helpful to anyone contemplating making rugs by hand." Bess Steele

+ J Home Econ 38:606 N '46 50w

ALLEN, GAY WILSON. Walt Whitman handbook. 560p $3 Packard & co

811 Whitman, Walt 46-1617

"In connection with every American author of major importance there has come into being a formidable shelf of biographies, special studies and critical discussions, much of it obscurely published abroad or in periodicals of limited circulation. This mass of material clearly demands a guide if it is to be made available in the formation of a coherent body of opinion. Professor Allen's 'Walt Whitman Handbook' is an attempt to organize everything of importance that has been written about a much-discussed poet. In compiling it he has followed Whitman criticism into little known languages. He has also discovered a number of problems incident to an undertaking of this kind, and has demonstrated successfully how some of them may be solved." (Weekly Book Review) Chronology. Selected bibliographies. Index.

ALLEN, G. W.—Continued

"This volume by Gay Allen does not possess the weakness which is often found in handbooks; it is not a miscellany but a well-integrated review of everything significant that has been written about Whitman, set in logical order and supplemented by the results of the author's own investigation. Only tremendous industry could have collected this rich mass of material, and only a well-disciplined mind could have organized it into an intelligible whole. Neither is it a volume marred by the prejudice, pro and con, which is the weakness of many treatises on Whitman." Tremaine McDowell

+ Am Hist R 51:765 J1 '46 400w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p15 Ap 28 '46 160w

Booklist 42:295 My 15 '46

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

N Y Times p36 F 24 '46 320w

"The 'Walt Whitman Handbook' is 'necessary to be had'—if not in families (who should first buy the Works)—then certainly by anyone who wishes to know why and how the idea of Modern Man, as Whitman conceived him, was embodied in the work of one poet and carried to the far corners of the earth." Willard Thorp

+ Sat R of Lit 29:10 Ag 17 '46 1250w

"Students of American literature will refer to the Handbook chiefly for its summaries of a large number of writings about Whitman. Readers of Leaves of Grass will find that the Handbook offers some of the pleasure which derives from a better understanding of a classic, but will not find satisfaction for their curiosity about what kind of person Whitman was and how he came to write his poems."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 2:169 S '46 280w

"In the chapters summarizing Whitman's philosophy, so called, and his social outlook the critic finds himself in a difficult position. Professor Allen's actual conviction, apparently, is that Whitman's opinions were too undulant and fluid to be successfully reduced to system. . . The review of Whitman's social and political attitudes is somewhat more definite, but is handicapped by the fact that Whitman only occasionally committed himself to any particular implementation of his dream of a spiritual democracy. . . The final section of the book breaks much new ground in exploring Whitman's reputation in England, France, Germany and other countries and his effect on subsequent writers." G. F. Whicher

+ — Weekly Book Review p14 Mr 17 '46 850w

ALLEN, MERRITT PARMELEE. Red heritage; decorations by Ralph Ray. 314p $2.25 Longmans

46-6036

Story for young readers, about young Cobus Derrick, who at seventeen joined the forces of General Herkimer in the battle of Oriskany and fought thru the remainder of the American Revolution.

"There are few historical novels deserving the adjective 'great,' but 'Red Heritage' measures up to all that the word implies. Although written for teenagers, it will be read enthusiastically by their parents." A. N.

+ Book Week p20 N 10 '46 140w

Booklist 43:74 N 1 '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 16 '47 260w

Horn Bk 22:357 S '46 100w

"Allen has long experience in writing for boys; this is one of his best books."

+ Kirkus 14:299 J1 1 '46 160w

"This exciting tale of the Revolution is quite real, its characters live and their fight as described here, bloody and horrible, is no doubt a true picture of the times. Not a book for the squeamish but for those who need more historical fiction. . . Recommended for ages 11-14." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 71:1211 S 15 '46 70w

"The pace of the book will appeal to some adolescents. In many places the description and interpretation are sound, from the historical standpoint. On the other hand there are places where the history is distorted and inaccurate; the characterization is sometimes weak and inconsistent, and the development of the plot is too often dependent on the improbable." R. A. Brown

+ — N Y Times p30 O 20 '46 230w

"This is classed as a story. Fundamentally it is history. It is well worth reading to those who are mature enough to understand its significance." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:70 N 9 '46 180w

School & Society 64:120 Ag 17 '46 20w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 18 '46 100w

Wis Lib Bul 42:171 D '46

ALLEN, RAYMOND BERNARD. Medical education and the changing order. (N.Y. acad. of medicine. Com. on medicine and the changing order. Studies) 142p $1.50 Commonwealth fund [8s 6d Oxford]

610.711 Medicine—Study and teaching

SG46-252

"In this monograph, one of a series, contemporary medicine is treated as a product of evolution. The method is not strictly chronological, but is designed to show the reciprocal effects of medicine and the technical, social, economic, and political changes which have taken place in American life. . . Opening with a chapter on The Challenge to Medical Education, the monograph turns to the Historical Background, and proceeds to a discussion of various aspects of medical education. It ends with a chapter on American Medicine and Tomorrow's World." U S Quarterly Bkl

School & Society 64:16 J1 6 '46 20w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:333 D '46 160w

ALLEN, W. GORE. Renaissance in the north. 143p il $2.50 (10s 6d) Sheed

839.509 Scandinavian literature—History and criticism [46-20424]

The material in this book was the basis of ten lectures delivered for the Workers' educational association, an English organization. In tracing the revival of Scandinavian literature the author divides his material into the following: the background; the Catholic; the Protestants; the Agnostic; the Nationalists; the influence of music. The persons studied are Sigrid Undset; Søren Kierkegaard; Selma Lagerlöf; J. P. Jacobsen; Verner von Heidenstam; Knut Hamsun; Grieg and Sibelius. Index.

"Those readers who may have formed their opinions of the Scandinavian people largely from the dramas of Ibsen, the agnostic, and the plays and novels of Strindberg, the cynic, will find this series of essays most heartening, since in them, W. Gore Allen defends very ably his main thesis that the philosophical liberalism of these men does not represent the true spirit of their people." M. M. Fay

+ Cath World 164:281 D '46 450w

"In some respects it is an interesting book. . . However, it cannot be said that as an account of modern Scandinavian literature it is at all adequate. Mr. Gore Allen spends so much time expatiating on his ethico-religious views, with sketchy allusions to a few books by the various authors which are apparently taken as read, that there is little room for literature as such."

Times [London] Lit Sup p368 Ag 3 '46 320w

"All this comment is very well informed, so that if you follow it you have no difficulty seeing that Mr. Allen has read carefully and thought judiciously. Then, to be sure, he will come up with a bundle of generalizations in one paragraph, leaving himself and you quite breathless. But when the stream of his critical thinking runs clear he is an excellent sailor with an eye on the water as well as on the horizon." G. N. Shuster

+ — Weekly Book Review p18 O 13 '46 750w

ALLEN, WALTER ERNEST. Rogue elephant. 310p $2.50 Morrow [10s 6d Joseph, M.]

46-7346

A pretentious young man is invited for a visit by an ex-schoolmaster. Henry regarded himself as a rogue elephant, and as soon as he arrived at his destination he began his machinations. But the family secret he uncovered was too much even for Henry, the rogue elephant. He ran away to his noisome London surroundings, glad to be free of his pretensions and entanglements.

Reviewed by Alice Kogan

Book Week p26 D 1 '46 230w

"Tenuous story, thinly spun, though original enough—too wordy and discursive for the average taste."

— + Kirkus 14:398 Ag 15 '46 150w

"It is all just a little unlikely, but Mr. Allen carries it off, always amusingly and with a nice artistic integrity." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 13 '46 160w

"For my taste, there is too much grimace in the book. It did not grow, but was put together. Ashley is a satirical portrait, but a portrait of more than one man. He has altogether too many bad qualities. Elsewhere, too, the adhesive cracks. . . I think Ashley too powerful a catalyst for the experiment proposed. The skeleton in the cupboard at Swithins was already on its way to being exposed. The plot would have unfolded quite well without Ashley. Once on the stage, he stands firmly in the limelight and makes it difficult for the other characters to put their lines across." Rayner Heppenstall

— New Statesman & Nation 32:232 S 28 '46 210w

N Y Times p42 D 1 '46 270w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 24 '46 170w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 177:272 S 13 '46 550w

"Mr. Walter Allen, a literary critic of acute and lively judgment, makes a carefully considered effort to interest the reader in the workings of Henry's mind and temperament. There are shrewd passages in the novel, which is well written in its way and is at its most telling in an artful vein of mingled introspection and the grotesque. But the imaginative execution lags a long way behind the idea of the book, which seems to be that even the shallowest form of egotism may not rule out a trick of singular penetration in personal matters."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Ag 31 '46 600w

"'Rogue Elephant' is a gay novel—sardonically gay. It is unfailingly interesting and, in its own premises sound. And it is a smart novel, too—as smart as a whip in the hands of an expert ringmaster. And quite as stinging." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p2 N 10 '46 800w

ALLIED FORCES. Supreme headquarters. Eisenhower's own story of the war. See Eisenhower, D. D.

ALLISON, SAMUEL DUDLESTON, and others. VD manual for teachers. 149p $2 Emerson

614.547 Venereal diseases SG46-108

"A manual for teachers of students of high school age, having to do with education in regard to venereal disease." Christian Century

"The volume is well organized and covers the field adequately. The question arises whether it can be used in many of our secondary schools because of the limited time usually assigned to teaching the communicable diseases." J. A. Goldberg

Am J Pub Health 36:667 Je '46 180w

Christian Century 63:307 Mr 6 '46 30w

"The book is concise and psychologically sound. The presentation is evidence of the broad educational background of the authors. Teachers will benefit by reading and adopting the principles to their particular situation." Katharine Roy

+ J Home Econ 38:604 N '46 90w

"Through the combination of authors, there is assured accuracy of content as well as appropriateness of educational methods. . . Although the manual deals only with VD education, it is hoped that those who use it will not be encouraged to separate instruction on this subject from other health problems." Mayhew Derryberry

+ Survey 82:244 S '46 370w

ALLSTON, ROBERT FRANCIS WITHERS. The South Carolina rice plantation, as revealed in [his] papers; ed. by J. H. Easterby. (Am hist. assn. publication) 478p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

975.7 Rice and rice culture. Plantation life. South Carolina—Social life and customs. Allston family A45-4597

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"This volume furnishes the best picture of the problems and practices of antebellum rice planting that has been put into print." J. G. de R. Hamilton

+ Am Hist R 51:516 Ap '46 600w

"The book is a rich mine for historians, and holds much interest for the general reader." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 O 14 '45 70w

"The book is one prepared and published under the direction of the American Historical Association from the income of the Albert J. Beveridge Memorial Fund, and the choice does credit to that fund. . . This collection is certain to be one of the standard source books in its field." C. McD. Puckette

+ N Y Times p28 Ap 28 '46 550w

U S Quarterly BkI 2:44 Mr '46 240w

ALSO, STEWART JOHONNOT OLIVER, and BRADEN, THOMAS. Sub rosa; the O.S.S. and American espionage. 237p $2.50 Reynal

940.5485 Secret service—U.S. U.S. Office of strategic services. World war, 1939-1945 —Secret service 46-1621

"Stories of parachute drops behind enemy lines, dramatic exploits in discovering and organizing resistance movements make this sketchy account of the Operations Branch of the Office of Strategic Services exciting journalism. Authors, parachutists themselves, limit their reporting to the semi-military activities of O.S.S., and omit the staff activities of the equally important Research and Analysis Branch." Library J

"Politically uninformed readers are warned against the passionate defense of Robert Murphy's activities in North Africa to be found in 'Sub Rosa.' Also, never noted for his liberalism, runs true to form in defending Murphy. But, taken as a whole, the Also-Braden book accomplishes its purpose and furnishes one of the most exciting evenings of vicarious adventure to find its way between covers in many a moon." Sterling North

+ — Book Week p2 Mr 3 '46 750w

Booklist 42:223 Mr 15 '46

Foreign Affairs 25:162 O '46 30w

Kirkus 14:13 Ja '46 150w

"Recommended as good reading, but not to be mistaken for a complete history." Scott Adams

+ Library J 71:279 F 15 '46 140w

Reviewed by A. J. Goldberg

Nation 162:349 Mr 23 '46 700w

"The most remarkable fact about 'Sub Rosa' is that it is one of the very few books about the war in which the authors have been dazzled by what they saw without being blinded. In no sense a criticism of the OSS, it still reveals many of its faults." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p4 F 24 '46 430w

New Yorker 22:104 Mr 9 '46 140w

Reviewed by Donald Armstrong

Sat R of Lit 29:11 Mr 16 '46 850w

U S Quarterly BkI 2:212 S '46 280w

Reviewed by A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

Weekly Book Review p1 F 24 '46 750w

ALTIERI, VETO JOSEPH. Gas analysis & testing of gaseous material. 567p il $7.50; to members $5 Am. gas assn

545.7 Gases—Analysis 45-9946

"This work is intended to supersede the gas analysis portion of the Gas chemists' handbook (1929), and a small amount of material that appeared in that work has been included. The present work is intended for use by gas chemists as a guide to standard procedures of analyzing and testing. Specific directions for apparatus procedure and interpretation of tests are given. There are many illustrations of apparatus. The appendix contains about forty pages of useful reference data, and there is an extensive bibliography." N Y New Tech Bks

"This book is a 'must' for every gas laboratory and for every general laboratory." R. S. McBride

+ Chem & Met Eng 53:293 Ap '46 250w
Library J 71:182 F 1 '46 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:7 Ja '46

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. Guide to colleges, universities, and professional schools in the United States; comp. under the direction of Carter V. Good. 681p $5 The council

373.73 Colleges and universities—U.S. Professional education 46-188

"In addition to data on location, kind of school, size, entrance requirements, curriculum, degree, and tuition, there are a number of special items of concern to the veteran: credit for work taken in the armed services, physical education requirements for veterans, housing available for married students, opportunities for part-time employment and local rates of pay, campus regulations on drinking, smoking, dancing, automobiles, chapel attendance, etc. The guide covers approximately 3,400 college administrative units in some 1,700 institutions of collegiate level, both accredited and unaccredited. The information is presented in tabular form." Library Q

Booklist 42:178 F 1 '46

"This bulky volume will be an invaluable reference tool for librarians called on to furnish information to returning veterans who wish to take advantage of the educational provisions of the G.I. Bill of Rights."

+ Library Q 16:184 Ap '46 110w

"To a reader without a specific interest in the field of higher education this book would provide about as thrilling reading as a volume of logarithmic tables, but to a prospective college student, especially a veteran, or to one interested in the problems of higher education in the United States it contains an amazing wealth of factual material that will be found useful in countless ways for guidance purposes or as basic data for analytical studies." E. S. Evenden

+ School & Society 64:101 Ag 10 '46 1450w

"The book consists entirely of tables, so ingeniously devised that a vast amount of information, much of it never before assembled, can be gathered at a glance. Besides the ordinary topics, enlarged where veterans are concerned, there are items like housing facilities, and rules about church attendance, intoxicants, smoking and dancing."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:72 Mr '46 220w

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. Hawaiian schools, a curriculum survey, 1944-45; conducted for the 1943 House holdover committee of the Hawaiian legislature by the [Council] Edgar M. Draper, director of survey (assisted by) Alice H. Hayden. 176p il $2 The council

379.969 Education—Hawaiian islands 46-7425

"This report represents the fourth in a series of surveys in Hawaii. . . The survey committee spent a month in the territory and collected the data on which the present report, encompassing all types and all levels of public schools in Hawaii, is based. . . The report deals principally with a study of the existing curriculum and with an examination of the procedures and methods now used in curriculum improvement. All the suggestions presented are set in terms of administrative and supervisory reorganization of the Commissioners of Public Instruction, the Department of Public Instruction, and the school districts" El School J

"The volume represents a well-planned program for facilitating curriculum improvement in the territory. Because of the emphasis placed on the administrative and supervisory phases of curriculum improvement, the report will probably be of greater use to administrators than to teachers." O. T. Froe

+ El School J 47:115 O '46 900w

School & Society 64:392 N 30 '46 20w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:307 D '46 280w

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. Commission on teacher education. Helping teachers understand children, by the staff of the Division on child development and teacher personnel. 468p $3.50 The council

136.7 Child study. School management 45-9188

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Booklist 42:241 Ap 1 '46

"The procedures used in this study are simple and practical enough to appeal to any teacher." Dorothy Patnales

+ J Home Econ 38:302 My '46 200w

Reviewed by H. R. Becker

School & Society 63:266 Ap 13 '46 1850w

"It is one of the most needed of books for teachers who can cut away from self-defending, academically established presuppositions and face the realities of their profession. It will be for them nothing less than a book of revelations." E. R. Groves

+ Social Forces 25:101 O '46 120w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:39 Mr '46 200w

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. Commission on teacher education. Improvement of teacher education; a final report. 283p $2 The council

370.73 Teachers, Training of 46-5252

"The report summarizes the methods, the experiences of the various units, and the conclusions of the Commission which functioned from 1938 to 1944. For education rather than general libraries" Booklist

Booklist 43:5 S '46

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:208 S '46 320w

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. Commission on teacher education. State programs for the improvement of teacher education. See Prall, C. E.

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON PUBLIC AFFAIRS. Veterans information directory. 131p pa $2 The council

355.115 Veterans 46-25077

"A guide to national, state, and local agencies through which ex-servicemen can obtain government benefits and private aid in the fields of business, employment, education, agriculture, social service, rehabilitation, etc."

—Subtitle. Directory only, with no description or appraisal of the work of the agencies. When possible the name of the director or chairman is given." Booklist

Booklist 42:242 Ap 1 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:826 Je 1 '46 30w

AMERICAN PHILOSOPHICAL ASSOCIATION.
Commission on the function of philosophy in liberal education. Philosophy in American education: its tasks and opportunities, by Brand Blanshard [and others]. 306p $3 Harper
107 Philosophy—Study and teaching 45-8354
For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"For one not a professional metaphysician, this book presents a difficulty. The difficulty arises from the fact that the writers, constituting a committee of the American Philosophical Association, were set a problem every generous spirit in education wants solved; and yet, at the conclusion of its crowded pages, despite many useful suggestions for strengthening this or that course in college or university, the problem is not solved. Indeed, in some sense it is, to the nonprofessional reader, passed over rather than confronted." H. M. Jones

— Ann Am Acad 244:224 Mr '46 700w

"The American Philosophical Association is to be highly commended on the publication of this volume, and the several authors likewise. In a day when scientism, instrumentalism, empiricism, and other modern versions of Comte's positivism are proclaiming their respective methods as the only approach to knowledge, it is well to know that we have qualified scholars to challenge that claim and to defend the primacy of philosophy. . . . We cannot agree with the expressed or implied opinion of the authors of this volume that philosophy will take the place of religious faith . . . neither can we approve of the cavalier disdain with which the whole question of the supernatural is dismissed; but this does not prevent our commending their symposium to the careful attention of Catholic educators." E. B. Jordan

+ Cath World 163:273 Je '46 600w

Current Hist 10:59 Ja '46 70w

"This book will not be condemned as idealistic and impractical. Its thesis is grounded in realism, and its motivation is functional and down to earth. If a thousand professors of philosophy and education should read it with an open mind, the resulting changes in our purposes and procedures will have made the entire venture profitable." C. D. Champlin

+ El School J 47:52 S '46 1000w

Reviewed by George E. Barton

Ethics 56:226 Ap '46 3000w

Reviewed by Marten ten Hoer

J Philos 43:95 F 14 '46 4300w

"This volume is a notable achievement, particularly in view of the conditions under which it was produced. It was written by five men who disagreed among themselves in some important respects; they attempted to take into account the still more diverse opinions of hundreds of professional and lay philosophies throughout the country; and they set themselves the task of discussing a highly controversial subject, i.e., the nature of philosophy and its role in American education. Nevertheless, the volume is well written, interesting, forthright, constructive and most illuminating." T. M. Greene

+ J Religion 26:298 O '46 550w

"A well-written and cogent defense of the place of philosophy in the curriculum of the liberal arts college." Sidney Hook

+ Nation 162:375 Mr 30 '46 2400w

"Practically everything is said about the ways in which philosophy can be taught. Why is it, then, that the book leaves at least one professional teacher of philosophy (and I suspect will leave many general readers) with a sense of something missing? I think the professional reader will feel that he has heard it all before, and perhaps feel a little wearied by so much regurgitation of pedagogical methods and the shapes of courses to come. Perhaps he will feel that there is almost too much consideration of philosophy in education, and that philosophizing itself gets lost in the process of considering the teaching of philosophy courses. The volume is a mixture of sermon, survey and sermon. Certainly for the laymen it will be disheartening to find that professionals themselves agree that philosophers do not agree on what philosophy is." Irwin Edman

N Y Times p6 F 3 '46 1150w

School & Society 62:192 S 22 '45 30w

AMERICAN SOCIETY FOR METALS. A.S.M. review of metal literature; an annotated survey of articles and technical papers appearing in the engineering, scientific and industrial journals and books here and abroad. (V 1) 700p $15 The society

016.669 Metals—Bibliography (46-2054)

"The classified, annotated abstracts that appeared in The Metals Review from February, 1944, through January, 1945, under the title 'A. S. M. Review of Current Metal Literature,' have been collected in this volume to form a comprehensive guide to the metallurgical literature of 1944. Author and subject indexes have been added. Also included is an unannotated 'Bibliography of Quality Evaluation,' compiled by John W. W. Sullivan." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 42 360 Jl 15 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:344 Mr 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:10 Ja '46

AMISS, JOHN M., and SHERMAN, ESTHER.
New careers in industry; il. by Sidney W. Seeley. (Whittlesey house publication) 227p $2.50 McGraw

371.425 Job analysis. U.S.—Occupations 46-2801

"The authors, director and staff member, respectively, of industrial education for the Chrysler Corp., have compiled their material from their experience in the auto industry, as well as from research in other lines. The book outlines for the prospective seeker of employment the qualifications, duties, working conditions and wages of the complete range of employes in industry from production worker to specialist." Springfield Republican

"Informative and practical book."

+ Book Week p6 Ap 21 '46 80w

Booklist 42:275 My 1 '46

Reviewed by R. B. Seymour

Chem & Eng N 24:1135 Ap 25 '46 450w

"Excellent book on vocations for high and vocational schools."

+ Library J 71:587 Ap 15 '46 70w

"Written in highly readable style, 'Careers in Industry' should fill a place in the guidance material for young people seeking career information." J. S. K.

+ Springfield Republican p4 Mr 30 '46 180w

Reviewed by E. M. Herrick

Weekly Book Review p14 My 12 '46

320w

AMSDEN, JOHN PAGE. Physical chemistry for premedical students. 298p $3.50 McGraw

541 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 46-2740

"In the 'International Chemical Series.' Text covers fundamentals of elementary physical chemistry which will be of value to students in later professional work. Gives simple derivations of the important equations, has illustrated problems, discussion of the Donnan equilibrium and uses the Brønsted concept of acids and bases throughout the text. Based on Professor Amsden's lecture notes used in Dartmouth during the past 12 years." (Library J) Index.

"As this book is used, the instructor undoubtedly will wish to supplement the material by making references to applications in the theory and practice of medicine and by giving on occasion more exact physical-chemical information. There appears to be small reason for an enthusiastic recommendation of the book in its present form."

Chem & Eng N 24:1970 Jl 25 '46 500w

"We feel we must vigorously criticize the oversimplified derivations given for many of the important relationships in this text. . . . To teachers who feel that our viewpoint is too meticulous, and who agree with Prof. Amsden that oversimplification is justified in persuading premedical students that they know something of physical chemistry, his book should be worthy of consideration." B. L. Crawford

AMSDEN, J. P.—Continued
J Phys Chem 50:492 N '46 600w
Library J 71:182 F 1 '46 90w

ANDERSON, JOHN ANSEL, ed. Enzymes and their role in wheat technology. 371p il $4.50 Interscience

641.631 Enzymes. Flour 46-11839
"This volume, the first in a projected series of monographs sponsored by the American Association of Cereal Chemists, consists of eleven papers by sixteen contributors. Except for the first paper which deals with the chemistry of enzymes in general, only those enzymes of greatest interest to cereal chemists have been treated: the amylases, esterases, oxidases, proteases, and the fermentation enzymes. Two papers are devoted to each class of enzyme; one reviews the present knowledge of both the plant and animal enzyme, the other discusses the role of that enzyme in milling and baking. There are separate author and subject indexes, and extensive bibliographies are appended to each paper. The fact that the titles of the journal articles are included as part of the bibliographical references, rarely the case in chemical bibliographies, deserves special mention." N Y New Tech Bks

"This volume is an important contribution to enzymology. I highly recommend it to those interested in enzymes." Henry Tauber
+ Chem & Eng N 24:2284 Ag 25 '46 360w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:825 Je 1 '46 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:40 J1 '46

ANDERSON, L. M., and MARY CATHERINE, SISTER (S. M. C.). The flight and the song; a tale of old Devon. 175p $2 Longmans 46-4956

Combination of legend and story about Devon in the time of the dissolution of the monasteries. The central figure is a beautiful boy, born late to his pious parents. Robin, who was more at home among the animals than among humans, never grew up in mind. He wandered about Devon, singing his lovely, original songs, at first welcomed for the good luck he supposedly brought to the people of the moors. When misfortune befell them, Robin's end was tragic.

"In the English of Chaucer such a tale is woven of pixies and yeth-hounds, of hermit and scrivener, of Goodman Richard and sturdy Lizz Brownrigg, of despoiled monasteries, king's messengers and a dozen other matters with so light a hand and so sure a touch as to make it delectable reading, indeed." + Cath World 163:379 J1 '46 200w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 44:438 Ag 16 '46 200w

"There is both reverence and fancy in 'A Tale of Old Devon' which is an interesting and a well told tale."

+ Kirkus 14:196 Ap 15 '46 240w

"Historical novel in that it has a background of the dissolution of the monasteries under Henry VIII. More important is its charm, poetical feeling for nature and the spiritual side of life. Will be read only by the discriminating and mature reader of senior high school age and by the same type of adult reader." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 71:985 J1 '46 90w

"Robin's story is both sad and glad. In his oneness with nature he was a sort of St. Francis; in his other-worldliness, a misfit in the practical life of the Devon farms—an unhappy example of how much more speedily runs evil propaganda than good. . . It may be read for its message or for its simple and poetic picture of Devon life in the sixteenth century." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p8 Je 30 '46 350w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter
Springfd Republican p4d J1 7 '46 300w

"It is the product of a youthful mind and the by-product of scholarly gleanings among sixteenth-century lore. It is written with love but without the deft hand for drama. This kind of brief book needs a concise shapeliness, a swift and sure telling, which here are lacking. Prevailing speech and mind of this great and difficult moment of change are set forth with informational value, but no compact and memorable fiction is evolved. The nun has woven pieces of tapestries truly and thickly patterned with the creatures of that world, but neither she nor her co-writer has known how to cut and tailor them to fit a story." L. T. Nicholl

+ Weekly Book Review p11 J1 7 '46 430w
Wis Lib Bul 42:131 O '46

ANDERSON, WILLIAM KETCHAM, ed. Christian world mission. 275p $2; pa $1 Methodist church. Comm. on ministerial training, 810 Broadway, Nashville 2, Tenn.

266 Missions 46-7858

"The missionary enterprise in the world of tomorrow is going to be radically different, and the Methodist Church at least is aware of this fact. In thirty brief chapters, the contributors to this volume discuss the background of missions, the conditions in various missionary areas, and the modern way of doing things. Throughout the volume, there is an emphasis on the need for an interdenominational approach, for the stimulating of indigenous leadership, and for recognition of the new world situation. The approach is not peculiarly Methodist (there are chapters on Roman Catholicism and Lutheranism), and men of various denominations have contributed to . . . [these] essays." (Churchman) Biographical notes of contributors. No index.

"As an authentic brief survey of its subject, The Christian World Mission leaves little to be desired. One omission, however, is worth noting. Strangely enough, no chapter appears on Christian missions in relation to non-Christian faiths, a subject much discussed at great ecumenical gatherings of recent years. Certainly the problem has not disappeared. In the years ahead all vital faiths will surely strive to relate themselves to world affairs, requiring of the Christian community even greater wisdom of method and objective as it conducts its mission in a common world environment. But regardless of this omission, the volume is timely and arresting. Prepared first of all for ministers, its vision, shaped in the thought of some of the church's ablest leaders, deserves radiation to every contemporary Christian as the wider frame of reference for his own forward living." C. H. Hamilton

+ Christian Century 63:1183 O 2 '46 1000w

"Fine group of stock-taking essays." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 160:17 O 1 '46 140w

ANDRADE, JORGE CARRERA. See Carrera Andrade, J.

ANDREWS, NED. Cowdog. 222p $2 Morrow
Dogs—Legends and stories 46-18719

Western story for older boys. It includes all the excitement of murder, arson, cattle rustling and kidnapping. Cowboy Tom Stearns and his one-man dog are the central characters, but the young son of a nearby rancher plays an important part.

"This top-notch Western . . . has real character because everything is woven around a very real pup, part mutt and part hound dog, and an easy-going cowpoke. . . Careful handling of detail and Andrews' observation of character traits produce an authentic story about the range and make for fine reading." B. T.

+ Book Week p20 N 10 '46 80w
Kirkus 14:278 Je 15 '46 90w

"Good is good and bad is horrid, with no shadings, in this book of the Arizona range written with all the trappings of the old Bill Hart movies. Doubtless Lone Ranger fans from 9 to 11 will love it." Lavinia Davis
N Y Times p38 O 13 '46 180w

"A book that will appeal to the older boys and girls who like a fast-moving tale—and dogs."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:63 N 9 '46 50w

ANDREWS, WAYNE. Battle for Chicago. 358p il $3.75 Harcourt

977.311 Chicago—History 46-11934

"Primarily a story of Chicago's money peering. It is a series of tales of the men who created a new aristocracy for themselves and families out of their success at building railroads, making farm machinery, killing cows and pigs; at buying low and selling high, whether real estate, electric light plants or ladies' piece goods. It tells briefly how these men made their fortunes and how their fortunes affected them; how their families struggled among themselves for power and position; how they, or their heirs, sought to justify their accumulations in philanthropy... In their times and deeds they cover every period and important episode of Chicago's story." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

"Not much that is told here is new, but it is told with verve. It is lively social gossip and not social and economic history in a serious sense." B. L. Pierce

Book Week p27 N 10 '46 550w

Booklist 43:84 N 15 '46

Christian Century 63:1408 N 20 '46 110w

Reviewed by Barry Byrne

Commonweal 45:257 D 20 '46 650w

"Good reading."

+ Kirkus 14:531 O 15 '46 170w

"Personal history of financial titans is always fascinating. Wayne Andrews has written an absorbing book about the titans of Chicago." Robert Lasch

New Repub 115:738 D 2 '46 550w

Reviewed by Turner Catledge

N Y Times p4 N 3 '46 900w

"Mr. Andrews has oversimplified [the book] at times and overloaded it with detail at times; he obviously did a lot of research, but he appears to have skimmed in spots. The result is that some of the most important chapters sound sketchy. This journalistic compromise between a long article and a thorough history is not wholly a failure, but it is not wholly satisfactory either."

New Yorker 22:128 N 2 '46 120w

"Andrews' study of Chicago's 19th century barons is one of the most intelligent treatments of the business mind of that century that has been written. Less judgmental than those of the Myers-Josephson school, from which it does not differ radically, it is nevertheless more moderate, better poised and based on at least as full a study of the subject at hand. . . On questions closer to home in point of time, Andrews displays considerably more bias." Ruth Teiser

+ San Francisco Chronicle p33 D 1 '46 500w

"In writing this book, Mr. Andrews gave a great deal of time and patient effort to the job of thoroughly immersing himself in the facts of a century in a city's life. His access to private documents and the care with which he interviewed survivors give it added freshness and accuracy." A. M. Lee

+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 N 23 '46 850w

"While the book is to be recommended to readers who are interested in the characters portrayed and in their locale, it is a one-sided account of the 'Battle for Chicago.' Mr. Andrews' characters are silhouettes. Principally they were engaged in a mad scramble for gold. . . There is much that Mr. Andrews could have written on the social and political phases of Chicago's history that would not only have been interesting and informative but which might have influenced the 'Battle for Chicago,' which is continuing despite a present lull." H. L. Ickes

Weekly Book Review p3 N 17 '46 1800w

Wis Lib Bul 42:164 D '46

ANGLE, PAUL MCCLELLAND, ed. The great Chicago fire. 85p il pa $3 Chicago historical society; for sale by Newman-Valentine, 16 N. Michigan av, Chicago 2

977.311 Chicago—Fire, 1871

"This booklet contains seven contemporary letters by men and women who were present in Chicago on the tragic night of Oct. 8, 1871, when the fire began that turned pretty much all of the city into rubble and ashes. Many illustrations from the society's collections and decorations in two colors by Joseph Trautwein, add much to the text." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by J. W. Rogers

Book Week pl O 6 '46 1100w

Booklist 43:84 N 15 '46

"In his otherwise excellent introduction Mr. Angle states that the holocaust was 'the most destructive fire in American history.' This is erroneous. On the same night, at almost the same hour, there began in northern Wisconsin a fire that took six times as many lives as did the Chicago disaster and destroyed as much and probably more real property value." S. H. Holbrook

Weekly Book Review p53 N 24 '46 140w

ANGLE, PAUL MCCLELLAND. A shelf of Lincoln books; [pub] in association with the Abraham Lincoln assn. of Springfield, Illinois. 142p $3 Rutgers univ. press

012 Lincoln, Abraham—Bibliography

46-25256

A selective and critical bibliography of Lincolniana, prepared by a specialist on Lincoln. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is conveniently arranged and has the great merit of supplying adequate appraisals of the 81 titles included. . . In the author's style there is a lightness of touch, an ease of approach, and a sustained attractiveness rarely found among bibliographies. Through it all one glimpses Angle's own enjoyment of history for its perspective, its contribution to straight thinking and its enrichment of life. For even a small Lincoln collection the book is indispensable." J. G. Randall

+ Book Week p2 Jl 14 '46 600w

Booklist 43:29 O 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 5 '46 100w

Current Hist 11:331 O '46 40w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 11 '46 150w

"No praise could be too high for the quality of Mr. Angle's selections, criticisms, and appreciations. All are characterized by a vast and detailed knowledge of the subject, a sound and discriminating judgment, and a lucid and well-phrased exposition. Here, in eighty-one articles, is all that one knows or needs to know about Lincoln, and abundant matter for a lifetime of profitable reading. It is not too much to assert that Mr. Angle's Shelf may stand as a model for selective annotated bibliographies in the field of the humanities, and deserves imitation for other men and other topics of well-defined scope."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:350 D '46 200w

ANTHONY, NORMAN. How to grow old disgracefully; il. by the author. 247p $2.75 Duell B or 92 46-3562

Autobiography of a commercial artist and gag writer, one-time editor of Judge and of Life in its first form, editor and originator of Ballyhoo. He later took a hand at theatrical production, without much success. His personal impressions include some spicy comments on New York life in speak-easy days.

ANTHONY, NORMAN—Continued

"'How to Grow Old Disgracefully' is a self-portrait with the warts left in, for the editor's follies, failures and near-misses are chronicled in the same tone of voice as his successes. The book should be received with interest by all the considerable company who remember the magazines named [Life, Judge, and Ballyhoo], and by that far larger legion who are interested in their fellowman's foibles, for Norman Anthony's autobiography is an intensely human story." W. F. Morse
+ Book Week p8 Ap 14 '46 550w

"The riotous life rewritten; Fitzgerald did it much better."

Kirkus 14:171 Ap 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

Library J 71:482 Ap 1 '46 100w

"Judged by his own standards, Anthony had a lot of fun while a high-salaried editor. Reading his autobiography, one marvels at his amazing ability to blend alcohol, art and commerce. Never was he so busy that he couldn't recess for a binge or a survey of the speak-easies. A good half of his memoir is concerned with escapades involving him and his cronies when foxed with the grape. While most of these antics were probably hilarious to the participants, like most rum-inspired capers they wane in type. Such jinks should be seen rather than heard." Richard Maney
N Y Times p5 Ap 21 '46 700w

New Yorker 22:107 Ap 20 '46 90w

"Although [his career] seems to have been intensely funny to the author and participant you won't really have to worry about the strain to your stomach muscles. The nicest thing about it is the collection of cartoons from old copies of 'Ballyhoo.'"

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 11 '46 100w

"The admiring stories of the speak easies and other prohibition era devilishness give parts of the book the air of a period piece. Some of the adventures of the author and his friends seem not so hilarious now as they doubtless seemed at the time. . . In places the humor seems tired and forced, and it is always about as subtle as a neon light. But it is humor. 'How To Grow Old Disgracefully, or Anthony's Adversities' is advertised as a hilarious autobiography. It is amusing, entertaining, a humorous book that is humorous and that tells its own story and the many smaller stories within its pages with contagious gaiety." J. P. Wood

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:19 My 11 '46 650w

"There is much of magazine history in these chapters, and the author's sketches of some of his contemporaries scrape the skin without any follow-up lotion. If he pays off a few scores, it's just one of the privileges you enjoy when you decide to tell the story of your own life, from your own viewpoint." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p21 Ap 21 '46 320w

APPLEBAUM, STELLA B. Baby, a mother's manual; with intrs. by Béla Schick, and Margaret E. Fries. 114p il $2.50 Ziff-Davis

649.1 Infants—Care and hygiene SG46-235

Manual for prospective or inexperienced mothers, lavishly illustrated with photographs. Bibliography of recommended books. Index.

Book Week p11 S 8 '46 60w

"The usefulness of this manual, like many others of its kind, would be enhanced if more attention had been given to the substantial data on the normal but less engaging features of infant development." F. M. Dwyer
J Home Econ 39:43 Ja '47 100w

Kirkus 14:272 Je 1 '46 90w

"In many well-chosen photographs and a minimum of text, Mrs. Applebaum skillfully conveys the rock-bottom information on preparing for and bringing up a baby. Graphically, with a sure touch, she combines practical advice on physical care with the new emphasis on the baby's need to be wanted, loved, and enjoyed as one of the family." Catherine MacKenzie

+ N Y Times p58 N 10 '46 230w

"The advice, based on accepted medical practices, runs from the prenatal period through the toddling age, and is given in brief paragraphs; besides photographs of the children themselves, all sorts of nursery equipment and environment are also represented."

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Je 30 '46 100w

APTKEKER, HERBERT. Essays in the history of the American Negro. 216p $2 Int. pubs.

325.26 Negroes 45-9454

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"In spite of exaggeration, bitterness, and some mistakes in quoted fact, Mr. Aptheker has written an interesting, stimulating, and worth-while book." W. W. Davis

+ — Am Hist R 51:519 Ap '46 1050w

"[The book] is written in a lucid and interesting style and should satisfy the demand for a short, popular work on this phase of American history. It would serve admirably as an adjunctive history textbook for high schools, for it helps to portray the role of the Negro in this particular epoch of the Nation's past. Its value is enhanced through the inclusion of a chronology of known slave revolts and an authoritative briefly annotated bibliography." H H Smythe

+ Ann Am Acad 244:188 Mr '46 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '46

ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS. Arabian nights; collected and ed. by Andrew Lang; il by Vera Bock; with a foreword by Mary Gould Davis. new ed 303p $2 Longmans

46-3909

"A new and revised edition with new drawings and readable type. A few of the less popular tales have been omitted and two stories from The Blue Fairy Book have been added." Booklist

"Vera Bock is a perfect choice as illustrator and her black and white drawings and decorations give the book that beauty of design which 'Arabian Nights' surely deserves." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p11 Je 2 '46 150w

Booklist 42:334 Je 15 '46

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 24 '46 60w

Kirkus 14:67 F 1 '46 30w

Reviewed by K. H. McAlarney
Library J 71:920 Je 15 '46 70w

Sat R of Lit 29:45 Je 15 '46 20w

School & Society 63:351 My 11 '46 30w

Social Studies 37:336 N '46 10w

"It is late in the day to review either 'The Arabian Nights' or Andrew Lang, but this beautiful new edition must be pointed out to parents not only for its appreciative foreword, but for two striking features: size of type and appropriateness of pictures. 'The Arabian Nights' entralls young readers: they go on and on, regardless of fading daylight—and many editions put in too much with type far too small to stand the eye-strain. This edition has lucid type, broadly spaced. The pictures are just Oriental enough; exotic but not lush; designs rather than realistic treatments." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 My 5 '46 110w

ARAGON, LOUIS. Aragon, poet of the French resistance; ed. by Hannah Josephson and Malcolm Cowley. 167p $2 Duell

841 World war, 1939-1945—Poetry. World war, 1939-1945—France 46-275

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Booklist 42:223 Mr 15 '46

Bookmark 7:9 Mr '46

"In Aragon's poems there are all sorts of memories of his country's past and, in his country's mind and in his own, they must have been dead for years—ever since his school years when he learnt about them in books—but now in his own and in his country's distress, they are present once again, they live again, they are the past recaptured, they are as real to him as his love for his wife. He speaks about them as simply as he does about his wife." C. G. Paulding

+ Commonweal 43:432 F 8 '46 1700w

Reviewed by René Blanc-Roos
Nation 163:76 J1 20 '46 1800w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 21:95 F 9 '46 300w

"This translation of a brilliant though facile poet will not rank with the masterpieces of its kind: great translations are probably only those of texts which we cannot read in the original, and have therefore seldom been done from languages like French which are too familiar to the English-speaking reader. Nevertheless, it is a timely book, a work of circumstance, as Aragon's poems also were, but one which affords valuable insight into the French moods of the last few years, and probably of tomorrow." Henri Peyre

+ — Yale R n s 35:563 spring '46 900w

ARCHER, JOHN CLARK. The Sikhs in relation to Hindus, Moslems, Christians, and Ahmadiyyas; a study in comparative religion. 353p il $3.75 Princeton univ. press 294.553 Sikhs A46-819

"India's 6,000,000 Sikhs are differentiated from other Indians primarily by their religious faith, and Professor Archer's book carries the subtitle, 'A Study in Comparative Religion.' Sikhism originated some five centuries ago as an earnest attempt to reconcile the faiths of Moslem and Hindu. In itself it well repays the careful consideration which Professor Archer's book makes possible. One of the most interesting chapters is that in which Professor Archer presents translations of a number of the psalms contained in the sacred literature of the Sikhs." Book Week

"Professor Archer has given us a readable and competent account of the Sikh people. . . While the book lacks a map, which would have been helpful, its glossary and index are first-rate, and the Princeton University Press is to be congratulated for an unusually attractive format." D. G. Mandelbaum

+ Am Hist R 51:716 J1 '46 650w

Reviewed by M. W. Smith
Ann Am Acad 248:301 N '46 360w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p3 Mr 24 '46 140w

"The attempt to do in one book what the author does, namely, give a scholarly account of the Sikh movement, and at the same time consider the missionary angle, may cause some to question the objectivity of the author's approach to his problem. But it seems to the reviewer that the scholarly work is competently handled and that the missionary corollaries which come from it are rather the result of the study than a factor affecting the author's handling of his material." C. S. Braden

+ Christian Century 63:431 Ap 3 '46 750w

"This is a praiseworthy and painstaking, but somewhat pedantic book." Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 43:628 Ap 5 '46 330w

"The consideration of the interrelations of the British and the Sikhs, the contact of Sikhism with western culture, relations of the Sikhs with Gandhi, the role of the Sikhs in government, and the development of educational policies make this book, which is important for all those interested in the history of religions, have an important contemporary relevance." U S Quarterly Bkl 2:90 Je '46 200w

ARCINIEGAS, GERMAN. Caribbean: sea of the New World; tr. from the Spanish by Harriet de Onís. 464p il map $3.75 Knopf

972.9 Caribbean sea. West Indies—History 46-3862

Detailed history of the whole area of the Caribbean sea, which the author considers as one of America's frontier zones. The book begins with Columbus' first sight of the isle of San Salvador, and goes to and thru the period of the building of the Panama canal. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by F. N. Litten

Book Week p12 My 26 '46 320w

Booklist 42:314 Je 1 '46

Bookmark 7:8 N '46

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 21 '46 90w

"Arciniegas has written a most informative and entertaining book and, whereas its primary aim is merely to present a fast-moving panorama, nevertheless, as in any good history, the student of political and social morals will find in it much to ponder." J. M. Byrne

Commonweal 44:292 J1 5 '46 800w

Kirkus 14:187 Ap 15 '46 170w

"A valuable contribution to the personages of history and of Spanish America." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 71:754 My 15 '46 110w

Nation 163:49 J1 13 '46 600w

"Senor Arciniegas has a flair for bits of colorful detail and the kind of gossip which makes history come alive. Not the least of the book's virtues are a series of thumbnail biographies of such figures as Amerigo Vespucci, Raleigh, Toussaint, Miranda, Lafitte, William Walker and de Lessep."

New Repub 115:22 J1 8 '46 150w

"Sometimes mocking, sometimes deeply stirred, our poet-historian has told a colorful and troubled story, but the last creature to come out of his Caribbean Pandora's box of troubles is a winged hope." B. D. Wolfe

N Y Times p25 Ag 11 '46 1350w

"North Americans, who far too often take it for granted that the history of the New World begins with Raleigh's Virginia Colony or Plymouth Rock, should read 'Caribbean.' So, for that matter should other North Americans, even though they may know better, for a book which can paint as gigantic a panorama as this and at the same time tell such a whacking good story is a rarity not to be missed." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 11 '46 800w

"The success of this book and its ultimate justification is that it ties the tale of the Caribbean so well together and, at the same time, holds the interest of the reader with a breezy, informal style. The author does not, like too many historians, think that one must speak in hushed tones of people and deeds of the past. In his pages the rugged adventurers of our tropic sea live again with all their bravery, their lust, their sins, and their faith. The faults lie, as is often the case with summary histories compiled largely from secondary sources, in many inaccuracies and mistakes in emphasis." Albert Harkness

Sat R of Lit 29:10 J1 6 '46 1200w

"A colorful and lively account. . . Mr Arciniegas, who is known to this country through his editorship of 'The Green Continent' and other writings, is a native of Bogota, Colombia, and is now minister of national education in Colombia. At least one of his other books was marred by unsympathetic translation from the Spanish, but the present translation, by Harriet de Onís, is excellent throughout and loses none of the verve and pageantry that Mr Arciniegas found in one of the most romantic and violent of the world's areas." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Je 2 '46 360w

"It is a 'rambling tale,' but the description carries no reproach. Germán Arciniegas is an excellent Rambler, and only a Rambler could report with insight and fidelity on this area in which confusion has always ruled." Hubert Herring

ARCINIEGAS, GERMAN—Continued
+ Weekly Book Review p3 My 26 '46
1660w

ARMSTRONG, CHARLOTTE. The unsuspected. 216p $2.50 Coward-McCann 46-1108

Story of suspense and murder in which a diabolically clever murderer is unmasked by an amateur.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 Ja 27 '46 250w
Booklist 42:227 Mr 15 '46
Kirkus 13:480 N 1 '45 120w

"Swift and exciting entertainment."
+ New Repub 114:102 Ja 21 '46 80w

"The mystery element is completely lacking, but there is suspense enough and to spare." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p30 Ja 20 '46 180w

"Our old friend the suspense formula, so expertly handled that one tends to disregard the staggering improbabilities on which it is based."

+ New Yorker 21:80 Ja 19 '46 80w

"It's a honey!"

+ Sat R of Lit 29:39 Ja 19 '46 40w

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ja 27 '46
300w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 20 '46
300w

ARMSTRONG, EDWARD FRANKLAND, and MIAL, LAURENCE MACKENZIE. Raw materials from the sea. 164p il $3.75 Chemical pub. co. [165 Constructive publications, Ltd, 213 London rd, Leicester, England]

551.46 Ocean. Sea water. Commercial products [46-25061]

Study of the chemicals and other raw material obtained from the oceans. Includes chapters on salt, bromine, magnesium, iodine, and potassium salts, and describes the methods of extracting them. Discusses also the processes used to obtain fresh water from the sea. Index.

Reviewed by A. C. Redfield
Am Chem Soc J 68:1679 Ag '46 400w
Booklist 42:222 Mr 15 '46

"The style in which the book is written is such as to make it easily readable and of interest to both layman and scientist. For the latter, if he wishes to go into detail, the text is thoroughly documented with references to the original sources in the technical and scientific literature on which the contents of the book are based." L. C. Stewart

+ Chem & Eng N 24:1132 Ap 25 '46 350w

Chem & Met Eng 53:273 Mr '46 200w

"Within its small compass the book is comprehensive, and space is found to refer to the expedition (unsuccessful) which Professor Haber fitted out to extract gold from sea water in order to pay off the last German war debt. . . The book bears some marks of war-time publishing but is an excellent introduction to the subject for any reader and is provided with references for further adventuring." C. J. T. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 30 '46 240w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:47 Jl '46

ARMYTAGE, FLORA. Sebastian. 246p $2.50 Doubleday

46-6624

Elizabeth Aldrich, who accompanied her father on a diplomatic mission to a Latin-American country, is the heroine. Sebastian Kron, a mysterious, arrogant young man completely fascinated Elizabeth and she became engaged to him after promising never to question his activities. When she discovered that her fiancé had used her as an instrument in a coup d'état, the fascination ended.

Booklist 43:35 O 1 '46

"The atmosphere is sustained, the background solid in national probabilities, and the story—even at its thinnest—has plausibility." + Kirkus 14:304 Jl 1 '46 180w

"The politics are simply a sidelight on the love story. . . The redeeming factor of the book, and what lends it its veracity, is the wonderful way the heroine's own words reveal her own devastating simpleness." B. V. W.

N Y Times p22 S 15 '46 330w

— San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 20 '46
80w

"Flora Armitage does not succeed in making [Sebastian] quite as fascinating as he appeared to his [fiance]. The lady is the long-suffering type, but the pose is a trifle self-conscious." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p30 O 6 '46 100w

ARNALL, ELLIS GIBBS. Shore dimly seen. 312p $3 Lippincott

973.917 U.S.—Social conditions. U.S.—Economic conditions. Georgia—Politics and government 46-7247

The governor of Georgia, who claims he is a democrat with a small d, here restates his philosophy of democracy, and describes how he put it into practice in Georgia. He also expresses his views on education, race problems, conservation, southern industrialism, etc., and during the course of his book gives some autobiographical data.

"This is a frank testament of a good American still dreaming of the simple frontier of his fathers, often in classic phrase and poetic rhythm, yet grappling as a good democrat with the tough issues of 1946." E. R. Embree

+ Book Week p3 N 17 '46 650w

Booklist 43:82 N 15 '46

"Anyone interested in politics, and especially in Ellis Arnall, who is one of the leading junior members of the liberal wing of the Democratic Party, will find 'The Shore Dimly Seen' informative reading." E. R. L.

Christian Science Monitor p22 D 5 '46
470w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin
Commonweal 45:168 N 29 '46 1300w
Kirkus 14:448 S 1 '46 120w

"A stirring constructive philosophy of democracy. . . Pungently expressed, with a touch of satire, balanced by a sense of humor. . . An important book." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 71:1539 N 1 '46 100w

"No honest man should think it any easy assignment to review the writing of another man he likes and admires as much as I like and admire Ellis Arnall of Georgia: inevitably what critical faculty he possesses finds itself at painful strife with his affections. So let me say right off that the Governor's book is not perfectly organized and at spots is consciously 'literary,' and that with a microscope you can turn up an occasional—but inconsequential—misquotation. And then I can proceed to clap hands heartily." Jennings Perry

+ Nation 163:620 N 30 '46 550w

Reviewed by Walton Hamilton
+ New Repub 115:631 N 11 '46 1450w

"'The Shore Dimly Seen' forms a document of first importance. It is a profession of faith by an American that will hearten all liberals—a record of accomplishment by a young statesman which awakens pride—and an open bid by an able politician for a wider influence in national politics. . . The very appearance from the hand of a political leader of a memoir and manifesto of the quality of 'The Shore Dimly Seen' is a wholesome event. The book has its faults. The loose strings fairly hang out of it by which the economists can tug at his program. It contains some loud reticences. It is repetitious. On foreign affairs it ventures remarks that are both naive and contradictory. . . None the less, the Governor's testament is a superior book. It is a significant, hopeful, enlightened work." W. B. Hamilton

+ N Y Times p1 N 17 '46 1800w

New Yorker 22:142 N 30 '46 100w

Reviewed by Louis Wasserman
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 5 '47
380w

"Here is a book which transcends the regionalism from which it arises, and becomes the essence of what we like to think of as the American spirit: hopeful, fighting-mad at injustice (and all injustice in and to the South is not racial), buoyant, experimental, and free. It is not a biography, though enough of Ellis Arnall's smalltown Georgia life, his personality, and political accomplishments break through to make you believe you know him and want to know him better. . . . Before I began reading, I had misgivings. . . . But the first three pages ended such misgivings. And, although this comment may be minor, being a literary one, 'The Shore Dimly Seen' is written with passionate clarity, a poetic sensitivity for meanings, and a disregard for the intellectual snobbishness which bars admission of intellectual inspiration." Hodding Carter

+ Sat R of Lit 29:13 N 9 '46 1300w

"There are those who will profess to find in the book the influence of Franklin Roosevelt and Henry Wallace, for both of whom Governor Arnall admits great admiration. But the young Georgian is gayly original; at times, it appears, indiscriminately and purposefully so. . . . He temporizes a bit on the labor question, and, although he would hotly deny it, there seem to be a few uncertain spots in his generally enlightened discussion of the Negro question. It is true his proposed principles for a foreign policy were something like those defended by Mr. Wallace, but they were written well in advance of the latter's embattled versions. And besides all this, Arnall is set apart from Wallace by his very zest for direct, audacious and measurable action, his sure instinct for politics as it is played rather than as practiced, synthesized or shoved around at the end of a ten-foot pole. By the substance of this book, one should not apologize for measuring him against any figure active in his party today." Tarleton Collier

+ Weekly Book Review p1 N 17 '46
1600w

ARTHUR, PHYLLIS. Paying guest. 256p $2
Curl

45-9578

"No particular crisis but just the unrest and monotony stored up in eighteen years of marriage were causing increasing friction between Elise Holt and her husband, affecting the children and creating domestic tension. Into this situation stepped a handsome Southerner of thirty-nine, a paying guest unaware of his potential influence in several directions. Ensuing complications are highly dramatic and the climax is reached with humor and logic." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 42:184 F 1 '46

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Ja 20 '46
90w

ASCH, SHALOM. East river; a novel; tr.
by A. H. Gross. 438p $3 Putnam

46-7365

Life on the East Side of New York in a poor Jewish neighborhood in the early 1900's is the background of this novel. The central characters are a saintly Jewish storekeeper and his two sons: one a sensitive, scholarly invalid; the other a man given to sharp practices.

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Book Week p3 O 27 '46 600w

Booklist 43:132 Ja 1 '47

"Unlike some other Jewish writers, [Mr. Asch] seems to be completely out of his depth when he deals with Catholic beliefs and Catholic practices. . . . Those who know Catholics and their ways, will not easily discover an excuse for classifying this story as even artistically presentable." Joseph McSorley

— Cath World 164:375 Ja '47 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

Kirkus 14:554 N 1 '46 220w

"Historical background though accurate is too detailed. Characters, at times flesh and blood, too often used as vehicles to express out-of-character political and religious theories. Novel, despite a weak plot, is an important philosophical and social study and often achieves the majesty of The Nazarene. Recommended." E. H. Kennedy

+ Library J 71:1464 O 15 '46 70w

"This is no novel of the Jews; it is a novel of the American spirit. . . . It is also the story of the lives of Mary McCarthy, the Roman Catholic, and of her Catholic family. . . . It is the story of the Italians who on Sundays long for the old countryside and the human happiness which the poor streets and the confined spirit now deny to them. . . . 'East River' is a mirror in which we may look to rediscover our innocence, our energy, our faith, and how splendid we have looked to the humble and good people of a troubled world. It is a glass in which we may have again a sight of that purpose which alone makes living an experience of dignity and delight." Lawrence Lee

+ N Y Times p1 O 20 '46 1350w

"Mr. Asch fills the book with a solemn and sometimes affecting multitude of complexities—labor troubles, bigotry, a highly improbable reformation of the unscrupulous brother, religious observances, death, and a lot more besides. The result is a work of integrity, completely sincere and heavy as lead."

+ New Yorker 22:124 N 2 '46 160w

"There are two strong elements in the work of Shalom Asch. Either of them, fully expressed, would suffice to establish the talents of any lesser man, and it is because he is possessor and master of both, because they run through his work like twin roots, that Asch is one of the greatest of contemporary writers. One element, the earlier and the simpler, is the lusty earthiness of the Jewish folk tale, salted alike by tears and irrepressible, uproarious laughter. . . . The other element derives from that part of the Jewish spirit which is monastic and consecrated in tone, from the scholastic idealism which lifts its eyes to a vision of absolute ethics quite beyond sect and schism, and is blinded by what it beholds. . . . Asch has worked in both of his vineyards with equal potency. . . . His latest novel seems to me such a grafting, the Jewish folk humor and the stark, soaring Jewish messianic fervor, run together. It is a big, ambitious novel, striving greatly, achieving much less than it grasps at, yet rich in the beauty and vigor of its thrust." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 O 19 '46 1000w

"'East River' is an ambidextrous job. With his right hand Mr. Asch has drawn a tender and persuasive portrait of a good Jew. . . . It is a noble portrait, finely and convincingly drawn. The other intent of 'East River' is not so perfectly fulfilled. Through Mosche Wolf's two sons, Irving and Nat, Mr. Asch undertakes to show how the orthodox Jewish faith has been adequate to deal with the problems that modern industrial processes have laid on the shoulders of the workers. . . . Mr. Asch seems to have no knack at all for creating convincing women, but all of his men characters are either fully alive or, at the least, credible." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p5 O 27 '46 1100w

"The vitality and energy of East River insure that it is continuously readable. And its swarming panorama of all the sights and sounds and smells of tenement life, of social and religious customs, and all the abuses and cut-throat practices of the dress business keeps East River interesting. But, in spite of these virtues, this is a slowly-paced, humorless work. It is stiffly written; its plot creaks and stumbles awkwardly." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 36:383 winter '47 600w

ASHBROOK, HARRIETTE (SUSANNAH SHANE, pseud). Diamonds in the dumplings. 282p $2 Doubleday

46-7634

Detective story.

ASHBROOK, HARRIETTE—Continued

"A complex tale, but it will hold your interest throughout." Elizabeth Bullock
+ Book Week p8 Ag 11 '46 110w

"Satisfactory."

+ Kirkus 14:262 Je 1 '46 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 Ag 4 '46 180w

"'Diamonds in the Dumplings' is intricate in plot but Miss Shane never permits the action to bog down." M. L. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 15 '46 190w

"Millionaires, crooks, at least one murderer and then some take part in this engaging thriller, geared to the taste of most fans—a splendid pick-me-up for hot spells." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Jl 28 '46 270w

ASHLEY-MONTAGU, MONTAGUE FRANCIS.

Introduction to physical anthropology. 325p il $4 Thomas, C. C.

573 Somatology 46-566

"A college text for elementary or survey courses in the social sciences. [The author] includes two major themes: (1) primatology, including primate paleontology; and (2) human biology, including paleoanthropology. The book is, therefore, a summary of primate and human evolution, together with a consideration of the present differentiation and deployment of primates and man." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman

Ann Am Acad 244:228 Mr '46 450w

"In spite of some shortcomings, which undoubtedly will be removed in subsequent editions, the book is a stimulating introduction to the interesting and complex field of physical anthropology. It has the advantage of being brief and readable. It is a book that will be read with interest by social scientists, biologists, physicians, and general readers. It should stimulate in them a curiosity about the place of man as a biological entity." G. W. Lasker

+ Social Forces 25:224 D '46 850w

"The volume has many pages of technicalities to dismay the layman. With the technicalities omitted, however, it is still worthwhile for the general reader. The book impresses the reviewer as the possible nucleus for a larger and more philosophical work. There is an excellent bibliography." J. F. Santee

+ Social Studies 37:189 Ap '46 1450w

ASSOCIATED press news annual: 1945;
[comp] by Russell Landstrom. (V 1) 565p $4
Rinehart

909.82 Yearbooks (statistical, historical, etc)
(46-25211)

"The story of a year, in word and picture, compiled and written from the dispatches and pictures of Associated press correspondents and photographers around the world." (Subtitle) Arrangement is chronological, with the war and international events given first consideration, and a day-by-day summary at end of each month. Index.

Booklist 42:346 Jl 1 '46

"This is a newspapersey view; and as such it is worth the money, eminently entertaining, thrilling—and disturbing." C. M.

+ Canadian Forum 26:95 Jl '46 300w

Current Hist 11:228 S '46 70w

Foreign Affairs 25:336 Ja '47 40w

Kirkus 14:141 Mr 15 '46 120w

Reviewed by F. S. Adams

N Y Times p7 Je 23 '46 250w

Reviewed by Dixon Wecter

Sat R of Lit 29:12 Je 22 '46 1100w

"If the present volume is a fair sample of the annual product, the Associated Press can be credited with another scoop, for while there have been other books of the type none has covered with such detail the year under study. Every major detail in the news of 1945 has been covered, in words and pictures, and the result is invaluable both as a reference book and as source material for future historians." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4 Je 22 '46 350w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield

Weekly Book Review p14 Je 23 '46 420w

ASTON, WALTER H. Nor iron bars a cage.
218p $2.75 (10s 6d) Macmillan

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English [A46-3753]

"The adventures of three British prisoners of war, 1940-1942." (Subtitle) "When the Germans bombed a French munition train in May, 1940, Aston, clerk in a British depot at Rennes, lost part of a leg and suffered facial injuries. He was being expertly treated in Paris at a Centre Maxillo-Facial as the Germans took over France. Eventually Aston, a captain of the Fifty-first Highland Division and a British Army driver decided to try for an escape to Spain. Slipping from Paris with the right clothes, papers and a stock of stories to fill in the gaps, becoming French Canadians, French, British and even German deserters as the occasion demanded, they entered the unoccupied zone. From Lyon they worked to the Spanish frontier, with the last moves taking them over the Pyrenees on mule and foot." (N Y Times)

Book Week p11 My 12 '46 90w

"The book is interesting for two reasons—it gives a vivid picture of defeated and divided France, and it is a vigorous story of adventure, reflecting credit on these Englishmen, who, severely wounded as they were, carried out the roundabout 800-mile journey to the Spanish frontier." T. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 29 '46 120w

"Here is an amiable, 218-page bread-and-butter note acknowledging nearly two years of excellent medical care and five months of back-door hospitality that helped three Britons to freedom from Occupied France. Sgt. Aston remarks that his is a mild story as narratives of escape go, lacking bloodhounds, shooting, and burrowing under fences. The interest comes rather from the account of sympathetic treatment and help received from the French. As Aston tells it, theirs was a system short on mystery, long on friends, francs, patience and good luck." A. S.

+ N Y Times p38 My 5 '46 270w

ASTROV, MRS MARGOT LUISE THERESE (KROGER), ed. Winged serpent; an anthology of American Indian prose and poetry. 366p $3.50 Day

897 Indians—Literature 46-11836

Anthology of songs, prayers, and stories of the Indians of the United States, Mexico, Central America, and Peru, with some Eskimo songs and stories. Bibliography. Index.

"The lisping fragments of these translated lines in this anthology have very little Indian in them. They seem to me to present, rather, the vestigial remnants of pure being in the anthropologists themselves rather than the abundant, warm and generous Indian vision. This is pitiful and very touching and must be respected as any soul stirring, no matter how faint, should be. My personal conviction is unshakable. There is no Indian life beating in the thin lines of 'The Winged Serpent' but only the wishful interpretation of what might be." M. D. Luhan

— Book Week p29 N 10 '46 700w

Booklist 43:114 D 15 '46

ATHANASIUS, SAINT, patriarch of ALEXANDRIA. Incarnation of the Word of God; being [his] treatise De incarnatione Verbi Dei, newly tr. into English by a religious of C.S.M.V., S.Th. with an introd. by C. S. Lewis. 95p $1.50 Macmillan [5s Bles]

232.1 Incarnation 46-1105

A new translation of St. Athanasius' treatise De Incarnatione Verbi Dei, originally written in Greek. The treatise sets forth the positive content of the Christian faith.

"Athanasius is worth reading, and this is a good translation."

+ Christian Century 63:273 F 27 '46 210w

"It has a characteristic introduction by C. S. Lewis. . . It is in readable English, though here and there it might have been improved by more modern equivalents for certain words. 'Aforetime,' for example, is scarcely present-day English. But this defect, if it is a defect, leaves the book deserving of Mr. Lewis' commendation." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 160:17 Ap 1 '46 120w

"An interesting and accurate translation. . . C. S. Lewis's Introduction is a welcome adjunct to this little work of Saint Athanasius."

+ Commonweal 44:294 Jl 5 '46 70w

"This is a very useful little book, and we need more like it." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Quarterly 23:300 Jl '46 300w

ATHERTON, MRS GERTRUDE FRANKLIN (HORN). My San Francisco, a wayward biography. 334p il $3.50 Bobbs

979.461 San Francisco—History 46-11936

A history of the author's beloved city, San Francisco, which is also a partial autobiography of Mrs. Atherton. Some of the chapters are: Romantic backgrounds; San Francisco bookstores; A few of our illustrious dead; Our literati; Clubdom; California labor school; Historic banks of San Francisco; Yes, we have slums. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p10 N 17 '46 130w

Booklist 43:84 N 15 '46

"This reviewer finds it impossible to avoid this conclusion: that a little more effort to make the jewel-like city intelligible to those whose riches have not included a visit would pay uncommon dividends. Just a simple map of hill and street would help. . . Naturally, this approach and treatment have great value, but they would require other help to discern the San Francisco of the future." R. K. S.

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 22 '46 480w

"A distinctive picture of San Francisco. Polished prattle, but knowing."

+ Kirkus 14:374 Ag 1 '46 120w

"The kindness of her spirit gets the better of her, perhaps, in her catalogue of the current literati of San Francisco, 'Some of Our Best Citizens,' the accomplishments of San Francisco women, the charms of San Francisco bookstores. It is not that one would wish her to be unkind toward the persons concerned. It is merely that in listing them she gets too close to the guide-book level. Yet when she has a point to make she makes it. . . Her mind is keen, her sympathies alive, the energies that produced so many books still present." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p4 N 3 '46 700w

"Old San Franciscans, many of them, will be interested, perhaps irritated, certainly amused. For Mrs. Atherton has a talent for remembering—as you'll know if you've read her autobiography, 'Adventures of a Novelist.' . . Like many another, Mrs. Atherton finds herself deploring, just a little bit, the suddenness with which San Francisco has jumped nearly 50 per cent in population, the crowding that has ensued, the inevitable change in the city's once-leisurely life. But, unlike some, she does not waste time lamenting the 'good old days.' It is her view that no matter what San Francisco becomes it will always be San Francisco." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 O 18 '46 900w

"The book will be read with nostalgic emotions by all ex-San Franciscans, avidly by fellow citizens and with amused though perhaps a more remote interest by those unfortunates who do not know this most omniform of cities." Mary Parton

+ Weekly Book Review p14 D 15 '46 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 42:164 D '46

ATHERTON, RALPH. Principles of radio for operators. 344p il $3.75 Macmillan

621.384 Radio 45-9352

"This book is based on material originally used in Navy training courses. It treats electrical theory, and electrical and radio apparatus from the viewpoint of the person studying to be a practical operator. The discussion is compact and much ground is covered in a short book, but by relating theory directly to common apparatus and practice, the author has prepared a text that is eminently suitable for beginners with little or no background in the subject. A useful table of tube characteristics with diagrams of socket connections is provided in the appendix." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1134 D 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:61 O '45

ATKINSON, ARTHUR D. S. Fluorescent lighting. 144p il $3.50 Chemical pub. co. [12s 6d Newnes]

621.327 Electric lighting, Fluorescent 46-7432

"Information of interest to illumination engineers, factory managers and other persons concerned with the design and installation of fluorescent lighting is offered in this book. The author has devoted two preliminary chapters to discussions of light, fluorescence, and ultra-violet radiation. The remaining five chapters deal more specifically with fluorescent lamps and their accessories. Perhaps the most useful chapter is the final one in which the application of fluorescent lighting to factories, stores, store windows, schools, offices, and homes is treated at some length. The book appeared first in Great Britain, and it is pointed out in the preface to this edition that the British terminology has not been changed." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1626 N 15 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:42 Jl '46

ATKINSON, MARGARET F. Care for your kitten [il. by the author]. [56p] $1.50 Greenberg
636.8 Cats—Juvenile literature

Practical book for children on the care and training of kittens. Copiously illustrated. For third and fourth grades.

"A useful book for any child who has a kitten." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p11 My 5 '46 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '46

Wis Lib Bul 42:76 My '46

AUDEMARS, PIERRE. Hercule and the gods [Eng title: Temptations of Hercule]. 302p $2.50 Rinehart [7s 6d Pilot]

46-4932

In a first person narrative the author tells the story of a French railroad worker who attempts to outwit the machinations of a villainous pair of underworld characters and thereby brings a tragedy into his own life.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Book Week p4 Jl 21 '46 200w

"An odd stray bit, which might have appeal to those hunting the unusual in entertainment."

Kirkus 14:230 My 15 '46 210w

"A few readers will find it very funny. Take or leave." G. W. Hill

Library J 71:977 Jl '46 70w

Reviewed by Florence Crowther

N Y Times p4 Jl 21 '46 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 S 1 '46 150w

"Wonderful, lively, Gallic story—the best example of disarming gasconade since Daudet gave us 'Tartarin.'" R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 29:7 Ag 3 '46 800w

AUDEMARS, PIERRE—Continued

"We must demand of Mr. Audemars's future summer evenings a little more zest, a little more style, a little more economy—and not even a moment's incursion of a serious winter's mood." Anatole Bergeret

Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 11 '46 500w

AUGUR, HELEN. Passage to glory; John Ledyard's America. 310p il $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Ledyard, John. Voyages and travels 46-375

The life story of an American adventurer of good family. John Ledyard went to Dartmouth in the years when Dr Wheelock was trying to educate the Indians. Later he ran off to sea and became the only American on Captain Cook's last voyage in search of the Northwest Passage and the North Pole. Ledyard learned to love the Pacific and was the pioneer believer in America's destiny there, but died before he could transmit his passion to the rest of his countrymen. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Alan Browne

Book Week p10 F 17 '46 550w

Booklist 42:199 F 15 '46

Bookmark 7:12 My '46

"Helen Augur uses the trained skill of a professional biographer to weave from widely scattered threads a remarkable story of a comparatively little-known man with a consuming ambition. . . Miss Augur embellishes the main theme of her book with interesting contemporary history, but she fails to offer an explanation for Ledyard's failure to attain his goal." F. L. O.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 F 16 '46 600w

"The book is overwritten at points and sometimes quite unjust but it has an extraordinary timeliness. Though so different on the surface, the problem of today is the same as John Ledyard's." Edna Longan

+ — Commonweal 43:413 F 1 '46 420w

"Interpretative high-lighting, at times a shade too much guide-posting, this nevertheless contributes a striking picture of a wanderer whose life brought him the data—but not the acclaim—he wished."

+ — Kirkus 13:485 N 1 '45 210w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Nation 162:323 Mr 16 '46 100w

"Helen Augur, with a mountain of scholarly research behind her, has written Ledyard's story with tenderness and warmth. It moves swiftly, the underlying sadness sweetened by the quenchless zest of a gay and gallant spirit. The result is a noble and a memorable book." N. B. Baker

+ — N Y Times p15 F 10 '46 400w

"It makes a good story, but Miss Augur, in her enthusiasm for the hero, occasionally borders on incoherence. There are some good illustrations, including portraits of Ledyard's friends, Thomas Jefferson and John Paul Jones."

+ — New Yorker 21:78 Ja 19 '46 120w

"The full-bodied narrative of this biography is excellent. The accounts of Cook's death in Hawaii; of Ledyard's friendly association with Thomas Jefferson, who admired him and understood his Pacific dreams; his abortive partnership with John Paul Jones; his journey across Russia from St. Petersburg to Yakutsk; his final adventure into Africa make vivid and sometimes exciting reading. Miss Augur tells her tale of the hardy, lone explorer . . . and tells it well. 'Passage to Glory' is less successful in other aspects. The character of John Ledyard, painted as flamboyant and intuitive, does not emerge too clearly from the mass of supporting historical detail. The author's efforts to make Ledyard a man of greater import than he actually was are often clumsy and occasionally unconvincing." J. F. Wood

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:36 Ja 19 '46 700w

Scientific Bk Club R 17:3 F '46 480w

"His biographer does full justice to the meaning of Ledyard's vain passage to glory, as he called it. The book is sound and careful work. Scholars will regret that the not very extensive Ledyard letters and journal are not included complete, preferring them to the author's somewhat emotional interpretation of them. The general reader will find the book overwritten, perhaps, but interesting." Alan Browne

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:94 Je '46 260w

"Miss Augur tells the story of [Ledyard's] brilliant, strange and tragic failure. She tells it well, more as a psychological biography than as an adventure story or a history, and breathes more life into Ledyard than any one before her. But she tends to claim too much for him." Bernard De Voto

+ — Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 13 '46 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 42:45 Mr '46

AULAIRE, INGRI (MORTENSON) D', and AULAIRE, EDGAR PARIN D'. Pocahontas. [44p] $2.50 Doubleday

Pocahontas—Juvenile literature 46-11835

Picture-story book showing the life of Pocahontas from her girlhood in the Virginia forests, to her presentation at the English court. For ages six to ten.

Book Week p3 N 10 '46 230w

Booklist 43:120 D 15 '46

"In 'Pocahontas' the end papers are exceptionally lovely in color and quite enchanting in the details of the Indian village set within the circular stockade and ringed by a frieze of woodland animals. But in some of the pictures the Indians seem straight out of Peter Pan, not the Virginia wilderness, and the soft color that comes from drawing directly on the stone itself adds to the dreamlike quality." F. C. Darling

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 N 12 '46 120w

"Whenever the d'Aulaires choose an American subject, I feel a distinct sense of disappointment. This is no exception. They have taken a hackneyed theme and done almost nothing to make it come to life. . . But the d'Aulaires have a market, so don't overlook the book."

+ — Kirkus 14:541 N 1 '46 90w

"Recommended." Marian Webb

+ — Library J 71:1717 D 1 '46 70w

"The pictures are serious and formal in tone, correct in detail, and many of them are colored in poetic pastel shades. The story is presented rather flatly, with inverted sentences and little drama; in fact, it sounds like a translation from another language, done with more respect than knowledge of the possibilities of English. Yet small children should enjoy the pictures and can certainly take the story in their stride." Marjorie Fischer

+ — N Y Times p3 N 10 '46 70w

"Young children will look again and again at these big pictures, so interesting in detail, so subtle in color. Older ones may be able to detect their unusual blend of the authentic Indian and the modern, individual d'Aulaire styles of art." K. S. White

New Yorker 22:134 D 7 '46 80w

"I am myself a witness that whatever we were told about Pocahontas, it always began with her being an Indian princess who saved the life of John Smith, and as princesses were fairly grown up to fairy-tale readers, we did not think of her, whatever we were told, as a little child—the merry, strong, active, up and coming little favorite of her father that she was when she welcomed the big Englishman as a sort of marvelous new uncle. Here she is, to the life, a real little girl, red-skinned, muscular, quick as a wink, yet with something about her pictures and something about the turn of the words as her story is told, that puts it into the beautiful borderland where mythology and history get along so well together." M. L. Becker

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 N 10 '46 820w

AUSTIN, RUTH ERMA. Elementary costume illustration; il. by the author. 170p $2.25 McGraw

743 Art. Commercial. Clothing and dress 46-616

"Planned primarily for the student without extensive art training, who wants to learn how to express simple ideas pertaining to clothing, this text provides approximately 300 line drawings which include the simple fashion figure, stick figures, scribble figures, costume details, and media suitable for costume illustration. Emphasis is placed upon costume details, which are presented as simply as possible, with the idea that they may be combined or used in many styles." Publisher's note

"This book offers a simple and concise treatment of a rather complicated subject and will be most useful to anyone trying to put ideas about clothes on paper." S. C. Brooks

+ J Home Econ 38:302 My '46 250w

+ Theatre Arts 30:495 Ag '46 40w

AVERILL, ESTHER. Daniel Boone; il. by Feodor Rojankovsky. new & enl ed 56p $1.50 Harper

B or 92 Boone, Daniel—Juvenile literature 46-1265

"Fourteen years ago 'Daniel Boone,' with a brief French text to accompany the brilliant and beautiful lithographs of a young Russian artist, was published in Paris by the Domino Press. Those who remember this edition and the thin folio volume brought out in this country soon after by the Horn Book, with the text in English, will be happy to have this book again available. . . The reduction of the book to a more practical size has not interfered with the effectiveness of the pictures which have the same jewel-like brilliancy of the original edition." N Y Times

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p7 J1 28 '46 140w

Booklist 42:230 Mr 15 '46

"Excellent introduction to a famous American hero tale—should be popular with schools and libraries."

+ Kirkus 14:104 F 15 '46 150w

"All of the brilliantly colored pictures by Feodor Rojankovsky are included, though arranged differently to fit a smaller page. Miss Averill has expanded the text making it into a very readable story." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 71:408 Mr 15 '46 90w

"The balance of pattern and design is a joy; details are authentic and admirably selected. The text has been enriched by Miss Averill; it is now a well-rounded account of Boone's life. . . Understanding what interests young readers, Miss Averill quotes freely from Boone's own words. Her book has drama and strength." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 N 11 '45 270w

"Here is a book as colorful, vigorous, and exciting as early American history itself. It is no wonder that it won instant recognition in both Europe and America when it was first published by the Domino Press in Paris in 1931. Published in both French and English texts, it was an excellent introduction to our heritage whether the reader was born in Europe or was a descendant of American pioneers. The story itself is swift and exciting, and remarkably complete for so concise and brief a telling." R. A. Hill

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 Mr 9 '46 180w

"The story is well told and shows careful research and skill in the selection of incident. The expansion of text and the re-arrangement of the illustrations and decorations combined with the use of a very poor quality of paper, unfortunately result in a far less distinguished looking book than the original presentation of Mr. Rojankovsky's lithographs in a picture book which has held a unique place in children's libraries and art collections." A. C. M.

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 3 '46 230w
Wis Lib Bul 42:61 Ap '46

AYDELOTTE, FRANK. American Rhodes scholarships; a review of the first forty years. 208p $2 Princeton univ. press

378.34 Rhodes scholarships A46-4271

"An historical record of the first plan for international scholarships developed in this century, including a directory of all the Americans who received Rhodes Scholarships up to the time of publication; a handbook for American university students intending to apply for Rhodes Scholarships." School & Society

Reviewed by Stanley Pargellis

Book Week p9 O 13 '46 500w

Christian Century 63:893 J1 17 '46 70w

Foreign Affairs 25:165 O '46 30w

"Dr. Aydelotte, the American Secretary to the Rhodes Trustees, has written something more than a review of the American Rhodes Scholarships. In this concise and exciting book, he describes the development of Rhodes's idea through the seven drafts of his will, the methods used by the American trustees for putting the idea into effect and the influence on American life of the American Rhodes scholars during the last forty years. In so doing, he challenges the reader to rethink the philosophy of Anglo-American relations. I hope that the paper shortage will not prevent an early publication of this book in Britain." R. H. S. Crossman

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:102 Ag 10 '46 1400w

"Today's Rhodes Scholar-elect, if he reads Dr. Aydelotte's clear exposition of the dream of Cecil Rhodes and the Scholar's relation to it, of the methods of Scholar selection, of what an American gets from life and the study at Oxford and gives upon return to America, may know in general what to expect and what will be expected of him. The book is admirably designed to get the right men to compete for the Scholarships and the Scholar-elect to prepare himself intelligently for the Oxford years. An appendix lists all the American Scholars and their occupations. The book, moreover, has values for general readers who are interested in education and in world peace, for on the basis of forty-two years of operations its author estimates the present success of the Scholarship plan." H. G. Merriam

+ N Y Times p22 Ag 4 '46 450w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p4 Ag 16 '46 170w

School & Society 63:463 Je 29 '46 90w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 64:388 N 30 '46 450w

"The most pleasing chapter of the book, 'What the American Rhodes Scholar Gets from Oxford,' is an essay in itself of tolerance and urbanity, and the truly humane spirit, which the charm of Oxford can inculcate. But these very attributes—urbanity can grow into condescension and snobbishness, tolerance to indifference. Unfortunately, a flavor of these qualities touches some of the pages of this book. Still, for those who have seen Oxford, or for those who hope to know more of Rhodes scholarships, or for anyone with an interest in educational foundations, this will be a source of pleasure and a model of an attractive educational balance sheet." H. L. Varley

+ Spring'd Republican p4d J1 28 '46 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p599 D 7 '46 1100w

"The book should be of value to prospective Rhodes Scholars, and to students of comparative education. It will also be encouraging to those who seek to further international understanding through education."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:209 S '46 300w

"Dr. Aydelotte is himself a Rhodes scholar. . . His book is more than a brief progress report and manual for American students who may be interested in applying for the scholarships. It conveys something of the donor's vision and may, perhaps, inspire some unknown American Rhodes to adapt the formula to mid-century realities, bringing to this country's

AYDELOTTE, FRANK—Continued

Oxfords more young men from abroad who will esteem the performance of public duties as their highest aim." W. A. Avirett

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ag 25 '46 320w

AYMAR, BRANDT. Complete cruiser. 272p il maps $3.50 Greenberg

797.14 Yachts and yachting. Navigation 46-25134

"[Book] on motor yachting by a small-boat man of considerable experience. The author reduces the intricacies of celestial navigation to the level of the snap course taught in Navy classrooms during the war and offers sound tips on coastal piloting and on the avoidance of both the common and uncommon problems of cruising. Diagrams and photographs." New Yorker

Reviewed by J. B. Metznerberg
Book Week p2 My 5 '46 360w
Booklist 42:295 My 15 '46

"A good, simple book."

+ New Yorker 22:99 My 11 '46 80w

AYRES, CLARENCE EDWIN. The divine right of capital 214p $3 Houghton

330.1 Income. Business cycles. Economic policy 46-5936

An analysis of the capitalist system as it exists today, to which is added a program suggesting how capitalism can be rescued from the capitalists. The author is professor of economics at the University of Texas. Index.

Reviewed by Hugo Sonnenschein
Book Week p8 S 8 '46 550w
Booklist 43:29 O 1 '46

"Lack of understanding or disregard of economic facts characterize this book." Henry Bund

— Commonweal 45:285 D 27 '46 850w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 11:398 N '46 700w

"Anyone who has been exposed to the perhaps justifiably tired philosophy of European liberals like Hayek, and to the inadequacies of some of the replies which The Road to Serfdom drew forth, will find relief in this book. It is in a spirit of simple faith in the democratic process that Mr. Ayres attacks our most pressing economic problem—how to avoid a prolonged period of economic prostration as soon as the immediate effects of the war are over. . . In his earlier Theory of Economic Progress, Mr. Ayres attempted unsuccessfully to cast his thesis in everyday language. This time he has achieved his goal completely, for The Divine Right of Capital is written with a self-restraint which makes it a masterpiece of literary simplicity and a rarity among works of its scope."

+ Harvard Law R 59:1347 O '46 650w

Kirkus 14:334 Jl 15 '46 200w

"As a controverting book it is interesting, though he sometimes seems to be knocking down straw men. Recommended for popular reading." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 71:1046 Ag '46 100w

"C. E. Ayres has written this acute and lively book as a sequel to his more highbrow 'The Theory of Economic Progress.' It should have a wide appeal: it is clear, its chapters are short, and it deals with the assumptions of orthodox economists with refreshing irreverence. Furthermore, it is completely devoid of charts, diagrams, and statistics. One wishes that more philosophers like Mr. Ayres—or Adam Smith—would look at economics." G. R. Walker

+ Nation 163:560 N 16 '46 750w

"In spite of [some] technical defects, Mr. Ayres's main argument is wholesome and deserves more attention than it has received. He is at his best in setting the broad framework of the problem. He is incautious only in supposing that a particular device will assure full employment." George Soule

+ — New Repub 115:332 S 16 '46 950w

"A brilliantly thought out and unconventional analysis. . . The title might induce a Morgan partner to buy the book, but it's very unlikely that he would enjoy it much."

+ New Yorker 22:118 S 21 '46 60w

"The reader who is interested in dissection of economic terms will find plenty of revelation about venture capital, free private enterprise, savings, the interest rate, the multiplier, debt, 'Say's Law' and Hayek. And he will get this understanding almost painlessly, for Mr. Ayres is sententious; there is more aphorism per running linear foot than in any economic volume of recent print. The book is intellectual fun, frolic and adventure." Leon Henderson

+ Weekly Book Review p2 S 15 '46 1050w

AYSCOUGH, FLORENCE (WHEELOCK) (MRS H. F. MACNAIR), and LOWELL, AMY. Correspondence of a friendship; ed. with a pref. by Harley Farnsworth MacNair. 288p il $3.75 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Chinese poetry A46-4

Letters written between the years 1917 and 1926, when Amy Lowell died. They are concerned almost entirely with the collaboration of these two friends on the Chinese poems, Fir-flower Tablets. Contains also introductory chapters by Florence Ayscough; Amy Lowell's description of her Brookline home, and selections from her correspondence with Harriet Monroe.

"Whoever reads the Lowell-Ayscough letters for their intrinsic appeal as letters will hardly escape the feeling that Amy Lowell is working her translator professionally, as a spiritualist works a medium. There is little of the personal rapport that inspires the correspondence of an Emerson and a Carlyle. So, in the absence of a colorful interchange of personality and intellect, the letters are significant for the light they throw on Amy Lowell and her poems from the Chinese. As a primary source, much of Mr. MacNair's volume will be indispensable for studying the literary achievement of Fir-Flower Tablets. . . But students will find the lack of any index, and of most of Florence Ayscough's translations from which Fir-Flower Tablets was composed, more provoking than provocative." L. S. Hall

+ — Atlantic 177:174 Ap '46 300w

"Mrs. Ayscough, who later wrote 'Fire-cracker Land' and other books, emerges in these letters as a person generous and loyal, of great strength of spirit. Amy Lowell is more likable and understandable in these letters than in any other record or expression that I have seen. In their relation these two friends maintained the great virtue of frankness, and Miss Lowell seems to have valued it in Mrs. Ayscough as much as she took pride in it herself. Also, it makes at times for lively reading. The editing has been done very adequately and most unobtrusively." J. T. Fredrick

+ Book Week p2 F 24 '46 350w

Booklist 42:224 Mr 15 '46

"Apart from the academic and literary interest of these letters, which should be extremely helpful to students as well as to young poets, the correspondence is refreshing for its revelation of the inner workings of a friendship—a truly feminine friendship, but one unmarred by malice or jealousy, held together rather by the importance of a grand job to be done. These two possessed a 'high seriousness' of which writers today appear to have no conception." Dorothy Livesey

+ Canadian Forum 26:45 My '46 500w

Christian Century 63:179 F 6 '46 160w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 30 '46 550w

Reviewed by J. G. E. Hopkins

Commonweal 44:77 My 3 '46 260w

Current Hist 10:445 My '46 70w

"The whole thing, spontaneous and vivid as it is, adds nothing to our knowledge of Amy Lowell and nothing to our appreciation of Chinese poetry. As a matter of fact, this book is neither the story of a friendship nor an enlightening guide to one of the most elusive forms of human fancy. . . Nevertheless, the book will be of supreme interest to those with a taste for and a knowledge of American verse: Amy Lowell lives in its crowded pages with her fascinating personality, and this is something." Jean Catel

— + Mod Philol 44:132 N '46 800w

"The part played by Oriental modes of technique and imagery in the poetic revival of 1912-25 was an important if limited one; these letters show the linguistic scholarship (Mrs Ayscough's) and imaginative sympathy (Miss Lowell's) exacted and not always received by the Chinese masters from their interpreters. The book will thus have its value for students of Chinese poetic art, of its influence on modern literature, and of the translator's problems at their most difficult. For the rest, it is a memoir of two spirited women, a series of personal footnotes to contemporary literature, but chiefly an act of homage to Amy Lowell." M D Zabel

+ — Nation 162:441 Ap 13 '46 420w

N Y Times p27 Je 23 '46 220w

"The letters, which are of rather special interest, may appeal to amateurs of Miss Lowell's poetry, but there is altogether too much of the painstaking 'in spite of the poor connection it was nice to hear your voice last night' kind of thing."

New Yorker 21:100 F 9 '46 80w

Reviewed by Inez Boulton

Poetry 69:54 O '46 600w

"At first glance, because of my long preoccupation with translating Chinese poetry into English I felt that John Gould Fletcher and I—Eunice Tietjens and Arthur Ficke having died—might be the only two persons in America who would read every paragraph of it with close interest. . . On careful rereading of the book, I could but hope that there might be a considerable audience led through these letters to realize the infinite pains that go into such translation. Industry, industry!" Witter Bynner

Sat R of Lit 29:42 Mr 30 '46 2000w

"The sub-title of this book is a little misleading, for although the writers were old friends and the background to their letters is one of affection without sentimentality, the correspondence is almost exclusively concerned with an unusual literary collaboration, and will mainly interest those who are interested in its subject—the translation of Chinese classic poetry into English."

Times [London] Lit Sup p392 Ag 17 '46 480w

"Amy Lowell's real genius lay in communicating that excitement to other people; while she lived, poetry in America was front-page news. For a reader who was young in the 1920s, these pages recreate some of the excitement of those heady times. They also bring back to life Amy Lowell's terrifying energy and industry, and her artistic and intellectual integrity. She was American poetry's Fighting Lady; there was never a dull moment while she was around." DeLancey Ferguson

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 7 '46 450w

AZCARATE Y FLOREZ, PABLO DE. League of nations and national minorities: an experiment; tr. from the Spanish by Eileen E. Brooke. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of int. law. Studies in the adm. of int. law and organization) 216p $2 Carnegie endowment; Columbia univ. press

323.1 League of nations. Minorities [45-7989]
For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"An authoritative account of the treatment given to minority problems between the two World Wars." N. L. Hill

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:170 F '46 350w

Reviewed by S. M. Strong

Am Soc R 11:371 Je '46 650w

"Nobody was better qualified to write this book than the distinguished Spanish scholar and diplomat who during most of the existence of the League of Nations directed its Minorities Section, gaining general recognition for his fair objectivity and personal kindness. The whole concise volume is based on a personal experience which ought to be taken into consideration by all who will deal with the minorities problem in the present situation." Oscar Halecki

+ Ann Am Acad 244:204 Mr '46 450w

"Concise and informative work. . . This record becomes a valuable guide for diplomatic and administrative officers and also for unofficial moulders of public opinion concerned with the effective development of the United Nations. Christian ministers way well draw upon its facts and outlook for use in sermons and other public addresses." Earl Cranston

Crozer Q 23:295 J1 '46 700w

Foreign Affairs 24:348 Ja '46 30w

"Bias against minorities, ill-founded indulgence of minorities states, go parallel with an unfair evaluation of the various organs of the League of Nations. All attention is concentrated on the two behind-the-scenes bodies (the Committees of Three, the Minorities Section of the Secretariat); the Council is mentioned only en passant; the Assembly, the town-hall of a great part of the world, completely unmentioned. But most revealing is the author's attitude toward the World Court. . . With all this misinformation, misjudgment and bias, the book of Azcarate is a revealing and self-proving indictment of the Minorities Section of the Secretariat, which succeeded to a certain extent in distorting the protection of minorities from governments into the protection of governments from minorities. If any conclusion can at all be drawn from this book, it would be that different qualifications are necessary for membership in the International Secretariat dealing with minorities problems." Jacob Robinson

+ Harvard Law R 59:472 F '46 2450w

"This is a useful book, instructive rather than provocative or original. . . No one will doubt Professor Azcarate's bona fides and good intentions. He tries his best to be 'dispassionate' and impartial. But, with very few exceptions, he arises time and again as a strong supporter of the practice of the League of Nations. . . In some cases the author is greatly mistaken in his statements and unjust in his judgment." Mark Vishniak

+ — Pol Sci Q 61:317 Je '46 700w

B

B. B., pseud. See Watkins-Pitchford, D. J.

BACH, JULIAN SEBASTIAN. America's Germany: an account of the occupation. 310p $3 Random house

943.086 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945-. World war, 1939-1945—Germany 46-25091

"Bach spent twenty-nine months as correspondent for Army Talks, mostly in Germany where he covered the occupation. Book gives vivid and detailed picture of U. S. Zone, including physical condition of cities, living conditions, education, fraternization, de-nazification, economic problems and political attitudes. Last section describes G. I. attitude toward German people and their reaction to their present plight. Author makes points by illustrative examples, which make book engrossing reading." (Library J) Map on end papers. No index.

"This is a timely and illuminating book by a thoughtful, intelligent correspondent." Clifford Kirkpatrick

+ Am Soc R 11:648 O '46 250w

"Very comprehensive and intelligent book." Ernest Von Hartz

+ Book Week p5 Mr 31 '46 400w

Booklist 42:263 Ap 15 '46

"The value of Mr. Bach's information lies primarily in the facts, which he presents pungently and well. There are fundamental aspects of occupational policy which no presentation of facts can elucidate—only a long-range understanding by the four occupying Powers." H. J. S.

BACH, J. S.—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 My 16 '46 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '46

"If the eager author had cut out the preaching, or even kept it within reasonable bounds, the reporting could have attained more adequate dimensions and given still more solid interest and benefit than it does as is. The reporting part is good, much of it very good indeed compared with the dream material most correspondents in Germany have sent home. . . Mr. Bach's volume (at length) is a full and almost over-stimulating one. So far, there is probably not another on the market more suited to developing needed quarrels among citizens who, in spite of their apparent tastes, have more responsibility than they recognize," Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 44:49 Ap 26 '46 900w

Foreign Affairs 25:343 Ja '47 50w

"Interesting and timely."

+ Kirkus 14:87 F 15 '46 170w

"Thoroughly recommended as significant and timely," Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 71:404 Mr 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by Hermann Ebeling
Nation 162:547 My 4 '46 900w

Reviewed by P. M. Sweezy

New Repub 114:586 Ap 22 '46 1250w

"For this reviewer—like Mr. Bach, only recently returned from Germany—three-quarters of this book makes more sense than most of the material published about that country. Discount some of the smart-alecky statements, the news-magazine striving for effect. There remains a solid reportorial and analytical job, with only a few points of issue," Shepard Stone

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 24 '46 1650w

New Yorker 22:94 Mr 30 '46 100w

"America's Germany" ought to be required reading for America's America," Baukhage

+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 My 4 '46 1000w

"This little book . . . performs a most valuable service by giving straightforward, common-sense answers to many questions that are constantly being asked about this country's policy in Germany," V. M. Dean

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 7 '46 1000w

BACH, MARCUS LOUIS. They have found a faith. 300p $3 Bobbs

289 Sects. U.S.—Religion

46-7535

Comments and analyses based on personal investigation of eight non-traditional religious groups in the United States. The groups are: Jehovah's witnesses; The Foursquare gospel; Spiritualism; Oxford group—MRA; The Kingdoms of Father Divine; The Baha'i faith; Unity; Psychiana. No index.

Booklist 43:112 D 15 '46

"This book should rank high among best sellers for it is a clever combination of scholarly research into what Dr. Bach calls the 'little-known' religions in America and the integration of these into the great stream of faith. Add to this the fact that the author can avoid the ludicrous with a kind of tender humor and human sympathy."

+ Kirkus 14:494 O 1 '46 130w

"Respect and sincerity are the secrets of Dr. Bach's success in his explorations. Wherever he went he came not as a chilly critic, but as a friendly student and observer. In consequence he was made welcome in all the citadels of those new faiths, each one of which claims to have found the secret of life and worthwhile living on earth. More than 15,000,000 persons are absorbed in those beliefs, live by them and, almost literally, breathe by them. It is time we knew something about them." H. J. Forman

+ N Y Times p60 D 1 '46 1150w

"A fascinating glimpse into the state of mind of millions of Americans who, living in a world (and particularly a country) in which very little attention is paid to anything which has not strictly material results, find themselves in need of balance for the spirit and try to find this balance in so many different ways." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 8 '46 300w

BACHMANN, LAWRENCE PAUL. Kiss of death. 275p $2.50 Knopf

46-5867

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p6 Ag 25 '46 70w

Kirkus 14:285 Je 15 '46 80w

"This reviewer is not a psychologist. Perhaps that is why he is not impressed." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 Ag 4 '46 140w

"Lots of medical jargon, which may or may not make the story seem more authentic."

New Yorker 22:72 Ag 3 '46 110w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 11 '46 80w

"Good!"

+ Sat R of Lit 29:35 S 28 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p10 Ag 18 '46 80w

BAETJER, ANNA MEDORA. Women in industry; their health and efficiency; prepared in the Army industrial hygiene laboratory [issued under the auspices of the Division of medical sciences and the Division of engineering and industrial research of the National research council]. 344p $4 Saunders

331.4 Woman—Employment. Diseases, Industrial 46-5417

"Information is given on the utilization of women in industry, based on both American and British studies, including several made during World War II. . . . When women are employed in large numbers, certain problems arise concerning their health and efficiency in relation to their employment. Many tables and graphs are included, with excellent critical discussion and evaluation of these." Chem & Eng N

"It is most unfortunate that this book was not written before the recent war instead of after, since it contains the answers to practically all of the questions faced by industrial physicians, personnel directors, and others in whose plants women were being employed in production work for the first time." L. J. Goldwater

+ Am J Pub Health 36:1173 O '46 180w

Am J Soc 52:379 Ja '47 70w

"The material is excellently arranged and clearly presented throughout." C. T. Snell

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2705 O 10 '46 400w

"Full documentation, drawn largely from wartime experience, makes this an excellent source book on how women differ from men as industrial employees."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:323 D '46 280w

BAGBY, GEORGE A. pseud. Dead on arrival. 205p $2 Doubleday

46-1248

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p8 Mr 3 '46 140w

Booklist 42:367 Jl 15 '46

"The story is amusing, but the motive for murder seems a trifle inadequate." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p35 Ja 27 '46 130w

"Lots of excellent atmosphere and three fantastically engrossing characters—but finish is unconvincing and tale gets rather tiresome. Disappointing."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 F 2 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p24 Ja 27 '46 350w

BAGBY, GEORGE A. pseud. Original case. 221p $2 Doubleday

46-7388

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Book Week p15 N 3 '46 50w

"Cleverly contrived homicide."

+ Kirkus 14:401 Ag 15 '46 60w

"This is one of the liveliest and most ingenious of the Inspector Schmidt stories." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p48 N 17 '46 150w

"Recommended to novices for study, and to all for pleasure." Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 20 '46 80w

"Satisfactory."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:36 N 16 '46 50w

"Not so funny as some of Mr. Bagby's offerings, but sound and well worth reading on all the main counts." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p20 O 20 '46 180w

BAGGER, HOPE SABIN. See here, private enterprise! a birdseye book clarifying current controversies. 152p il $2.50; pa $1.50 Island workshop

338.91 U.S.—Economic policy 45-10209

"The theme of this popularly written little book: Large corporations 'just growed' in this country, without adequate government control. Now they and their relatives, international cartels, determine production quotas and prices of all too many necessities and comforts. This economic power must have democratic government regulation if we are to have national and international well-being and peace." J Home Econ

Reviewed by L. R. Ward

Book Week p10 O 28 '45 360w

"The author is so eager to write snappily in this critique of capitalism and private industry as they have been and are that the affirmative program is somewhat obscured." Christian Century 62:1449 D 26 '45 90w

Commonweal 44:174 My 31 '46 60w

"The book is better at diagnosing ills than prescribing remedies, but for persons needing a stimulant to substituting thoughtful consideration for acceptance of catchwords this type of reading may be a first step toward more informed citizenship." Day Monroe

J Home Econ 38:44 Ja '46 200w

"A book like this might well be used by secondary school students if the teacher takes account of their immaturity of thought and limited experiences. They should study the opposing points of view and defer their conclusions until they have sufficient evidence to make sound judgments. Otherwise their statements may take the form of name-calling and unfounded accusations." Social Studies 37:282 O '46 550w

BAGNALL, STEPHEN. Crater's edge. 154p $2 Morrow [6s Hamilton, HI]

46-5572

A young Englishman reviews his four loves as he lies in a shell-crater, possibly dying. As the pain increases the pictures of his boyhood and youth vanish, and he turns to prayer.

"The Crater's Edge" lacks artifice, and it is not really unfair to outline it as an essay. The author has something to say, more indeed and sounder things and more sensitive than are often found in novels. But in this first book he is not a story teller and not a creator of characters. The argument is not freed from the restrictions of personal exposition and given the independence and authority and warmth of art." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 44:578 S 27 '46 500w

"There's an expectancy, a mysticism, a pre-Raphaelite romanticism here which gives the book a certain quality—and a certain immaturity which will limit its appeal."

+ Kirkus 14:284 Je 15 '46 130w

"Brief novelette, beautifully written; more successful, I think, in its poignant narrative than in its philosophy, but of much interest and promise." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 71:1049 Ag '46 140w

"Thoughts are, no doubt, too orderly and expression in this circumstance too literary, even for a writer of love sonnets, but the device by which Mr. Bagnall avoids autobiographical form enables him also to avoid realistic recollection. This short book achieves large measure of tragic beauty." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 28 '45 150w

"His theme is one of those old, well-tried ones, which were never any good even when new. . . Not even vivid interludes can remove the distrust one has for a story whose end is also its beginning; and Mr. Bagnall's story has no vivid interludes. . . With its juicy, self-admiring prose, its purple passages, its recklessly misrelated participle and its lengthy commonplaces about the major problems of life, it is not an easy book to read." Henry Reed

— New Statesman & Nation 31:90 F 2 '46 160w

"Mr. Bagnall remembers the texture and mood of moments and knows how to set down their meaning. His writing is at its best in imaginative flights: at its worst in the religious passages which detract from the artistic whole of the story." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p30 D 1 '46 270w

"This distinguished first novel, if novel it is, has few close relations among the many books that have come out of the war. The closest that I can call to mind is Robert Henrique's 'The Voice of the Trumpet,' but even between these two are distance and difference. However, they are alike in that each concerns itself with the mental and spiritual aspects of war, rather than with the military aspects, and they are alike, too, in that they are the work of poets, neither of whom is afraid of lyric prose." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 O 12 '46 950w

"His style is highly self-conscious, so that one is embarrassed as in a theatre when an actor is listening with too much approval to his own voice. The Crater's Edge may appeal to admirers of Mr. Charles Morgan." Walter Allen

Spec 176:48 Ja 11 '46 300w

"Artificial to some extent and restricted in scope though a novel constructed on these lines can scarcely fail to be, there is no reason why it should not be well written and illuminating. At his best Mr. Bagnall writes with a deliberate gravity that provokes expectation; he is, to say the least, very much in earnest. Unfortunately, he is also given to exaggerated emotional phrases and to a conventional show of sophistication. The fact is that his material is thin and he resorts to rather ornate embroidery."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p617 D 29 '45 350w

"It happens to be extremely well written. The clarity and simplicity, the strength and eloquence of its prose remind us, as most current writing doesn't, that English is a noble tongue. Except for a few lapses which purists may discover for themselves, this is a graceful, muscular style; not a surface ornament but an integral part of the book's structure." Dan Wickenden

+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 1 '46 550w

BAGSTER-COLLINS, JEREMY FELIX. George Colman the younger, 1762-1836. 367p $3 King's crown press

B or 92 Colman, George

A46-3780

Biography of the English playwright and producer whose first play was produced at the Haymarket in June, 1784, and who continued to dominate the British theater for some thirty years, first as playwright and manager of the Haymarket, then as censor and mentor. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is an honest, straightforward, factual account of the life of G. Colman Jr.,

BAGSTER-COLLINS, J. F.—Continued
as it fits into the history of English drama.
The volume is well documented and has a bibliography and index." W. E. Parker
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 18 '46
650w

"Students of the theatre will be grateful for this volume, not because it presents any discoveries, but because it assembles a great deal of scattered material. The book is valuable, in the first place, for its many brief records of behaviour in the theatre. . . In the second place, the book is interesting for certain wider (though not new) considerations; for instance, the tracing of the roots of melodrama to the early works of Colman, and an estimation of his work and behaviour as Examiner of Plays. . . Mr. Bagster-Collins has made good notes and references and an excellent bibliography, and on one or two points of fact he has been able to correct earlier historians; but he would have made a better book of it if he had been a little less painstaking. He is too ready to quote anyone (however insignificant) who has written anything (however flat) on the subject of Colman—which is a manifestation not of scholarship but of industry. It would have been far more acceptable if he had expended some of his zeal on the making of an adequate index." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley
+ — Spec 177:650 D 13 '46 800w
Theatre Arts 30:494 Ag '46 40w

"Mr. Bagster-Collins has proved his worth not only as a biographer but as a stage historian at the same time. Few actors' lives have had so accurately informative a background."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p593 N 30 '46
950w

"Poor Colman probably did his best, but his best in the theater was so infinitely less than the second best of the poets in literature that it cries for explanation. Mr. Bagster-Collins's full and well documented life of Colman does little or nothing to clear up this mystery. Probably he didn't consider that part of his job."
Weekly Book Review p24 O 13 '46 230w

BAILARD, VIRGINIA, and MCKOWN, HARRY CHARLES. So you were elected! drawings by Margaret Conrad. (Whittlesey house publication) 264p $2.50 McGraw

367 Clubs. Leadership 46-11937

"Addressed directly to students and written informally we have in this book an answer to a 'long felt need.' The beginning chapter of sound advice on the essentials of leadership followed by one on parliamentary procedures make up part I. The activities of club work with specific suggestions for carnivals, the annual football banquet and other types of parties relevant to school life comprise part II. Illustrated with line drawings and photographs." (Library J) Index,

Booklist 43:88 N 15 '46

"This is a valuable handbook dealing with the problems of youthful holders of office,—whether in club or camp or class."

+ Kirkus 14:544 N 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by M. F. Cox

Library J 71:1719 D 1 '46 80w

School & Society 64:318 N 2 '46 20w

"Teachers of English and speech may find uses for this book in their classroom activities. Guidance officers and administrators will certainly want to have a copy available for occasional reference. No teacher who sponsors an extra-curriculum organization or social activity should be without it. Its main value, however, will be for students themselves; for it has a wholesome and energetic approach to leadership which young leaders will appreciate and understand." R. H. Anderson
+ School 7 55:57 Ja '47 850w

Social Studies 38:47 Ja '47 20w

"There are many manuals of parliamentary law and not a few guides for the conduct of meetings in school or clubs, but this handbook covers more than any other one publication that I have seen among those intended for high-school age or for use in the upper grades."

M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 19 '47 230w

BAILEY, CAROLYN SHERWIN (MRS EBEN S. HILL). Miss Hickory; with lithographs by Ruth Gannett. 123p $2.50 Viking

46-7275

Miss Hickory was a personable doll, born and bred in New Hampshire. Her head was a hickory nut, and her body was an apple-wood twig. When the family moved to Boston for the winter and Chipmunk stole her immaculate little house, Miss Hickory with the aid of Crow, moved into a nest and passed a happy winter. In spring a misfortune befell her, but she found a way to be more useful than ever.

"A skillful blending of fact, fantasy, and woodsy detail—told in prose as clear and delicate as an etching. The ending is original and entirely unexpected." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:162 D '46 100w

"One of the loveliest small stories in the book tells what happened on Christmas Eve at midnight. Ruth Gannett's wonderful picture of all the animals going to the barn on that night to see the miraculous event seems to have caught some of the radiance of the Christmas Star itself." Martha King

+ Book Week p10 N 3 '46 230w

Booklist 43:74 N 1 '46

"As a child I should have loved the idea of Miss Hickory. . . I should have been enchanted by the lovely lithographs in which Ruth Gannett shows flowers and animals and Miss Hickory herself, complete and real with her sharp-nosed face of a hickory nut, her stiff twig-like legs and leafy frocks. And just because of my belief in her and my pleasure in her wintry life, I should have had a horrid shock at the end of the story when Squirrel finally has his desire and Miss Hickory surprisingly enough comes to life in a new way as part of the apple tree. Even now it disturbs me. Yet I look at the pictures and realize Miss Gannett must have taken pleasure in the story or she could not have drawn them so lovingly." F. C. Darling

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 N 12 '46
250w

"Fascinating and harmonious lithographs adorn this imaginative and delightful story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:465 N '46 130w

"Frankly, we found it long-winded and dull with an air of preciousness throughout. The author is better in recreating old customs than in telling an original story."

— Kirkus 14:387 Ag 15 '46 100w

"Very good portrayal of old New England customs. Illustrated with lithographs by Ruth Gannett. Will appeal especially to girls of 8-12." V. W. Schott

+ Library J 71:1544 N 1 '46 70w

"Imaginative children of 8 to 11 will thoroughly enjoy the inventive details, perfectly proportioned, of her life in the orchard. They will like her stout apple-wood heart and her brisk practicality, which seemed to soften as winter lengthened into spring. The end of her tale, so nearly catastrophic, so unexpectedly right, adds a final touch of poetry to an unusual fantasy. Its charm is heightened by Ruth Gannett's lithographs, sympathetic in mood and very decorative." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p4 N 10 '46 200w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:141 D 7 '46 100w

Reviewed by Quail Hawkins

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 10 '46
120w

"Miss Hickory is one of the most interesting personalities to emerge from the books of 1946. She affects one as a glass of tangy wine made from grapes ripened in the autumn sun. . . It may seem sad that Squirrel got extremely hungry and ate Miss Hickory's head. But the thing that happens to her afterward is so satisfying that there is no room for sadness. With her we share the lovely sequence of autumn, winter, and spring in the New England countryside. All the tiny details of wood and meadow as they loom up in her little world are ours." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:46 N 9 '46 270w

"A better fairy tale than this has not come out of New England since Beechnut told one to Malleville. . . A story that could do without illustrations can be immeasurably helped by the right ones and ruined by the wrong. These are right. They preserve the delicate balance between actual fauna and flora and the mysterious uses to which fancy puts them. . . These are animals completely in character, as you know they would act under the conditions and I do not see how the delicate beauty of the climax could have had better pictorial treatment than in the last ten pages." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 6 '46 400w

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Life sentence, 250p $2 Doubleday

46-7186

Detective story.

"The Life Sentence, unlike its immediate predecessors, has a blessedly uncluttered plot, quiet but firm suspense and the delicately sketched relationships that are H. C. Bailey's special capacity." James Sandoe

+ Book Week p9 O 27 '46 370w

"The medical detective at his British best"

+ Kirkus 14:401 Ag 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p36 O 27 '46 180w

"If you admire Dr. Fortune, you ought to find this one of his more satisfactory cases."

New Yorker 22:136 O 19 '46 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p11 O 27 '46 80w

Sat R of Lit 29:36 N 16 '46 40w

"This is a major Bailey item, full of all you'd expect and not to be missed." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p20 O 20 '46 270w

BAILEY, HILEA, pseud. See Marting, R. L.

BAILEY, PAUL DAYTON. Deliver me from Eva, 237p $2 Murray & Gee

Horror story of a young California lawyer who meets a beautiful, mysterious young woman on a train trip, marries in haste, and is drawn into her father's ghastly doings on a great California estate.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Mr 17 '46 90w

"Silly."

— Sat R of Lit 29:54 Mr 30 '46 40w

BAILLIE, JOHN. What is Christian civilization? 59p $1 Scribner

261 Civilization, Christian 45-10791

"Dr. Baillie begins with a summary of the historical relations between Christianity and civilization. He then considers the modern world where the Christian church, whether it likes it or not, has to face the common acceptance by churchgoer and non-churchgoer alike of an autonomy of politics, economics, art and learning that Thomas Aquinas and John Calvin equally would have found shocking. Dr. Baillie's historical analysis has furnished him with a view of the relation between the church and the world that is relevant to the task the church sets for itself at any stage of its history." Christian Century

Reviewed by A. S. Nash

Christian Century 63:48 Ja 9 '46 850w

"The small number of pages of this publication might wrongly suggest that it is a mere pamphlet. Compactly printed, it contains the Riddle Memorial Lectures (University of Durham), which followed closely the author's Hoyt Lectures and others given to ministers in Pittsburgh, Princeton and Chicago in June and July." This is mentioned to indicate the nature of the volume and to draw the attention of those who may have heard the lectures. They may agree with me that this is a book to read and reread and will want to possess it. The publishers deserve commendation for offering it at a price conducive to its wide circulation. . . The chief defect of the book, a serious one because it is fundamental for his subject, is that Dr. Baillie does not make clear what he fully means by the term 'Christian.'" A. G. Widgery

+ — Crozer Q 23:178 Ap '46 1000w

"The argument is closely knit, to be followed only by the attentive reader familiar with his church history and philosophy of religion. . . This is a book for clergymen, theologians and others striving for a working philosophy for the world of today."

+ Kirkus 13:507 N 15 '45 190w

BAINBRIDGE, JOHN. Little wonder; or, The Reader's digest and how it grew. 177p $2 Reynal

051 Reader's digest. Wallace, DeWitt

46-4584

An expansion of an article which first appeared in the New Yorker in 1945. In it the author gives a picture of the magazine, The Reader's Digest; and the people who make it, especially the editor, DeWitt Wallace.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson

Book Week p4 Je 2 '46 550w

Booklist 42:343 Jl 1 '46

"A lovely, lethal job, this is annihilation at its most amusing, and in spite of its rather special angle, may very well catch on."

+ Kirkus 14:144 Mr 15 '46 210w

"If the reader is not interested in The Reader's Digest as such, he may read this short sketch for its value as the keenest analysis that has been made of a current trend! Every library should buy The Little Wonder." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 71:754 My 15 '46 120w

"Bainbridge has provided a high-class report, written with the sophisticated touch we have come to expect of The New Yorker, of one of the little wonders of our age, whose phenomenal growth, if we want to understand it, would require a sociological or social-psychological analysis of major proportions." Hadley Cantril

+ N Y Times p5 Je 2 '46 1750w

"After two years of pretty exhaustive investigation, Mr. Bainbridge reports that three out of five Digest articles now originate in its own offices. . . One finds it rather hard to share Mr. Bainbridge's shocked feeling that this trend, developing over the past ten years, is somehow perfidious and sinister. . . The large space here devoted to this subject, along with personal irrelevancies like the décor and the food of the Wallaces' house in Suburbia, give a detached reader the steady impression that this is a grudge book. It is clear that Mr. Bainbridge takes The Digest rather more seriously than do most readers, sometimes confuses gossip with research, and ends by being a trifle tedious." Dixon Wecter

Sat R of Lit 29:15 Je 15 '46 1050w

"Mr. Bainbridge seems at times genuinely disturbed over the influence on American thought he credits to the Digest, but much of his lifting of hands in horror over the Digest's unorthodox editorial customs seems just a little theatrical. The Digest 'think pieces' he believes to be unduly influential are rarely as much talked about as its articles on sex, science, children, birth control and women, and the Digest from that standpoint isn't much worse than the average daily newspaper, which tries to have something for everybody." R. F. H.

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 9 '46 410w

"Mr. Bainbridge's observations are not always the most complimentary, but they are logical, are backed by a storehouse of facts, and are usually amusing. Underneath the brilliance and wit of the analysis is, however, a profound criticism—that the Digest channelizes thinking so that ‘people everywhere will think alike.’ But whether one agrees or disagrees with this conclusion, few will not agree that the study is a model for writing in modern journalism.”

BAINBRIDGE, JOHN—Continued

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:175 S '46 270w

“This is clever, keen, penetrating, highly amusing and, of course, quite useless, except as an evening's mild diversion.” G. W. Johnson
Weekly Book Review p17 Ag 4 '46 700w

BAIRD, ALBERT CRAIG, ed. Representative American speeches: 1945-46. (Reference shelf) 287p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

815 Speeches, addresses, etc. (38-27962)

“International policies, Atomic energy, Economic controls, the relations of Labor and Management, National attitudes and ideals, are reflected in this selection of public speeches. Opens with McArthur's speech from the battleship Missouri; ends with Robert Hutchins on Education.” Wis Lib Bul

“Here is collateral reading and documentation on the most important phases of contemporary history.”

+ Christian Century 63:1568 D 25 '46 30w
Wis Lib Bul 42:164 D '46

BAKER, CHARLES HENRY. Blood of the Lamb. 275p $2.50 Rinehart

46-2021

Story of the Florida cracker country and of an unctuous minister, whose lascivious ways result in the driving from the region of an old woman and her two pretty daughters.

“The novel as a whole is more or less aimless, and Baker's over-literary style and rarely compassionate irony are somewhat obtrusive, but his detailed background of Crackerland folklore and mores and his over-sized characterizations are effective in themselves and offer unusually robust entertainment.” Jex Martin

+ Book Week p5 Ap 21 '46 360w

Reviewed by L. D. Milani
Canadian Forum 26:69 Je '46 420w

“We do not question the authenticity of scalawag Preacher Love Guder in this book. Preacher Guder stands out as a particularly venal ‘prophet’ of the Word in a backward Deep South area, and we know from our own experiences that his kind is ever with us. . . [But] nowhere in this story do the citizens of Merrimac, Florida, come to life, take on flesh and bone and go through the ordinarily common decencies of their small lives. . . Blood of the Lamb is [therefore] an inadequate and generally misleading picture of the Southern Holiness folk.” Harold Preece and Celia Kraft — Churchman 160:21 Ag '46 180w
Kirkus 14:23 Ja 15 '46 150w

“Description and dialect undoubtedly authentic, but characters border on caricatures. Plenty of humor, mostly of the barnyard variety. A first novel that shows power and skill in dramatization, but is definitely not for conservative readers.” G. W. Hill

Library J 71:586 Ap 15 '46 70w

“Here is a rich gallery of cracker portraits, done with a loose, sure brush; a regional novel, written from the inside out, with a fine eye for the sad yet garish color of the Florida scrub, a fine ear for its heat-drugged speech, a fine understanding of the pellagra-ridden folk who inhabit it.” William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 28 '46 300w

“Blood of the Lamb is not much of a novel, but it is long on local color, loud piety, snuff, ‘stump liquor’ and local talk.”

Time 47:108 Ap 22 '46 240w

“What Jesse Stuart has done for rural Kentuckians, Mr. Baker has attempted for their Floridian counterparts. If you enjoyed ‘Taps for Private Tussie,’ you will certainly feel at home with ‘Blood of the Lamb.’ But the latter is more than good natured farce; there is a certain pathos and tragedy underlying the humor and ribaldry, and between chuckles the reader will find himself face to face with the elemental in life, frequently no matter for laughter.” David Tilden

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 28 '46 550w

BAKER, FRANK. Embers; a winter tale. 213p $2.50 Coward-McCann

46-2684

A strange, evanescent tale about an elderly Englishman living in a cricket pavilion adjacent to an English country house. For company Embers had his five cats, and two friends always rallied round. But the old man's real company was his dream of the woman whom he had loved and lost.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p2 Mr 17 '46 320w
Kirkus 14:136 Mr 15 '46 170w

Reviewed by Nona Balakian
N Y Times p6 Mr 17 '46 400w

“Somebody should tell [Mr Baker] to give up his ineffectual tinkering with metaphysics and go back to saying what he means, as he did quite successfully a while ago in a pleasing novel called ‘Full Score’ [Book Review Digest, 1942].”

— New Yorker 22:101 Mr 16 '46 80w

“‘Embers’ is a provocative, moving, beautifully written story, a ‘Winter's Tale,’ delicate and macabre. But it is also like music ending on an unresolved chord, leaving the hearer still in air, vaguely unsatisfied.” S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29:57 Mr 30 '46 650w

“I do not know all that Mr. Baker is driving at in ‘Embers’; I did not know all that he was driving at in ‘Miss Hargreaves.’ But this lack of complete knowledge is made acceptable by one's recognition of Mr. Baker as a first-class writer who may not even himself be fully aware whether his talent is leading; certainly it is to no already charted territory. His main pitfall is whimsy, which has once or twice engulfed him in earlier books; but in this latest one it merely bogs him down here and there.” James Hilton

Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 10 '46 500w

BAKER, GEORGE. The new Sad Sack #1. by the author. 167p $2 Simon & Schuster

940.5497 World war, 1939-1945—Humor, caricatures, etc. 46-5069

Cartoons about the depressed little soldier, for whom nothing ever came out right. For The Sad Sack, see Book Review Digest, 1944.

Booklist 43:12 S '46

Reviewed by David Dempsey
N Y Times p7 Jl 21 '46 550w

“[The book] is a sequel to ‘The Sad Sack’ and every bit as entertaining. If there is an ounce of sadism in you, you probably will find it funny.”

New Yorker 22:102 S 7 '46 50w

“It is a good thing that this book appears now, after the fighting is over. For if Mauldin was the supreme portrayer of the dirty, grimy, combat soldier, then certainly Baker excels in depicting the tribulations of garrison life and the deadly routine of the Army. . . Once again Baker rises to champion the bewildered soldier sweating out his duties in the United States.” A. C. Fields

+ Sat R of Lit 29:7 Jl 6 '46 550w

Spring'd Republican p6 Je 27 '46 320w

“The incidents are often humorous, but the fun is not exactly undiluted. Like a capsule that spills its contents on the tongue, it leaves a bitter after taste.”

Weekly Book Review p14 Jl 14 '46 130w

BAKER, HELEN, and DAHL, DOROTHY. Group health insurance and sickness benefit plans in collective bargaining. 89p pa $1.50 Princeton Univ. Industrial relations section

331.25442 Insurance, Health. Collective bargaining 46-285

"This 'survey of the impact of collective bargaining on provisions for sickness benefits for industrial employees . . . was restricted to programs which provide, as a central core, weekly cash benefits for temporary disability.' Information was obtained about 'more than 44 sick benefit programs established through agreements with employer associations, and more than 230 included in agreements with individual companies.' The authors outline in considerable detail plans developed through collective bargaining and the major policies and problems involved. The viewpoints of unions, employers, and insurance carriers are quoted, and the advantages and disadvantages of union and employer administration of benefits are pointed out." Am J Pub Health

"Everyone interested in health insurance plans will find the first hand information contained in this report of value for the light it throws upon an important social experiment." M. L. Plumley

+ Am J Pub Health 36:555 My '46 230w

"Timely information on the values and weaknesses of private health insurance plans."

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 13 '46 110w

BAKER, JOHN CALHOUN. Directors and their functions; a preliminary study. 145p $2.50 Harvard Univ. Graduate school of business administration. Division of research, Soldiers Field, Boston 63

658.151 Corporations A45-4846

Discusses the duties of company directors and their management functions. The author stresses the need for strong, able directors who can adequately meet their responsibilities, and gives in detail the experiences of four specific companies. Contents: Directors and their environment; Directors and their problems; Specific directorates: a case approach; The American Tobacco Company; Climax Molybdenum Company; General Foods Corporation; Standard Oil Company (New Jersey); Comparisons; The Board Chairman: a challenge; Findings and interpretations. Index.

"While this is useful as a preliminary study, let us hope that the final work carries the analysis to a more fundamental and significant level." B. B. Gardner

Am J Soc 52:169 S '46 450w

"As would be expected from the author, the research and writing have been done in a scholarly fashion, and there can be no doubt that we know more about the subject as a result of this book. It is hoped that subsequent publications of this series dealing with directors will be forthcoming in the near future." E. F. Donaldson

+ Ann Am Acad 243:174 Ja '46 700w

"Mr. Baker has raised many questions of contemporary importance. If his book is widely read, it will do much to mobilize business and legal intelligence on problems of social and economic control which should not be impossible for solution in accordance with American traditions." John Hanna

+ Columbia Law R 45:974 N '45 1250w

"Refreshing, because it is an objective consideration of a rather controversial topic; informative, because the facts presented are derived from first-hand contact with directors and representative industrial corporations." A. A. Ballantine

+ Harvard Law R 59:151 N '45 1200w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:103 Je '46 360w

BAKER, LOUIS HENRY. Do you know your football? 99p $1.50 Barnes, A.S.

796.33 Football 46-11938

In question and answer form this book contains over 500 facts concerning the game of football arranged under the headings: All-Americans; Bowl games; Coaches; Firsts on football; History of football; Players; Rules; Technique.

Book Week p5 O 27 '46 60w

Booklist 43:88 N 15 '46

BAKER, LOUIS HENRY. Football: facts and figures; with a foreword by Grantland Rice. 732p il $5 Rinehart

796.33 Football 45-11350

"This is a book to end all books on football, until more records are made and more coaches rise to fame. It begins with the history of the game and there would seem to be answers here to any question that a real fan might ask. However, for a mere reference librarian the index might be fuller. Photographs of famous coaches and players." Booklist

Booklist 42:160 Ja 15 '46

"Old timers will get a thrill out of digging into the ancient records that go back to football's infancy. The moderns will enjoy the outstanding records of players and games and colleges from all parts of the country. Football fans now have their encyclopedia."

+ Kirkus 13:415 S 15 '46 110w

"Although it contains a fair portion of narration the volume's chief virtue for the football enthusiast is its many tables of information. Records of teams all over the country, from the very start of the sport, are to be found. A general index, a personal index, a bibliography, a history of professional football, a list of the nation's largest stadia, all are in this monumental work." J. C. Nichols

+ N Y Times p26 Ag 11 '46 270w

"The perfect barroom and clubhouse companion and argument settler. Names, dates, places, scores, the history of the sport, of its rules, and of its great players and coaches, plus four or five hundred thousand other absorbing facts. Where has it been all these years?"

+ New Yorker 21:80 F 2 '46 40w

BAKER, MRS LOUISE (MAXWELL). Out on a limb. (Whittlesey house publication) 213p $2 McGraw

B or 92 46-7133

Autobiography of the author of Party Line (Book Review Digest 1945). In it she describes the accident which left her handicapped by the loss of a leg, and recounts how she overcame the handicap and has lived a healthy, hearty life.

"Mrs. Baker is a delightful person and an entertaining writer. In dozens of instances that might have been tragic, she sees humor and her story as well as being the gay chronicle of how a highly individual person grew to adulthood, has the inspirational quality of showing how fully a life can be lived under circumstances which a less gallant and venturesome person might have found dreadfully strangling. Incidentally, she tells of her husbands. This book could never have been written if Mrs. Baker had not lost her leg, but what is important is not what was lost but what was left of Mrs. Baker when the leg was gone." J. W. R.

+ Book Week p4 O 13 '46 360w

Booklist 43:72 N 1 '46

"This is a humorous and good humored approach to a loss which was only physically crippling. The book should have much to hearten amputees."

+ Kirkus 14:407 Ag 15 '46 150w

"It is an autobiography that might have been morbid and pathetic. Instead, because of Mrs. Baker's highly developed sense of humor about herself, it becomes a lively, graceful story." Lucy Greenbaum

+ N Y Times p28 N 10 '46 1050w

"This autobiography might well have been entitled, like one of its chapters, 'The Leg and I.' Indeed it is even possible that Louise Baker's leg may some day catch up with Betty MacDonald's egg. Both books tell unusual personal stories with breezy forthrightness; both authors wisecrack their way through adverse circumstances. . . The chronicler of the egg has advantages both in background and foreground over the chronicler of the leg—she is also funnier—but each of them provides novel and blithe entertainment of an unpretentious variety." Grace Frank

BAKER, LOUISE—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 29:41 N 2 '46 700w

"Her humorous and serious comments on orthopedic pros and cons and expedients will have particular interest to other 'unipeds.' The central interest in this lively book, however, is not Louise Baker's lack of a leg but Louise Baker herself. She remarks at the end that she can't see what in Heaven's name there would have been to put in her autobiography if she had had two feet. But the reader who has laughed at her jokes, shared in her adventures and enjoyed her friendliness will disagree." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p24 N 17 '46 480w

Wis Lib Bul 42:166 D '46

BAKER, MRS NINA (BROWN). Sun Yat-sen; il. by Jeanyee Wong. 247p $2.50 Vanguard

B or 92 Sun Yat-sen 46-11903

Biography of the Chinese leader who devoted the best part of his life to the establishment of a republic in China. The book is simply written so that it can be used with the teen-aged reader. Index.

Booklist 43:72 N 1 '46

"Competent biography in a romanticized, too little known area of conflict."
+ Kirkus 14:491 O 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Claire Nolte

Library J 71:1810 D 15 '46 70w

"Mrs Baker writes in an appealing fashion for the 'teen-age reader, presenting the Chinese way of life so that it is easy for the Westerner to understand. To read her book is to absorb painlessly the history of some of China's most turbulent and significant years." Helena Kuo

+ N Y Times p2 N 10 '46 180w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:147 D 7 '46 70w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 10 '46 110w

"In these days of pessimism about the prospects for international peace and world organization it becomes increasingly important that we help young people to increase their knowledge and understanding of other nations. Biography can, by providing us with the life stories of the great men and women of other lands, play an important role in this deeper understanding. Thus, this book, about the founder of modern China, assumes a greater value. . . Mrs. Baker has written an excellent book. Best of all, it is a book that needed to be written. Reading it, thousands of young Americans will receive lasting values." R. A. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:67 N 9 '46 230w

Weekly Book Review p30 N 10 '46 450w

BAKER, RACHEL (MININBERG). Dr Morton, pioneer in the use of ether; il. by Lawrence Dresser. 224p $2.50 Messner

Morton, William Thomas Green—Fiction SG46-115

Fictionized biography of William T. G. Morton, the Massachusetts farm boy, who was the first to use ether in operations. For older boys and girls. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p11 My 5 '46 220w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK 22:211 My '46 80w

"A depressing history of a sensitive youth. . . A sad document, sympathetically written, historically of interest. But hardly a book to encourage budding scientists, or to create social-minded workers. A rather strange choice for a subject of a junior biography."

+ Kirkus 14:73 F 1 '46 110w

"Recommended for junior and senior high schools." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 71:669 My 1 '46 70w

"An inspiring, exciting, biography, told in interesting fictional form." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p36 Ap 14 '46 90w

"Mrs. Baker has produced a fine book that will appeal to children as well as adults. It is spontaneous and lively writing, but it carries the earmarks of careful, painstaking research."

+ Scientific Bk Club R p4 Ap '46 270w

"It is an interesting, well done book, but rather light in content chiefly owing to the fact that Dr Morton was far from being a major figure despite his great service to mankind." R. F. H.

Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 7 '46 480w

"It is not in itself a pleasant story, but it is strong and stimulating, told with fire, with respect and with admiration." M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 J1 14 '46 210w

BALCHIN, NIGEL. Mine own executioner. 336p $2.50 Houghton [8s 6d Collins]

46-11904

"Short novel about an unhicensed psychoanalyst, his rather unsatisfactory relations with his wife, and his imaginative handling of a likable but murderous young man." New Yorker

"The novel is notable for occasional brilliances; but instances might be multiplied almost indefinitely. And the sum of the novel seems to me seriously considerable. Balchin is a novelist worth reading now and one whose future novels are an uncommonly rich prospect because of this accuracy of ear, because of the honesty of his subjects, because of the abounding vitality of his characters. He is customarily bitter or sardonic, but not sentimentally so. He is still writing toward his finest novel, but he has written already with uncommon distinction." James Sandoe

+ Book Week p5 S 15 '46 700w

Booklist 43:69 N 1 '46

"This is psychiatry as intelligent as it has been practised in print, it is also a holding story, not without irony and with little illusion, but perhaps a little too civilized for the wider public."

Kirkus 14:256 Je 1 '46 180w

"Book lacks smoothness in style and appears to have been written in a hurry. Characterizations not true to life. Conversation is stilted." W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 71:1049 Ag '46 80w

"Even if Balchin were a better writer, it is doubtful if this would have been a successful book. In the first place, a psychiatrist in his professional role must be too impersonal to furnish the protagonist for a novel, and in the second, the case histories of his patients remain stories within stories, unassimilated to the structure of the plot. It may be hoped, incidentally, that this book doesn't help to break the ice for a flood of novels about psychiatry similar to the flood of doctor-hospital fiction." John Farrelly

New Repub 115:741 D 2 '46 230w

"A literate, fast-paced, skillfully managed story that belongs to an increasingly popular type—psychological (or more accurately) the psychopathic thriller." D. S. Norton

+ N Y Times p20 S 15 '46 700w

"Considering the recent crop of forced or fancy fiction, most of which might have been written by earnest children, Mr. Balchin's adult approach to a subtle theme is a welcome bit of refreshment."

+ New Yorker 22:108 S 14 '46 80w

"Mr. Balchin has a cool, light touch, but he is a very serious man just the same. I am not certain just where he is going, but it is a downright exciting thing to watch him while he's on his way." R. L. North

Sat R of Lit 29:31 O 5 '46 600w

"The immature approach to love and marriage on the part of a man in whose maturity we are so eager to believe, since the value of his work as an analyst depends on it, detracts from the stature of the novel. Unfairly perhaps, it even rouses the reader's doubts as to the authenticity of the climax of the book. . . . Despite the occasional doubts prompted by Felix Milne's behavior, however, 'Mine Own Executioner' presents a balanced, unpretentious, and at times absorbing picture of the treatment of human personality as practiced in our day." Virgilia Peterson

+ — Weekly Book Review p10 S 15 '46 700w

BALDWIN, FAITH. Woman on her way. 309p $2.50 Rinehart

46-4733

Character sketch of Meg Lewis, born of poor parents and married to a charming but unstable husband. For years Meg was forced to support her three children by dressmaking, until a wealthy client helped her to establish her own dress designing house in New York. The story of Meg's success and her second marriage late in life covers a period of over forty years—the first years of the present century.

"Faith Baldwin can write when she takes the trouble, and she took considerable care with this novel." Olive Carruthers

+ Book Week p6 O 6 '46 160w

Booklist 43:16 S '46

Kirkus 14:283 Je 15 '46 150w

"All this is strictly in a pattern of Baldwin opera—and all of it is played in tempo, true to the beat of the director's metronome. . . . Yet there's much more to delight the author's faithful readers, who will follow eagerly Meg's heartaches and triumphs up to the present time. There are, of course, all the usual touches: easy dialogue, swift pace, colorful period details and the numerous twists of coincidence serving as salt and pepper to the meat of the plot." A. P.

+ — N Y Times p28 Ag 25 '46 280w

BALL, ZACHARY. Pull down to New Orleans. 292p $2.50 Crown

46-7569

Novel of romance and intrigue set against the background of the Mississippi and Ohio rivers in 1802.

"Slight, written practically like a scenario, this one reads much as if it were lifted bodily from the pages of a slick-paper woman's magazine. It is, too, more of an elongated short story, or perhaps a novelette, than a novel. But it has some of the merits as well as the drawbacks of readymade, ready-to-wear fiction; it does move at a quick clip." H. T. Kane

Book Week p8 N 3 '46 230w

Reviewed by Richard Match

N Y Times p16 N 10 '46 320w

"Rowdy historical romance is Zachary Ball's specialty, and this Mississippi melee is right up his alley." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p30 N 3 '46 110w

BALLARD, W. T. Murder can't stop. 207p $2 McKay

Detective story.

"Unlikely motivation and frequent clichés mar a fast-paced and generally enjoyable meller." Anthony Boucher

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 3 '46 50w

"Hard-boiled."

Sat R of Lit 29:42 N 23 '46 50w

BALLINGER, WILLIS JEROME. By vote of the people. 381p $3 Scribner

321 Democracy. Capitalism. U.S.—Economic policy 46-7464

"Mr. Ballinger, an exponent of small business, laissez-faire economics and critic of growing government authority presents an economic interpretation of decline of 'free government,' tracing collapse of 'democratic' governments through the centuries from ancient Greece to 20th century Italy and Germany. Last half of book is concerned with this 'historical crisis in America.' Mr. Ballinger's thesis rests on growth of monopoly and increasing dependence of citizens on government." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is interesting and thought-provoking. But neither the choice of the cases of collapsing capitalism nor the author's analysis of them is altogether convincing. Also, some of the suggested cures seem rather platitudinous, though platitudes are often basic and vital truths. The picture which the author paints is one-sided: his appraisal is not free from bias. . . . But, if his grim and lurid panorama helps awaken America to a real and pressing problem, it will have performed a useful service." R. H. M.

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 24 '46 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '46

Reviewed by G. G. Higgins

Commonweal 45:209 D 6 '46 750w

Kirkus 14:466 S 1 '46 170w

"A paradoxical, controversial book. . . . Author's recommendations and interpretations are disputable." John Berthel

Library J 71:1327 O 1 '46 140w

"In order to support his argument, Ballinger has to uphold a number of dubious theses. One is that all the civilizations in question were sufficiently democratic and sufficiently capitalist in the modern sense so that their experience is relevant. Another is that in each case the decline of democracy arose from monopolistic practices. The third is that unemployment crises would not have occurred without monopoly. He agrees with Hayek and with John Chamberlain, who writes the introduction, that without competitive capitalism democracy is impossible. Finally he assumes that police action by government can break up monopoly and that nothing more is necessary to distribute wealth equitably and avoid serious unemployment. To state this argument is enough to raise doubts about its validity." George Soule

New Repub 115:524 O 21 '46 500w

Reviewed by J. J. Friedman

N Y Times p12 O 27 '46 1000w

"For twenty-five cents the reader may get historic metaphors apart, all that this reviewer found valuable in the book, and may get it more solidly reasoned in Henry Simon's unimpassioned pamphlet 'A Positive Program for Laissez Faire' (also not listed in Mr. Ballinger's bibliography)." T. V. Smith

Sat R of Lit 29:17 N 9 '46 850w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres

Weekly Book Review p12 D 29 '46 1050w

BAMBRICK, WINIFRED. Keller's continental revue [Eng title: Continental revue]. 462p il $2.75 Houghton [9s 6d Faber]

46-11834

"Novel about the impact of war on a great cosmopolitan extravaganza which for twenty years had dazzled and thrilled pleasure-seekers in Europe, the British Isles, the Far and Near East. The personnel of the revue was as varied and polyglot as the U. N. O. In its company of three hundred were to be found Germans, English, Chinese, Arabs, French, Irish, Austrians, Italians, Dutch, Indians, Spaniards, Hawaiians, even a Brazilian and a Negro. Yet so great was their esprit de corps, so deep their devotion to the tenet, 'the show must go on,' that it wasn't until passport difficulties limited the professional activities of its members that the show shriveled and collapsed. . . . [The author] uses for her plot the romance of a young English scene designer and an Austrian ballet dancer. This romance survived all obstacles until Hitler menaced mankind." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 43:117 D 15 '46

BAMBRICK, WINIFRED—Continued

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
 Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 3 '47 240w
 "A harmless, pleasant little novel." Patricia Blake

N Y Times p12 N 17 '46 500w

"Somehow the protagonists never step out of the electricians' technicolor spotlights into the reality of daylight, and the off-stage lives of those interesting people never seem as fascinating as their professional activities. Miss Bambrick has given an accurate, well-observed, and always entertaining account of what goes on backstage of a big revue, from rehearsal to the final curtain on opening night, and she has understanding for the ambitions, jealousies, and little joys and pains of her three-hundred performers." Joseph Wechsberg

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:23 Ja 18 '47 600w

"There's a fine frenzy about the descriptions of performances and touring life, but the author is unable to create character, and beneath the frenzy one glimpses the pinched and tiny skeleton of a servant-girl's novelette." Walter Allen

Spec 178:58 Ja 10 '47 130w

"Few novels of theatrical life succeed in representing show folk as real people; the temptation to write at concert pitch proves too strong. Continental Revue is at its best when the show is pushed into the background by the grim reality of history in the making. The picture of the arrival of Neville Chamberlain in Germany is as vivid as a 'news-reel.'"

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p641 D 28 '46 180w

Reviewed by Richard Maney

Weekly Book Review p10 D 22 '46 800w

BANNON, LAURA. Red mittens; pictures by [the author]. [30p] $1.50 Houghton

Picture-story book about little Joe who loved his red mittens so much that he even wore them in summer, tied around his neck on a string. One day he lost them, and story and pictures show how his animal friends located them.

"A distinctive and satisfying little picture book for children from 4 to 8."

+ Book Week p15 Je 2 '46 180w

Booklist 42:267 Ap 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '46

"Children of nursery age will like to hear what animals helped Joe look for the mittens and which one helped him find them. They will like the merry pictures in black and white, too." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:203 My '46 80w

"An engagingly written, charmingly illustrated . . . story."

+ Kirkus 14:148 Mr 15 '46 60w

Reviewed by Miriam Snow

Library J 71:487 Ap 1 '46 70w

"Little Joe, alas! is not nearly so handsome as his animal helpers, but 4-to-7-year-olds will enjoy the tale of his quest and the joke at the end, related in crisp sentences." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 17 '46 90w

"A picture book with a humorous surprise ending, but perhaps Miss Bannon should not have tried to project the humor into her black and white illustrations, for it detracts from their charm and makes the animals appear ludicrous." P. H. S.

+ — Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 14 '46 120w

"This is an engaging little book from first to last; pictures and story are one." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 21 '46 200w

Wis Lib Bul 42:76 My '46

BARBER, MRS ELSIE MARION (OAKES). The wall between. 356p $2.75 Macmillan

46-6324

"From a typical materialistic young modern Christy Gardner grows into truly Christian woman through her great love for Mark, her minister husband, and through sharing his everyday experiences with his parishioners. When he leaves for war she plunges into war work to forget loneliness—finding solace and her way to faith in her growing ability to help those in distress." Library J

Booklist 43:35 O 1 '46

Reviewed by L. E. Cannon

Christian Century 63:1344 N 6 '46 230w

"A first novel that should appeal to a feminine audience. There's a sincere feel to the questions young Christy cannot solve."

+ Kirkus 14:282 Je 15 '46 170w

"Characters not convincing. A first novel. Will be popular in public libraries because of wholesome point of view." H. R. Forbes

+ — Library J 71:1126 S 1 '46 100w

"Miss Barber has arranged the material of her first novel with care. But Christy reminds this reader of conversations with friends who have been psychoanalyzed. No matter how heart-warming and welcome the improvements, the details generally lack buoyancy." E. S. Holsaert

N Y Times p34 S 22 '46 300w

"The author is thoroughly acquainted with her theme and sympathetic with her heroine's problem—as well as the husband's headaches. 'The Wall Between' is a thoughtful novel, but the human slant is uppermost." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p30 O 6 '46 120w

Wis Lib Bul 42:167 D '46

BARBER, MARSHALL ALBERT. Malarialogist in many lands; with a foreword by Paul F. Russell. 158p il $2.50 Univ. of Kan.

614.53 Malaria

SG46-242

An American scientist, a member of the staffs of the International health division of the Rockefeller foundation and other public health agencies, who has studied and fought malaria in many countries, here describes his travels and his work. Index.

"For the experienced malarialogist this should prove enjoyable reading recalling various important facts of malaria control. To the layman in malaria control it should serve as general introduction to the study of malarialogy or a background of information concerning the basic factors involved in malaria control." F. E. Elder

+ Am J Pub Health 36:933 Ag '46 320w

"Dr. Barber has exceptional ability to present technical matters in language that the general reader can understand. He writes with dry humor, most often directed toward himself, and with a real sense of dramatic and human values in the exciting stories he has to tell. In every country in which he worked, moreover, he observed keenly and sympathetically the lives and problems of the common people; and he shares his observations, frankly and concisely." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 J1 21 '46 150w

Booklist 43:65 N 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '46

"This straightforward narrative of Dr. Barber's is the interestingly human and scientific account of the good doctor's travels throughout the world."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:3 Je '46 360w

"The book should prove of great interest to the physician, to those engaged in the field of public health, and to the informed layman." U S Quarterly Bkl 2:329 D '46 180w

BARBOUR, THOMAS. A naturalist's scrap book. 215p il $3 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Naturalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Natural history museums A46-8

"A miscellany of reminiscences on the author's experiences in museum keeping, his naturalist acquaintances, and personal adventures in collecting." Booklist

Atlantic 178:150 J1 '46 1800w

"The book abounds in good stories like that of the stolen whale—surely a parallel in real life to Mark Twain's fictional 'Stolen White Elephant.' Even if one isn't especially interested in natural history, he is in delightful and stimulating company in every page of Thomas Barbour." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ap 7 '46 220w

Booklist 42:262 Ap 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 11 '47 100w

Reviewed by B. W. Kunkel

New Eng Q 19:261 Je '46 650w

"Good shoptalk, the spontaneous enthusiasm of a man for his work, is always interesting. This volume is filled with it. . . . 'A Naturalist's Scrapbook' is not to be compared with Dr. Barbour's earlier volumes like 'Naturalist At Large.' As its title suggests, it is a collection of somewhat incidental and fragmentary sketches which are none the less alive with good talk and genuine enthusiasm, and are filled with curious oddments of learning about the world of nature at large and the lesser world of nature within the walls of a museum." R. T. Bond

+ N Y Times p31 My 12 '46 600w

"Thomas Barbour was one of the last of the great 'Naturalists.' His knowledge was encyclopedic and his interests were even wider. Although he will probably be recorded in the roster of science as a herpetologist, his activities were, throughout his life, much more varied and were forever slopping over into the kampongs of his associates. 'A Naturalist's Scrapbook' is the ultimate expression of this irrepressible versatility." I. K. Sanderson

+ Sat R of Lit 29:67 Je 8 '46 700w

Scientific Bk Club R p4 Ap '46 260w

"Thomas Barbour's endless enthusiasm for museum work and for the joys of what he describes as 'a pack rat, a frank and unashamed pack rat' is not feigned. Possessing independent means, he could have retired from his place as director of the three institutions he headed at any time he desired. Instead, he served without salary. And he continued to serve until the time of his death. His enthusiasm is as contagious as it is genuine. It is very likely that a whole new generation of museum men will have an initial interest stirred by reading the books of Thomas Barbour just as a whole generation of explorers half a century ago was inspired by the books of Alfred Russel Wallace." E. W. Teale

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 28 '46 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 42:84 Je '46

BARCLAY, R. E. Ducktown back in Raht's time. 286p il maps $5 Univ of N.C. press

976.8875 Polk county, Tennessee. Copper mines and mining. Raht, Julius Eckhardt 46-5802

"This is a history about an area in Tennessee that is familiar to engineers and chemists who have been employed at some time or other in their lives at Ducktown or Copperhill. This author covers the era from back in the 1830's to 1890. It is the era often referred to as 'back to Raht's time' for during those years Captain J. E. Raht was the outstanding figure in the district. Bound up in this imperishable phrase are history, legend, and stories of early settlers, speculators, miners, mining companies, merchants, mail carriers, roads, schools, and churches—each of which played a leading role at Ducktown in the years preceding the present era." (Chem Eng) Index.

"This history is not merely a detailed story of mining operation. On the contrary, it does not miss a single phase of early life in the region—the Indians, transportation, schools, social life, religion. Of particular interest is the story of the Civil War in its relation to the mines and the people. To those who have lived in the region, the detailed account of names and places in the first few chapters will no doubt loose the springs of memory afresh—to those unfamiliar with the region this monotony will be dispelled by faster movements of events in later chapters." W. H. Shearon

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2978 N 10 '46 350w

Chem Eng 53:297 O '46 110w

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 28 '46 90w

"Although the volume obviously represents a worthy and ambitious piece of historical research, resulting in a valuable documentary record of nineteenth-century social and industrial development in an American industrial community, it is too locally restricted to be of wide interest. The author has been content to present facts, documents, and statistics with little effort to make an exciting or readable story. It does form, however, a significant chapter in American mining history, and as such Mr. Barclay's book will be useful for future historians dealing with the subject more broadly."

U S Quarterly Bk 2:313 D '46 260w

BARDIN, JOHN FRANKLIN. Deadly percheron. 212p $2 Dodd

Mystery story.

46-4511

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p8 Je 2 '46 140w

Booklist 42:367 JI 15 '46

New Repub 115:86 JI 22 '46 40w

"It is a story of murder and mayhem and hideous torture—one which will hold your attention to the last, even though you cannot possibly believe that such things could happen here in little old New York." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 Je 2 '46 100w

New Yorker 22:96 My 25 '46 70w

"Here's a real phantasmagoria! Midgets, horses, hibiscus-wearing gentlemen, lovely ladies and copious action. Spotty—but hard to put down."

Sat R of Lit 29:37 Je 1 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p17 Je 2 '46 200w

BAREA, ARTURO. Forging of a rebel; tr. from the Spanish by Ilsa Barea [Eng titles: The forge; The track; The clash]. 733p $5 Reynal [3v v1-2 ea 10s 6d; v3 12s 6d Faber]

B or 92

46-8536

"This long, detailed and highly personal autobiography of a Spanish liberal covers the span from 1896 to 1939. Barea's experiences—related in a very subjective manner—include his education in a religious school (which made him strongly anticlerical); military service in Morocco; and a successful business career. During the siege of Madrid he served as a Director of Censorship for the Republican government." (Library J) The book was published in England in three parts called: The Forge; The Track; and The Clash. No index.

Reviewed by Helen Woodward

Book Week p3 D 15 '46 360w

"An autobiography that is so full of magnificent bits that it is unfortunate that its length will discourage many readers. Considered as a panorama of Spain during the authors lifetime it gives a many faceted picture of that tragic land, diseased economically, socially, politically."

+ Kirkus 14:513 O 1 '46 150w

"Well-written, and containing many colorful descriptions of Spanish people and places, it will be best appreciated by those readers who already possess a basic knowledge of modern Spain and its people." R. H. McDonough

+ Library J 71:1623 N 15 '46 120w

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 27 '46 270w (Review of The Clash)

"Barea's is an uncompromising book. His life afforded him the opportunity for melodrama, but he has avoided the extravagances of such other European odysseys as The Story of San Michele, Out of the Night or Kaputt. He has been as rigorous with himself as he was with his prose (admirably translated by his wife, Ilsa Barea). . . . The result is one of the great autobiographies of the twentieth century." George Mayberry

+ New Repub 115:881 D 23 '46 800w

BAREA, ARTURO—Continued

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 31:363 My 18 '46 850w (Review of The Clash)

"Barea's account of the issues involved in the civil war should be required reading for those who excuse our 'non-intervention' policy with the claim that the choice was between Franco and communism. . . . Perhaps because of his scientific training, perhaps because, as these pages demonstrate, he is by nature a man with a passion for truth, Barea has remained uncannily objective. . . . His account of 'The Track'—he was helping to lay out a military road that was required for the effort to carve out a new empire to replace the one lost to the United States—is one of the most valuable parts of his book." T. J. Hamilton

+ N Y Times p4 D 8 '46 1300w

New Yorker 22:145 D 14 '46 100w

"'The Forging of a Rebel' is not fiction, but, as far as one can check it, fact. Yet it belongs to the small company of books which reveal the essential shape and meaning of a public series of events with a density of impact and richness of connotation usually reserved to poets. . . . Shall I say of this book, also, that it is full of color and excitement, of sharply etched character and incident, alive with humor, and relieved here and there by moments of idyllic beauty? Or that it is translated into English equal to its demands? All these things are true, but, in a really important book, they are relatively unimportant." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 29:11 D 28 '46 750w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

Spec 176:406 Ap 19 '46 750w (Review of The Clash)

Time 48:88 D 30 '46 1250w

"Passionate sincerity is the keynote of this book and renders it one of the most valuable literary products of the Civil War. Both as a human document and as social history it makes absorbing reading. It achieves that rare quality, partisanship without intellectual dishonesty or the distortion of truth. The translation, like that of its predecessors, is of outstanding quality."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p136 Mr 23 '46 900w (Review of The Clash)

"This is the book of a man who can write. So sensitive is his spirit, so intense his powers of recall, that we can see the cracks in his mother's reddened laundress hands as sharply as the smiles around her eyes. . . . We can feel as intensely the greed that surrounds him like a fog when his uncle's will is read to the assembled family as the familiar loyalty that sustains him in hours of need. Thus, the book has all the impact of a powerful novel, and a range of adventure, historical and personal, such as few novelists would venture to attempt. In it is exhibited with unique completeness and articulateness the soul of a contemporary Spaniard." B. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p3 D 22 '46 1250w

BARKER, ELLIOTT SPEER. When the dogs bark treed; a year on the trail of the long-tails. 209p il $3 Univ. of N.Mex. press

799.2 Hunting—New Mexico

46-8138

"Although Mr. Barker insists in the preface that it is merely the record of one year as a professional hunter, he has woven into this record many of the experiences and stratagems of a lifetime of hunting in the Southwest. . . . The story has for its locale the famous Vermejo Club of northern New Mexico, whose 360,000 acres have not been affected by the encirclement of civilization. There, where the elk and mule deer share forage with half-wild cattle, Barker and his dogs sought out and killed the mountain lions, coyotes and bobcats that were preying on cattle and game." N Y Times

"A thoroughly delightful volume for those who have to do their big game hunting and enjoy outdoor life vicariously." E. S. Watson

+ Book Week p38 D 1 '46 290w

Kirkus 14:538 O 15 '46 120w

Reviewed by R. R. Camp

N Y Times p14 N 3 '46 500w

"Perhaps the most interesting aspect of the type of hunting at which Mr. Barker excels is the team co-operation of dogs, horses and man to run down the quarry. The author makes this abundantly clear, describing the temperaments and characteristics of his teammates in far greater detail and with more interest than he does those of the occasional humans with whom he worked. When the Dogs Bark Treed is a beautifully made up book, expressive in its type form and photographic arrangements of the wide open life of which the author writes."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p36 D 1 '46 170w

BARKER, SIR ERNEST. Essays on government. 269p $4.25 (15s) Oxford

342.04 Political science

[46-4810]

"These eight essays, written mostly for the general reader during the war, are by-products of the same rich and mellow system of thought that Sir Ernest expounded in more academic form in his recent volume of political theory 'Reflections on Government.' He treats of the monarchy; . . . of British statesmen, among whom he characteristically finds that the greatest names range themselves almost equally in the progressive and conservative camps; of the Parliamentary system, on which he addresses himself with admirable lucidity largely to French readers; on the Third Republic, the constitution and practice of which are explained with equally luminous power to his own countrymen; on Blackstone, on Burke, and on the relation of the community (by which he does not mean the State) and the Church." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The essays are marked by well-reasoned analysis, tolerance, and lack of dogmatism." J. A. Fairlie

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:790 Ag '46 400w

"The essays have all the ripeness and maturity of the author's advanced years. They suggest a distillation of wisdom accumulated through many decades of study and observation."

C. B. Swisher

+ Ann Am Acad 246:154 Jl '46 500w

Foreign Affairs 24:743 Jl '46 30w

"Though the author in his Preface claims for the essays 'some unity of view, of subject matter and style', they still seem somewhat miscellaneous to this reviewer. While they are not 'lesser works', their merit has not been augmented by collective publication. . . . They do not add to the great stature of Ernest Barker but they are distinguished as a matter of course by his fine writing and meticulous standards of historical research and political science." M. D. Irish

Pol Sci Q 61:616 D '46 750w

"Sir Ernest Barker needs no commendation from scholars; but this volume of essays, his own estimation of the best of his recent shorter writings, will equally delight the student of politics and the general reader."

S. Gordon

+ Spec 175:548 D 7 '45 700w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p16 Ja 12 '46 850w

"This volume from the gifted pen of a great English scholar recalls and revives the British tradition of brilliant essay writing. The systematic thoroughness of the German and the logic of the French are not here, but intimate insight and charm of style are seen in abundant measure." C. E. Merriam

+ Weekly Book Review p24 My 26 '46 1200w

BARKSDALE, LENA. Daring riders, and other tales of young America; il. by Frank Nicholas. 86p $2 Knopf

46-7274

Short stories of some of the "littler" people who helped build America: a Pony Express rider, a Civil war soldier, Johnny Appleseed, the Wright brothers, and others. For ages nine to twelve.

"Good beginning reference material for school classroom libraries, especially."

+ Kirkus 14:493 O 1 '46 100w

"Recommended if you need supplementary material of this sort. Decorative illustrations by Frank Nicholas." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 71:1544 N 1 '46 70w

Sat R of Lit 29:69 N 9 '46 40w

BARLOW, NORA (DARWIN) ed. See Darwin, C.R. Charles Darwin and the voyage of the Beagle.

BARNA, TIBOR. Redistribution of incomes through public finance in 1937. 289p $5 (18s) Oxford

336 Finance—Great Britain. Income—Great Britain. Taxation—Great Britain A46-685

"This book represents a systematic attempt to estimate the actual change in the distribution of incomes brought about by the activities of the Government, by public expenditure as well as taxation. An estimate is made of the amount of income transferred in 1937 by redistribution from the rich to the poor. In the course of the analysis a new estimate of the distribution of incomes and the distribution of capital in the United Kingdom is given; a new estimate of the national income, national expenditure, and national output; a novel method of setting out the Government accounts is demonstrated; and a detailed analysis is made of public expenditure according to its objects, and of the incidence of the various kinds of taxes and expenditures." (Publisher's note) Index.

"The author is evidently at home among the official accounts, soundly equipped with the essential economic techniques, and for the most part conversant with the pertinent literature. The book was evidently written for the trained specialists; it is not for the popular reader. Even the elect will find much of the road pretty hard going. In the end, whatever they may think of the author's ideal of equal distribution, they will consider the effort worth while." F. R. Fairchild

+ Ann Am Acad 246:155 J1 '46 650w

"A scholarly essay of great social importance." J. J.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 12 '45 360w
Times [London] Lit Sup p548 N 17 '45 850w

BARNE, KITTY (MRS ERIC STREATFEILD). Listening to the orchestra. 299p il $2.75 Bobbs [7s 6d Dent]

780.9 Music—History and criticism. Orchestras. Musicians 46-3005

After an introductory chapter on the various instruments composing the modern orchestra, the book is made up of a brief study of the history of music; biographical sketches of some famous musicians; and a chapter on some later composers; one on the American School, and one on We, the audience. Index.

Reviewed by Felix Borowski

Book Week p20 Ap 14 '46 230w

Bookmark 7:8 My '46

"A thoughtful, perceptive and not too deep study of the background of music."

+ Kirkus 14:72 F 1 '46 150w

"The information, when there is any, is not too often inaccurate, although the whole book is a hodgepodge carelessly compiled from the obvious sources in the worst 'popular' style. It is not really a book of biography, nor a book of 'appreciation', nor certainly, a book about orchestra listening. Not recommended for any library that already has a book about music." Leonard Burkat

— Library J 71:404 Mr 15 '46 100w

"There have been many books for the benefit of audiences at symphony concerts since Krehbiel's pioneer work on 'How to Listen to Music,' but none has approached the subject in a manner more likely than this one to attract the reader, or arrange the material in a way so sure to keep him steadily interested to the end. Through the book are scattered full-page photographs of players of various instruments, but the work itself is not restricted to their tone-color, history and place in the general effect; the instruments are taken as part of the orchestra, and that as part of music itself. It is music, its appreciation and the knowledge that heightens this appreciation, with which this interpreter is concerned."

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Je 30 '46 270w

BARNES, CARMAN DEE (MRS HAMILTON FISH ARMSTRONG) Time lay asleep. 243p $2 50 Harper

46-7495

Portrait of a lady, Grandmother Wickham to the narrator. Grandmother brought culture to the Tennessee "mill town" of Ross's Landing, and love, excitement and tyranny to her children and grandchildren. No matter how hard they tried, grandmother's four daughters never quite escaped their mother's domination, and her fascination descended to her grandchildren and to all who came in contact with her. The period of the story is from the last years of the nineteenth century to the early years of the twentieth.

"In construction, 'Time Lay Asleep' lacks oneness and continuity for yesterday, today and tomorrow flow together in a continuous and not wholly comprehensible stream. The book is fine in its atmosphere, which is pervaded by psychic and ominous overtones. But it is in its characters that it excels. For here are women, just women, viperous, venomous, beautiful, spongy, rotten and scheming, making 'Time Lay Asleep' a veritable den of 'Little foxes.'" A. E. Gasaway

Book Week p14 D 8 '46 400w

Kirkus 14:306 J1 1 '46 160w

"Nothing is spared us. The novelist's energy and sweep are useful and appropriate in the early attempt to describe the physical and social development of a region (the Tennessee Valley) through machinery and power. But in dealing with the personal relationships that mainly concern her, the style seems extravagant and wasteful. There are pages on which a half dozen subjects are begun and ended. The act of remembering seems in itself sufficient for Miss Barnes, but it has not produced an integrated piece of fiction." I. K.

— N Y Times p22 O 20 '46 650w

"Obviously, much of the volume is autobiographical and obviously, too, Miss Barnes in good Southern fashion enjoyed writing these reminiscences about her kinsfolk. Unfortunately, her ambition to recreate a large family and a long period, to give a sense of time, place, and of many diverse individuals, must be regarded as more laudable than successful. The sum of the good things in this book does not add up to a really good novel." Grace Frank

Sat R of Lit 29:66 D 7 '46 330w

"The author has not jazzed up the past, nor exploited its quaintness, but seeks earnestly to show whole these passionate glowing people who made themselves an exotic and rather absurd little world, desperately important to themselves, in Magnolia Street. Her picture of them has warmth and tenderness and color. With somewhat the slow-moving quality of a dream it makes an unusual and distinctive novel." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p4 O 13 '46 950w

BARNES, MARGARET CAMPBELL. My Lady of Cleves. 351p $2.75 Macrae Smith co.
Anne, of Cleves, consort of Henry VIII, king of England—Fiction 46-25028

Novel based on the life of Anne of Cleves, the fourth wife of Henry the Eighth of England. It pictures her as a woman of character and understanding, who won the respect and confidence of the English people and even of the king himself.

Reviewed by Arthur Meeker

Book Week p10 M 3 '46 550w

BARNES, M. C.—Continued
 Booklist 42:200 F 15 '46
 Bookmark 7:15 My '46
 Kirkus 14:5 Ja '46 190w

"Although the pace of the novel is at times slowed down by the grand tableaux, the rich brocade and the courtly protocol, the narrative manages to move at an exciting speed. Once Anne steps on English soil and the malicious plotting of Lady Rochfort gets under way, things happen and happen fast." Charles Duffy

N Y Times p8 Mr 10 '46 180w

"The author pecks away industriously at her material, but she never succeeds in making what Anne thought and what Henry said sound like anything more than rather dull guesses."

— New Yorker 22:85 Mr 2 '46 80w

"The important and the chief thing is that these historical characters of hers do come alive in a succession of memorable scenes: not only Anne, but Henry and Holbein and Cranmer and Tom Culpepper and Thomas Seymour and the rest. This is a real achievement in a difficult kind of writing. And the whole of 'My Lady of Cleves' is as good as its parts." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:36 Ap 27 '46 750w

"The portrait reflects discernment and sympathy, and readers with a taste for biography garnished with the decorations of a novel will enjoy it. The Tudors are displayed in all their fiery clashes of temperament and ambition as they might have appeared to an onlooker both detached and involved, an onlooker characterized by the author as 'an unusual woman'—so incalculably uncomplicated." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p24 F 24 '46 180w

Wis Lib Bul 42:59 Ap '46

BARNES, NANCY, pseud. See Adams, H. S.

BARR, ALFRED H. Picasso: fifty years of his art. See Picasso, P.

BARRETT, MONTE. Tempered blade. 317p $2.75 Bobbs

Bowie, James—Fiction 46-2714

Fictionized biography of James Bowie, inventor of the Bowie knife, who died a heroic death at the Alamo. The story is based on all that is known of his life in the southwest, from 1815 to 1836.

"Colorful as was the Jim Bowie of history and legend, he never seems really to 'come alive' in this book. The same is true of the other historical figures, including his wife, Ursula. Barrett does somewhat better with his fictitious characters, but none of them is likely to linger in the memory of the reader long after the book is read. Some of the historical incidents, notably the famous 'Sandbar Duel' near Natchez and the heroic defense of the Alamo, have been told many times, but other chroniclers tell these stories much better than does the author of 'Tempered Blade.'" E. S. Watson

— + Book Week p18 Ap 7 '46 360w

Booklist 42:282 My 1 '46

"Colorful border and pioneer history, that traverses much traveled ground, from a new direction, in adequate presentation."

+ Kirkus 14:24 Ja 15 '46 130w

Reviewed by Thelma Purtell

N Y Times p16 My 12 '46 180w

"The story seems to be historically authentic as far as the high spots are concerned, but that is of secondary importance—it is a first-rate novel and better than that." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 Ap 20 '46 700w

"The author's corruption of history to his own devices somehow falls short of success." William Manchester

Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 21 '46 280w

"Mr. Barrett has recreated, with skill and understanding, the violent pageant of Texas in turmoil. The conditions that led to the break with Mexico, the men who, for one reason or another, supported the future republic, and the panorama of the daily life of the great southwest frontier, have been vividly presented as an exciting backdrop to the life of an exciting man." W. M. Kunstler

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Mr 31 '46 450w

BARRON, HARRY. Modern plastics. 680p il $7.50 Wiley [42s Chapman]

6684 Plastics. Plastics industry [45-7272]

"This work presents a general survey of plastic materials and processes. The author has aimed his treatment at persons with some scientific or technical education but who are not specialists in the field. Thus the book is especially useful for such persons as design engineers who may be concerned with the use of plastics in manufacturing. The chemistry, raw materials, classifications, properties, testing and fabrication of plastic materials are competently discussed, and references are given to pertinent literature, including patents." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

"After reading this volume, the reviewer concluded that the plastics industry is still growing too fast to allow a definitive treatise to be written." W. E. Gloor

Chem & Eng N 24:982 Ap 10 '46 320w

"'Modern Plastics' is neither an elementary text nor a handbook; it occupies an intermediate position and as such should have good acceptance among chemists and engineers concerned with the manufacture and application of plastics. . . . As is the case with all books in extremely fast-growing and fast-moving fields, coverage cannot be complete nor strictly up-to-date, since important progress takes place in a matter of months. Nevertheless, Dr. Barron has handled the subject well. The book has a practical flavor yet is sound theoretically." Chaplin Tyler

Chem & Met Eng 53:275 Je '46 250w

Library J 70:1089 N 15 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:60 O '45

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p50 My 19 '46 120w

BARRY, JOE, pseud. See Lake, J. B.

BARSHAK, ERNA. My American adventure. 248p il $2.75 Washburn

B or 92 U.S.—Social life and customs. National characteristics, American 45-37882

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Bookmark 7:13 Mr '46

"This amusing pointed book is an interesting addition to the volumes written about America by foreigners. . . . Her praise of America—its democracy, its well-groomed women, its unrestrained younger generation—far outweighs any criticism she offers. America, she says, has been good to her. She has been good to it, too, in the final analysis." Lucy Greenbaum

+ N Y Times p26 Ja 27 '46 300w

"Despite the feeling that, at times, Miss Barschak may be writing with her tongue in her cheek in order to popularize and assure a wider reading for her American adventure, she shows, for the most part, an understanding and an appreciation of America and Americans." Katharine Jocher

+ — Social Forces 25:237 D '46 330w

"'My American Adventure' might have been such a fascinating book that one regrets it is so often dull and irritating. The author is painstakingly factual in reporting her experiences and her outlook on the world seems rather humorlessly Teutonic. Dr. Barschak never discloses why she left Germany in 1933. . . . The book's last chapter is more generous in reporting that the author has come to regard the United States as home, but the overall tone of 'My American Adventure' is too smug. This may be due more to awkwardness than ungraciousness, but it is nevertheless an unsympathetic attitude."

Marion Sturges-Jones

— + Weekly Book Review p20 Ja 27 '46
650w

BARTLETT, ROLAND WILLEY. Milk industry; a comprehensive survey of production, distribution, and economic importance. 282p il $4.50 Ronald

338.1771 Milk supply 46-993

"The theme of this book is largely economic, although the health field is touched in a discussion of the effect of unessential health regulations in setting up trade barriers. The discussion is based upon the author's twenty years of general study of the marketing of dairy products and an independent nation-wide study during the past two years." Am J Pub Health

Reviewed by W. D. Tiedeman

Am J Pub Health 36:666 Je '46 260w

"This book contains a great deal of interesting information about the milk industry." W. C. Waite

+ Ann Am Acad 248:292 N '46 420w

Reviewed by Meyer Parodneck
Survey 82:306 N '46 700w

BARTMAN, MARK. Yank in France; il. by Diana Thorne. 30p $1.25 Whitman, A.

Dogs—Legends and stories 46-3776

Third title in this series about the American war dog, Yank, and his master Sergeant Fred. This time Yank participates in the invasion of Normandy and the liberation of Paris.

Kirkus 13:368 Ag 15 '45 90w

"Will appeal to third- and fourth-graders and retarded readers, but not a necessity. Diana Thorne's illustrations in color are a definite contribution to the appeal of the book." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 71:827 Je 1 '46 70w

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 30 '46 100w

BARUCH, MRS DOROTHY (WALTER). Glass house of prejudice. 205p $2.50 Morrow

325.73 U.S.—Race question. Minorities 46-7050

Study of the causes and results of prejudice against minority groups in the United States. Includes a section on cures for prejudice. The writer is a lecturer and author and served for a time as special consultant on the West coast regional war manpower commission. The book lists supplementary materials but has no index.

"There is not a single idea, thesis, or fact here that is novel, and many researches already accomplished in the field are not noted here. . . If the purpose of Miss Baruch was to emotionalize the problem of prejudice, the study will serve for those who want information presented to them in a diffuse and somewhat undigested form." J. S. Roucek

— Ann Am Acad 248:299 N '46 240w

Booklist 43:72 N 1 '46

"A valuable book for High Schools, PTA groups, and other civic organizations."

+ Kirkus 14:372 Ag 1 '46 170w

"Most constructive book in this area and one which no library can do without. Concludes with a series of questions which reader can use to test his own prejudices. Contains excellent bibliographical survey." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 71:1327 O 1 '46 140w

"This is that rare and valuable thing, a book on race prejudice which is wholly free of indignation. Such a book is valuable because indignation gets us nowhere. Instead of helping, it hinders. If race prejudice is to be reduced and its worst consequences avoided, we must understand its deepest causes. That means that we must study it with cold objectivity, as laboratory technicians study smears and specimens for evidences of disease." Varian Fry

+ Sat R of Lit 29:14 O 19 '46 700w

"The third part of the book, 'Cures for Prejudice,' lacks the definiteness and specificity of the earlier parts, though it contains an interesting test the reader can administer to himself to discover how far he is prejudiced. Dr. Baruch concludes with a detailed and helpful appendix which gives a good picture of what is being done to handle the problem of prejudice and contains a bibliography and other materials that would make the book an excellent textbook for high schools or junior colleges. And for readers on the more mature level, Dr. Baruch's obviously wide experience will be instructive and helpful." Margaret Halsey

+ — Weekly Book Review p7 O 20 '46 550w

BARUCH, MRS DOROTHY (WALTER), and TRAVIS, LEE EDWARD. You're out of the service now; the veteran's guide to civilian life. 238p $2.50 Appleton-Century

355.115 Veterans 46-4601

A guide for veterans who need help in making the mental and emotional readjustments to civilian life. Partial contents: A thousand gripes; Sex—G.I. variety; The girl you left behind; Mother, father and son; Back to school; What job will you have?; You can find help. Index.

Book Week p4 Ag 11 '46 60w

Booklist 43:6 S '46

"There is a great deal here that should prove of constructive value."

+ Kirkus 14:264 Je 1 '46 200w

"This is specific, blunt and tough-minded and may need a bit of introducing to some readers. A must book for librarians though." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 71:917 Je 15 '46 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 14 '46
70w

BASCOM, FREDERICK GEORGE, ed. Letters of a Ticonderoga farmer; selections from the correspondence of William H. Cook and his wife with their son, Joseph Cook, 1851-1885. 134p $2 Cornell univ. press

920 Cook, William Henry. Cook, Joseph 46-4949

During the latter part of the nineteenth century an American lecturer, Joseph Cook, was famous for his Monday lectures in Boston's Tremont Temple. These letters from his father and mother show in outline the rise of this New York state farmer's son to his particular point of fame.

Am Hist R 52:198 O '46 240w

Reviewed by L. A. Collins

N Y Times p36 O 6 '46 450w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright

Weekly Book Review p20 S 15 '46 320w

BASSETT, SARA WARE. The beacon. 223p $2 Doubleday

46-4933

Jessie Gale, a meek little Cape Cod orphan, was left alone at the death of her domineering grandfather. The rest of the family met to decide Jessie's fate, but found to their surprise that Jessie and the family lawyer had other ideas. With a paid job, some new gowns, and a bit of unsuspected backbone, Jessie did very well for herself.

Book Week p6 Jl 28 '46 90w

Booklist 42:367 Jl 15 '46

Kirkus 14:203 My 1 '46 190w

"The story is full of familiar crusty Cape Cod characters, to delight the Bassett fan. But Jessie is a changeling among them. . . To watch Jessie emerge from her chrysalis is amusing and butterfly-light entertainment." Barbara Bond

+ N Y Times p14 Je 30 '46 200w

BASSETT, S. W.—Continued

Spring'd Republican p4d Jl 7 '46 240w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p14 Jl 21 '46 110w

BAST, HERBERT. New essentials of upholstery. 301p il $2.75 Bruce pub.

684 Upholstery 46-2137

"This is a new, enlarged edition of Essentials of Upholstery [1928]. . . Well-illustrated directions, useful in homes or workshops." Booklist

Booklist 42:301 My 15 '46

"The author of this little book is an upholstery instructor in the Sheboygan (Wisconsin) Vocational School. Subject matter is well organized; photographs and drawings are clear and easy to understand." E. W. Akin J Home Econ 38:366 Je '46 100w

"An excellent practical text for school and general use." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:760 My 15 '46 40w

Wis Lib Bul 42:112 Jl '46

BATE, WALTER JACKSON. Stylistic development of Keats. 214p $3 Modern lang. assn. [14s Oxford]

821 Keats, John 46-1098

"This study is twofold in its purpose: it seeks to give a precise description of the unfolding and development of a great poet's stylistic craftsmanship, and it also attempts to ally this technical progression with the changing bents of mind which gave it rise and direction. In accordance with these aims, the metrical sections of this analysis are written with the hope of throwing additional light upon Keats's general stylistic development rather than of making any specific contribution to the science of English metrics per se." (Introd) Index.

"Mr. Bate's work on the stylistic development of Keats shows not only deep scholarship and impeccable taste but also a delight in tracing details of craftsmanship indicative of Keats's growth. . . The analyses of the content of the poems are comprehensive; the microscopic examination of the prosody is without parallel. I cannot imagine that any further commentary on Keats will be able to ignore this book." Robert Hilley

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 Mr 23 '46 180w

"Although the highly technical nature and handling of the subject are not likely to secure for this book an abundance of readers except among advanced students of prosody, Mr. Bate, whose Harvard Honors thesis some years ago was a study of Keats's doctrine of negative capability, might justly claim to have done up an even more difficult problem extremely brown. The title, while not misleading, only summarizes in a general term the very particularized treatment of rhetorical, prosodic, and other phonetic and material devices employed by Keats in a career which, despite its brevity, provides strong evidence of his technical virtuosity."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk1 2:170 S '46 360w

BATTLE stations! your navy in action; a photographic epic of the naval operations of World war II, told by the great admirals who sailed the fleet from Norfolk to Normandy and from the Golden Gate to the Inland sea. 402p maps $3.95-$4.95 Wise

940.545973 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. World war, 1939-1945—Pictorial works. U.S. Navy 46-4372

"This is the most elaborate attempt yet made to tell with photographs and brief description the story of the United States Navy's part in World War II. It goes even beyond that, although somewhat sketchily, to show the growth of the United States Navy from the days of John Paul Jones and the Bon Homme Richard to William F. Halsey and the battleship Missouri. To set the stage for our own naval part in the struggle lately ended, it touches briefly on the beginning of the war in Europe—with photograph and cut line—from the invasion of Poland through the London blitz, the Norwegian campaign and the advance into the Balkans." N Y Times

Foreign Affairs 25:339 Ja '47 20w

Reviewed by R. E. Kingery

Library J 71:666 My 1 '46 70w

"Those who expect to find here, in the signed accounts of the naval campaigns by the admirals who headed them, the true and complete story of the great engagements, are going to be disappointed. This is not to say that it is not an interesting book—only that 'Battle Stations' is not the definitive inside story of the United States war at sea. It is rather what it probably was intended to be, a popular photographic book prepared for a mass market." Foster Hailey

N Y Times p3 My 26 '46 360w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 21 '46 140w

Reviewed by Ronald Schiller

— Sat R of Lit 29:30 Ag 3 '46 650w

"The text is negligible, for the contributors, able as they may be in fighting and writing, are restricted to a scanty page or two, which is hardly sufficient for adequate narrative. But the collection of photographs is as comprehensive as one could wish."

Weekly Book Review p13 Ag 18 '46 230w

BAUM, VICKI. Mortgage on life. 277p $2.50 Doubleday

46-7454

"The daughter of a Brooklyn boarding-house keeper—nimble of mind but plain of face and lacking in sex appeal—resolves to promote the career and the romantic prospects of another girl who has, in some degree, what it takes. Plain Bess Poker (everybody called her 'Poker-face') thus hopes to know the taste of success and the intoxication of Broadway fame at second hand—as a glamour bunder-upper. . . Vicki Baum develops the narrative in reverse, for on the first page Bess has punctured her product with a revolver." Weekly Book Review

Kirkus 14:394 Ag 15 '46 140w

"Miss Baum, as always, manages to take in a great deal of territory in this junket—and all of it is planned as carefully as a fashion layout, to pull you on for the next chapter. . . The present reviewer felt sure that it would all collapse in a twinkling, if Miss Baum slackened her tempo or relaxed her iron grip. But of course Miss Baum is too handy a virtuoso to court such disaster." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p28 O 13 '46 400w

"It is an ingenious and expertly executed novel, but it hinges on a concept of feminine psychology not intended for too close scrutiny." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p30 O 6 '46 150w

BAUME, FREDERICK EHRENFRIED. I'll always be with you. 251p $2.50 Dodd

46-6291

The love affairs of a beautiful and magnetic English woman, who could not stay in love with the same man for very long.

Book Week p24 N 24 '46 100w

— N Y Times p20 S 8 '46 370w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p18 S 15 '46 140w

BAUR, BETTY. This is goodbye. 325p $2.50 Lippincott

46-3588

Story of three women from very different types of homes, all working in the Eagle Aircraft plant. The three meet while working on the night shift and take an apartment together. Their growth in friendship, understanding, and mutual tolerance, completes the novel.

Kirkus 14:131 Mr 15 '46 170w

"Scarcely a novel, rather a series of minor climaxes, well told. . . Recommended." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 71:586 Ap 15 '46 130w

"Though her idea is a good one, 'This Is Goodbye' lacks depth and warmth, and the characters, shadowy and half-realized, are projected through a series of contrived, artificial situations." Catherine Maher

N Y Times p20 My 12 '46 90w

"Miss Baur's novel is not exactly a document; it is too sentimentalized and much too contrived a fiction for that. But it is told with great earnestness, out of a store of plainly authentic detail, and it manages to fill in a life-size portrait of the wartime woman from her enlistment, out of the warmth of home, to her close intimacy with fatigue, frustration, and fear." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:43 O 19 '46 600w

"Another of those simple, honest war-time novels skillfully aimed at keeping the record straight. . . Miss Baur functions better as a fact-finder than as a novelist. This is Goodbye is pleasantly encyclopedic rather than narrative and its parts, summed up, are greater than the whole. But this is how it was." F. W. Bullock

Weekly Book Review p24 My 5 '46 550w

BAXTER, JAMES PHINNEY. Scientists against time. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 473p il maps $5 Little

507.2 U.S. Scientific research and development, Office of. World war, 1939-1945—Science. Scientists 46-7204

"This is the official history of what scientists, organized in the Office of Scientific Research and Development, did to help win the war and to transform all warfare. In it President Baxter of Williams College recounts all the stages of organization, the obstacles overcome, the weapons developed and their final success in combat." (Weekly Book Review) Index.

"'Scientists Against Time' is a monumental record of the organization, the money, the men, the co-operation and opposition of brass, in the greatest scientific and engineering undertaking of all time. Treating with a remarkably objective eye the work of the enemy as well as ourselves, and disclosing many facts until now kept secret, Dr. Baxter's volume is an invaluable, as well as entertaining, source of information." Rufus Oldenburger

+ Book Week p2 N 17 '46 550w

Booklist 43:96 D 1 '46

Reviewed by R. B. Seymour

Chem & Eng N 25:52 Ja 6 '47 350w

"It is a book such as could be written only by a professional historian actually on the scene of the events. It covers everything of moment that could be crammed into 473 pages, including that fateful June day of 1940 when the President, his Cabinet, the chiefs of the armed services, and a small knot of research men anxiously took stock of American defenses to find the United States at least two years behind the Germans in a race for new weapons of war." H. B. N.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 1 '46 500w

"Done in vivid and interesting terms."

+ Kirkus 14:477 S 15 '46 170w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1626 N 15 '46 70w

"If the book were only a historical record of war research and a clear description of our newer war implements, it would serve a useful purpose. But it is more. Every page raises the obvious question, why should the demonstrated advantages of coöperative planning in science not be utilized during peace? As they return to the problems put aside during the war, will the scientists forget the fruitfulness of coöperative effort and the personal satisfactions to be derived from the use of science for society? At present, only they have the answer." Milton Mazer

+ New Repub 115:700 N 25 '46 650w

"Mr. Baxter's history of the OSRD is a fine book, obviously one of the most important documents written so far about the war. The author, a historian by training, has a reticent, clear style admirably suited to pin down his refractory material. He has mastered the essentials of an awesome array of subjects, ranging from the physics of radar to the chemistry of blood substitutes. This is Mr. Baxter's main triumph—the translation of a huge block of diverse scientific experience into a reasonably popular idiom." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p8 N 10 '46 1050w

"The author of this fabulous narrative is the president of Williams College. He writes not for the technically educated, but for the technically interested. His field is so immense that, sometimes, he is forced to a mere listing of minor achievements. But the inside story of the major scientific events of the war is well and clearly covered. And the book has two qualities of a particularly dramatic nature—one emphasized, the other as often implied as stated. The first is historical suspense. . . The second dramatic quality is the bitter, ceaseless fight that scientists had to wage with our own military leaders and those of our allies." Philip Wylie

+ Sat R of Lit 29:13 N 23 '46 1000w

"An able historian's record of the first great, planned intrusion into world history of the ancient and oft-forgotten power of science. As such it is one of the most important documents of our time. Its lessons are vital to any future conflict, to international relations and the United Nations, to national policy in peace time—to say nothing of its importance to education and to science itself. These facts and these forces will shape the future years so that no thoughtful citizen can afford to ignore them." Gerald Wendt

+ Weekly Book Review p10 N 3 '46 1200w

BAYKOV, ALEXANDR ALEXANDROVICH.

Development of the Soviet economic system; an essay on the experience of planning in the U.S.S.R. (Nat. inst. of economic and social research. Economic and social studies) 514p $6.50 Macmillan [30s Cambridge]

330.947 Russia—Economic policy. Russia—Economic conditions 46-6158

"The present study is an attempt at an historical introduction to the contemporary economic system of the U.S.S.R., i.e. the system in force in the later pre-war years. It does not profess to be a history of the development of the national economy or of the economic system of the U.S.S.R., because such a history would run into thousands of pages; it is only an historical introduction to the description of the present-day system in its principal aspects and problems. Hence, only those facts in the development of the economy and the system will be mentioned which, in my opinion, must be known in order to understand and rightly appreciate the present-day system and its problems." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"This volume should prove a very useful reference work for scholars in the Russian field. The joint efforts of the author, his translator and editors have not produced a very readable book, but the study should have a place in the growing number of courses offered in this country on the Soviet system." Abram Bergson

+ Am Econ R 36:157 Mr '46 950w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 My 26 '46 90w

Foreign Affairs 25:168 O '46 50w

"The collection of Russian sources which [the author] has absorbed is most impressive and his rendering of it shows him thoroughly at home among the events of his abandoned native country. He is a scholar throughout, and though perhaps more concerned with Blue-books than with the life behind them, he is never a mere compiler of documents. At any rate, the documents are so clearly and fully compiled that on that account alone the book merits a permanent position. In the years to come in which the study of Soviet affairs will be one of the main hopes for finding a path of reconciliation between East and West this book will be in constant use. It will become a standard work of reference." Michael Polanyi + Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 27 '46

BAYKOV, A. A.—Continued
350w

"As books on Russia go, this is a good, if not a brilliant performance, written with a solid factual basis from original sources. All serious students of the subject will find it valuable. Like all books on Russia, it leaves a great many questions unanswered: the reader who lives and moves in the atmosphere of the Western world finds it difficult to penetrate beyond the abstractions and organizations to the real people who presumably live underneath them." Kenneth Boulding

+ — Nation 163:102 J1 27 '46 1000w

"In this book, Mr. Baykov has set himself the task of reviewing systematically the 'general course of development of the entire national economy' from the Revolution to the outbreak of the war. The result, I believe, is at once the most objective and the most authoritative work yet to appear in English on the subject. It must be admitted that 'The Development of the Soviet Economic System' is not easy reading; not only is it crammed full of facts and figures—drawn, incidentally, entirely from first-hand sources—but also the organization and presentation are pedantic and uninspired. Moreover, Mr. Baykov is not given to generalization, preferring to hope that the material presented will enable the reader to draw his own conclusions and generalizations. For these reasons, added to the absurdly high price for which the volume sells, the work is unlikely to be widely read outside of a small group of specialists; and even in the case of economists and historians who have a keen interest in Soviet developments, it will probably be regarded primarily as a valuable reference work to be consulted on need but not to be studied from beginning to end." P. M. Sweezy

+ — New Repub 114:937 J1 1 '46 1500w

Reviewed by Maurice Dobb

New Statesman & Nation 31:214 Mr
23 '46 950w

"Dr. Alexander Baykov has written a completely impersonal, unprejudiced book on Soviet Russia. His 475-page, fact-packed 'essay,' as he calls it, is devoid of any bias on the part of the author. But I hasten to add that it is for patient, plodding economic experts only. . . But the whole book is disembodied because it divorces the economic workings of the Soviet system from politics. . . To ignore politics, leaders, and people in a study of any phase of Soviet life is to overlook the substance for the paper wrapping. The truth about Russia cannot be found in published official reports on the mechanics of industrial management." Louis Fischer

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:27 Je 8 '46 450w

Reviewed by Walter Taplin

Spec 176:200 F 15 '46 750w

"A much deeper and far more critical investigation will have to be made if our justified curiosity about the Soviet economic system is to be satisfied. But this does not reduce the value of the work done by Mr. Baykov where he deals with the purely administrative aspects of the planning machinery; his historical narrative in that respect is most explicit and fully documented."

Times [London] Lit Sup p380 Ag 10 '46
850w

BAYNES, DOROTHY JULIA (DORMER CRESTON, pseud). In search of two characters; some intimate aspects of Napoleon and his son. 402p 11 $5 Scribner [18s Macmillan]

B or 92 Napoléon I, emperor of the French. Bonaparte, François Charles Joseph, herzog von Reichstadt, known as Napoléon II

[45-10407]

A study of Napoleon, the man, aside from his military and political life, and of his son, the King of Rome. In the course of her portrayal of Napoleon and his son the author brings out some new angles on the characters of Marie-Louise, and Napoleon's jaller at St Helena, Sir Hudson Lowe. Index.

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 8 '46
700w

"Miss Creston's narrative is absorbing. She makes great use of the memoirs of those about Napoleon, especially of the women, of Hortense de Beauharnais, the Duchesse D'Abrantes, and Madame de Rémusat; but her book is far from being an affair of scissors and paste, for her own shrewd comment is always there to illuminate the pages. The result is one of extraordinary intimacy with the past: not only Napoleon himself, but the whole domestic background at La Malmaison." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 24 '45
700w

Current Hist 12:61 Ja '47 50w

Manchester Guardian p3 O 19 '45 240w

"A work that deserves to be popular. Miss Creston is on occasion licentious in her syntax . . . and she can be too 'poetical'—at least, for my taste. Otherwise, her writing is uncommonly pleasant. I notice one odd inaccuracy: Miss Creston has confused the Princess Lieven with the Duchesse de Dino. I am greatly struck by Miss Creston's shrewdness in assessing character. . . Miss Creston's book goes to support the view that women are usually better judges of character than men, for within the limits she has chosen I know of no more acute modern estimate of Napoleon's character." Raymond Mortimer

+ — New Statesman & Nation 30:232 O 6 '45
1300w

"Of reading books about Napoleon there is apparently no end. This latest one, by an Englishwoman, has the merit of clarity and unpretentiousness. It aims at no original interpretation; it wisely eschews sentimental details on the King of Rome, the dramatic episodes of Napoleon's loves, oft-told tales of the warrior's campaigns. It adds little to our knowledge of Napoleon, but provides smooth and pleasant reading." Henri Peyre

+ — N Y Times p4 S 15 '46 600w

Reviewed by Jane Volles

San Francisco Chronicle p6 D 1 '46
250w

"A description mainly in adjectives of a man who expressed himself in nouns and verbs. This continual dodging of everything universal or adamant or magnificent in Napoleon's career is extremely tiresome, and the more so because Miss Creston's style is too luscious, and her translations of Napoleon's talk into English have a 'ho, prihee' effect which is most disconcerting. The story of the Duke of Reichstadt is more within Miss Creston's range, though even here too much attention is given to the stage scenery. In fact, the general impression left by the book is rather like that of the late Sir Beerbohm Tree's productions of Shakespeare."

+ — Spec 175:346 O 12 '45 180w

"The style is brilliant in a manner which is perhaps somewhat less popular than it was a few years ago. It is in general good of its kind, but writers of this school are apt to become so fascinated with ornament that they put on too much, like a woman who grows reckless about cosmetics."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p20 Ja 12 '46
850w

Reviewed by Felizia Seyd

Weekly Book Review p8 S 8 '46 700w

BEACH, REX ELLINGWOOD. World in his arms. 214p $2 Putnam

46-5471

A fur poacher from Boston is the hero; a beautiful Russian countess, fleeing from an elderly suitor, is the heroine. The scene is San Francisco and Russian Alaska in the 1850's.

Book Week p8 O 13 '46 70w

Booklist 43:69 N 1 '46

"The ramifications of the fur trade and its part in opening up northern frontiers, with well preserved romantic trimmings."

+ Kirkus 14:258 J 1 '46 130w

"A completely satisfying piece of romance, intrigue and adventure which, while using a large amount of historical free-wheeling, does give a substantial picture of fur sealing and the opening up of Alaska in the 1850s. Has makings of a good class B movie with plenty of masculine appeal." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 71:977 J1 '46 120w

"This is Rex Beach's first novel in nearly seven years, and Beach enthusiasts will be delighted to learn that his talent has not noticeably matured. They will find the Rex Beach world of gorgeous gals and muscular men just about as perfect as it always has been." R. M.

N Y Times p10 Ag 25 '46 300w

"As the story was written primarily for the movies, the love scenes are typically Hollywood, sometimes more ridiculous than sublime." P. H. Bickerton

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 4 '46 240w

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN. American foreign policy in the making, 1932-1940; a study in responsibilities. 336p $4 Yale univ. press

$27.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—Foreign policy. Roosevelt, Franklin Delano

A46-19

"What Mr. Beard examines is the process leading to the participation of the United States in the second World War. He calls it 'a study in responsibilities.' What do we learn about these responsibilities from this book? It is an account of programs, pronouncements and measures of foreign policy, and particularly of the words and deeds of President Roosevelt." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by J. M. Mathews
Am Pol Sci R 40:1189 D '46 1050w

Reviewed by Willard Shelton
Book Week p6 Ag 18 '46 700w
Booklist 43:12 S '46
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '46

Reviewed by Edward Skillin
Commonweal 44:505 S 6 '46 1350w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook
Current Hist 11:325 O '46 1000w
Foreign Affairs 25:340 Ja '47 100w

"The book is not easy reading. It is largely a book for the record. It is primarily a book for those who want an historian and a scholar to substantiate their convictions with line and verse. For Mr. Beard's conclusions seem to be these. . . Every point made, considered, argued he has supported by direct quotation. Would it not be possible for those who interpret Mr. Roosevelt's leadership differently to find as telling quotations backing the other view of the subject?"

Kirkus 14:313 J1 1 '46 280w

"Recommended as a good 'study in responsibilities.'" Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 71:1046 Ag '46 130w

Reviewed by A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.
Nation 163:244 Ag 31 '46 1900w

"The work itself is disappointing because Beard the historian has not plumbed the matter as deeply as available information would permit, and because Beard the commentator, who in the past did not hesitate to state forthrightly his isolationist views, does not offer conclusions that make clear his purpose in writing the book." Blair Bolles

New Repub 115:268 S 2 '46 1550w

"The account is factual and well documented. It might seem as though Mr. Beard were letting the facts speak for themselves. But Mr. Beard knows well enough that the facts never speak for themselves. They are never given, but always selected, and in the selection there is always construction. They speak according to the vision of the historian. And among those who, like this reviewer, hold a high regard for Mr. Beard and for his achievements, there will be many who will reluctantly conclude that in this work the vision is narrowed." R. M. MacIver

N Y Times p4 Ag 18 '46 1600w

"The author carefully keeps his own opinions out of his book. He deals solely with the public statements of public men on foreign policy, showing how these men's statements (though perhaps not their opinions) changed with the exigencies of the times. It is probably one of the meanest things a man could do to his fellow-men, and one that should be done more often. All of this satisfies Mr. Beard (and seemingly that is why he wrote the book) that neither the isolationists nor the American people as a whole were 'responsible' for the war."

New Yorker 22:71 Ag 24 '46 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 S 1 '46 170w

"Usually there is no doubt what Charles A. Beard thinks on any subject he writes about. This book is an exception. One puts it down with the sense that Mr. Beard has something in mind which he regards as very important but that he is not quite ready to say it in clear and understandable terms." T. K. Finletter

Sat R of Lit 29:9 Ag 17 '46 1150w

"Whether one does or does not agree with Dr. Beard's conclusions regarding the authorship of American foreign policy, one cannot but admire the degree of documentation and mass of data which, marshalled in support of his thesis, he places before the reader. . . Unfortunately, Dr. Beard has chosen for illustrative purposes a decade of personalities—men like Wendell Willkie, Cordell Hull, and Franklin Roosevelt—whose living influence, still strongly felt, is a barrier to the complete objectivity of the reader, and sometimes obscures the point which the author seeks to make."

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:318 D '46 280w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton

Weekly Book Review p3 S 1 '46 1260w

Wis Lib Bul 42:146 N '46

Reviewed by G. A. Craig

Yale R n s 36:369 winter '47 900w

BEARD, MARY (RITTER) (MRS CHARLES AUSTIN BEARD). Woman as force in history; a study in traditions and realities. 369p $3.50 Macmillan

396 Woman—History and condition 46-1638

"Begins with Women's Rights movement, aroused by misconception of Blackstone's Commentaries. Common law, equity and legislative statutes discussed as actually affecting woman's legal status, followed by section citing failure of professional historians in even mentioning women who were outstanding leaders in their eras. Last half devoted to women as forceful influences in civilization from ethnic groups to modern times. Fascinating portraits of great and near great, long needed for reality in recorded history. Legal introduction may deter many who would find text most valuable and be captivated by vivid background history of women philosophers of Greece, chateaines of the Middle Ages and brilliant hostesses of 18th Century salons of France. Extensive well-organized bibliographies." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by E. D. Ellis

Am Pol Sci R 40:614 Je '46 450w

Reviewed by J. P. Nichols

Ann Am Acad 248:300 N '46 500w

Reviewed by Margaret Mead

Book Week p6 Mr 24 '46 550w

Booklist 42:242 Ap 1 '46

Bookmark 7:4 My '46

"This is a scholarly book, well organized and well written. In places, the weight of the argument becomes a trifle oppressive, yet it is a book which thoughtful people will enjoy. Its significance lies in the influence which it may be expected to have on historical thought and organization. It would seem reasonable to prophesy that no sound historian of the future will neglect the role of women, as was done in the past." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 17 '46 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46

"This book is as scholarly as you would expect any work of Dr. Mary Beard's to be. It is also, unfortunately, ponderous in content." L. V. Vila

+ — Commonweal 44:53 Ap 26 '46 210w

BEARD, MARY—Continued

Foreign Affairs 25:162 O '46 20w

"A book primarily for historians and sociologists—scarcely for the general lay public."
Kirkus 13:556 D 15 '46 180w

"Recommended." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 15 '46 140w

Reviewed by Mildred Adams

Nation 162:603 My 18 '46 550w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard

New Repub 114:514 Ap 15 '46 1150w

Reviewed by J. H. Hexter

N Y Times p5 Mr 17 '46 1050w

"A bright and learned treatise that is only occasionally tiresome and talky,"
+ — New Yorker 22:93 Mr 30 '46 140w

"Mrs. Beard touches on many phases of woman's activity and suggests matters which can be more fully developed. This should have an especial appeal to the social historian of whatever period. Women's economic, social, educational and intellectual activities in the Middle Ages are treated with considerable detail. An expansion of the section on western social philosophy should prove particularly interesting. At moments the listing of individual women and their achievements suggests a catalogue overmuch but these data may be needed to show the fullness of women's rôle in periods under discussion." M. S. Benson
+ Pol Sci Q 61:299 Je '46 750w

Reviewed by Ella Winter

Sat R of Lit 29:20 Mr 30 '46 900w

Reviewed by C. K. Bausman

Spring'd Republican p4d My 5 '46 550w

"In some places, such as in the discussion of the views of Sir William Blackstone (the villain of this book) on the Common Law, and in the examination of the property rights of English women during medieval times, the weight of the argument becomes rather oppressive. In general, however, it is a timely, significant, and scholarly volume which will appeal to many thoughtful people; and a book which may well influence both our present thinking and our reinterpretation of the past." R. A. Brown
+ — Survey G 35:331 S '46 400w

"When Mary Beard starts after you you'd better give up. This indomitable and delightful scholar and propagandist, wife of Charles Beard and co-author with him of various important historical works, has a way with her when she gets on her favorite subject: woman through the ages, as historical fact, and evolving myth. In this latest work Mrs. Beard is intent on setting forth the facts and destroying the myths. She beguiles you with humor and belabors you with detail until you feel you may as well cry 'uncle'—or 'aunt'—and admit that she has made her points, or most of them. . . Her splendid, admirably documented work should be a milestone in our knowledge of women through the ages." Lorine Pruette
+ Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 17 '46 900w

Wis Lib Bul 42:70 My '46

BEATTIE, EDWARD WILLIAM. Diary of a kriegle. 312p il $3 Crowell

940.547243 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 46-2286

The author, an internationally known American newspaper correspondent, was captured at Chaumont-sur-Marne in September, 1944. He thought he was about to witness the Nazi collapse, so his capture was something of a surprise. He was sent to Limburg, Berlin, and Luckenwalde, before his final release. His diary of his prison experiences is illustrated with his own sketches.

Reviewed by O. J. Hale

Ann Am Acad 248:304 N '46 250w

Reviewed by Joe Fromm

Book Week p4 Ap 14 '46 450w

Booklist 42:263 Ap 15 '46

Bookmark 7:8 N '46

Foreign Affairs 24:747 Jl '46 20w

"A diary written from secretly kept notes . . . by a UP correspondent captured between the lines in the American sweep through France. . . Here is human interest, careful, intelligent observation."
+ Kirkus 14:57 F 1 '46 150w

"In spots it is a fill-in on German pre-collapse conditions and thought; the rest of the time it is one man's interesting and frequently humorous story, done with words and pencil sketches." Austin Stevens
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 24 '46 550w

"His diary is interesting much of the time; if on occasion it gets monotonous, he can hardly be blamed. Unskilled but amusing drawings by the author, done behind barbed wire."

New Yorker 22:94 Mr 30 '46 130w

"'Diary of a Kriegle' makes very interesting reading now because it contains a great deal of valuable information about the moral and military disintegration within the Third Reich before the Nazi collapse. And it has suspense, action, and humor. Mr. Beattie, however, rarely searches deeper than most reporters who are mainly interested in the who, what, where, and when of a story." H. B. Kranz
+ — Sat R of Lit 29:15 My 18 '46 400w

"Though marred by an excessive number of typographical errors, the book is a good source for details of prison camp life in Germany. But its primary value lies in the information it contains about Germany during the darkest days of the Third Reich." R. K. Welsh
Survey G 35:332 S '46 360w

"Because he knew Germans and because he is a good reporter, Beattie's diary is more than a recital of things seen and of hardships endured. It delves into the things that Hitler and war did to the German people. This 'kriegle' is also a cartoonist of no mean ability. He has enriched his book with forty-six full-page drawings, done with humor and expressiveness." Louis Azrael

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 31 '46 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 42:72 My '46

BEATTY, JOHN. Memoirs of a volunteer, 1861-1863; ed. by Harvey S. Ford; introd. by Lloyd Lewis; il. by Howard W. Willard. 317p $3.50 Norton

973.781 U.S.—History—Civil war—Personal narratives

This diary by a Northern soldier was originally published in Ohio in 1879. "It is here reproduced just as it was first published, with the addition of explanatory footnotes, some corrections in the spelling of proper names, and some slight changes in organization." (Pref)

Reviewed by R. B. Nye

Book Week p4 D 22 '46 500w

"One of the few authentic, unromanticized records of a much romanticized war, records with candor, simplicity and realism the experiences in Volunteer Infantry."
+ Kirkus 14:534 O 15 '46 90w

"Harvey S. Ford, a veteran artilleryman himself, has edited this new edition of General Beatty's book skillfully. His explanatory footnotes are well-mustered and succinct. The biographical notes at the back of the book include a rich detail of figures varying from Carl Schurz, the German revolutionary, through General Grant and Joe Wheeler." J. S. Pennell
+ N Y Times p3 D 22 '46 750w

"The diary is well edited and Lloyd Lewis has written a rather too extravagant introduction. He believes that the diary 'belongs to all time' and is modern enough 'to find kinsmen in plenty' among present-day readers. Whether that is correct or not, no one can deny that here is one of the most pleasing diaries produced by the Civil War—one that combines much of humor with more of common-sense observation." Avery Craven
+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ja 5 '47 1150w

BEATY, JOHN YOCUM. Ocean book. 240p il $1.35 Beckley-Cardy

551.46 Ocean—Juvenile literature 46-5446

Two boys and their uncle explore the oceans of the world, to learn about the animal, plant, and bird life, and the tides and volcanoes in the ocean. Photographs. For grades five to eight. Index.

School & Society 64:31 J1 13 '46 20w

Wis Lib Bul 42:152 N '46

BEAUMONT, HENRY. Psychology of personnel. 306p $2.75 Longmans

658.3 Employment management 45-8818

"Basic principles of personnel problems, the contribution psychology is making in production and stresses such topics as reconversion problems of personnel, disabled war veterans in industry, occupational adjustments and music in industry." (Library J) Indexes.

Library J 71:182 F 1 '46 100w

School & Society 62:223 O 6 '45 20w

BEAUMONT, WILLIAM. William Beaumont's formative years; two early notebooks, 1811-1821; with annotations and an introductory essay by Genevieve Miller. 87p il $6 Schuman's B or 92

"While stationed at an outpost in Michigan, William Beaumont, 1785-1853, seized upon the opportunity of studying the process of digestion in Alexis St. Martin, the victim of an abdominal gunshot wound. Through the report on his findings, the young military surgeon established himself as the leader and pioneer of experimental physiology in America. . . The present volume makes available two of Beaumont's notebooks generally known only through such extracts as are found in Jesse S. Meyer's Life and Letters of Dr. William Beaumont, 1912." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The slim volume tells eloquently a story which is of considerable importance in the history of medicine, and also provides material on the early struggle of the United States and the War of 1812."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:333 D '46 200w

"Miss Miller, of the Johns Hopkins University, supplies a graceful introduction to and also the complete text, uncorrected, of the two notebooks kept by young Beaumont during his formative and early professional years." S. H. Holbrook

+ Weekly Book Review p14 O 13 '46 400w

BEAVEN, ROBERT HADDOW. In Him is life. 188p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

230 Christianity 46-342

"Subtitled 'A Fresh Approach to the Christian Faith,' this little book of 188 pages by the president of the Baptist Missionary Training School of Chicago is an earnest attempt to present a Christian theology freed from both the impossibilities (to the modern mind) of traditional orthodoxy and the too easy possibilities of modernism." Christian Century

Reviewed by H. F. Reissig

Christian Century 63:966 Ag 7 '46 500w

"The author reveals an unusual capacity for reflection. He has a dialectical mind; frequently his motif is thesis-antithesis-synthesis. He has a good style, an aptness in illustration, and has many penetrating and valuable things to say. Had he not begun as a defender of a particular dogma, had the first chapter been dropped and the rest modified accordingly, his book would have been less ingenious and might have approached brilliance." Rowland Gray-Smith

+ Crozer Q 23:291 J1 '46 700w

BECK, FREDERICK K. Second carrot from the end; foreword by H. Allen Smith; il. by Emax. 160p $2 Morrow

817 Los Angeles, Farmers market 46-1202

Articles, mostly humorous, about the Farmers Market in Los Angeles, the things which are sold there, the things people take home from there, and the people themselves. The author writes a daily column for The Los Angeles Times.

Reviewed by Dale Harrison

Book Week p12 Mr 3 '46 360w

Booklist 42:207 Mr 1 '46

"The biography of a beautiful business—and very entertaining."

+ Kirkus 13:540 D 1 '45 200w

"'Second Carrot From the End' is full of major and minor implausibilities, all of them unquestionably true and set down in Mr. Beck's best freehand style, which is genial, humorous, sly and eminently suited to chronicling the history of a farmer's market in a city of Hollywood slickers." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p30 F 24 '46 750w

"The author is a newcomer to the Smith-Wilson-Thompson school of fast and free delivery. . . You're never quite sure when he's being factual and when he's just being a darling old comic."

New Yorker 22:87 Mr 2 '46 80w

"Mr. Beck's writing reflects a sound digestion and a genuine appreciation of Hollywood's flap-doodle and nature's bounty. He could probably get blood out of a turnip." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p18 Mr 10 '46 320w

Wis Lib Bul 42:56 Ap '46

BECKER, CARL LOTUS. Freedom and responsibility in the American way of life; five lectures delivered on the William W. Cook foundation at the Univ. of Mich, Dec. 1944; with an introd. essay by George H. Sabine. 122p $2.50 Knopf

323.44 U.S.—Civilization 45-9854

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"In a long introduction to this, the last of Becker's slender books, Professor Sabine attempts an analysis of the philosophic assumptions of a historian who exerted a marked and even revolutionary influence on the younger generation in the profession. A sympathetic analysis, based upon long association with Becker and corrected by the opinions of colleagues, it is also harsh. Becker would have approved it, because it would have helped him on his endless quest of understanding the intellectual climate of America and his own limitations as a necessary sharer in that climate." Stanley Pargellis

Am Hist R 51:721 J1 '46 850w

"Carl Becker had one of the most urbane, yet penetrating, minds of our time. He had massive common sense and a style of rare felicity. He was not especially original in his views on politics, but he illumined whatever he discussed by placing it in historical perspective, by the wit and irony with which he wrote, and by happy turns of expression. It was often the exquisite detail upon which one came so frequently rather than the main structure of his argument that delighted and rewarded the reader. And so it is with this book." T. P. Pearson

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:138 F '46 550w

Reviewed by C. C. Maxey

Ann Am Acad 244:192 Mr '46 400w

Booklist 42:207 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7:4 Mr '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p1 Ja '46

Reviewed by C. E. Merriam

Pol Sci Q 61:120 Mr '46 1200w

"The book represents the final testament of a statesmanlike scholar, a man who for decades had been noted for the lucidity of his thinking and writing, the objectivity of his conclusions, and for not taking things for granted. Though it may not be Mr. Becker's greatest work,

BECKER, C. L.—Continued
this reviewer believes that in terms of contemporary dangers and problems it is his most significant and timely book." R. A. Brown

+ Survey G 35:132 Ap '46 650w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:125 Je '46 200w

"Becker spoke and wrote in a delightfully supple American Laconic which could bite like a spring-trap when he chose, for example, 'Freedom of speech is for those who are for it.' These final University of Michigan lectures are the old Becker, in part literally as well as figuratively. He took his listeners along his own intellectual pilgrimage from the Declaration of Independence to the Murray-Kilgore Full Employment Bill, drawing explicit attention to the obstacles along the way, but proffering the route which he had worked out through or over (not around) them." J. B. Brebner

+ Yale R n s 35:555 spring '46 700w

BECKER, MRS MAY (LAMBERTON). Adventures in reading. new ed 250p $2 Lippincott
028 Books and reading 46-7303

"The new edition of this 'best' book on reading, addressed to teen-age readers, brings the book lists up to date and has a new chapter 'The books we discover.'" (Wis Lib Bul) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1927.

Booklist 43:87 N 15 '46

Wis Lib Bul 42:171 D '46

BEEBE, CATHERINE (MRS ROBB BEEBE). Pet show; pictures by Robb Beebe. 46p $1.50 Oxford 46-6987

"Billy, Jane Marie and their three friends have fun at the pet show where each one wins a blue ribbon. A story for 2d and 3d graders to read themselves." Wis Lib Bul

Kirkus 14:422 S 1 '46 50w

"It makes a happy easy reading story for beginning readers." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 71:1334 O 1 '46 70w

Wis Lib Bul 42:152 N '46

BEEDEING, FRANCIS, pseud. of JOHN LESLIE PALMER and HILARY AIDAN ST GEORGE SAUNDERS. There are thirteen. 275p $2 Harper
46-2153

Story of the British intelligence service in occupied France, in 1942. General Granby and his able assistant, John Oliver, assume guardianship of an escaped French airman, who lands in England carrying valuable information. From there on, it is one long series of narrow escapes for Oliver.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p12 Mr 10 '46 90w

Booklist 42:300 My 15 '46

Kirkus 14:8 Ja '46 90w

"A representative sample of the work of this author, who has gone quietly along for some time turning out good, brisk spy stuff with no psychological nonsense about it."

+ New Yorker 22:107 Mr 9 '46 100w

"Good spy-stuff."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 Mr 2 '46 40w

Reviewed by V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

Spec 176:516 My 17 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p24 Mr 17 '46

270w

Wis Lib Bul 42:60 Ap '46

BEERBOHM, MAX, and others. G. B. S. 90. See G. B. S. 90

BEERS, HOWARD WAYLAND, ed. Kentucky, designs for her future. 323p il maps $1.35; pa $1 Univ. of Ky.

917.69 Kentucky

45-5468

"This book is presented in thirteen chapters, plus selected readings, and an index. Three chapters are by Doctor Beers; the others, judging by their quality, are by carefully selected persons, assisted by many citizens, agencies, and state departments. These chapters tell about Kentucky history, people, agriculture and forestry, rocks and streams, wild life, industrial resources, commerce, government, education, health and welfare, and goals for Kentucky. Each chapter presents in a concise and readable manner the subject at hand. It reviews the situation as it now exists, and offers many constructive suggestions. Each chapter is an inventory and a chart for the future. While there are supporting data throughout the book, statistics are kept to a minimum." Am Soc R

"This book will rank high among similar volumes to come from other states. It could well be adopted as a pattern for state planning elsewhere, and certainly Kentuckians should read it and profit by adopting it as a guide for the future. The pictures alone are worth the price of the book." S. H. Hobbs

+ Am Soc R 10:808 D '45 350w

"Thoughtful and sympathetic." Nell Whaley

+ Survey 82:27 Ja '46 460w

BEHAN, JOHN M. Dogs of war. [118p] il $3.50 Scribner

356.424 Dogs, War use of 46-1676

"With the aid of numerous photographs and some dispatches written by marine combat correspondents, Mr. Behan explains how household pets and show dogs were converted into weapons and how the weapons were used. . . All the dogs volunteered by proxy through their owners and both photographs and text indicate that the volunteer spirit prevailed among them. Even in Italian mud and South Sea jungles the animals seem to have been kept well groomed and every picture shows them well fed, in fine condition. Some were used as auxiliary sentries, some as scouts, some as messengers, some to hunt out wounded men, some to lay wire and some to drag sledges." Weekly Book Review

Book Week p10 Mr 3 '46 180w

Booklist 42:242 Ap 1 '46

Bookmark 7:10 My '46

Kirkus 14:64 F 1 '46 80w

"Mr. Behan is well equipped for his task for he trained men and dogs for war purposes for three years. The price will prohibit purchase for small book collections, but its subject appeals to young and old." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 71:409 Mr 15 '46 90w

"The most interesting and worth-while part of the book is the collection of photographs which is the pictorial record of the dogs' training and battle service. Few, if any, of these photographs are new to people who followed the newspapers, but the assembly of so many tells the story as it has not been told before. It is a good story—and a story no dog-lover should miss." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 3 '46 400w

"The book will enlighten many who assume that the war dog was used mainly to attack the enemy. Mr. Behan shows that this was but one type of work demanded of the canine soldiers. In addition to the sentry-attack dog are featured the scout dog, the messenger dog, the casualty dog, the wire-laying dog, the pack dog and the sledge dog." Charlena Kibbe

+ Springfield Republican p8 F 27 '46 400w

Reviewed by R. B. Peck

+ Weekly Book Review p16 F 10 '46 550w

BEHRMAN, SAMUEL NATHANIEL. Dunnigan's daughter; a comedy. 184p $2 Random house

812

46-18158

Play in which Ferne, "Dunnigan's daughter," discovers the dangerous power-loving nature of her husband, Clay Rainier, through the efforts of Jim Baird, a state department employee and Miguel Riachi, a Mexican artist.

"Mostly watered-down Behrman but still necessary for all American drama collections." George Freedley

Library J 71:979 J1 '46 10W

"Just what Mr. Behrman is trying to prove in this brittle triangle of a sadistic tycoon, his back-to-fundamentals wife, and a pantheistic painter is probably a puzzle to everyone, including Mr. Behrman. The muddle of the liberal whose heart is obviously in the right place, but whose head aches with too much thinking, has seldom found a more perfect example. The present reviewer closed the slim volume feeling sorry for no one but the playwright." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p8 J1 21 '46 140W

"It has always been Mr. Behrman's method to mask a large general idea behind his suave dialogue and comedy of individuals. In this play the idea is evident, but the masking dialogue is tenuous and the story a bit on the dull side." W. P. Eaton

Weekly Book Review p21 S 15 '46 90W

BEIM, JERROLD, and CRICHLAW, ERNEST. Twelve o'clock whistle. [61p] il $2 Morrow 46-20646

A little boy whose father worked in an automobile factory went to visit one day, because his father had forgotten his lunch box. Mitch was escorted around the plant and discovered to his chagrin that Dad did not make automobiles all by himself. But while Dad and Mitch ate the contents of the lunch box the little boy learned a valuable lesson. For second and third graders.

Booklist 43:58 O 15 '46

Kirkus 14:382 Ag 15 '46 90W

Reviewed by M. F. Cox

Library J 71:1544 N 1 '46 80W

Reviewed by Leone Garvey

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 10 '46 110W

"A good, realistic story."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:52 N 9 '46 50W

"Nobody needs to show little children the point of this: Mitch got it at once, and they will." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 6 '46 230W

Wis Lib Bul 42:134 O '46

BEIM, LORRAINE (LEVEY). Triumph clear. 200p $2 Harcourt 46-3638

A young girl, confidently planning on college and a dramatic career, is stricken with infantile paralysis. This is the story of her long struggle against discouragement, and back to health and contentment. The scene is the Georgia Warm Springs foundation. For older girls.

Book Week p16 Je 2 '46 360W

Booklist 42:319 Je 1 '46

Churchman 160:3 N 15 '46 60W

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '46

Kirkus 14:199 Ap 15 '46 130W

"Borders on the sentimental but will be enjoyed by the teen-age girl." A. M. Wetherell

Library J 71:764 My 15 '46 80W

"A somewhat sentimentally written book, with a happy ending sure to be popular with many 12 to 14 year old girls." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p30 My 5 '46 120W

Sat R of Lit 29:31 Ag 10 '46 240W

"The book has an interesting plot and an absorbing element of suspense that makes it read like a short story; also it acquaints the reader with the methods and progress of the foundation." J. E. English

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Ap 26 '46 240W

"This is a spirited story, with real and engaging young folks. It builds up a lifelike impression of life at Warm Springs. But its value is broader than as a study of getting over infantile paralysis. Sooner or later any one may have to face the fact that 'the thing that couldn't happen has occurred,' and something taken for granted as essential would not be there any more. In such a crisis the strong man changes his step and goes on; the weak smother the rest of his life in the mire of self-pity. Marsh is a girl who can change the step." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 21 '46 340W

BEKESSY, EMERY, and HEMBERGER, AN-DREAS. Barabbas; a novel of the time of Jesus; tr. from the German by Richard and Clara Winston. 324p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

Jesus Christ—Fiction

46-7817

Novel of the time of Christ. The central character is Barabbas, the robber who was released by Pilate in place of Jesus. Thruout the book Barabbas is shown as the prototype of hate, as Christ is typical of peace and love. The book ends just after the crucifixion.

Reviewed by Kay Harper

Book Week p14 N 17 '46 320W

Booklist 43:132 Ja 1 '47

"The background is well handled, especially the oppression of the Jews under the Romans, but there's a great deal more imagination and color used in portraying the minor characters, than in building Barabbas himself."

Kirkus 14:436 S 1 '46 130W

"This should take its place among the best of the recent religious novels. Recommended for high school and public libraries." R. J. Hurley

+ Library J 71:1542 N 1 '46 100W

"The story moves bumpily across impediments toward the inevitable climax of the trial of Christ—and it meets that climax magnificently. Mr. Bekessy rises to the occasion with a scene of agony and terror the reader won't soon forget." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p26 N 24 '46 750W

"A vivid, evocative novel." Lorine Pruette

+ Weekly Book Review p12 D 8 '46 700W

BELL, ERIC TEMPLE (JOHN TAINE, pseud). Development of mathematics. 2d ed 637p $5 McGraw

510.9 Mathematics—History

45-10599

"Second edition contains revision of older matter with new material on modern mathematics. A much fuller discussion than in any history of mathematics. Purpose of the book is to show how living mathematics arrived at its present state." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1940.

Booklist 42:229 Mr 15 '46

Library J 70:750 S 1 '45 50W

BELL, ERIC TEMPLE (JOHN TAINE, pseud). Magic of numbers. (Whittlesey house publication) 418p $3.50 McGraw

510.1 Numbers, Theory of. Mathematics—History. Mathematics—Philosophy

46-8012

"Professor Bell's book is a historical account of the great mathematicians and philosophers who, like Pythagoras and Plato, believed that mathematical truth only needed to be discovered. The contrary process, as the author tells us, is that of invention, according to which new mathematical ideas are generated as a direct result of new scientific observations or experiments. To a Platonist, however, a mind sufficiently powerful could deduce all mathematics—and conceivably all basic laws of the physical world—by reasoning alone, unaided by the senses. In the final chapter we find a modern renewal of this ancient dispute." (Weekly Book Review) No index.

Current Hist 12:60 Ja '47 50W

"Replete with incident and bits of human interest, the book should come to life, but it never does. It is arch, talky, and pretentiously learned in spots, so that the reader will find the job of extracting the substance too much of a chore. An interesting subject but the author has muffed it by trying too hard."

BELL, E. T.—Continued

— + Kirkus 14:404 Ag 15 '46 110w

"It is a non-technical account, clearly written and easy to follow even for those who have an understanding of only the simplest arithmetic." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:1331 O 1 '46 60w

"A distinguished interpreter of mathematics for the layman, Dr. Bell has here produced a book in his usual stimulating style that is sure to arouse much discussion." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p56 D 1 '46 230w

"A wide circle of amateur mathematicians will welcome a new book for popular consumption by the author of 'Men of Mathematics.'" D. D. Miller

+ Weekly Book Review p36 D 8 '46 1000w

BELL, HAROLD SILL. American petroleum refining. 3d ed 619p il $7.50 Van Nostrand

665.5 Petroleum refining 45-10607

For earlier editions of this textbook see Book Review Digest, 1923, 1931. "This edition has been prepared to provide a concise summary of the art of petroleum refining in its many and varied phases. During the past decade and between the appearance of the second and this edition, technique has progressed at the most rapid rate in the history of the industry. The purpose of this volume is to combine this information and to make it readily available to the executive, engineer, or employee seeking up-to-date facts. The previous text has been carefully edited in order to eliminate non-essentials in the light of present day practice, yet certain historical and developmental threads have been retained for purposes of record." (Pref to third edition)

"The refining of petroleum has developed over the years into such a vast array of operations and processes, utilizing so many different types of mechanical equipment, that no single volume can hope to cover all phases of the subject adequately or in an authoritative manner. The present volume suffers much from just such an attempt, and it is the reviewer's opinion that a much more acceptable book would have resulted if the space given to the description of processes and to the chemistry of petroleum had been utilized to expand the information given on the more conventional and standardized pieces of mechanical equipment employed in refining." Whitney Weinrich

Chem & Eng N 24:414 F 10 '46 500w

"With a good blend of theory and basic principles, design and process conditions, the overdue third edition of Bell's book becomes one of the best general references of its kind. Because of the breadth of the subject matter covered, the text on any one topic is necessarily brief and elementary. . . Well illustrated with photographic reproductions, flow diagrams, drawings and charts, this book contains as much information as any one volume, non-encyclopedic reference that takes an entire industry, and a very complex one, as its domain."

+ Chem & Met Eng 53:283 F '46 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1135 D 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:60 O '45

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:68 Mr '46 320w

BELL, JANET. Sunday in the park; pictures by Aline Appel. [28p] 85c McBride Picture-story book showing what a small city boy does on his Sunday in the park.

"Bright colorful pictures by Aline Appel will appeal to preschool children and the text is adapted for those of second grade reading ability. Poor binding for library use." A. M. Wetherell

Library J 71:1334 O 1 '46 90w

"The pictures are lively and simple, with touches of green and red; they look young and active." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 14 '46 200w

BELL, THOMAS. There comes a time. 288p $2 50 Little

46-5408

"An urbane, realistic, sociological novel with organized labor background. . . Joel Pane (Panec), married, middle-aged, bank teller feels that he is growing old without knowing life and his relationship to it. He finds this meaning and significance in working for a union of bank employees, taking part in politics and thinking about American democracy." Library J

"Primarily this is a piece of propaganda in a good cause, too obviously contrived to be as convincing as one could wish."

Christian Century 63:1065 S 4 '46 140w

Kirkus 14:229 My 15 '46 190w

Reviewed by H. A. Wooster

Library J 71:977 J1 '46 70w

"A novel that is always dramatic, down-to-earth and brimming with bitter wisdom. . . Thomas Bell has proved more than once that he can write a fine, stinging case history of the underpaid, with no punches pulled. In 'There Comes a Time' the underpaid are beginning to question the status quo—and some of them are actually demanding their rightful share." James MacBride

N Y Times p4 J1 21 '46 500w

"When Mr. Bell is writing about everyday people, he is perceptive and entertaining, but when he takes up the C.I.O., he is just wearisome."

+ New Yorker 22:74 J1 20 '46 120w

"As he did in 'All Brides Are Beautiful,' Mr. Bell handles the husband-wife relationship delightfully. . . Its too bad, it seems to me, that Mr. Bell couldn't have kept this novel moving on this same plane throughout. His theme makes good sense. His handling of Joel's middle-road approach to the day's problem is good. But it seems to me that his desire for verisimilitude when it comes to the details of union organization simply ran away with him." J. H. Jackson

— + San Francisco Chronicle p12 J1 30 '46 300w

Spring'd Republican p4d J1 28 '46 360w

"In its construction, 'There Comes a Time' is a bit confusing, in that the author first shows what manner of a man Joel is in his personal life and relationships, then flashes back in time to tell the whole union story. The cumulative effect, however, is a memorable picture not only of individuals but of the life of groups of people who are so much a part of the functioning of a metropolis that one takes them for granted. In its insight and vigor, as well as its warmth and sincerity, this is an outstanding novel." Mary Ross

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 J1 28 '46 700w

BELLAH, JAMES WARNER. Ward twenty. 160p $2 Doubleday

46-409

"Twenty-four crowded hours in an Army hospital ward for permanently disabled veterans. There is a death, an attempted suicide, an attempted seduction, a marital reconciliation, a spiritual regeneration, and a deal of casual drinking and sex." New Yorker

"This is it. Vivid, poignant, beautiful. And so timely that it is almost timeless. 'Ward 20' should have reached you eight months ago, under another imprint. But the mysterious they or he responsible for final decisions in the firm which originally received the manuscript decided against it after it had already been set in type and advance copies distributed. And now Doubleday does the honorable thing by this fine novel from the pen of a writer qualified, by military experience and sympathetic intensity, for the task. Well they might, just out of business gumption. Because there's hardly a book in the fiction of World War II that you can mention in the same breath." E. D. Branch

+ Book Week p1 Ja 6 '46 1650w

"It is not an easy book to read. Neither is theirs an easy life to live. But—be that as it may—booksellers and librarians are daily facing the problem of a large percentage of readers who don't want war books—who don't want unpleasantness. A vast number of people are going to have to live with the aftermath of war; this is a book that might help other people realize what it means in human terms."

Kirkus 13.477 N 1 '45 250w

"Intense with accumulated emotions, crude passions, questings of the soul, this novel of twenty-four hours in an Army hospital will teach reticent readers to accept battle-scarred veterans with wiser understanding. Tough, sometimes ruthless because the brutalities of war have developed hitherto dormant instincts, these men grope for spiritual, mental and physical aids to strengthen them for their coveted civilian life in which they may learn how to 'belong' again. Recommended for adults." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 70:1189 D 15 '45 90w

"For all its impact, this is not a Grade-A novel. When you have put it aside and thought it over, you will remember that the author has also spent a profitable lifetime as a slick paper serialist. A too-facile style is constantly on tap, compromising his realism in favor of standard melodrama. Yet Mr. Bellah (a veteran of the first World War, an Air Force colonel in the second) is writing from the heart out. His book is a grim reminder of the price American youth has paid—and must go on paying—for today's fumble at a decent world." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 13 '46 850w

"Mr. Bellah is a competent storyteller with a swift, at times almost too swift, pace, but he knows his subject. This book should be of special interest to civilians seeking to alleviate the bitterness of men like these."

New Yorker 21:89 Ja 12 '46 80w

"If this is a shocking book, it is because it admits frankly the facts that most of us would avoid facing: that hospitals are sex-charged places full of the pressures of unfulfilled and unfulfillable yearnings, that the blind do develop remarkably acute tactile senses, that even the most carefully paragraphed edicts of military and medical martinets cannot keep all the paths to backrooms and dark lawns patrolled by MP's. There are many who will gag at Bellah's frank and unexpurgated capture of the language of Ward Twenty. There are those who will want to close their eyes to these, as to other, facts of life. And there are some who will read this book furtively, looking for the lurid passages. . . . But there are many, I hope, who will see far more in this book than a dozen intertwined tales of lust among the limbless. . . . If only a few of us learn that rehabilitation—stupid word—is not some special form of social work to be carried on by our deputies, Jim Bellah will have done much indeed for all veterans and for the consciences of all the rest of us" A. Q. Maisel

Sat R of Lit 29:11 F 9 '46 1050w

"Mr. Bellah's prose is uneven. He strives too hard for crude realism in his GI dialog, seldom achieves it. He can turn a sparkling phrase. . . . And he can spoil an effect by overdoing. . . . 'Ward 20' crowds too many lives into its brief and static framework. There is such a profusion of faces that few have depth and substance. The absence of a central character only exaggerates the absence of plot." Harry Daum

+ Springf'd Republican p4d F 3 '46 550w

"For those heavily laden with anxiety about sex, the frank exposition of passion may prove discomfiting. For those who have understanding to give in the service of the blind, the dismembered, the disillusioned and weary, this book cannot help but add objective sympathy and constructive understanding."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:179 S '46 280w

"'Ward Twenty' reflects a strange fellowship of mockery and genuine, intensely masculine sympathy. In the act of making fun of one another, they are trying to bolster their group morale, pretending not to show their joy in the little gains of strength, the minor triumphs of handicapped and broken bodies. The room in which they live so intimately takes on the atmosphere of a recreation hall or a club; sometimes the members can forget that it is also a place of suffering. Mr. Bellah conveys this only indirectly, but with all the greater eloquence because of that. . . . 'Ward Twenty' is a grim story with which to greet the year, but it honestly and inescapably faces up to the facts as fiction is entitled to present them." George Conrad

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ja 13 '46 300w

BELLAIRS, GEORGE. Death in the night watches. 223p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Gifford] 46-8057

Detective story.

Booklist 43:171 F 1 '47

Kirkus 14:361 Ag 1 '46 90w

"The sleuthing is anything but brilliant, and the same may be said of the writing." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p48 D 8 '46 140w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 1 '46 70w

"Careful clue-by-clue detecting enlivened by maundering of elephantine herd of country constables. Cleverly framed solution has sardonic terminal twist."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 N 30 '46 50w

"If you happen to pick the right fiend too early in the game, you still don't know how or why. Story closes with a hunk of meldon-drama for lovers of action. The rest is an impressive lot of deducing in easy-to-read form, a treat among the imported puzzles." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p48 N 24 '46 230w

BELLINI, GIOVANNI. [Paintings and drawings] by Philip Hendy and Ludwig Goldscheider. (Phaidon press bk) 34p il 122pl $6.50 Oxford

759.5 Paintings, Italian. Drawings A46-15

Contains about a hundred and twenty plates, five of them in color, showing the works of the best-known of the three Bellinis. There is a critical estimate of his life and work by Philip Hendy, and an index of collections in Europe and America.

Booklist 42:368 J1 15 '46

Reviewed by David Burnham

Commonweal 45:73 N 1 '46 850w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 11 '46 60w

"This book seems as thorough a survey of his work as could be made, and the text, while a little awkward, is illuminating and authoritative."

+ New Yorker 22:80 Je 29 '46 60w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. The servile state; with an introd. by Christian Gauss. Am ed 189p $2.50 Holt

330.1 Collectivism. Capitalism. Great Britain—Economic policy 46-6995

This is the first American edition of a work published in England in 1912. It contains "a review of capitalism and socialism or collectivism with the purpose of showing that both lead to a servile state. Belloc maintains that in both systems the bulk of the people do not control the 'means of production,' thus creating what he calls the servile state. By servile he implies that most of the people must sell their labor or starve. Although the two systems do not strive for the same ends they nevertheless bring about a similar condition because the mass of the people do not have control in either case." Library J

"No student of political science was unfamiliar with the English edition. It has attained the position of a classic work in the field. It is both the strength and the weakness of Belloc that he is able to simplify causes and effects in history. The strength lies in his noting causes very often overlooked or forgotten; the weakness in his exaggeration of both the causes and the effects. His reasoning is always clear and logical and his presentation forceful, almost defiant." J. G. Kerwin

BELLOC, HILAIRE—Continued
+ Book Week p12 O 20 '46 360w

Booklist 43:82 N 15 '46

Commonweal 45:98 N 8 '46 40w

"A valuable, thought-provoking document."

+ Kirkus 14:517 O 1 '46 210w

"An appraisal gives insufficient space to do this book justice. Recommended for general purchase." Wayne Kalenich

+ Library J 71:1327 O 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Dwight MacDonald

Nation 163:664 D 7 '46 1350w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p10 N 24 '46 1000w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres

Weekly Book Review p20 N 3 '46 1150w

BELPRE, PURA. The tiger and the rabbit, and other tales; ill. by Kay Peterson Parker. 119p $1.75 Houghton

398 Folklore—Puerto Rico 46-25072

A collection of gay nonsense tales from Puerto Rico, retold by a native of that country. For ages nine to eleven.

Booklist 42:249 Ap 1 '46

"While the stories are not all wholly new in theme, they are attractively presented and have an authentic Latin-American flavor." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:133 Mr '46 70w

"Adult folk material enthusiasts will find them fresh and interesting, with authentic notes."

+ Kirkus 14:104 F 15 '46 90w

"A good collection for the storyteller and for the children's own reading." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 71:487 Ap 1 '46 40w

"The stories are fresh and unusual and Miss Belpre has set them down in a dramatic, animated form. Boys and girls from nine to twelve will take delight in this compact little volume and story tellers will welcome it gratefully."

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 24 '46 90w

"In spite of the paper, which is poor in quality and color, this is an attractive little book. The drawings, printed in red and green, are amusing and lively and good in their characterization. This is a book for storytellers to share with boys and girls everywhere. There is no time limit to its value. It is a new record of old tales that are filled with drama and beauty and laughter." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:55 Ap 20 '46 500w

Spring'd Republican p4d My 5 '46 120w

"As in all folklore, the customs of the people, the climate, the food, the ways of living, the measure of wit, the very philosophy of life are all a fascinating part of the stories. Some of the stories, such as the one which gives the book its title, share a common heritage with Uncle Remus, with Grimm, and other familiar sources. . . . The stories come easily to the tongue for telling, and have the feeling of having been written down as they were heard. The book would be much improved by better proofreading and the poor quality of the paper upon which it is printed robs the illustrations of much of their effectiveness." F. C. Sayers

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 24 '46 350w

Wis Lib Bul 42:83 Je '46

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG. Hotel Bemelmans. 380p ill $3 Viking

818 Hotels, taverns, etc. 46-6964

Thirty-six stories of life in a big hotel, including all the stories from two of the author's earlier books: Life Class, and Hotel Splendide (Book Review Digest 1938 and 1941).

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 178:154 N '46 330w

"Hotel Bemelmans' is not a book to be read straight through. Like the afterdinner mint that tops off a satisfying meal, or the steaming cup of coffee that lifts sagging spirits at the end of a day, each tale is a separate treat." June Johnston

+ Book Week p6 S 8 '46 500w

Booklist 43:134 Ja 1 '47

Kirkus 14:305 Jl 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Robert Warshaw

Nation 163:529 N 9 '46 1100w

"Being a satirical and rather sardonic romanticist, Mr. Bemelmans is able to make his hotel and its staff both real and dramatically colorful, hilarious and sagely human; the stories themselves are sympathetic, ironic, humorously detached, yet with a fine strangeness in their proportions. There can be no doubt by now that his is one of the original talents of current American letters." Richard Watts

+ N Y Times p5 S 8 '46 1000w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 16 '46 300w

"Anybody who carps at a new Bemelmans book is no friend of mine, but 'Hotel Bemelmans' isn't exactly new. It consists of 33 old stories and three new ones. . . . They are, of course, very good stories, but they are already in perfectly satisfactory book form, all published since 1938, which is a little recent for exhumation. The three new stories are good, too, but they make a pretty shaky peg on which to hang a whole new book." Jack Iams

Sat R of Lit 29:17 S 28 '46 360w

Time 48:114 S 30 '46 60w

"His style, to borrow one of his own similes, is as light as a soufflé, fluffy and warm. Lots of funny things happen in hotels. Mr. Bemelmans recalls some of these incidents with the delight of a piquant raconteur. Through his pages slip good waiters and surly, clumsy ones, nice guests and naughty ones. There are broken commandments as well as broken dishes. A gay insight is given into both the tricks and tribulations of the hotel trade, from the plumbers shop deep in the fourth basement to the house florists' conservatory up on the roof." Edward Angly

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 8 '46 1000w

BENEDEK, THERESE (FRIEDMANN). Insight and personality adjustment; a study of the psychological effects of war. 307p $4 Ronald

355.115 War—Psychological aspects 46-6681

"Written as guide for nonmedical counselors. Covers some of the basic problems and concepts of psychiatry as well as the particular problems of the soldier while in the army, of his family at home without him, and of the return to family life." (Am J Soc) Index.

Am J Soc 52:379 Ja '47 50w

"This is a mature and timely work, and should be of value to students in a wide variety of fields as well as to the 'psychological counselors' to whom it is primarily directed."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:322 D '46 280w

BENEDICT, MRS RUTH (FULTON). Chrysanthemum and the sword; patterns of Japanese culture. 324p $3 Houghton

915.2 Japan—Civilization. National characteristics, Japanese 46-11843

Study of Japanese culture and behavior by an American anthropologist, who during World war II worked for the office of war information. "Dr. Benedict examines every aspect of Japanese life and thought—the rigidly codified concepts of proper station in the social system, the national piety, the rituals of social intercourse, and so on—and presents a mass of new material. Her book should help to explain, though without justifying, some of the attitudes which we encountered as an enemy of Japan and which we must contend with during the occupation." (New Yorker) Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by S. I. Hayakawa

Book Week p1 D 8 '46 1150w

Booklist 43:131 Ja 1 '47

"This meticulous anthropological study of Japanese character suffers from one grave drawback: the author has never been to Japan. As a result, it has a bookish quality that puts it at a long remove from the realities of present-day Japan. This obvious limitation escapes Dr. Benedict's supposedly trained eye. In the last chapter, she writes an unhesitating paean of praise to American occupation policy. . . One must regretfully record of Dr. Benedict, for all the carefulness of her work, that, having seen all, she has seen nothing." Robert Peel

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 16 '46 360w

"A student of cultural patterns has given us, in this provocative and unusual book, the first sociological interpretation of the Japanese which gives us insight into their conduct of life, their attitudes and behaviours—factors which make the Japanese what they are—in terms the layman can understand. . . An illuminating interpretation of immediate import and permanent value."

+ Kirkus 14:474 S 15 '46 250w

"Libraries that found author's Race, Science and Politics a valuable addition will not be disappointed in this scholarly but simple and illuminating study for the general reader. Recommended." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 71:1460 O 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Ronté Duran

New Repub 116:38 Ja 6 '47 1500w

"Miss Benedict, accustomed to dealing with primitive peoples, had to project the behavior patterns of a civilized people in a form simple enough to be intelligible. She had to circumvent the arrogant, racist attitude that no foreigner can understand things Japanese. She had to discount the subjective bias of occidental observers, whether they were romantic travelers, acquisitive traders, or Old Japan Hands whose integrity had been corrupted by the ease of oriental living. And she had to rely heavily on American-born Japanese. The resulting picture is not the one to be seen in Japanese homes and streets and villages today; it is the picture of which one still catches a glimpse in the traditional kabuki plays and of which Japanese intellectuals sometimes talk nostalgically. . . This list of discrepancies could be greatly extended. . . But for the present, because it pictures a Japan that exists more in tradition than in reality, Miss Benedict's book must be considered to be primarily of historical interest." Harold Strauss

N Y Times p4 N 24 '46 1050w

"A scholarly and fascinating study."

+ New Yorker 22:126 N 23 '46 100w

Reviewed by Mark Starr

+ Sat R of Lit 29:11 D 14 '46 800w

Social Studies 38:48 Ja '47 10w

"This is a book of the utmost significance and one that could herald a new approach to international relations." Erna Fergusson

+ Weekly Book Review p3 D 1 '46 2150w

BENESCH, OTTO. Art of the renaissance in northern Europe; its relation to the contemporary spiritual and intellectual movements. 174p il $7.50 Harvard univ. press

709.4 Art, Renaissance. Art—Europe. Renaissance A46-301

"A series of eight lectures delivered in 1944 by Otto Benesch at the Lowell Institute in Boston. Based on studies of the late Max Dvořák and the author's own discoveries, it is an account of the main stylistic developments of the sixteenth-century painting of Germany, Holland, Flanders, and France. It is a discussion of a basic dualism brought about by the struggles of individuals like Dürer to understand and practice the Renaissance art of Italy, and the inevitable reactions, through medieval survivals and revivals." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The real achievement of Dr. Benesch's book seems to me to be that it makes available an amazing variety of material out of which insight into basic attitudes can be built. The book is a beautiful integration of previous investigations and full of stimulating suggestions and fresh nuances of thought and expression. For the historian, it will have special value not only because it deals with art so that it can be understood in relation to contemporary developments but also because it makes available the conceptions of a school of German thought all too little known in this country." Dayton Phillips

+ Am Hist R 52:111 O '46 1100w

Booklist 42:197 F 15 '46

"An informative and provocative book," Dorothy Adlow

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 27 '46 270w

"The illustrations are excellent, but it is regrettable that there are not nearly enough of them to enable the reader to follow in detail all of Dr. Benesch's conclusions."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:1 Mr '46 360w

BENET, STEPHEN VINCENT. Last circle; stories and poems [introd. by Rosemary Benét]. 309p $3 Farrar

46-11844

A volume of prose and poetry; some fifteen short stories and almost as many poems, none of which have appeared in the author's volumes of collected works. Most of them were written during the last years of his life.

"Such posthumous omnium-gatherums rarely add measurably to an author's reputation and 'The Last Circle' is no exception. But there are pieces in this final volume which not only bring forcefully to mind the memorable tales that Benet had done earlier but also suggest the direction and shape of one of the most original minds in contemporary American letters." J. T. Flanagan

+ — Book Week p1 N 17 '46 1150w

Booklist 43:132 Ja 1 '47

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 30 '46 500w

"The stories, while uneven in interest, are brilliant and so varied that there's something for everyone's taste."

+ Kirkus 14:465 S 15 '46 160w

"There is no single piece in this posthumous collection which will stand up with the best of Stephen Vincent Benét's work; but running all through these stories and poems are suggestions of the spirit and intention, even the manner, of the author's whole, large achievement. The characteristic warmth is here, and the good, ardent appreciation of people as people. Like reaffirmations of notes sounded earlier, one finds here again the dexterous craftsmanship, the recurrent fantasy and the abiding concern—usually joyous, sometimes grave, occasionally overstressed, but always honest—about everything American, past, present and to come." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p7 D 8 '46 850w

"If there is nothing here to compare with the classic stature of 'The Devil and Daniel Webster,' 'Johnny Pye and the Fool Killer,' 'The King of the Cats,' or 'Too Early Spring,' nevertheless the stories all have the stamp of the serious and expert craftsman who has something to say. . . They are all worth reading. The few brief poems seem to me somewhat undistinguished, with the exception of 'If This Should Change' and 'Little Testament.' These show depth of prophetic feeling as well as Benét's gift for making his own thought and experience poetically valid to the reader. In summary, then, 'The Last Circle' is a collection of its writer's minor work, but a collection which echoes the strong affection for humanity that is the dominant note in all his writings." Robeson Bailey

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 Ja 4 '47 800w

"For Stephen Vincent Benét's devoted readers—and they are many—this present collection of new material should be more than they could have hoped for." Kenneth Fearing

+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 15 '46 800w

BENGE, EUGENE JACKSON. You—triumphant! a guide to effective personal living. 294p $3 Harper

150 Psychology, Applied

46-5774

A personnel consultant writes this self-help book for business or industrial workers. The work is divided into a series of ten lessons, dealing with such matters as health, human behavior, memory, habit formation, etc. Index.

Booklist 43:5 S '46

Kirkus 14:119 Mr 1 '46 90w

"The person of compulsive temperament who takes pride in having the 'will power' to force himself to do things he dislikes to do will find this manual rich in opportunities for gratifying this particular form of self-conceit; and the discouraged soul absorbed in self-accusatory brooding will, if he takes the instructions seriously, soon be too busy with trivial assignments to worry about his troubles. Business executives and other busy people are advised to read the didactic and explanatory material thoughtfully, but the exercises with tongue in cheek." M. F. Martin

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 4 '46 400w

BENHAM, HERBERT E. Aerial navigation; il. by Benson Parish. 344p $4 Wiley

629.1325 Navigation (aeronautics) 45-10403

"This excellent introductory text, suitable for self-instruction as well as classroom use, provides the fundamentals in mapping, dead reckoning, and tactical, radio, and astro-navigation that will enable the student to perform basic computations of a flight including the reduction of celestial observations to a fix. There are problems (with answers) after each chapter and also a general review at the end of the book. The author is Director of Ground Training, Pan American-Grace Airways, Inc." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 70:530 Je 1 '45 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:59 O '45

"'Aerial Navigation,' written by the director of ground training for Pan American-Grace Airways, is notable for its practical approach." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p50 My 19 '46 100w

BENIANS, ERNEST ALFRED. Race and nation in the United States; a historical sketch of the intermingling of the peoples in the making of the American nation. 48p pa 75c Macmillan [pa 2s 6d Cambridge]

325.73 U.S.—Nationality. U.S.—Race question [46-17262]

"Mr. Benians's little book is a reprint of a lecture given to the students of Bedford College when that institution was still exiled from Regent's Park to the pleasant isolation of Cambridge. . . . The theme of the Master of St. John's is a great one; the making of a reality of the American national motto, e pluribus unum." Times [London] Lit Sup

Current Hist 11:330 O '46 90w

"It supplies a succinct, well-proportioned, and scholarly record of the gradual development of the ideals of American democracy and American unity. In particular one could not find anywhere in such short compass so excellent an account of the successive waves of immigration into the New World and their contribution to the national expansion." H. W. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 26 '46 180w
Social Studies 37:286 O '46 20w

"It contains less than fifty pages, but every page is full of wisdom and of the telling illustrative detail that is the fruit of living learning."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p226 My 11 '46 550w

BENJAMIN, MARY A. Autographs: a key to collecting. 305p pl $6 Bowker

091.5 Autographs

46-3103

Presents the history of autograph collecting, with many anecdotes about those who collect. It is the author's contention that autograph collecting is based on man's desire to gather anything which has been written into libraries or private collections. Index.

"One need not read very far before discovering that the author's chief interest is American history, and hence it is not surprising to find that most of her illustrative material is drawn from that field. If she occasionally tends to digress too elaborately, she is none the less interesting and readable. But it is to be regretted that the book's emphasis is so exclusively historical." T. A. Kirby

+ Am Hist R 52:101 O '46 800w

"Whether or not you are a collector, you will enjoy this book. It contains far more than sound advice to collectors on how to buy, what to buy, and how to preserve what they have bought; it will appeal to all people who read and are interested in the cultural processes which produce manuscripts and books." Otto Elenschiml

+ Book Week p14 Ap 14 '46 270w

Booklist 42:275 My 1 '46

Bookmark 7:3 N '46

"Addressed to the beginner as well as to the seasoned collector, these three hundred pages of factual information, erudite comment, and diverting anecdote amply warrant the well-chosen title. Those who have already learned much through trial and error will be grateful for clear answers to the deeper problems of their chosen field, while the use of the Key will spare the tyro many painful experiences and add to the joys of his new pursuit." Katherine Maynard

+ Cath World 163:279 Je '46 600w

"The value of Miss Benjamin's book is in what it teaches. . . [Her] book is designed for the serious collector who is not too much limited by a slim purse; but equally valuable to the specialized collector, the so-called 'little man,' who is the average American collector."

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 15 '46 320w

"This special guide book is so full of interesting anecdotes, especially in connection with Americana, that it would interest almost any reader."

+ Commonweal 43:657 Ap 13 '46 40w

"Most librarians think twice before they buy a $6 book, especially when its title implies that it is designed for a rather small circle of readers. But the librarian who passes up Mary A. Benjamin's Autographs: A Key to Collecting either on account of its price or because it appears to be too highly specialized will miss one of the biggest book bargains of recent years. Why a bargain? Because it contains much useful information not to be found anywhere else, and because, to almost any sizable library, it will mean a saving in money of many times its cost." P. M. Angle

+ Library J 71:751 My 15 '46 850w

"Written in an easy style, which occasionally produces a digressive effect, it is on the whole pleasant reading. Most of the illustrations are drawn from historical as distinguished from literary manuscripts: history, especially American history, is Miss Benjamin's particular forte. But the book is no mere collection of anecdotes. It is a detailed examination of the problems that confront anyone concerned with manuscript material whether as collector, dealer or librarian." J. D. Gordan

+ N Y Times p29 Je 2 '46 600w

Weekly Book Review p8 Jl 28 '46 180w

BENJAMIN, NORA (GOTTHEIL) (MRS LAWRENCE SCHLESINGER KUBIE). Make way for a sailor! il. by Harvé Stein. 161p $2 Reynal

A city boy with no love of the sea goes to live in a seaside town, where all the boys are born sailors. Beverly has his ups and downs, but he has determination too, and in a twelvehour bout with the sea he comes out victorious, and a sailor at last.

"There is no stereotyped villain, no flawless hero; and all of it well written. The plot doesn't give you a minute to get your breath, and the few grownups in the story are kept sensibly in the background. It ought to be a relief to any child. The book is listed as being for ages eight to twelve, but younger children will enjoy it too." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:162 N '46 280w

Book Week p18 Je 2 '46 230w

"The focus on wartime problems seems a bit dated, but the juvenile relationships and the conquest of boat problems are lively and convincingly done, with a vitality enhanced by the Harve Stein illustrations."

+ Kirkus 14:127 Mr 1 '46 70w

"Clear type and excellent format." E. M. Gordon

Library J 71:983 J1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Alden Hatch

N Y Times p30 My 5 '46 130w

Sat R of Lit 29:52 N 9 '46 40w

"There is lively talk such as kids use, amusing clashes with grown-ups, and earnest and finally successful efforts of a little boy to grow up."

+ Weekly Book Review p20 My 19 '46 450w

BENNETT, DOROTHY AGNES. Golden encyclopedia; il by Cornelius De Witt. 125p maps $2.50 Simon & Schuster

631 Encyclopedias and dictionaries—Juvenile 46-11939

"Many colored pictures illustrate the 2,000 topics alphabeted here; from Africa to Zoo, subjects of interest to children are described in simple language. Essential material is indexed; cross references at the end of many articles will lead a child to further study" N Y Times

Reviewed by Martha King

Book Week p26 N 24 '46 60w

Booklist 43:105 D 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 10 '46 100w

"Cornelius DeWitt, who has enlivened so many regions of America with his colorful pictures, has provided a veritable gold mine of all kinds of pictorial information in the Golden Encyclopedia for which Dorothy Bennett has written a clear and reliable text. The smallest figures and objects stand out on these colorful pages with a sharpness of outline and a freshness of detail that will be highly appreciated by picture reading children from five to ten years old." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 22:456 N '46 80w

"There are several hundred topics, most of them illustrated, a good many in full color, but the author, in attempting to cover so much in 125 pages, has of necessity skimmed her treatment to the point of inevitable glibness. Some topics are treated in a scant paragraph, others in brief articles. The selection seems sometimes open to question. DeWitt's uniformly beautiful illustrations, too, suffer from overcrowding. . . Nevertheless, there is so much fascinating material, that this . . . is a useful adjunct—and wonderful value."

+ Kirkus 14:525 O 15 '46 150w

Reviewed by J. E. Lynch

Library J 71:1807 D 15 '46 120w

"While it seems at times that the topics are too general to be of much value, the book will undoubtedly do what the author wants it to do: 'stimulate and encourage the curiosity of children about their world.' It will not take the place of other encyclopedias, but it will make the use of a regular one easier." Phyllis Fenner

N Y Times p46 N 10 '46 120w

"The book seems to be aimed at fairly young readers, and they will find it interesting and fun to read casually but difficult to consult for information, because the subject headings are beyond their grasp. The De Witt pictures are good-looking but too inexact for an encyclopedia." K. S. White

New Yorker 22:148 D 7 '46 200w

"Here is a treasure-trove to help answer the whats, whys, hows and wheres of children. The author, formerly assistant curator at the American Museum of Natural History, is well equipped for a task of this kind." Faythe Elliott

+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 10 '46 120w

"The effect of the work in general is stimulating to an unusual degree. Each item is really the first chapter of a continued story; a child who is sufficiently interested will be likely to go on with it anywhere, but if he goes no further than this book with its myriad of fascinating little colored pictures, he will have taken in the spirit of the quotation from Kenneth Grahame, with which the foreword begins: 'The most priceless possession of the human race is the wonder of the world.'"

+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 10 '46 600w

BENNETT, JOHN. Doctor to the dead; grotesque legends and folk tales of old Charleston. 260p $2.50 Rinehart

398.2 Legends—Charleston, South Carolina. Folklore—Charleston, South Carolina

46-2913

Collection of macabre legends and folk tales discovered by the author during the past fifty years in Charleston, South Carolina. They were told to him by people in many walks of life, mainly fishermen, washerwomen, and servants.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p8 My 26 '46 310w

Booklist 42:343 J1 1 '46

"Interesting material, never pedantic, of regional and racial tradition and lore."

+ Kirkus 14:30 Ja 15 '46 130w

"Some are presented in the literary style of 'fine writing' of the last century but a few achieve the more authentic rhythms of old tales often repeated in times past. Recommended as a minor contribution to the literature of Southern folklore." G. D. McDonald

Library J 71:754 My 15 '46 80w

"The more of the supernatural in Mr. Bennett's stories the better: it is, I think, the quality he has most deeply appreciated in these legends. The temptation to feature the regional flavor of this material must have been strong. Yet only three stories in the Gullah dialect have been included; perhaps Mr. Bennett decided that the difficulties of that fascinating speech were too great for the average reader. It is good, though, that he did include these three tales as related by native narrators, whether merely to give us samples of their kind, or to cast a coloring upon the standard English of the other stories." Robert Molloy

+ N Y Times p7 Je 2 '46 700w

"These stories, macabre and always grotesque, are highly poetic and imaginative in an innocent sort of way; they have a variety and inventiveness not found in the Paul Bunyan kind of story, and they tell you something about the people who made them up."

+ New Yorker 22:94 My 25 '46 60w

"Three generations that have enjoyed 'Master Skylark' and his other novels will find here again his ability to tell a good story in distinguished, sensitive, and poetic prose. Those who delighted in the silhouettes of 'Ah Lee Ben Lou' will recognize his artistic fantasy in another medium. Students who remember his pioneer work with, and in, the Gullah dialect will recognize a masterly use of it. Lovers of Charleston have another book for their shelves and so do historians of the American social scene." S. G. Stoney

+ Sat R of Lit 29:39 My 25 '46 700w

"John Bennett mines no words, however well he arranges them. His legends have, in consequence, a feeling of solidity, almost of fact, generally lacking in tales of the supernatural. Moreover, he has something to say." B. S. Ravenel

+ Weekly Book Review p22 My 26 '46 750w

BENNETT, MARGOT. Time to change hats.
282p $2 Doubleday [8s 6d Nicholson] 46-3951
Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 My 19 '46 200w
Booklist 42:367 J1 15 '46

"With cerebral rather than physical propties, this is slow but sure."
Kirkus 14:137 Mr 15 '46 90w
New Repub 114:846 Je 10 '46 70w

"Time to Change Hats is uproarious fun, super-imposed on a neat detective plot. Miss Margot Bennett will be a valuable recruit to detection, if she can go on inventing plots to sustain her comic effects." Ralph Partridge + New Statesman & Nation 30:217 S 29
'45 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p30 My 19 '46 160w

"Good material, nicely developed by a new writer, who might well have saved up a few of the young man's jokes for her next mystery."

+ New Yorker 22:100 My 11 '46 100w

"Quite the merriest murder yarn in moons.
So merry indeed it's hard to take in one gulp.
But it's worth trying."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 My 25 '46 40w

"Unusually entertaining." John Hampson
+ Spec 175:138 Ag 10 '45 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p353 J1 28 '45
100w

"Billed correctly as 'humor and homicide,' this could also be tagged as a 'character and atmosphere' mystery. It has everything you need if you seek light but meaty reading."
Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p46 My 19 '46
240w

BENNETT, RUSSELL H. Compleat rancher; with drawings by Ross Santee. 246p $2.75
Rinehart

630.1 Ranch life Agr46-190

"A vocational book for the would-be rancher, giving practical suggestions and guidance in the operation of a modern small or medium-sized ranch. It has a more limited appeal for a secondary audience, those readers who will listen to Mr. Bennett's siren song of a home on the range while safely tied to their city desks. A bibliography for further study is included." Library J

Book Week p8 My 5 '46 150w

Booklist 42:312 Je 1 '46

"A book that might have some 'veteran appeal.'"

Kirkus 14:62 F 1 '46 100w

"For a somewhat restricted circle of readers it is recommended." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 71:583 Ap 15 '46 70w

"This is a good book. An excellent book.
What's more, it's the first book of its kind ever written. The bibliography of the Far West is immense." Struthers Burt

+ N Y Times p6 My 12 '46 850w

"Here is a book on ranching which strikes a refreshing balance between the technical publications of the cattle trade and the too highly romanticized accounts which are less informative than stimulating."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:240 S '46 200w

"Mr. Bennett has the authentic feel of the new West. He loves the life, admitting all the prices that one must pay; and he looks ahead with confidence. He writes as if he were a happy man. His message is at once practical and sensitive." Stanley Walker

+ Weekly Book Review p26 My 26 '46
1250w

BENOIT-LEVY, JEAN ALBERT. Art of the motion picture; tr. by Theodore R. Jaeckel.
263p il $3.50 Coward-McCann

791.4 Moving pictures. Moving pictures in education 46-6566

The author is the director of films and visual information for the U.N., and has served as a motion picture expert for various departments of the French government. His book is divided into two sections: the motion picture in education; and the motion picture in the art of entertainment. In each of these sections he "offers to the American educator an approach to the French contribution to the educational film." (Pref.) Index.

Booklist 43:31 O 1 '46

"Remarkably complete and well-balanced presentation. Approaching the subject primarily as a European, author's point of view may not necessarily be ours, but nonetheless it is one which we will appreciate studying... Recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:975 J1 '46 120w

"In his section on entertainment—and particularly on dramatic films—M. Benoit-Levy offers wisdom that the Hollywood people would do well to heed... A sane intellectual viewpoint is taken by the author, too, on such anomalies of film business as double-features and code censorship. It is regrettable that his speculations on the possible corrections of such ills are not more searching and impressive than the wishful suggestions he makes... M. Benoit-Levy has written a most timely rationale of film art which should greatly illuminate all thinking about the screen's potentials in this atom age." Bosley Crowther

+ N Y Times p7 S 1 '46 1550w

"M. Benoit-Levy, who directed such memorable films as 'La Maternelle' and 'Ballerina,' is interesting but not very stimulating, and from his style you can easily see that the cinema is his medium. But there is not enough serious writing on this important subject to permit anyone to dismiss this work for its imperfections."

New Yorker 22:111 S 14 '46 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p36 D 1 '46
90w

"My one quarrel with Mr. Benoit-Levy's valuable book is his somewhat superficial treatment of the strict censorship, political as well as moral, which has deprived Hollywood films of so much of their potential vitality and significance... But this is a minor flaw in the work of a great film artist who, in this challenging and stimulating book, preaches his faith in the great mission of the motion picture to which he has given a lifetime of distinguished practice." Budd Schulberg

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 Ag 31 '46 1000w

Survey G 35:329 S '46 1750w

"[This] is not so much an aesthetic of the motion picture (as the title would have you believe) as it is a rather loosely assembled collection of notes and anecdotes drawn from his own long experience. Many of [the author's] observations are important; many of his conclusions are just; and many of his accounts, such as those about his early work with medical films and his wisely conceived techniques for handling child actors, are profoundly revealing of the ways of the craftsman.
For these reasons, his is not a book to be ignored by those who profess an interest in films; but neither is it a definitive statement on 'the art of the moving pictures.'"

Theatre Arts 30:741 D '46 320w

BENTLEY, ERIC RUSSELL. The playwright as thinker; a study of drama in modern times. 382p $3 Reynal

809.2 Drama—History and criticism 46-4867

Study of contemporary drama and its playwrights, which arraigns both Broadway and Hollywood severely. It is the author's thesis that no great work in the theater has been done since Ibsen and Shaw. With that as background he studies the works of such nineteenth and twentieth century dramatists as Shaw, Strindberg, Ibsen, Oscar Wilde, Pirandello, Cocteau, and Sartre. Index.

Reviewed by H. T. Murdock

Book Week p4 J1 7 '46 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

Reviewed by Theodore Bolton

Commonweal 44:552 S 20 '46 1050w

"Controversially written, this volume is thought-provoking whether you agree with Bentley's conclusions or not. This should be in all drama and theatre collections. Recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:754 My 15 '46 70w

"[This book] is clear, straight-forward, and written with enthusiasm. More important, it is not doctrinaire, save in its willingness to consider seriously and genuinely modern development in dramatic art. Mr. Bentley does not resist attempts to break with the well-made play, nor does he believe that any form which makes such an attempt is necessarily an improvement. But 'The Playwright as Thinker' is not as dispassionate as its title and its willingness to see both the good and bad in every playwright, might lead you to expect. For Mr. Bentley is following the quest of the modern writer to express in dramatic terms the attitude of his time. It has been a quest as full of blood, sweat, and tears, as ever the life of a tragic hero could be, and that it is not yet ended Mr. Bentley indicates by enclosing his study in the ironical parenthesis of a consideration of the recent offerings of Broadway and the deficiencies of the college and little theaters." Alan Downer

+ Nation 163:274 S 7 '46 1400w

"This is an excellent book, to be read by people who want to read it. . . My last report on this volume—a really notable young volume in a minor way—is that it talks about art without ever being inside it. A real artist of the theatre would never feel that Mr. Bentley quite knew what he was talking about. The comments on Eugene O'Neill prove that: the deep feeling in his best scenes Mr. Bentley shows no knowledge of; he has no sense of passion's cost; he is glib and right where real artists lose their way. He is a busy student outside an art." Stark Young

— + New Repub 114:904 Je 24 '46 1200w

"Reviews of critics' books by other critics may at times be amusing but rarely, whatever their essential intelligence, above suspicion. For the opinions of Eric Bentley I have the very highest respect and regard when they are of a piece with my own, which frequently and fortunately for today's purposes they seem to be. . . Of Ibsen, Strindberg, Wagner, Shaw, Wilde and Pirandello, the author has some valuable things to say. Of the lesser names noted, he has some interesting but less valuable. . . I am not re-writing his book for him and hence abstain from a disquisition pointing out that his criticism of the Broadway theatre is apparently predicated on an all too meager acquaintance with it, and that, if it produces such inferior stuff as he quite correctly says it does, it also, miraculously if you will, occasionally does rather well by itself." G. J. Nathan

+ — N Y Times p3 Je 16 '46 1200w

"The whole book is as lively, literate, and dogmatic as can be."

New Yorker 22:79 Je 29 '46 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 8 '46 120w

"In 'The Playwright as Thinker' Eric Bentley ushers in a new era of dramatic criticism by producing a work of bold originality and unimpeachable excellence. The tremendous bulk of information contained in this book is made relishable by the fresh mustard of Eric Bentley's writing; his scholarship is vast but he rides it handily. And his critical aperçus, though fashioned at the traditional academic forge, have a piercing edge and a furred energy that send them quivering deeply into the vitals of his material." H. M. Robinson

+ Sat R of Lit 29:29 Je 22 '46 850w

"His devastating criticism of the proudest achievements of Broadway should not make readers stop at the end of his foreword even if they find its vehement statements all-too-sweeping. Neither should the fact that the young author is a scholar, an historian and a theorist serve as a pretext to ban his criticism as not valid for the practice of the theatre. He seems not to be aware of the creative forces of acting and directing which can on occasion produce unforgettable theatre out of weak or even trivial texts. He concentrates all of his attention on the rarest guest on our stage, the dramatic poet, the playwright who is an original thinker, a man of ideas." Berthold Viertel

Theatre Arts 30:678 N '46 850w

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:170 S '46 360w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 4 '46 1550w

BENTLEY, PHYLLIS ELEANOR. Rise of Henry Morcar. 415p $3 Macmillan [10s 6d Gollancz]

46-8522

"The tale of two lives: the life of a man and the life of a nation. It covers the period 1890-1945. The man is Henry Morcar, a West Riding manufacturer of cloth; the nation, battered but resurgent Britain. Henry Morcar was born on the day the McKinley Tariff came into force, with grievous results for his forefathers' business. But he was born with intelligence, patience and courage, and an infallible sense for cloth and its making. Reckoned in terms of the world's goods his is a success story throughout; the sections of his life called 'Defeat' and 'Fall' are concerned rather with his unhappy marriage, and his nadir is marked by a skillful business manoeuvre in which he conserves his own interests at the expense of an old customer and benefactor." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Marie Seton

Book Week p3 D 29 '46 500w

Booklist 43:155 Ja 15 '47

"It is not exciting reading—but a pleasant and solid bit of England."

Kirkus 14:354 Ag 1 '46 170w

"For a few readers who like the traditional English novel." K. T. Willis

Library J 71:1126 S 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 My 17 '46 60w

"Miss Bentley is at her best in the early scenes in the West Riding Mills, where she has been completely at home since childhood. Here is a solidity of engrossing detail as the reader follows Henry from weighing room to pattern room and sees the wonder and intricacy of weaving through a magnifying glass. The episodes of the recent war—and Miss Bentley has suffered through them all from blitzed London to a submarine-dogged voyage to America—have not been assimilated so well. As a lover, Henry Morcar is stilted; as a patriot, he sounds as if his sentiments had been strained through the British Ministry of Information." Mary McGrovy

+ — N Y Times p14 D 15 '46 600w

"A novel that is almost certain to be labelled 'conscientious'—perhaps as civil a way as any of saying that it is intelligent and painstaking and more than a little dull."

New Yorker 22:65 D 28 '46 130w

Reviewed by Jane Volles

San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 31 '46 700w

"Phyllis Bentley, like all the rest of us, is at her best when she is in love; and she is truly and with all her heart in love with the Yorkshire country. Also, because she has a wide, deep, and expert and almost congenial knowledge of the Yorkshire textile trade (her father was a skilled cloth manufacturer, as was her mother's father), she writes about it with a craftsman's love and lucidity. Miss Bentley makes it seem a fine, creative, and wholly satisfying thing to make good cloth." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 29:17 D 21 '46 1250w

"It is a pleasure to read a novel put together with such honesty and skill. There is an admirably sustained human interest, the narrative is conducted with the steadiness and force readers expect in Miss Bentley's Yorkshire family histories, and everything is made credible. In the second half of the novel we feel at times a rather sudden change of emphasis as between Morcar's private affairs and those vast deployments of misery and grandeur characteristic of the years of endurance and victory; but this is inherent in the twofold purpose of the story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p245 My 25 '46 600w

BENTLEY, P. E.—Continued

"The Rise of Henry Morcar' has great interest as a segment of history in which, willy-nilly, we have shared. Like Miss Bentley's earlier novels, this is a solidly constructed and thoughtful book. It holds attention both because of the individuals with whom it deals and the West Riding setting, and because of its concern, through these individuals, with the more general questions of a man's relationship to his fellowmen, his country, and what for him represents faith." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 22 '46 1150w

BERESFORD-HOWE, CONSTANCE. The unreasoning heart. 236p $2.50 Dodd

46-2866

A sixteen-year-old orphan, Abbey Bain, is adopted by a Montreal family. Abbey brings both peace and unrest into the family which is dominated by Fran Archer, who can be both benevolent and tyrannical. But gradually shy, inarticulate Abbey becomes the center of the family.

Reviewed by A. J. Hiken

Book Week p5 Ap 21 '46 240w

Booklist 42:265 Ap 15 '46

Reviewed by Anne Wilkinson

Canadian Forum 26:68 Je '46 210w

"Miss Beresford-Howe has not quite plumbed the depths of her material or got out of it quite all she might, but she shows a notable gift for narration, and the ability to put unflinching vitality into her characters, their actions and words." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 22 '46 410w

Commonweal 43:655 Ap 12 '46 40w

"Recalls Sedgwick's Little French Girl in treatment of character. Excellent entertainment. Recommended for public libraries." Emily Garnett

+ Library J 71:406 Mr 15 '46 70w

"Constance Beresford-Howe's first novel shows a charming talent for story-telling, a quick sympathy for people of widely different kinds, and a keen interest in their doings which only a curmudgeon could resist." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 7 '46 270w

"This book was the winner of the Inter-collegiate Literary Fellowship Award—and you could probably account for that by saying that the author is, after all, quite a young writer, that she is dealing (no matter how naively) with several profound problems in human relationship, and that she has turned out a novel which, if it is sentimental and often unoriginal, is, nevertheless, well integrated and holds the interest." Nancy Groberg

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:16 My 11 '46 700w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p34 Mr 31 '46 180w

Wis Lib Bul 42:74 My '46

BERG, ROLAND H. Challenge of polio; the crusade against infantile paralysis; introd. by Basil O'Connor. 208p $2.50 Dial press

616.83 Infantile paralysis SG46-6

"For the layman. Based on scientific facts, this is an impartial study of the battle against infantile paralysis, the dreaded uncontrolled, unconquered disease, told by the publicity director of Warm Springs Foundation. Chapter on remarkable triumph of FDR who met the challenge of polio and remained unconquered. Nurse Kenny's treatment evaluated in light of the spur it gave to medical research and need for future continued research to study prevention and find a cure for polio." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:30 O 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1128 S 1 '46 90w

"This is a well written, honest book on the crusade against infantile paralysis."

+ New Repub 115:357 S 23 '46 180w

"Some day poliomyelitis will be conquered, even if nothing better than the grant-in-aid system is devised. But that day is apparently still far off. Nevertheless, it is well to have Mr. Berg's admirable and complete record. It may inspire philanthropists to examine research critically and cause them to abandon the piece-meal, prima donna method of dealing with the viruses." W. K.

N Y Times p18 Ag 25 '46 800w

"Although popular in tone, the treatment of the subject is accurate and comprehensive. The book should be interesting to professional men as well as to the general reader."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:330 D '46 140w

Weekly Book Review p18 N 3 '46 290w

BERGE, WENDELL. Economic freedom for the West. 168p $2 Univ. of Neb.

330.978 West—Economic conditions 46-5191

"A populist by temperament and training, Mr. Berge affirms that the American West has become the 'proving-ground of free enterprise.' He is afraid, however, that during the next decade its economic development will be thwarted by Eastern interests that would rather keep it in a condition of economic servitude than let it use its war-born facilities to issue a declaration of economic independence from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh, chief centers of control over our banking, manufacture, and transportation." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Robert Lasch

Book Week p3 Je 2 '46 400w

Booklist 43:7 S '46

Current Hist 11:329 O '46 80w

"An important issue, in clear presentation, of considerable general as well as regional interest."

+ Kirkus 14:210 My 1 '46 150w

"This lucid, challenging and readable book on a problem of significance for all Americans makes eminently good sense." A. D. Gayer

+ N Y Times p31 S 22 '46 1050w

"In 'Economic Freedom for the West,' Mr. Berge gives a clear and vigorous analysis of the opportunities that the war brought to this section of the United States, and a call to the people to seize those opportunities." Ruth Teiser

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Jl 28 '46 200w

"While one can have complete sympathy with Mr. Berge's aims, one has to question whether or not he can attain them or even approximate them. He makes two assumptions which are distinctly debatable. The first is that the government, by virtue of anti-trust prosecutions, can enforce competition in the face of big business's determination to peg its own prices, to engross patents and processes, and to extinguish rivalry as soon as it rears its ugly parvenu head. The second is whether or not the trends debasing the free enterprise system into private collectivism can be reversed to prevent the onset of public collectivism, in one form or another. At times, indeed, Mr. Berge—like Calhoun—seems to be fighting brilliantly, and even a little desperately, for a cause already lost." Herbert Harris

Sat R of Lit 29:39 Je 8 '46 950w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:297 D '46 210w

BERGER, JOSEF (JEREMIAH DIGGES, pseud). Counterspy Jim; with ill. by Jack Coggins. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 308p $2 Little

46-5655

Lieutenant (J.g.) Jim Ellis went as a counterspy on a freighter from which messages were apparently being sent to U-boat packs. Practically everything happened to him from being torpedoed twice to being held prisoner on a Nazi U-boat, but Jim lived thru it and made his report to headquarters. For older boys.

Booklist 43:58 O 15 '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p13 N 21 '46
240w

"His risks as a spy, combined with his often desperate plight during disasters at sea, make a thrilling story. Mr. Berger not only writes well but has at his command a basis of sound knowledge of the actual adventures of many men in the United States Navy and the Merchant Marine. He tells only what has really happened to some of them."

+ Horn Bk 22:356 S '46 130w

"Characterization is good and plot well sustained and not too improbable. The foreword, setting the background, is a powerful piece of writing. Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 71:1132 S 1 '46 120w

"The book contains an immense amount of technical detail and plenty of action." Alden Hatch

+ N Y Times p11 S 1 '46 140w

"As realistic and as exciting as Swordfisherman Jim and Subchaser Jim is this latest yarn of Josef Berger's. Boys of high school age will avidly read the spine-tingling adventures of Jim Ellis as he carries out a hazardous assignment for the Office of Naval Intelligence during the great battle against German U-boats in the North Atlantic." Margaret Goodloe

+ San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 10 '46
100w

BERGSON, HENRI LOUIS. Creative mind; tr. by Mabelle L. Andison. 307p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

194 Philosophy 46-2618

A volume of more or less related essays by a famous French philosopher, who died in 1941. In his preface the author wrote: "This collection comprises first of all, two introductory essays written especially for it, and consequently heretofore unpublished. They make up a third of the volume. The rest are articles or lectures, mostly out of print, which appeared in France or in other countries. Taken as a whole, they date from the period between 1903 and 1923. They bear mainly upon the method I believe should be recommended to the philosopher. To go back to the origin of this method, to trace the direction it impresses upon research, is the particular object of the two essays which make up the introduction."

Reviewed by J. P. Spiegel
Book Week p19 F 17 '46 750w
Booklist 42:275 My 1 '46

"For Bergson's matured ideas of the fruits of his method of intuition as applied to metaphysics and to morals and religion, one must read his Creative Evolution and The Two Sources of Morality and Religion. No one who appreciates his viewpoint and felicitous writing will neglect either. They are his most rewarding contributions. In The Creative Mind there is not the same broad canvas. But some of the essays (such as those on 'Philosophical Intuition' and 'The Perception of Change') are a real delight. Here is our author's statement of the case for the method which he believes to be essential to true and lasting thinking; and several of his main ideas are very effectively presented." H. T. Houf

+ Christian Century 63:305 Mr 6 '46 700w

"Although billed as 'the last of Bergson's works to be published,' this collection contains only two introductory articles, comprising about one-third of its length, which have not appeared previously in French. . . In translations which are pedestrian at best, we find Bergson as ever the alluring but elusive philosophical artist, sketching the riches which are always just around the corner of his next metaphor." H. A. Larrabee

Ethics 56:233 Ap '46 250w

"Bergson does not have the intellectual vigor of the great philosophic builders or analysts, but he does have modesty, poetry, and integrity, and so he may not fall short after all." Ben-Ami Scharfstein

J Philos 43:278 My 9 '46 300w

New Yorker 21:67 D 29 '45 130w

"In spite of diverse origins, the collection is a well-knit unit, dealing essentially with the author's method of approach to philosophical problems and the task of research as he has seen it. In a very real sense, the book is a sequel to L'Energie Spirituelle, published in 1919, and dealing with some of the results of Bergson's work. The first two sections, especially, have an autobiographical flavor."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:2 Ja '46 550w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Weekly Book Review p22 Je 23 '46
750w

BERNANOS, GEORGES. Joy; tr. by Louise Varèse. 296p $2.75 Pantheon bks

46-6983

The second volume in the author's trilogy of the spiritual life, the first of which was The Star of Satan (Book Review Digest 1940) and the third The Diary of a Country Priest (Book Review Digest 1937) Joy was published in 1929, and this is its first appearance in English. In this book the central character is the saintly young girl, Chantal de Clergerie, who becomes "the favorite daughter of Sainte Thérèse."

"Joy" has been described by French critics as Bernanos' most powerful novel. It is certainly one of the most convincing modern novels dealing with mystical experience, and the passages dealing with Chantal's ecstatic union approach the exaltation of the great Spanish and Flemish mystics." Jex Martin

+ Book Week p2 O 6 '46 550w

Reviewed by Katherine Brögy
Cath World 164:183 N '46 400w

"Probably no other living writer could with such delicacy and insight render the transition from vision and ecstasy back to normal sight and thought. Perhaps no other living writer could write such a book Dense and often difficult to follow as it is (although the translator, Louise Varèse, writes assorted and limp English) to even an American Catholic this book is a light and a revelation. For Bernanos speaks to us with no voice we have heard from anyone of our time. Is there one, just one religious in this country who writes or speaks as does Bernanos? Could it be possible that Bernanos, the French layman long in voluntary exile in Brazil with his six children, is speaking to us with a voice which the clergy and dedicated religions once knew how to utter but now have apparently forgot?" Harry Sylvester

+ Commonweal 45:52 O 25 '46 1100w

+ Kirkus 14:550 N 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by Wallace Fowle
New Repub 115:523 O 21 '46 750w

"Bernanos is perhaps the only modern author who can succeed in translating the mystical experience of exalted religious visions into the language of literary art, because his force of expression is sustained by the fervor of his ardent faith. Even the most critical and skeptical reader will find in Bernanos the same convincing authenticity of the inner life as in the writings of medieval mystics who—like Sainte Thérèse—happened to be at the same time great writers." Franz Schoenberger

+ N Y Times p3 S 22 '46 1250w

"Bernanos is interested in 'Joy,' as in most of his other novels, in the presentation of states of grace; in the conflict between primitive emotions and ideas. His work consequently lacks character development and dramatic interest. It has, however, a fascination of its own." Arthur Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p35 D 1 '46
700w

"If you wish an exalted tale, brilliant dialogue, and fervent description of mystical ecstasies, then 'Joy' is the right kind of book for you. If you don't, even a magnificent literary craftsmanship and an extraordinary power of language will not compensate you for the lack of contact with the author's emotions and thoughts." F. C. Weiskopf

+ Sat R of Lit 29:38 N 30 '46 270w

Time 48:106 O 14 '46 600w

"It is a strong, compact, vigorous book; the writing is all shrew, the imagery masterful.

BERNANOS, GEORGES—Continued

The characterization is swift and sure, the conversations and descriptions full of movement. Yet almost nothing happens in the story except the climax. Readers who enjoy physical action will be disappointed; those who have no interest in spiritual life will be bored. . . . Louise Varèse's translation is excellent in every way, particularly so in the difficult passages describing Chantal's inner life and in the descriptions of Abbé Cénabre's despair." Thomas Sugrue

+ — Weekly Book Review p7 S 29 '46 1000w

BERNSTEIN, MRS ALINE (FRANKAU). Martha Washington doll book; story and costumes by [the author]. unsp $1 Howell, Soskin

"This brief account of the life at Mount Vernon as Martha Washington lived it, illustrated with attractive sketches of household objects and costume details, will give little girls a special interest in the two paper dolls and their ten costumes of that period which come ready for cutting out. Some of the gowns are copies of Martha Washington's own; she would have been equally proud to wear the others." N Y Times

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p19 Ap 7 '46 110w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 24 '46 90w

Kirkus 13:525 D 1 '45 150w
N Y Times p10 D 23 '45 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p5 F 3 '46 90w

BERRY, ARTHUR JOHN. Modern chemistry; some sketches of its historical development. 240p $2.50 Macmillan [10s 6d Cambridge]

540.9 Chemistry—History. Chemistry, Physical and theoretical [46-4696]

"This is a summary account of modern chemistry and of the principal events of the period, somewhat more than a century long, during which it grew to its present stature. . . . It ranges from the time when 'natural philosophy' flourished, when single individuals contributed to several sciences, through the time when chemistry and physics were drifting apart, when structures were being established and chemistry itself was sub-dividing into special branches, through that of the rise of physical chemistry and the study of dilute solutions, down to the present period, already 30 or 40 years old, during which chemistry and physics have worked together and the borderlands between their branches have proved to be most fruitful fields of study." Chem & Eng N

"The book is recommended for thoughtful reading. It will be an extraordinarily well-informed chemist who will not find something new and interesting in it, and a completely uninspired researcher who will fail to be provoked by it to turn over his problem and to examine it from some fresh point of view." T. L. Davis

+ Chem & Eng N 24:1970 J1 25 '46 370w

"'Modern Chemistry' is a very misleading title. The author stops short of 'modern chemistry' by about ten to twenty years. His little book is not written with inspiration and some parts make decidedly dull reading. Yet there is nothing that would fill the existing gap, and Mr. Berry's sketches appear to be no more or less than a temporary and not quite sufficient ersatz article." F. C. Nachod

Chem Eng 53:257 S '46 300w

Reviewed by S. C. Lind
J Phys Chem 50:489 N '46 220w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:78 Ja 1 '47 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:37 J1 '46

"Mr. Berry's book can be thoroughly recommended to all students and teachers interested in the recent past of the science of chemistry."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p190 Ap 20 '46 950w

BERRY, FREDERIC AROYCE, and others, eds. Handbook of meteorology. 1068p il maps $7.50 McGraw

551.5 Meteorology 45-10426

"Compiled by a group of specialists. Complete compendium on meteorology covering the entire field with information and theory necessary for the student, forecaster, and interpreter of weather and for the practicing meteorologist. Each technique described by example and all practical forecasting rules and methods illustrated by examples selected from nature. Illustrated with photographs, maps, sketches and line drawings." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 42:208 Mr 1 '46

Library J 70:750 S 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:59 O '45

"For the student, the book will not take the place of a text which furnishes a logical development of the science, but it will aid him as a reference. To the professional meteorologist it will be useful as a compact and handy compilation. The book lacks a complete bibliography and glossary, although short sectional bibliographies and an index mitigate this deficiency."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 2:159 Je '46 160w

BETTMAN, ALFRED. City and regional planning papers; ed. by Arthur C. Comey; with a foreword by John Lord O'Brian. 294p $4.50 Harvard univ. press [25s 6d Oxford]

711 City planning. Regional planning A46-30

"The late Alfred Bettman of Cincinnati was a distinguished philosopher of city planning, and his papers have been collected under the editorship of Arthur C. Comey for publication as No. 13 of the Harvard City Planning Studies. Most of them were written as treatments of particular problems in the development of planning, but they hang together as the expression of an acute mind which combined legal insight with both practical and theoretical aptitude in planning." Book Week

Reviewed by Robert Lasch

Book Week p5 N 17 '46 270w

"Lawyers should find in this book an introduction, simply and modestly written, to the background and major issues of the problem. They may emerge, also, with a conception of ways in which the law may contribute to a solution more constructively than it has yet done."

+ Harvard Law R 60:170 N '46 200w

"Although composed of pleading and expository statements published over a thirty-year period for immediate practical purposes—such as his brief amicus curiae in the leading Euclid Village zoning case of 1926—the book has coherence and present significance. It is a practical man's argument for research and planning: in public life these do not just happen, he says, but must be built into government structure."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:324 D '46 240w

BETTS, EMMETT ALBERT. Foundations of reading instruction; with emphasis on differentiated guidance. 757p il $4.50 Am. bk.

372.4 Reading 46-2598

"This comprehensive and practical book contains actual case examples and histories illustrating the various problems on reading which arise from kindergarten to college." School & Society

Booklist 43:6 S '46

"Whether the reader persists to the end or reads the book piecemeal, whether his reward for reading be great or small, he will believe in the author's point of view and the sincerity with which it is developed. But he will also regret that the author did not confine himself to a narrower reading audience; that he did not write the book to a blueprint instead of blueprinting it afterwards; that he did not delete what he knew would be repetitious and feared would be 'excess baggage.' . . .

But regrets are futile things. Let us be grateful for the parts." B. E. Leary

+ — El School J 46:593 Je '46 1450w

School & Society 63:232 Mr 30 '46 40w

BETZ, BETTY. Your manners are showing; the handbook of teen-age know-how; with verses by Anne Clark [il. by the author]. 95p $2 Grosset

395 Etiquet 46-11833

An etiquette book for the teen aged, made up of illustrations, pointed verses on what to do, and brief chats on manners.

Booklist 43:119 D 15 '46

"Sprightly text, colorful, cartoon-type pictures, pointed, humorous verse and a general tone of friendly, helpful warmth without undue criticism makes this unusual book a sure success with the high school crowd."

+ Kirkus 14:544 N 1 '46 120w

"The touch is light but the comments sound; emphasis is upon being sensible, considerate, generous and natural. Every teen-ager will reach for this; boys and girls can look at the pictures, read the verses, take the advice—entertainment with profit. Betty Betz is already widely known to young people for her articles and drawings in many magazines." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 5 '47 140w

"Miss Betz who has been out of her teens just long enough to gain perspective on the group's typical problems, approaches her subject with a serious intent and a light touch. Fortunately, she avoids the excesses of 'jive' talk that often set the younger readers' teeth on edge. Hers is a casual, readable style. . . 'Your Manners Are Showing' should prove of value to those who find the etiquette advice of the Mesdames Emily Post and Oliver Harriman a little removed from their everyday [life]." Marjorie McCabe

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 12 '47 370w

BEUKEMA, HERMAN, and others. Contemporary foreign governments. 362p $3.50 Rinehart

354 Political science 46-1711

Textbook on the political institutions of six major foreign powers: Great Britain; France; Italy; Germany; the Soviet union; and Japan. This is a revised edition of The Governments of the Major Foreign Powers, originally issued in 1938. Bibliography. Index.

"The analysis has been limited in scope, the authors tell us, by curriculum considerations at the United States Military Academy, for which institution the book was especially designed. This is unfortunate, for the result is a work so brief as barely to exceed in many places the proportions of an outline. Only four pages, for example, are allowed to the political parties of Great Britain; only two to the party system of the Third Republic. Brevity may partly account, too, for the fact that the work tends, like so many others in the same field, to be formal and structural in its approach." Herbert McClosky

Ann Am Acad 246:151 Jl '46 360w

"This recent work on comparative government is a West Point product, more of an outline than a book. But it is a clear, sound outline, good for a beginning student's introduction, useful for quick review. For more serious scholars, there would need to be flesh and blood put on this rather diffident skeleton." R. D. MacCann

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 O 19 '46 550w

Current Hist 11:229 S '46 70w

"The authors have made an honest effort to keep reasonably au courant by discussing such topics as the Vichy régime, Mussolini's 'Social Republic' and the military occupation governments in Germany and Japan."

+ Foreign Affairs 24:743 Jl '46 40w

Kirkus 14:337 Jl 15 '46 110w

"Based chiefly on official files. Finely organized, clear and concise." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 71:1204 S 15 '46 140w

Reviewed by T. P. Peardon
Social Educ 11:45 Ja '47 400w

BEVINGTON, HELEN (MRS MERLE MOW-BRAY BEVINGTON). Dr. Johnson's waterfall, and other poems. 164p $2 Houghton

811 46-8235

"Light verse. . . Her subjects are literary personalities, the foibles of people and observations of human kind." Cleveland Open Shelf

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"Witty, smart and entertaining."

+ Kirkus 14:516 O 1 '46 120w

"A collection by one of the better practitioners of light- and semi-light verse."

+ New Yorker 22:147 D 14 '46 70w

"Major poets may die young, but the human race will have a better chance of survival if it can also produce minor ones like this." M. S.

+ Poetry 69:234 Ja '47 240w

Wis Lib Bul 42:164 D '46

BIANCHI, VITALI. Tale of the fly; il. by Y. Vassnetsov; tr. by N. Orloff. [19p] $1 Colonial house

47-492

Russian folktale about a persistent fly that wanted a tail, and got what he didn't expect.

Kirkus 14:521 O 15 '46 60w

"Amusing Russian folk tale. . . Not a first purchase necessity but an interesting addition to the fairy tale collection." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 71:1629 N 15 '46 40w

Sat R of Lit 29:48 N 9 '46 20w

BIANCHI, VITALI. Tales of an old Siberian trapper; il. by Y. Vassnetsov [tr. by N. Orloff]. [30p] $1.50 Colonial house

47-261

Collection of five folktales about the birds and beasts which live in the Siberian woods. Illustrated in color.

Kirkus 14:521 O 15 '46 30w

"Good as an addition to a large fairy tale collection, not a first purchase necessity for a small one." J. D. Lindquist

Library J 71:1807 D 15 '46 50w

"Each one of the five short folk tales in this collection is fresh and individual. . . The illustrations, mostly in color, match the stories in simplicity and strength." Florence Marr

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 10 '46 100w

Sat R of Lit 29:48 N 9 '46 20w

BIBLE. WHOLE. SELECTIONS. Bible for the liberal, ed. by Dagobert D. Runes, with a foreword by Lin Yutang. 368p $3.50 Philosophical lib.

220.52 46-5639

"Dr. Runes's anthology is his effort to stimulate liberals to examine a book they have neglected to their own detriment. It seeks 'to help those with prejudicial eyes to get a view of the majestic panorama which unfolds itself in the writings of the great Hebrew men of God, some of whom are known to us as Messianists, or Christians.' . . Dr. Runes proposes to delete from his anthology every chapter and verse of the Bible that cannot be read profitably and solely for example of life and instruction of manners. He is not concerned with doctrine. No genealogies, no dogma or doctrine, no wars or wanderings of the Jewish people—only what contributes to a better understanding of the meaning of life will be found in his pages." Sat R of Lit

Christian Century 63:722 Je 5 '46 250w

BIBLE. WHOLE—Continued

"Frankly I am not favorably impressed by this book. It appears to me to evidence a distinctly arrogant and supercilious attitude—the air is fine up here, how is it down there? The title itself is in questionable taste." M. S. Enslin

— Crozer Q 23:301 J1 '46 450w

"Mr. Runes avoids the paraphernalia of the traditional Bible that interferes with the pleasure of reading. He uses the King James translation, although his selections from Job and the Apocrypha would perhaps have been more readily understood in the Revised Version. His book is an interesting experiment that effectively bridges the gap between the fundamental, ethical principles of Judaism and Christianity." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 Je 22 '46 650w

Reviewed by J. Z. Nichols

Springf'd Republican p6 Je 20 '46 360w

BIBLE. NEW TESTAMENT. The New Covenant, commonly called the New Testament of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ; rev standard version. 553p $2 Nelson

225.52

46-12740

"An authorized revision of the American Standard Version of 1901 and the King James Version of 1611. The work of the American Standard Bible Committee, appointed in 1929, by the International Council of Religious Education, representing 40 Protestant denominations in the United States and Canada. An effort has been made to clarify the meaning, by light of further knowledge of the New Testament Greek, and to substitute words now in use for those which have become archaic. The scholarly committee also tried to preserve the grace and beauty of the 1611 Bible, which they felt the 1901 Version had sacrificed." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 42:261 Ap 15 '46

"Altogether this new version of such important new writing is most satisfying. The book is most attractively put out into the bargain. We may well hope that the work on the Old Testament will be as fine: 1950 is forecast as the date of the completion of this whole new setting of the Hebrew-Christian scriptures in the language of and for 'the homely needs of humble people.' Also worthy of mention here is the excellent 72-page booklet accompanying and introducing the new translation. It is chock-full of interesting information on the New Testament and its English-language translations, produced by various eminent scholars and presented in a fascinating way." J. F. Davidson

+ Canadian Forum 26:70 Je '46 500w

Christian Science Monitor p15 F 9 '46 150w

"Let it be said unqualifiedly: This is a magnificent piece of work. The publishers are well within the facts in printing on the jacket, 'The most important publication of 1946.'" M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 23:271 J1 '46 1700w

"Probably most important American religious publication of this year. Complete Bible is planned for 1950." R. P. Morris

+ Library J 71:180 F 1 '46 90w

"This new version is a translation, not a mere rendering of the sense, and it is a translation meant primarily to be used in public reading at various sorts of worship. It may well be that, at first, congregations who hear the Synoptic Gospels read will wonder if they are not listening to a strange new book, so different is the impression made. And yet the new is superbly beautiful and quick to move." D. F. Forrester

+ N Y Times p5 F 10 '46 1250w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:185 S '46 270w

"It may be said at once that this new and revised edition is a great improvement, from the literary point of view, over the original American Standard Version. It reads more easily throughout, and in places more beautifully. One feels everywhere the influence of two members of the committee, James Moffatt and Edgar J. Goodspeed, both of whom have made modern Biblical translations of their own, and of such accomplished writers and preachers as Walter Russell Bowie and Luther A. Weigle. These men have made the ancient text live again. Little changes have made great differences. . . But it is the accomplishment of a style, in contrast to a literal word-for-word translation, difficult always for a group of men to compass, which stamps this revision with character. The miracle wrought by the King James translation is not here repeated, but it is at least suggested." J. H. Holmes

+ Weekly Book Review p12 F 24 '46 1000w

BIBLE. NEW TESTAMENT. SELECTIONS. Little child. See Jones, J. M. O. comp.

BIEGELEISEN, JACOB ISRAEL. Poster design. 100p pl $3.50 Greenberg

741.67 Posters

46-202

Guide to poster designing as an art and as a career. Partial contents: Poster designing as a career; How it all began; The mystery of color; Making a poster; What every poster artist should know about printing; You meet the client and the competition; What makes a poster 'click'? Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:222 Mr 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

BIENFANG, RALPH DAVID. The subtle sense. 157p $2 Univ. of Okla press

152.3 Smell

46-3605

"The range of Dr. Bienfang's book covers the physiology of odor or how we smell, odor in society, in literature, in war, in animal life, the use of odor as a warning in the protection of life, and the use of 'the subtle sense' in medical therapy. His all-too-short remarks on the sharpening of the sense of smell among the blind is practically pioneer work in a challenging field of study." Chem & Eng N

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 My 5 '46 240w

"The author of this book is a professor of pharmacy at the University of Oklahoma, and his book is published by his university press; yet it is light, entertaining and readable, highly anecdotal, with the pedantic influence markedly absent. . . The book is factually correct, but occasionally one comes across generalities that are unjustifiable. . . Despite minor imperfections and shortcomings, here is a book which will interest chemists who wish to understand the sense of smell. It is attractively printed and bound, and is well worth the reading." Edward Sagarin

+ Chem & Eng N 24:1447 My 25 '46 350w

"The author's list of aromatic oils derivative from flowers and herbs could pass as Imagist poetry. There is Proustian exactitude in his definitions of place odors—the smell of railway stations, pickle factories, drug stores. Tom Wolfe, surely, would have burst had he read Mr. Bienfang's musings on food fragrance. His inventory of literary illusions to smell is a gold mine." E. B. G.

+ N Y Times p36 S 29 '46 380w

Reviewed by Leonard Bacon

Sat R of Lit 29:21 Je 8 '46 900w

"Urbane, amusing and most enlightening little volume." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 4 '46 360w

BIGHAM, TRUMAN CICERO. Transportation; principles and problems. 626p maps $5 McGraw 385 Transportation—U.S.

46-6309

"This analysis of the economics of transportation in the United States offers several suggestions for improving transport regulations. The discussion is concerned primarily with intercity carriers; railroads, busses and trucks, pipe lines, inland and coastwise waterways, and airways. It touches only incidentally upon street railways and overseas shipping. The first third of the book deals with the history, routes, relative costs of each type of carrier, and state and federal legislation affecting it. Nine chapters are then devoted to rate making, followed by seven chapters on service, security issuance, combination, labor, public aid, government ownership, and future regulatory and promotional policy. The study is documented with extensive footnotes and also references at the end of each chapter. It is intended for use in college classes." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by Elliot Jones
Ann Am Acad 248:290 N '46 380w
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:825 Je 1 '46 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:49 Jl '46

BIKLEN, PAUL F., and BRETH, ROBERT D. The successful employee publication. 179p il $2 McGraw

070.486 Employees' magazines 45-9397
"The organization, printing, layout, special features, contributions and other problems connected with the publishing of a successful house organ are treated specifically." Cleveland Open Shelf

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '46
Library J 70:890 O 1 '45 110w

BILL, ALFRED HOYT. Beleaguered city; Richmond, 1861-1865. 313p il maps $3 Knopf 975.5451 Richmond, Virginia 45-10869

"Richmond during the siege years, 1861-1865, or more minutiae on what will probably be the most documented war in history. This repetitious but interesting job tells you all you need to know about the black market of those days (ours is pale gray in comparison), about the loose life on the home front, the rumor mongering, the discontent as well as the bravery and selflessness, virtues that seem to have been confined to the female civilians. There is also a good account of the war as seen from the Southern capital." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Book Week p10 Ja 27 '46 600w
Booklist 42:181 F 1 '46
Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 31 '46 300w

"In this very interesting book, based upon wide reading and research, the author has presented an unforgettable picture of war-time devastation, in all its horrible ramifications." Paul Kinlery

+ Commonweal 43:436 F 8 '46 420w
Kirkus 13:486 N 1 '45 170w

"Skillful weaving of innumerable facts into a memorable picture of Confederate life competently if not brilliantly done. Author is a Northerner, but tends toward revisionist school of writing the history of the Civil War. Recommended for college and public libraries." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 71:119 Ja 15 '46 120w

"Mr. Bill writes clearly and uses effectively the standard, published authorities. He has had access, also, to a file of The Richmond Examiner, the vehement anti-Administration paper. All that can be done by a man to understand the elusive spirit of a city with traditions not his own, Mr. Bill has done with scholarly care." D. S. Freeman

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 20 '46 800w

New Yorker 21:79 Ja 19 '46 120w

"Romance and tragedy are present, but they are subdued by the author's sober and factual style; and the story rises to drama and poignancy only when hope is at long last dead and the blue squadrons of Federal cavalry gallop through the burning city. It may occur to the reader that this story, the old tale of gallantry and defeat on which many changes have been movingly wrung, suffers for want of a hero.

... It seems strange that an intelligent and serious writer should be able to close his eyes to the fact that his 'people of quality' were a privileged handful, influential enough to persuade the lackeys and sweepings and specimens to fight on their behalf a war to maintain a feudal system in whose benefits the underprivileged had no hope of sharing. This blind adherence to an outmoded ideal of caste makes queer reading in the year of 1946." Margaret Leech

Sat R of Lit 29:10 F 9 '46 1150w

Time 47:103 F 18 '46 400w

"Well written and vivid account. . . The chief criticism to be made of the book revolves about the blisteringly unfavorable judgments which Mr. Bill delivers concerning the entire Confederate Cabinet, and to a lesser degree of President Davis. He has an obvious sympathy for the high-strung, sensitive, albeit sometimes tactless and obstinate Executive, especially after his little five-year-old son, 'Joe,' fell from the porch of the Confederate White House and was killed. But Mr. Bill seems to regard the Cabinet as packed with blunderers and fools. He utters many harsh words concerning Judah P. Benjamin, the almost incredibly talented holder of three different portfolios, who was Davis's principal reliance." Virginia Dabney

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Ja 20 '46 1900w

"As a panorama the book is excellently executed. Based on careful research and written with considerable aptness of phrase, it recreates the sights, sounds, and smells of Confederate Richmond." D. M. Potter

+ Yale R n s 35:735 summer '46 280w

BINGAY, MALCOLM WALLACE. Detroit is my own home town. 360p il $3.75 Bobbs

977.434 Detroit. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 46-3032

"A voluminous and enthusiastic account of the automobile capital of the world by a newspaperman who has grown up with the city since the days when it was almost literally a one-horse town. Known to sports enthusiasts as 'Iffy the Dopester,' Mr. Bingay includes in his entertaining book a generous selection of Iffy's baseball stories, and devotes most of the rest of his space to the saga of the auto industry and sketches of some of Detroit's 'fabulous fellows.'" Springfield Republican

"'Detroit Is My Own Home Town,' seems to have been written entirely in the Detroit Athletic Club, where the auto moguls gather to play high finance like poker." Ralph Peterson

+ Book Week p12 Ap 21 '46 390w

Booklist 42:296 My 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 2 '46 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '46

"'Detroit Is My Own Home Town' combines the same gentle humor, newsmen's 'inside dope' and pithy writing that have given Mr. Bingay his local popularity as a journalist. . . The book is not a history of Detroit or a panorama of Detroit. As the title itself infers, it is Mr. Bingay's Detroit that is under examination. It is a small segment of the whole, but a colorful and interesting one. Even outlanders to whom such names as Henry Ford, Charles E. Coughlin and Ty Cobb are household words, may enjoy reading about the good old days in the industrial capital of our nation." L. J. Trese

+ Commonweal 44:266 Je 28 '46 320w

"A labor of love which catches the spirit of the city; reactionary politically; anecdotal; light reading."

+ Kirkus 14:59 F 1 '46 170w

"'Detroit Is My Own Home Town' races along in a style as breezy as Detroit itself. Here, within the space of a half century, the graciousness of living for all was moved ahead by four or five generations—and the tools with which this nation defended its liberty in two wars were, in large part, made. Malcolm Bingay's story of his city's evolution is an outstanding contribution to folklore, fact and fantasy." W. W. Ruch

+ N Y Times p8 My 26 '46 460w

BINGAY, M. W.—Continued

Reviewed by Earl Brown

Sat R of Lit 29:32 Ap 27 '46 750w

"Mr Bingay leaves the formal history to others, knowing full well that dates and boundaries belong in almanacs and not in a picture of an American city filled with people who knew what they wanted to do and did it by hook or crook. He presents plenty of good readable yarns about the immortals in the auto world—Ford, Durant, Sloan, Couzens and Knudsen—and much intriguing out-of-school talk about the days when the 'auto game' was considered the proper territory of the sports department. Unfortunately for those who like to sense the personality of a city, however, Mr Bingay's Detroit seems to be equipped with a carburetor instead of a soul." R. F. H.
+ — Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 21 '46 330w

"An eminently readable, breezy and anecdotal study of his home town. The story of Detroit, as seen by Bingay, is simply reeking with drama." Stanley Walker
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ap 28 '46 900w

BIRD, DOROTHY MAYWOOD. Mystery at Laughing Water; il. by Gertrude Howe. 203p $2 Macmillan

46-3810

Camping story for older girls, with a well-developed mystery.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 178:166 N '46 40w

"Really good mystery stories for older girls are rare, so Dorothy Maywood Bird may take a special bow for this one. Not only is this a grand camping story about very real modern girls, but the author is the only one I know who can make descriptions of food suspenseful reading."

+ Book Week p12 Je 2 '46 190w

Booklist 42:350 J1 1 '46

"This good camp story stresses the attribute of getting along with fellow campers, makes one aware of the beauties of this lake country, and at the same time furnishes us with a swift-moving and satisfactory mystery." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 29 '46 240w

Kirkus 14:127 Mr 1 '46 110w

"This well-written story has for its scene a girl's summer camp on Lake Superior, near Copper Bay, Michigan. It is up to date, full of action, natural, wholesome and involves a mystery." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 71:488 Ap 1 '46 70w

"A very busy summer and a very busy story; compactness would have improved it, but the mystery will attract young girls." M. C. S.

+ — N Y Times p33 Je 16 '46 100w

"A good camp story for girls is always welcome, and this one is good enough to hold its own, just as a story about camping, against the mystery implied in its title." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 30 '46 230w

BIRNBAUM, MARTIN. Jacovieff and other artists. 235p pl $7; de luxe ed $15 Paul A. Struck, publisher, 415 Lexington av, N.Y. 17 927 Artists

46-7340

Group of essays on modern artists, centered around collections and treasures to which the author has had access. Contents: Alexandre Jacovieff; William Blake and other illustrators of Dante; Thomas Rowlandson; Aubrey Vincent Beardsley; Marcus Behmer; Arthur Rackham; Hermann Struck; Anne Goldthwaite.

"A beautiful piece of book making. . . The biographical notes are graphically handled, and add materially to the value of a lovely book."

+ Kirkus 14:415 Ag 15 '46 60w

"His personal connections with men like Jacovieff, Behmer and Struck lend intimacy to his stories. One could wish, however, that his writing might have been more direct, less precious. Mr. Birnbaum also seems to cling to a world gone by when he tells us, for example, that Botticelli's Sketches for Dante are being kept in the Royal Museum of Berlin which changed its name after the downfall of the Kaiser's Reich, in 1918. 'Jacovieff and Other Artists' is a very personal book and might be profitably enjoyed as such." Karl Kup

+ — Publisher's Weekly 150:3140 D 7 '46 420w

Reviewed by W. E. Parker

San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 13 '46 370w

BISCH, LOUIS EDWARD. Your nerves, how to release emotional tensions. 310p $2.50 Funk, W.

616.85 Neuroses. Psychology, Applied. Personality, Disorders of SG45-173

This book gives in popular form advice "for those who suffer from 'nerves,' who can't sleep, are self-conscious, or who are victims of various minor frustrations or phobias. Author is a specialist in neuropsychiatry in New York City." (Wis Lib Bul)

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '46

Kirkus 13:81 F 15 '45 150w

Wis Lib Bul 41:65 Je '45

BISHOP, CURTIS KENT. Sunset rim. 200p $2 Macmillan

46-3762

Western murder mystery.

Kirkus 14:82 F 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p44 My 19 '46 80w

Wis Lib Bul 42:131 O '46

BISHOP, ELIZABETH. North and South. 54p $2 Houghton

811

46-6185

A first volume of poems, winner of a $1000 award from Houghton Mifflin company. The poems fall into two classes: fantasies, and straight descriptive verse, some of it based on the author's experiences in Florida.

"In spite of the well-turned lines, the descriptive phrases which are sharply effective and the metrical skill, I cannot find much satisfaction in this verse. What confounds me is the author's difficulty in finishing what she begins so well. In poems like 'Wading at Wellfleet' or 'The Colder the Air,' she does not follow up her brilliant beginning. She can picture a nightmare, as in 'Sleeping Standing Up,' she has a clear eye for the look of the world, as in 'Florida' and 'Roosters,' but, in sum, it seems to me that she is afraid to risk pure lyricism, and is rather shy of ideas."

Atlantic 178:148 Ag '46 180w

"Only persons interested, probably professionally, in the output of American poetry will find interest in this collection."

Kirkus 14:380 Ag 1 '46 100w

"At last we have a prize book that has no creditable mannerisms. At last we have someone who knows, who is not didactic." Marianne Moore

+ Nation 163:354 S 28 '46 850w

"Elizabeth Bishop is the deserving winner of the Houghton Mifflin Poetry Award for which almost 800 poets contended. [She has] unquestionable talent. . . She has, however, possibly overeducated herself in what is, or rather was, going on in the best circles, and hasn't trusted enough in her own psyche. She has listened every once in a while to certain cliques which are trying to palm off academic composition as poetic perception." Oscar Williams

+ — New Repub 115:525 O 21 '46 700w

Reviewed by Selden Rodman

N Y Times p18 O 27 '46 450w

"It is a hopeful sign when judges unanimously and with enthusiasm make an award to a young, fresh book of verse instead of to an old, stale one. . . Miss Bishop's poems are not in the least showy. They strike no attitudes and have not an ounce of superfluous emotional weight, and they combine an unforced ironic humor with a naturalist's accuracy of observation." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 22:121 O 5 '46 360w

"It is this ability to hold her art and her experience in a fast and yet living relationship, to be never in doubt where she stands with regard to the one or the other, that is the sign of Miss Bishop's almost perfect artistic acumen. I find it hard to make any other generalization than this about the poems in North and South." Barbara Gibbs

+ Poetry 69:228 Ja '47 900w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 12 '47 150w

"For once a prize committee has chosen well. The publication of Elizabeth Bishop's 'North & South' is a distinct literary event." Lloyd Frankenberg

+ Sat R of Lit 29:46 O 12 '46 380w

BISHOP, KAY. Chris; pictures by Martha Powell Setcheil. [32p] $1 Oxford 46-3132

A small dachshund decided living in an apartment was too confining, and ran away. But even freedom had its drawbacks, and Chris was glad when a small boy found him and returned him to his own home.

Booklist 42:284 My 1 '46

Kirkus 14:174 Ap 1 '46 90w

"Recommended for six to eight-year-olds." Olive Brain

+ Library J 71:668 My 1 '46 70w

BISSON, THOMAS ARTHUR. Japan's war economy. (Inst. of Pacific relations. Int. secretariat publication) 267p $3.50 Macmillan 330.952 Japan—Economic policy. World war, 1939-1945—Japan. Industrial mobilization (for war) 46-228

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Current Hist 10:58 Ja '46 100w

Foreign Affairs 24:562 Ap '46 40w

"A valuable addition has been made to the books published by the Institute of Pacific Relations. Mr. Bisson has done something which it is not always easy to get a scholar of his distinction to undertake. He has put together incomplete material, frankly called attention to its incompleteness, so as to give not a final account but the best estimate that can be given today of the internal political conflicts which conditioned the industrial side of the Japanese war effort. Until more material is available it will be very rash for anyone to discuss the future of Japan without reading this book." H. F. Angus

+ Pacific Affairs 19:113 Mr '46 700w

"Mr. Bisson describes clearly and concisely the strength and weaknesses of the government and its legislation. Students of Japan's economy will find that this book presents such factual material as will enable them better to understand the probable causes of her surrender, and the real dangers to the United States unless remedial measures with respect to the business oligarchy are adopted." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 29:51 Mr 23 '46 450w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein

Spring'd Republican p4d F 3 '46 600w

BIXLER, JULIUS SEELYE. Conversations with an unrepentant liberal. 113p $2 Yale univ. press

104 Philosophy. Imaginary conversations. Liberalism A46-2938

"Based upon the twenty-second series of lectures delivered at Yale University on the Foundation established by the late Dwight Harrington Terry for the delivery and publication of 'Lectures on Religion in the Light of Science and Philosophy.' Imaginary philosophic conversations between two ancient Greek philosophers, Simmias and Cebes in a modern setting of the year, 1945, as they traveled from Harvard to Yale." Library J

"Perhaps the highest virtue of this unpretentious little book lies in its genuinely clear and emphatic statement of the fundamental distinction between imposed conduct and reasoned conduct as human ends." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ag 25 '46 180w

"This small volume is an important one. Its defense of liberalism is worthy of careful study. The critic will be challenged by it, the defender encouraged." I. E. Lunger

+ Christian Century 63:840 Jl 3 '46 400w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 160:16 S 1 '46 360w

Reviewed by E. C. Herrick

Crozer Q 23:377 O '46 700w

"The conversation is fresh and pointed, studded with humor and apt illustration. Bixler seems as well posted on human beings as he is on John Dewey, and also on current affairs."

+ Current Hist 10:129 Ag '46 200w

"The subject of their discourse is the place of philosophic liberalism in modern thought and life. Defense and attack are well planned and clearly reasoned. But the conversations themselves lack the sparkle that this kind of literary effort demands."

+ Kirkus 14:121 Mr 1 '46 130w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 71:666 My 1 '46 70w

"These conversations are far more interesting, I think, than those of Cebes and Simmias in the 'Phaedo.' It is, however, puzzling to try to guess what particular influences caused the young men to take their present positions in the argument. (Perhaps environmental changes unknown to us in the intervening centuries made them what they are.) At any rate, here is a good antidote for authoritarianism, although the liberal without firm principles will find no comfort for his too frequent escape from responsibility and action." G. R. Stephenson

+ N Y Times p28 Ag 11 '46 800w

School & Society 63:351 My 11 '46 40w

"The material of these essays is not for the casual reader, obviously, but for a more seriously minded thinker they have a charm of their own, not only in the ideas, but equally in the reflection that this presentation gives of a serene, witty and intelligent mind moving freely among the ideas it so clearly loves well." H. L. Varley

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Je 30 '46 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 4 '47 550w

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:185 S '46 280w

BLACK, HAROLD GARNET. The true Woodrow Wilson, crusader for democracy; with an introd. by Franklin D. Roosevelt. 270p $3 Revell

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow 46-2006

"The present volume is a personal and political history. It aims to present a narrative that is . . . full of factual material on the basis of which each reader may form his own independent judgment regarding Woodrow Wilson and his place in world history. It describes with considerable fullness the main events of his earlier life as well as of his professional career, before his political star rose above the horizon. It gives a detailed account of the great world drama which was enacted during his later years and in which he was so important and so distinguished an actor, and also indicates clearly the part that the United States played in that colossal struggle. In addition, it relates the story of the partial realization of Woodrow Wilson's long-cherished hope, the establishment of the League of Nations, and explains the failure of the United States to participate in that effort." (Pref) Index.

"No new material is used. But it is an excellent biography, generally judicious though leaning somewhat heavily to the side of admiration, sketching the political backgrounds rather briefly, and stressing the personal traits and character of the man."

BLACK, H. G.—Continued

+ Christian Century 63:400 Mr 27 '46
80w

Reviewed by T. F. Ople
Churchman 160:16 My 1 '46 60w
Foreign Affairs 25:165 O '46 30w

"A straightforward story, with a minimum of analytical or philosophical digressions—the work of a thorough and painstaking reporter rather than of a scholarly historian. But its very limitations give it value. The facts of Wilson's career, from his early childhood to his death are set forth clearly in all essential detail."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 S 2 '46 180w

"The adjective in the title of this book is enough to stir the suspicion of any student of Woodrow Wilson. He was a man of great intellectual power and wide-ranging interests, which is to say he was not simple. He lived in times of unusual complexity and obscurity, times which the ablest historians in America do not understand any too clearly. Hence a biographer who could produce a picture that was incontestably the 'true' Woodrow Wilson would be a very great biographer indeed. Mr. Black has not achieved this triumph. . . . The mystery of this book is why Franklin D. Roosevelt wrote its introduction. True, it is a very cagy introduction; he asserts that any one who would write the whole story of Wilson would perform a great public service, but nowhere does he say that this book is the whole story. Yet his name on the jacket will sell a good many copies." G. W. Johnson

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 21 '46
500w

BLACK, MRS IRMA (SIMONTON). Barbara's birthday; il. by Nicholas Takis. 44p $1.35
Scott, W.R.

46-7943

On Barabara's fifth birthday her mother started to make a birthday cake and found she had no eggs. So Barbara went to the store for the first time alone, and this is the story of that trip.

+ Book Week p25 N 10 '46 90w

"A cute little story, marred by disappointing pictures by Nicholas Takis, for Barbara is so out of drawing that she is grotesque."

+ — Kirkus 14:455 S 15 '46 100w

"The gay red and black pictures by Nicholas Takis beautifully supplement the text." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 71:1544 N 1 '46 70w

BLACK, MRS IRMA (SIMONTON). Off to a good start. 256p il $2.50 Harcourt

649.1 Children—Management, Child study
46-6352

A simply written, non-technical "handbook for modern parents" which emphasizes normal behavior but also points out that "normality" may have many and varied aspects. The book, in five parts, develops the idea of the widening circle of the child's interests and activities, beginning with himself and his family and branching out into his relations with other people and the outside world.

"Written with sincerity and a purposeful desire to help, this book makes accessible, especially to exhausted parents, easy-to-read suggestions." G. H.

+ Book Week p47 D 1 '46 120w

Booklist 43:49 O 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '46

"Based on progressive school formulae and experience, these suggestions are bound to be helpful to the would-be-helpful parents, anxious not only to do right but to do what is best for their offspring."

+ Kirkus 14:404 Ag 15 '46 150w

"A worth-while contribution to the literature in this field." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 71:1125 S 1 '46 100w

"The book contains no new ideas as such, but its simple style and its logical approach make it safe to follow. Especially interesting is the last section, which deals with new experiences, nursery and progressive schools and creative play."

+ New Repub 115:301 S 9 '46 70w

Reviewed by Catherine MacKenzie
N Y Times p58 N 10 '46 230w

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Ja 18 '47 140w

"Irma Black has based her book about the care and training of pre-school children on the refreshing premise that it is perfectly possible for a wonderful child to be the product of a quite ordinary American home. As a start, this will be encouraging to young parents, for too many similar books reek with the attitude that all babies are perfect at birth and that the defects in their adult personalities are entirely the fault of their parents." Margaret Bevans

+ Weekly Book Review p21 O 13 '46 410w

Wis Lib Bul 42:146 N '46

BLACK, JOHN. Release the lark; verse. 48p
$2 Fine editions
811

"A volume consisting mainly of sonnets concerned with love, war and beauty." Spring'd Republican

"A determined vigor carries the poems in this little volume to fruition. The mood of some of them is strongly reminiscent of Walt Whitman, though the breadth of his vision is lacking. 'John Black reports for duty,' the author announces and claims, accurately enough, to be 'strong, eager, alert, and wilful to the dream.' While these qualities are apparent in his verse, they are not alone enough to lift it above the level of minor poetry." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 6 '46
360w

"An attractive little volume. . . . Written by a former newspaper and magazine editor, these poems are carefully executed and their lyric power is enhanced by an intensity of feeling which holds the reader even when some lines become too rhapsodic." C. M. Sauer

+ — Spring'd Republican p6 Mr 8 '46 300w

BLACK, NELMS HENRY. How to organize and manage a small business. 367p $3 Univ. of Okla. press

658 Business 46-7986

"This is a general introduction to small business fields that emphasizes careful preliminary analyses and study, and constant studies and surveys after the business is established. Bibliography, p.351-360, lists books for specific businesses." Booklist

+ Booklist 43:113 D 15 '46

"The learning that the author passes along covers a range so wide that the subject-matter becomes diffuse at times. It would have been better to avoid topics confusing to the neophyte. Public relations are important, for instance, but scarcely enough to warrant a chapter for the beginner. It might have been combined with the chapter on advertising to better effect. Mr. Black seems determined to start off his small business man with a black picture of price chisellers and price cutting. What he proposes in a lengthy argument is a state of static price bliss, a business Utopia which, unless business progress stops, is never to be realized. The established small business man, will perhaps, find more of practical value in this book than will the beginner." C. F. Hughes

N Y Times p52 D 8 '46 430w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 1 '46
60w

BLACK, THOMAS B. 3-13 murders. 215p $2
Reynal

Detective story.

46-7656

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p12 N 17 '46 50w

Kirkus 14:401 Ag 15 '46 70w

N Y Times p24 N 3 '46 140w

"Good dialogue, credible toughness, solid plotting and plentiful excitement mark a far above average hardboiled novel." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 17 '46 60w

"Smoothly written. . . Competent thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:36 N 16 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 D 15 '46 140w

BLACK, THOMAS B. Whitebird murders. 201p $2 Reynal

46-3064

Detective story.

"The story is just the thing for those who like hard-boiled detectives and bloodshed galore." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Mr 17 '46 100w

"Toughest of the season."

Sat R of Lit 29:59 Mr 23 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 Mr 24 '46 170w

BLACKBURN, WILLIAM MAXWELL, ed. One and twenty: Duke narrative and verse 1924-1945; designed and ill. by pupils of Clare Leighton. 297p $3 Duke univ. press

810.8 College verse and prose 46-1036

A collection of prose and verse selected from work written by students at Duke university from 1924 to 1945. Contains brief biographical notes on contributors and an index.

"Considering its limited source, 'One and Twenty' maintains a remarkably high literary standard: there must be something in the air of Duke that is favorable to writing." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:13 F 9 '46 350w

"A worth-while effort, a creditable (if not striking) product of the book designer's art, profusely and attractively illustrated by Clare Leighton's undergraduate engraving students. Its literary level is best described by one of the contributors, as quoted in Professor Blackburn's foreword: 'respectable, though not as great as Chaucer.'" Richard Match

+ Weekly Book Review p16 F 3 '46 600w

BLACKWOOD, ALGERNON. The doll, and one other. 138p $1.50 Arkham house

46-17840

Two stories of the supernatural: The Doll, and The Trod. The first is the story of a strange image delivered to an English colonel who had seen service in India, and of the terror it brought to the household. The Trod is about a little-known corner of England, where everyone protected their persons and houses against the "gay people."

"There is little in either of the tales—even in their manner—which suggests at all the spell which Blackwood cast so skillfully in his early work." James Sandoe

— Book Week p15 Ap 7 '46 180w

"Slim volume may be read in one gulp and two shudders. Admirable writing and spooky atmosphere make it worthy item."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:88 Ap 13 '46 40w

Time 47:104 My 6 '46 700w

BLAIR, GLENN MYERS. Diagnostic and remedial teaching in secondary schools. 422p il $3.25 Macmillan

373 Education, Secondary. Teaching 46-1961

"In this book the author has endeavored to supply teachers, principals, supervisors, and superintendents with concrete and practical suggestions for carrying out remedial programs in their schools.' Well indexed." School & Society

Booklist 43:6 S '46

School & Society 63:231 Mr 30 '46 30w

"It is not probable that the remedial specialists or clinicians, accustomed to dealing intensively with individual cases, will find in this book much that is new to them. In the opinion of the reviewer, however, all teachers and counselors in junior and senior high schools would benefit from reading the book and could profitably keep it at hand for reference to the wealth of practical information it contains on one of the most important functions of present-day high schools." A. E. Traxler

+ School R 54:431 S '46 600w

BLAKE, WILLIAM. The portable Blake; selected and arranged, with an introd. by Alfred Kazin. (Viking portable lib) 713p $2 Viking

821

46-7886

This selection from the works of Blake contains much of his best poetry, and selections from his prose and drawings. Index of titles and first lines of poems.

Book Week p12 N 17 '46 40w

Booklist 43:134 Ja 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '46

"This work is good value indeed. It is in the most delightful, chunky, format, comfortable to hold, and beautifully printed. It contains much of Blake that is often missed—great, satisfying extracts from the Prophetic books, ample selections from the letters, the whole vision of the Last Judgment, the Everlasting Gospel, and admirable selections from 'A Descriptive Catalogue,' 21 reproductions of the Job engravings, and Crabb Robinson's recollections. But Mr. Kazin has, it would seem, misplaced his 55-page introduction. It is confusing to start the reader off with a comparison between Blake and Beethoven, who, except for the first initial of their names, and the fact that they were both 'plebian Europeans of supreme originality, who died in the same year,' seem to have had absolutely nothing in common." Anne Fremantle

+ — Commonweal 45:306 Ja 3 '47 650w

"A brilliant and searching study, introducing a generous selection of verse and prose, letters and essays, of the young Blake and the old Blake. All the familiar material is here, and much with which I was wholly unfamiliar."

+ Kirkus 14:410 Ag 15 '46 150w

Reviewed by Northrop Frye

Poetry 69:226 Ja '47 420w

"Blake, so simple at his best, is difficult to edit. . . This volume successfully indicates the difficulties while at the same time revealing the whole of Blake with unusual clarity. To read Blake is a little like looking at the sun, but what a sun!"

+ Weekly Book Review p21 Ja 12 '47 180w

BLAKEY, ROY GILLISPIE, and BLAKEY, MRS GLADYS MCALPINE (CAMPBELL). Sales taxes and other excises. 216p maps $3.75; pa $3 Public administration service, 1313 E 60th st, Chicago 37

336.2713 Sales tax. Internal revenue 46-992

"Professor and Mrs. Blakey present a careful factual treatment and a concise evaluation of state sales and use taxes, gasoline and other motor fuel taxes, alcoholic beverage taxes, cigarette and other tobacco taxes, and chain store taxation. The method followed in their study is to describe the types of taxes found in each of the several categories, and with respect to each to analyze methods, costs, and problems of administration; to show yields and to explain their disposition or distribution; to point out trends; to summarize relative merits; to comment on shifting, incidence, and other economic effects. The monograph deservedly pays considerable attention throughout and in special chapters to the impact, either actual or probable, of the federal constitution and the federal government on the field of general and special sales taxation." Am Pol Sci R

BLAKEY, R. G.—Continued

"Professor and Mrs. Blakey give us an exceedingly well-balanced, carefully organized, and realistic presentation of highly complex material. The truly scientific spirit which pervades the work greatly enhances the value of their observations and conclusions. Since general and special sales taxes now constitute the major source of state revenue, students of government and taxation as well as tax administrators will find invaluable this up-to-date volume." M. L. Faust

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:380 Ap '46 550w

"It is unfortunate that such an excellent factual and statistical study of this kind must soon become outdated as a consequence of the constant changes in legislation, administration, and tax yields. Nevertheless, a most useful service has been performed in the collection and summarization of the vast amount of detailed information involved in the variegated experience with and extensive development of sales and excise taxation in this country in the past two decades." D. C. Cline

+ Ann Am Acad 245:202 My '46 450w

"Professor and Mrs. Blakey have created a compilation of facts and figures about the sales and related excise taxes that should be a useful reference for those doing research in this field. The authors do not pretend to give a thorough, analytical and stimulating study of all the possible problems that might and do arise. They have instead undertaken to show the more important features in the historical development of sales taxes in this country, and have pointed out and briefly discussed the more prominent characteristics of such taxes and the problems arising thereunder. In doing this, not only do the authors include references to other materials which deal more thoroughly with the particular problems, but they have also included many illustrative tables and figures which should be of great aid to anyone interested in research in this field."

+ Harvard Law R 59:319 D '45 320w

Reviewed by N. H. Jacoby

J Pol Econ 54:573 D '46 1100w

BLANKFORT, MICHAEL. Widow-makers.
249p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

46-8185

A suspense novel in which three children, aged six, nine, and twelve play important parts. The three were in Portugal with their father, when he disappeared. They came home to live with an aunt in New York, carrying in their luggage the evidence of a future war, for which their father had given his life. When the children discovered the paper they used all their courage and intelligence to hide it, because it had belonged to their father. They succeeded where adults might have failed.

"[The children] are distinct, Tirza and James and Maggie, and their precocity is believable and touchingly imperfect, just as their decisions are an agonizing and truthful medley of fear and selfishness and love. They are so real, indeed, that the plot in which they have been set seems, especially at the last, an inadequate framework. But 'The Widow-Makers' is a rare and exciting novel and a very welcome addition to the small company of adult novels about children." James Sandoe

+ Book Week p25 N 24 '46 150w

"These children, while not the quiz kids of Craig Rice's Home Sweet Homicide with which a parallel is inevitable, are very appealing in their determination and vulnerability, give this book a sentimental rather than a smarty touch, and without them—the story would be disqualified on action values."

+ Kirkus 14:359 Ag 1 '46 170w

New Repub 115:774 D 9 '46 30w

"So far as the main plot is concerned, this is a routine story with international intrigue. What takes it out of that class is the skill with which the author has portrayed Tirza, Jamesy and Maggie. They are delightfully human youngsters whose unconventional upbringing has made them wise beyond their years, and the story is told almost entirely from their viewpoint." I. A.

+ N Y Times p59 N 17 '46 180w

"Admirable situation, filled with suspense in early chapters, works out to a disappointingly soft conclusion." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 24 '46 60w

"Good espionage-intrigue yarn made even better by three most charming fictional children since 'Home Sweet Homicide.'"

+ Sat R of Lit 29:80 D 7 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p48 N 24 '46 270w

BLANSHARD, BRAND, and others. Philosophy in American education. See American philosophical association. Commission on the function of philosophy in liberal education

BLEECKER, MARY NOEL, comp. Big music; or, Twenty merry tales to tell, il. by Louis S. Glanzman. 256p $2.50 Viking

398 Fairy tales. Folklore 46-1912

Collection of twenty traditional tales from many lands. The keynote of each is humor, and the stories are well-adapted for story telling hours. Grades four to seven.

Booklist 42:249 Ap 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '46

"The book is sure of a warm welcome from story-tellers trying to meet the perennial demand for a funny story. Louis Glanzmann's line drawings fit the mood of the stories admirably." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:205 My '46 100w

"This is an exceptionally interesting and worthwhile collection of folk tales, with plenty of humor, a good folk quality not too broad, and an awareness of basic values throughout."

+ Kirkus 14:35 Ja 15 '46 90w

"A fine collection." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 71:588 Ap 15 '46 70w

"The line drawings of Louis Glanzman have enormous gusto and a lively humor. A book to delight boys and girls from 9 to 12 and a valuable aid to the story teller."

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 24 '46 80w

+ Sat R of Lit 29:56 Ap 20 '46 230w

"In a time when the old folk tales are being 'discovered' by the enemies, and thus stand in danger of being vulgarized and mangled this book makes an important contribution. Story tellers will find that this collection gives new impetus to their art, and the children will discover here some stories they have never read before." F. C. Sayers

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 24 '46 450w

Wis Lib Bul 42:88 Je '46

BLESH, RUDI. Shining trumpets; a history of jazz. 365p il $5 Knopf

780.973 Jazz music 46-7252

"Concerned primarily with the subject of improvisation in jazz style by Negro musicians, the history of which is traced out of Africa, via New Orleans and Chicago (this latter somewhat grudgingly), to New York. The historical account is interrupted by program-note-like descriptions of specific phonograph records." (Library J) Index

Reviewed by P. E. Miller

Book Week p11 N 3 '46 150w

Booklist 43:114 D 15 '46

"A sincere study, intolerant of all imitation, which is also valuable documentary of the evolution of this type of music. For devotees."

+ Kirkus 14:474 S 15 '46 210w

"Especially interesting for those who are not jazz fiends is the tracing of the African heritage of American Negro music. The 'commercialized' playing of 'swing' by 'name bands' is not considered." Leonard Burkatt

Library J 71:1460 O 15 '46 130w

"Unfortunately, Mr. Blesh . . . has a system. Thus, having set the old New Orleans heroes up as his criteria, he declares, in effect, that anything outside the New Orleans style is not 'real jazz.' There are many of us who feel that the lively and various art of music will always mock such pigeonholing. . . Mr. Blesh often gives the impression of paying more attention to his system than to specific musical performances. . . Mr. Blesh has not only a system. He also has a purpose. . . He will not rest with jazz as a musical language which may be used intensely and poetically; he must have it conquer all. And like most critics who are not content to illumine an art, but must also pound the drum for it, his style is sometimes deafening." Wilder Hobson
Nation 163:761 D 28 '46 1200w

"Rudi Blesh has produced a work of carefully documented synthesis. The most that one can find fault with, it seems to me, is that he often goes farther than it would seem logical to go; for example, when one starts talking about race memory and the survival of Africanisms among American Negroes, the ice gets a little thin. I have a feeling, also, that he has overlooked some sociological implications in the birth and growth of jazz which are even more important than the hereditary ones to which he gives such weight. Yet the fact remains that in spite of these rather arbitrary criticisms, Shining Trumpets is by far the best critical work on jazz which has thus far appeared, and if it is not the definitive one, it is at least a long step in the right direction. Moreover, it is written with charm, wit and spirit." Bucklin Moon
+ — New Repub 115:603 N 4 '46 600w

"A lifetime of study and research could easily go into the preparation of such a vast work, but as written, Shining Trumpets does not quite come up to the cosmic enthusiasm and assertions of its author. Its organization is essentially sound. . . The work is fully equipped with scholarly impedimenta; it contains numerous footnotes, nine appendices." Frederic Ramsey
+ — N Y Times p42 D 8 '46 700w

San Francisco Chronicle p32 D 1 '46 90w

"Mr. Blesh takes the reader, by means of narrative, well-constructed charts, and pictures, as well as samples of jazz scores, from the early days to modern times. On the whole, he is accurate; his information seems to have been checked and re-checked, and his book is one that should stand as a rich source of material for historians for some time to come. There are also a warmth and a quality of admiration about the book which make it a pleasure to read. Yet one cannot help feeling Mr. Blesh and Mr. Sargeant have attempted panoramic portraits of a subject too broad even for the widest lens." R. B. Gehmen
+ — Sat R of Lit 29:94 D 7 '46 150w

"Under the flag of the championship of 'pure' jazz, Mr. Blesh either ignores, or takes a swing at many successful Negro and white exponents of popular music whom he accuses of hybridizing 'true' jazz. . . In spite of disagreements with Mr. Blesh I find Shining Trumpets a valuable contribution to American music. The author has painstakingly assembled an imposing mass of records and analyzed them for the reader. His accounts of jazz-making and jazz-makers from 1870 on makes extremely interesting reading. Without the belaboring which Mr. Blesh gives the point, the intelligent reader can discern in the history of jazz a comforting social achievement." Z. N. Hurston
+ — Weekly Book Review p8 D 22 '46 1500w

BLICHER, STEEN STEENSEN. Twelve stories; tr. by Hanna Astrup Larsen; [pub.] for the American-Scandinavian foundation. 312p $3 Princeton univ. press

46-871

"Steen Blicher, a poor country parson who lived from 1782 to 1848 in the part of Denmark known as Jutland, became one of the best-loved writers of his country. Sigrid Undset, whose mother was Danish, says in her introduction

. . . that his position among his countrymen might be compared to that of Jane Austen among the British. . . It helps to place Blicher if it is recalled that his British contemporaries were Miss Edgeworth, the 'romantic' novelists like Ann Radcliffe and M. G. Lewis, and, above all, Scott and Miss Austen. In America, his contemporaries were Irving and Cooper. In the 12 stories included in this volume, there can be detected certain similarities to the work of these writers of his time in the English-speaking world." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 Mr 31 '46 210w
Booklist 42:282 My 1 '46

Reviewed by L. E. Cannon
Christian Century 63:304 Mr 6 '46 550w

"Sigrid Undset's introduction, which is really a biography and an appraisal of Blicher running to 48 pages, is possibly the most interesting part of the book; for, with affection and with the skill she always commands, she has told a moving tale of a tragic yet ultimately rewarding life. Besides that, she has set him against the physical, social, and intellectual background of early nineteenth-century Denmark, a background that is new to most American readers." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 23 '46 650w

"Up to now few Americans, I daresay, have ever heard of the Danish author of these fascinating tales, although his name is a byword in Scandinavia. His short stories are so good that I wonder what other national favorites there are in smaller countries whose works, if translated, would enrich the lives of English-speaking peoples." Edward Skillin
+ Commonweal 43:437 F 8 '46 450w

Reviewed by Graham Rawson
New Statesman & Nation 31:436 Je 15 '46 750w

"The gratitude one feels toward the American-Scandinavian Foundation for making Kierkegaard available in English might also be expressed to them for this excellent translation of Steen Steensen Blicher. He may not be as important or influential outside of Denmark as his more famous compatriot, but students of European literature will surely welcome the occasion to read his work, and readers at large who have more than a little speculative interest in writers, and philosophize as they read, will enjoy making Blicher's acquaintance." Isaac Rosenfeld
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 14 '46 650w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 29:19 F 16 '46 750w

"Encountering his work for the first time in a translation which does not seem quite easy, or simple enough, it is difficult to accept so high a valuation of him. His stories certainly have a broad, easy sweep, and he conveys in wide, unfussy strokes a large variety of character and human conduct; and his general mood is a good mixture of pessimism and benevolence. But his themes are monotonous, he tends to be long-winded, and although he is never cheap or untrue, he does not get close up into the secret mind or soul of any character, but is content with broad, sympathetic impressions of human logic and human errors." Kate O'Brien
+ Spec 176:488 My 10 '46 450w

"There is an atmosphere of grim tragedy in some of Blicher's tales that is all his own. . . All these tales illustrate the humorous and tragedies of stark and poverty-stricken life in a sturdy and freedom-loving community; and though we cannot appreciate in translation those most intimate qualities of expression that have endeared them to the Danish people, there is a good deal of enjoyment to be found in them."

Times [London] Lit Sup p257 Je 1 '46 550w

"The twelve stories are set in Jutland, where Blicher had his roots, and many of them he had heard as a child from his own grandfather. Though a bright thread of merry-making gleams here and there in the book, and youth struts across its pages dancing, hunting, courting and stealing kisses, the prevailing color is dark and harsh, fitted to the uncompromising

BLICHER, S. S.—Continued
northern temper and the stubborn northern heart." Virgilia Peterson + Weekly Book Review p22 Mr 24 '46
950w

BLIZARD, MARIE. Late lamented lady. 256p
$2 Curl

46-5409

Detective story.

"A moderately paced, moderately well-written story that will serve adequately to while away a humid afternoon." Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p5 J1 21 '46 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p26 J1 21 '46 130w

"Agreeable enough, up to a pretty uneven solution." Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 21 '46
50w

"Well enough plotted and logically solved, but strangely lacking in action and impact."
+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 J1 20 '46 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 J1 21 '46
130w

BLOCH, MARIE HALUN. Danny Doffer; pictures by Jessie Robinson. 103p $1.75 Harper 46-7805

Danny lived in Pennsylvania, made embroidered name tapes for a living, and chased butterflies as an avocation. The story is about what happened when a machine, invented to embroider tapes, went wild and printed hundreds of tapes too many.

"Nonsense tales which five to seven year olds will enjoy, but which they could not read to themselves. Eight and nine year olds—good readers—could read them with pleasure."
+ Kirkus 14:454 S 15 '46 140w

"Good humor. Could be used for story hours. Well illustrated by Jessie Robinson. Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson
+ Library J 71:1717 D 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p10 N 17 '46 240w

BLOCK, LIBBIE. Wild calendar. 356p $2.75
Knopf

45-10646

"Maud, daughter of a Denver candy manufacturer, endeavors to achieve happiness by trying to have events and people in her life conform to her romantic dream of what constitutes happiness. During this search, which ultimately proves her ideas wrong, she marries a millionaire at seventeen, divorces him and marries a man without a job. Good picture of middle-class life, 1928 to 1942, especially description of flapper era." Library J

Booklist 42:226 Mr 15 '46

"A convincing, credible job, not always appealing, but a story of a woman for women."
+ Kirkus 13:532 D 1 '45 170w

"Frank writing of sex relations without overemphasis. Story is interesting." M. P. McKay
+ Library J 71:181 F 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Caroline Gordon
N Y Times p12 F 17 '46 320w

"In an unpretentious but subtle and very entertaining fashion, Miss Block, whose first novel this is, has managed a shrewd presentation of the average American woman and her inalienable Right to Happiness. The blurb on the dust jacket, with one eye cocked nervously toward the patrons of the lending libraries, hastens to explain that this unflattering picture of glorious American womanhood applies, of course, only to the pre-Pearl Harbor era. Hmm."

New Yorker 22:95 F 16 '46 140w

"Miss Block has written a dramatic and an engrossing book. . . If at the end the book seems a little too slick and contrived, it makes up for it by its really profound, sympathetic, incisive first two-thirds, its picture of a young girl and a young woman who will be recognized and remembered. It is interesting and provocative." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 Mr 16 '46 550w

"Wild Calendar" will be remembered for Maud and for the pertinent comment it has to make on the prevalence of materialism in our latter-day thinking. And if some readers find its revelations coming uncomfortably close home, they are not likely to put it down on that account. It is much too entertaining." Jennings Rice

Weekly Book Review p6 F 17 '46 750w

BLOOM, RAYMOND R. Principles of tool engineering. 234p il $2.40 McGraw 621.9 Machine tools

46-6872

"The purpose of this elementary text for men in industry is to enable them to design tools, fixtures and gauges as the need arises in manufacturing. The book presupposes an understanding of the practical application of tools and also of machine drawing. It describes basic operations on milling and drilling machines, tool layouts for turret lathes, dimensioning with tolerances for interchangeability, locating and clamping work, the use of gauges, and the purpose of inspection. The author is Assistant Professor of Industrial Engineering at Pennsylvania State College." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:761 My 15 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:42 J1 '46

BLOUGH, GLENN O. The monkey with a notion; il. by John F. De Cuir. 88p $2 Holt

Monkeys—Legends and stories

46-7095

Miss Peasley kept a pet shop and one of her special pets was a clever monkey. When the monkey began to have fun opening the animals' cages at night after Miss Peasley had gone home, things began to happen. At first there was quite a bit of misunderstanding, but in the end the shop did a tremendous business.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 178:162 D '46 40w

"The De Cuir drawings are full of action and fun. The book will be fascinating to 8 to 11 years olds."

+ Book Week p8 N 10 '46 140w

Booklist 43:89 N 15 '46

"An impressive looking book with very taking illustrations."

+ Kirkus 14:493 O 1 '46 90w

"Not indispensable but quiet good fun." M. B. Snow

Library J 71:1629 N 15 '46 90w

"The 5-to-8-year-olds will enjoy this very well-written and gaily illustrated book." R. A. Gordon

+ N Y Times p48 N 10 '46 120w

"All this is funny and exciting. . . The illustrations are as much fun as the story." M.G.D

+ Sat R of Lit 29:60 N 9 '46 200w

"The naturalness of the details make the fantastic nature of the story seem natural, which also is quite right for this time of life. There are lots of animal pictures."

+ Weekly Book Review p14 N 10 '46 400w

BLUM, LEON. For all mankind; tr. by W. Pickles. 186p $2.50 Viking 944.08 France—Politics and government.

Reconstruction (1939-)—France. Socialism
46-25241

In this book, written while he was a prisoner of the Nazis, France's one-time Socialist premier reviews his country's immediate past, trying to place the blame for disaster and to point out the way for recovery.

"The lucidity, the moderation, the subtlety, and the power of this little book are equaled by the generosity and breadth of its author's vision, and by a profound political sagacity which foresaw, half a decade before they arose, the difficulties which now beset the peace-makers." J. H. Powers

+ Atlantic 178:163 O '46 480w

+ Booklist 43:12 S '46

Reviewed by T. O. Sloane
Commonweal 44:578 S 27 '46 390w

Foreign Affairs 25:342 Ja '47 30w

Kirkus 14:291 Je 15 '46 210w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay
Library J 71:1046 Ag '46 120w

Reviewed by C. A. Micaud
Nation 163:507 N 2 '46 500w

"I can endorse every principle, even every detail of this practical and generous little book. Yet I feel I must end with what Blum himself left out: To what extent was Blum to blame? I am not alluding to minor inefficiencies which could have been redeemed. Was there a deeper flaw? I believe there was." Albert Guérard

+ New Repub 115:332 S 16 '46 1000w

"The book is therefore heavily dated, whether as a historical or a personal document. That fact gives it a good deal of its interest and value. It attempts an analysis of the social and political causes which produced the collapse of France, the military defeat and still more the moral defeat embodied in Vichy and collaboration. It is, of course, much more than an analysis, for it looks before and after. . . What he says about it is all true, but it leaves the reader unsatisfied. The analysis does not go deep enough, and because it does not, he does not give one the foundation upon which one might share with him his optimism about the future." Leonard Woolf

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:270 O 12 '46 650w

"Despite all the bitter betrayals, frustrations and defeats he suffered at the hands of the ambitious little men who tinkered with the fate of France and the world in the days leading to Munich, Blum withstands as few before him have withstood the urge to turn away responsibility for a great failure by personal recriminations. He presents not a single revelation of the role of Laval, Pétain, Flandin, Deat; not one inside story of the machinations of the Banque de France or the Comité des forges. His reflections on the fall of France are given in sweeping strokes with little concern for detail." Alan Cranston

+ N Y Times p3 S 1 '46 1250w

"This is a high-minded book, and an old-fashioned one too, maybe, and it comes like a breath of fresh air."

+ New Yorker 22:71 Ag 24 '46 120w

Reviewed by Marvin Sargent
San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 17 '46 300w

"'A l'Echelle Humaine,' of which this is a careful and sympathetic translation, was written in the Vichy prisons of Bourrasol and Fort du Pourtalet during 1941 and completed in December of that year. It bears not only the impress of M. Blum's lofty and courageous mind but all the signs of the time, the circumstances and the emotional temper of nascent French hope and resistance. A declaration of personal faith, reasoned and eloquent, it is addressed to all in France, more particularly the younger generation, who had not succumbed to the propaganda of Vichy. As such the book consists in the first place, and necessarily so, of a defence of the democratic idea."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p350 J1 27 '46 550w

"Being in prison gives an intelligent man time to think. Leon Blum is a first-rate intellect. Both Pétain and Hitler afforded him the opportunity to employ it in solitude. His reflections upon the world that was, the one that might have been, and the one he hoped to see brought into being after the inevitable downfall of the Axis tyranny, were put on paper in the prison at Bourrasol and in the frigid fortress of Pourtalet, where he finished writing these 'scrupulous meditations' in December, 1941. Keeping that date in mind, the reader of this book will add to his admiration for the lucidity of Leon Blum's thinking, the moral integrity and fine humanism of the man, an amazement at his limpid pre-science." Edward Angly

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 25 '46 1500w

BLUNT, ANTHONY. French drawings in the collection of his majesty the king, at Windsor castle. (Phaidon press bk) 166p il $6.50 Oxford [25s Allen, G]

741.944 Drawings 46-5127

Presents reproductions and a catalog of French drawings at Windsor castle. Bibliography. Index.

"This is a necessary reference work in any scholarly art library and an invaluable source for student and painter." Dorothy Odenheimer

+ Book Week p9 My 19 '46 490w

Booklist 42:368 J1 15 '46

"The Poussins are famous and magnificent, the Claudes impressive and varied. Mr. Blunt has rightly focused the main light of his scholarship on a detailed discussion of the former."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 13 '46 150w

Reviewed by Howard Devree
N Y Times p25 J1 21 '46 410w

"The examples represented in this book are somewhat arbitrarily chosen, with a fair share of the pompous and dull mixed in with the good. There are some fine Poussins and Claudes, however, as well as some first-rate Callots. The reproduction of the book's hundred and twenty-seven plates is uniformly good."

+ New Yorker 22:96 Je 1 '46 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p261 Je 1 '46 650w

BLYTTON, ENID. Castle of adventure; with il. by Stuart Tresilian. 251p $2 (7s 6d) Macmillan

46-18356

Four English children spending their holidays in a country cottage decide to explore the ruins of a nearby deserted castle and find exciting adventure.

"A tale crammed with quite improbable adventure which is fun to read. The children seem slightly more real than in Mystery Island, and Kiki, Jack's parrot, though her remarks are incredibly appropriate, is amusing." A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 31 '46 180w

"There is not a dull moment in this story of a summer spent by four English children as neighbors to a strange deserted castle on the summit of a hill. . . The children are natural and well drawn with humor and understanding."

+ Horn Bk 22:353 S '46 120w

Kirkus 14:326 J1 15 '46 130w

"Good reading for boys and girls 8-12." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 71:1054 Ag '46 70w

"A good tale and a good chance for boys and girls of 9 to 12 to meet characters thoroughly English, drawn with individuality and humor. Illustrations by Stuart Tresilian are keyed to the mood." Frances Smith

+ N Y Times p41 S 15 '46 140w

"There isn't an extra character or a 'stage prop' in this story. From the first page to the last everything that happens is cleverly integrated into an exciting mystery tale. Indeed, the economy of description and directness of action suggest that Miss Blyton might have equal success if she turned to the writing of plays." M. K.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:43 S 28 '46 230w

Weekly Book Review p36 N 10 '46 450w

BOAS, FRANZ. Race and democratic society. 219p $2.50 Augustin

304 Social problems. Race problems 45-10440

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by L. A. White
Am J Soc 52:371 Ja '47 1800w
Booklist 42:208 Mr 1 '46
Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '46
Foreign Affairs 24:745 Jl '46 50w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p5 F 10 '46 1250w

"The general reader will find here an authoritative and readable statement of the present level of scientific knowledge about race. Anthropologists and sociologists as well will find in the last two sections the thinking of one of the great scholars of our times, which, while based on his scientific studies, represents also his political and intellectual convictions."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:30 Mr '46 240w

"Franz Boas was among the 'intellectuals' who never betrayed their trust. He was no propagandist, but a lover of truth; and he believed that the truth, alone, can make us free. So to his dying day he worked fearlessly against the prejudices that breed hatred and cruelty. He was truly among the children of light. In this book are collected many of his addresses, articles, papers, all rigorously scientific in spirit, yet accessible to the lay reader. Although composed for many and very different occasions, these essays have the organic unity of his own mind. Well selected, they are arranged according to an intelligible scheme. They form a breviary of scientific democracy." Albert Guerard

+ Weekly Book Review p32 Ap 14 '46 600w

BOAS, FREDERICK SAMUEL. Introduction to Stuart drama. 452p $4 (15s) Oxford

822.09 English drama—History and criticism

"Dr. Boas does not seriously raise the question of the worth of Stuart Drama, he is content to assume it and to write an historical introduction to this prolific period. He addresses his book to those who are interested in Stuart drama without being professed scholars," and for them he provides a useful map of this bewildering country by sketching the history of the theatres and their providers from 1603 to 1613; from 1613 to 1625 and from 1625 to 1642, with Sir William Davenant bridging the gap between the closing of the theatres and their reopening at the Restoration." New Statesman & Nation

Manchester Guardian p3 F 22 '46 270w

"The detached acceptance of the plays as they are, without judging them or measuring them against the real masterpieces of tragedy is a limitation of this book; but it does not prevent it from being a valuable introduction to the subject. The most serious defect of the book as an introduction is the inadequacy of its bibliographical material." Joan Bennett

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:475 Je 29 '46 1050w

"Dr. Boas has once more succeeded in his very difficult task of presenting to the uninitiated general reader a literature which is by no means easy to grasp for those unaccustomed to the form and idiom. . . . The method Dr. Boas has chosen is that of describing the plots of the plays, with copious illustrative extracts to support the argument and whet the appetite. It is a difficult method, under which plays are strangely prone to die. But Dr. Boas has kept their spirit alive, so that each play remains a lively story, and the implication of the emotional climax is always indicated." Bonamy Dobree

+ Spec 176:302 Mr 22 '46 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p116 Mr 9 '46 500w

Weekly Book Review p24 O 13 '46 120w

BODENHEIM, MAXWELL. Selected poems. 193p $3.50 Ackerman

811 46-5318

"Containing poems from nine books of verse published throughout the years 1914-1944, as well as additional new material hitherto unpublished. The arrangement is in chronological order." Subtitle

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan
Christian Science Monitor p17 S 14 '46 450w

"This collection is a good deal more representative than selective. There is so much reprinted without judicious culling, from his nine published volumes, that what is genuinely original and sharply characteristic of Bodenheime at his best is unfortunately all but lost. Too much of Bodenheim's verse is sheer imitation of the successive 'fashions' during the last three decades: the romanticists, the imagists, the 'jazz-rhythm' crowd, the realists, the social poets. The patchwork effect of this Joseph's coat is further confused by the fact that subject and form are so often mismatched." Ruth Lechlitrer

Weekly Book Review p24 O 27 '46 360w

BODLEY, RONALD VICTOR COURTENAY. The messenger; the life of Mohammed. 368p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Mohammed 46-2458

A biography of Mohammed, written for the layman. The author says "This book has been written more for people who want to know something about Mohammed and Islam than for oriental scholars or students of theology. This does not mean that liberties have been taken with the subject or that any details of Mohammed's life and teachings have been omitted. On the contrary, the material in these pages is perhaps wealthier in particulars than in many of Mohammed's biographies." (Intro) Glossary. Brief bibliography. Index.

"This biography treats Mohammed as if he were a contemporary Arab. Mohammed's continual admonitions to his faithful to the effect that he was a man as other men is the leitmotiv of the book." D. M. Weil

Book Week p14 Mr 31 '46 800w

Booklist 42:281 My 1 '46

"This is incomparably the best life of Mohammed that has yet appeared in English. . . . Colonel Bodley has written a first rate biography, in admirable style, racy and readable, without constant reference to a New Testament at his elbow." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 44:314 Jl 12 '46 1000w

"There is singularly little material available—in biographical form—on the subject of Mohammed, and Bodley, whose Wind in the Sahara last season recorded his own life among the Arabs, in this new book gives us a lively informative life story of the messenger."

+ Kirkus 13:553 D 15 '45 340w

"Mr. Bodley is eminently fair to Mohammed and his achievement in formulating and establishing, in his own lifetime and over a great area, a new religion—or, at least, a blend of religions suitable to the time and place. He is, perhaps, a little more than fair. Some of his generalizations seem questionable, some of his analogies infelicitous." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p24 My 5 '46 800w

"Colonel Bodley, as anyone who read his excellent 'Wind in the Sahara' knows, lived for years with the Arabs in the desert, and he is so intensely sympathetic toward them and their great prophet that he sometimes goes much too far in defending the more forbidding aspects of their religion. Although, as he says, there is plenty of data on Mohammed's life, in contrast to the paucity of information on other founders of religions, much of this book reads like fiction and some of it must be, especially the passages describing the prophet's more intimate moments."

+ New Yorker 22:111 Ap 6 '46 140w

"This volume comes to hand recommended by the author's recognized versatility as writer and his living contact with Mohammedanism. It would, at any rate, merit more than passing notice if only because of the Prophet's centrality in the religion of some three hundred millions today. . . . As a record of the great Arabian's life this book perhaps offers delightful reading to some, but it leaves much to be desired. The vitality of the Moslem faith, and the immense spiritual potentialities ordinarily associated with it, remain in partial eclipse throughout." E. J. Jurji

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:21 My 11 '46 1150w
Spring'd Republican p6 Ap 12 '46 240w

"The story of the Messenger is endlessly fascinating, and R. V. C. Bodley tells it with a flair for the right things. He is aware of the almost total ignorance of the Occident with regard to Islam and its founder. . . . It is a heart-thumping, heart-warming story. Mr. Bodley has told it well, aiming it at the Western reader, correcting misinformation, pointing out misunderstandings. Few books have so much information, so much excitement and perform so needed a service. Allah will be grateful. Every one should read it." Thomas Sugrue

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 10 '46 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 42:56 Ap '46

BOGAN, SAMUEL D. Let the coyotes howl; a story of Philmont scout ranch. 159p il $2.50 Putnam

369.43 Boy scouts. New Mexico—Antiquities 46-25037

The author, a Scoutmaster from New Haven, Connecticut, recounts the day-by-day adventures of a group of Boy scouts in the Southwest. The headquarters for the troupe was the Boy Scout Ranch at Philmont, New Mexico; the objective of their trip was archaeological exploration plus the intangible values of working, traveling and studying together.

Booklist 42:211 Mr 1 '46

"The tale of what the Scouts did is frequently obscured by the author's discursive style. Scoutmasters may find some helpful suggestions in the book, but few boys will wade through this complicated, slow-moving narrative." A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p22 Mr 10 '46 120w

"It is, all in all, an inspiring work and one that does scouting credit." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 26 '46 300w

BOGART, WILLIAM. Queen City murder case. (Mystery house publication) 256p $2 Curi 46-18492

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 My 12 '46 140w

"Blackmail, vengeance of escaped lifer and various odorous family skeletons all play part in rather slap-dash yarn."

Sat R of Lit 29:42 My 11 '46 40w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 16 '46 270w

"Mr. Bogart introduces you to a little gallery of people you might want to meet if you're an underworld type. Style to match." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p26 Je 23 '46 120w

BOGGS, SAMUEL WHITTEMORE, and LEWIS, DOROTHY (CORNWELL). Classification and cataloging of maps and atlases. rev & enl ed 175p il maps $8.75; to members $4.50 Special Libraries assn.

025.3 Cataloging—Maps. Classification—Maps 45-9786

"This manual is the outcome of fifteen years of study and practical experience in cataloging and classifying the maps in the Office of the Geographer of the U. S. Department of State. It combines the viewpoints of a geographer and of a librarian and is the first comprehensive work of its kind in any language. Expansive schedules for classifying maps and atlases both by area and subject are presented in great detail; the all-inclusive rules for cataloging maps are illustrated by numerous examples. Sections are devoted to definitions of terms used in map cataloging, simple means of identifying map projections, prime meridians other than Greenwich, and other technical data. A natural scale indicator is laid in. No phase of the work attendant upon the preparation of a separate map catalog has been omitted, even to combining it with a general library catalog." U S Quarterly Bkl

"It is unfortunate, since the authors were handicapped by pressure of wartime duties, that a more careful job of proofreading was not possible on the part of the publisher. The manual is full of typographical errors, and users of it should therefore first ascertain, from the errata and revision sheets prepared after publication, where corrections have been made. . . . The inferior printing and binding of the manual hardly justify the high price. Furthermore, for a work of this type, which must expect hard usage, it is regrettable that nothing better than a half-cloth binding could have been provided. However, despite these defects of printing and format, map librarians will be grateful to Mr. Boggs and Mrs. Lewis for presenting this workable classification for maps and atlases at a time when the need for such a manual is so urgent." W. W. Ristow

+ — Geog R 36:347 Ap '46 950w

"Map librarians, and general reference librarians as well, will be grateful to the authors and publishers for making this practical manual available at this time." O. C. Anderson

+ Library J 71:113 Ja 15 '46 600w

"Notwithstanding differences of opinion on various scores, the fact remains that this volume is of great significance in the library world because it has definitely dispelled the myth that maps are peculiar and are not subject to library procedures. Boggs and Lewis have shown that maps can be classified and catalogued successfully in a special library, and they have done much that will be of great value to the more general library. The authors have pioneered in a very important field, and in time every map library will be in debt to them for the tremendous amount of work and study that has gone into the preparation of this volume." Agnes Whitmarsh

+ — Library Q 16:274 Jl '46 1350w

U S Quarterly Bkl 1:67 D '45 140w

BOGOMOLETZ, ALEXANDER ALEXANDRO-VITCH. Prolongation of life; tr. by Peter V. Karpovich and Sonia Bleeker. 93p $1.50 Essential bks.

612.68 Longevity 46-5608

"A brief discussion of longevity by a Soviet scientist who thinks we should assume that man's normal life span is around a hundred and fifty years and that something is wrong when 'middle-aged' men and women die at ninety. Dr. Bogomolets tells of ACS, his serum for prolonging life, and gives his precepts for living a long time." (New Yorker) Index

Reviewed by A. J. Carlson

Book Week p2 Jl 21 '46 410w

"Dr. Bogomolets . . . has awakened the world to the realization that something can be done—and must be done—to prolong the life." E. S. Cowles

Churchman 160:17 S 15 '46 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

"Dr. Bogomolets is no De Kruif—but that perhaps will give this greater credence in medical circles where it will be of primary interest."

+ Kirkus 14:212 My 1 '46 130w

Reviewed by Benjamin Harrow

Nation 163:106 Jl 27 '46 160w

"The major portion of the book consists of a superficial review of the factors involved in human longevity, and is almost entirely undocumented, often dogmatic in tone and occasionally erroneous. . . . As a recipe for slowing the aging process the book is also disappointing."

— New Repub 115:85 Jl 22 '46 300w

BOGOMOLETZ, A. A.—Continued

"Bogomolets' book should do something to counteract the rhapsodies which have been published on his results. He turns out to be a sincere scientist who has introduced into medical practice a serum which is now being tested in this country on hundreds of patients who are afflicted with the more common diseases. Something of importance is bound to come out of this critical American evaluation." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p7 Je 16 '46 1200w

"His book should be read by those who are interested in the problem of longevity, if for no other reason than that he tells about all that is to be found on the subject in the literature." Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p23 Jl 14 '46 170w

New Yorker 22:87 Je 22 '46 100w

Reviewed by Martin Gumpert

Sat R of Lit 29:15 Je 22 '46 1100w

BOHMAN, NILS. Jim, Jock and Jumbo; ill. by Einar Norelius. $1 Dutton

"Jim is a lion with a bushy red mane, Jock is a sleepy hippopotamus, and Jumbo is a sky blue elephant with pink velvet ears. They have all sorts of gay adventures and meet many other jungle denizens, all of them good natured and helpful." Springf'd Republican

Kirkus 14:323 Jl 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin

Library J 71:1054 Ag '46 100w

"The pictures, with exotic colors and fantastic humor, are outstanding and should be hailed with delight by American kids who may see in Mr Norelius at least a spiritual kin of their own Walt Disney." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 28 '46 120w

"With these jovial pictures a Swedish illustrator, well known in his own country but new to us, makes his first appeal to the affections of American little folks. . . These animals have personality, as different from those of Disney, Tenggren and Rojankovski as these are from one another, but they get along nicely in the same chromatic zoo." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Jl 28 '46 220w

BOK, CURTIS. I too, Nicodemus. 349p $3.50 Knopf

340 Lawyers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Trials 46-5880

Describes in fiction form the life of a trial judge, in his home and on the bench. Long narratives of some of the judge's cases make up a part of the book. For the author's earlier volume, Backbone of the Herring, see Book Review Digest, 1941.

"'I Too, Nicodemus' is that rarity, a book that can be recommended to thoughtful readers without reservations. Completely off the beaten path, it is a book of which Pulitzer Prize winner Edward Bok would have been proud." Ben Kartman

+ Book Week p2 S 15 '46 370w

Booklist 43:69 N 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 23 '46 360w

Reviewed by E. L. Keyes

Commonweal 44:555 S 20 '46 550w

"Neither lawyer nor layman will set this book aside without deeper realization of the significance of law, or without having been enriched by a sympathy which is not sentimentality, and by a wisdom which is more than erudition."

+ Harvard Law R 59:1346 O '46 320w

"Fine gift of observation and subtle sense of humor make book easy reading in spite of occasional wordiness. It is doubtful whether the few civil and criminal cases described (with footnotes to explain legal terms) really convey 'spirit of the law,' and not merely author's individual experiences. Recommended for public and educational libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 71:1125 S 1 '46 100w

"Here is a beautifully wrought book, and one of inestimable value for all who care to comprehend the significance, the needless shortcomings, the inherent all-too-human imperfections, and the potentialities of court house government. It will appeal to diverse kinds of readers: those who relish distinguished writing and first-rate fiction, psychologists, lawyers and law students, laymen desirous of hearing much that is seldom told about our courts. Here they will see life from the angle of a profoundly wise judge who is also a sensitive soul and a gifted artist." Jerome Frank

+ N Y Times p4 S 22 '46 1000w

"Judge Bok has a sure instinct for the dramatic; his tales, whether they deal with the criminal or the civil side of court, are professional in their artistry. The subtlety of his insights, his characterizations, his observations on human behavior are in the best tradition of our novelists. In the father-and-child relationship of Judge Ulen and Julia one finds mystical overtones and intuitions comparable to those in Virginia Woolf. He can be satirical of pomposity of bench and bar; hilariously funny in his lampoon of rival pettifogger; tender, and caustic, and at all times incisive. This book, even in its more leisurely, speculative passages is free from the superfluous word." Melville Cane

+ Sat R of Lit 29:52 D 7 '46 750w

Reviewed by J. N. Frank

Survey G 35:417 N '46 450w

"If one is content to accept this curious book as pure fantasy, bearing the same relation to real life that the adventures of Sinbad do, one may find in it not only an extraordinary charm but a genuine lift of the spirit. The author is himself a judge, and his book is a passionate protest of a sensitive and perceptive man against the fate that summons a judge to act like God with only human faculties. . . Altogether the book is an extraordinary piece of work, even if it sails now and then dangerously close to the shoals of sentimentality." G. W. Johnson

+ Weekly Book Review p1 S 15 '46 850w

BOLEY, JEAN. The restless. 251p $2.50 Dutton

46-4955

"Psychological study of a self-centered American woman, living in the Argentine, who, after fifteen years of marriage, realizes that she hates her husband (quite understandably) and finds life in general unsatisfactory. An affair with a middle-aged archaeologist does nothing to help her out of her impasse and she finally decides that mankind's everlasting fumbling toward happiness is not only useless but wrong." New Yorker

"You will find 'The Restless' an entertaining novel, smartly written, knowing, yet scarcely wise. Its materials are fresh and attractively enough surveyed to make Miss Boley's maiden effort well worth an hour or two of your less serious reading time." F. H. Bullock

+ — Book Week p3 Ag 18 '46 650w

"An emotional profile of a woman at a time of crisis, which provides better class—though not high class—women's reading."

+ Kirkus 14:279 Je 15 '46 130w

"This first novel is overcrowded with futile words and the characters are unconvincing. Not recommended." M. A. Johnson

— Library J 71:1049 Ag '46 70w

"Where the novel has most life is not in the heroine's cogitations but in certain vivid social scenes, such as the shipboard farewell of the Westchester matrons. Here the author shows a facility for lancing pretensions, etching character with sharp brevity, reproducing conversation, and pointing up with boldness the vacuity and triviality of a segment of American society." Barbara Herman

N Y Times p16 S 8 '46 360w

"A capable new novelist gives us a rather overemphatic psychological study. . . In spite of a certain immaturity of outlook, this is a continuously readable, and occasionally penetrating, first novel, written with an unashamed but fairly effective intensity."

+ — New Yorker 22:89 Ag 17 '46 120w

"If circumstances had compelled Emily to expend some of her energy on the kitchen linoleum, and more of her thought on her growing son and daughter, she would have had less time for day-dreams about a delirium of love which she has missed in marriage, or to foster vague notions of writing a book. Jean Boley has described the type with notable precision in a novel of delicate wit and sharp perception. 'The Restless' is the author's first venture in adult fiction, and it is adult fiction, assured and dramatic. If she defends Emily Hollin with a fervor which some of her readers will decline to share, that is the novelist's privilege." George Conrad

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 25 '46
500w

BOLTE, CHARLES GUY. The new veteran. 212p $2 Reynal

355.115 Veterans 45-37881

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Bookmark 7:4 Mr '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '46

"Mr. Bolte has written a most significant book. It is a challenge to every veteran and to every citizen." R. A. Brown

+ Survey G 35:56 F '46 350w

"The book speaks for the veteran as an intellectual, and provokes consideration of the veteran as an intellectual. Perhaps the major contribution of the book is that it treats the veteran positively, and considers how his attributes may benefit the nation and the world."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:54 Mr '46 200w

Reviewed by J. F. Mathias

Yale R n s 35:566 spring '46 700w

BOLTON, ISABEL. Do I wake or sleep. 202p $2.50 Scribner

The action all takes place in twenty-four hours; the time is 1939; and there are three characters: two women and one man. The three discuss life in general, New York high life in particular, and one of the women is caught up in the web of foreign affairs because she has an abnormal child in Nazi Austria. The novel is written in a modified stream of consciousness form.

"Miss Bolton has obviously a deep love for New York (its skyscrapers, at least) and a very real concern for suffering, misguided humanity. She has managed to portray fairly well the tensions under which we live, but the story as a whole doesn't quite come off." Dorothy Sparks

+ Book Week p7 D 1 '46 330w

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 2 '46
650w

"Reality passes through these three unreal people; they are as unmoved by, and as unrelated to it as the bird that has swallowed a haw, through whom passes hidden the whole life and splendor of the rose. Miss Bolton writes exceedingly well; but she needs people to write about." Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 45:259 D 20 '46 450w

Kirkus 14.430 S 1 '46 90w

"Quite the best novel that has come my way in the four years I have been reviewing new fiction for this magazine. Small, entirely anonymous in the welter of current books, it might very well have escaped my notice had Edmund Wilson not called special attention to it in the New Yorker: the possibility of such an oversight will now become my reviewer's nightmare. Mr. Wilson's high praise prepared me, however, only for work of exceptional talent. It did not prepare me—nothing but reading the book could—for the extraordinary process of revelation that Miss Bolton's novel turned out to be." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 163:625 N 30 '46 1700w

Reviewed by Nancy Ladd

— N Y Times p24 O 27 '46 500w

"Miss Bolton has learned from Henry James, and from the school of Henry James, the device of the sensitive observer who stands at the center of the action and through the filter of whose consciousness alone the happenings of the story reach us . . . And her language, too, here and there, has an echo of Henry James. But in general the style of 'Do I Wake or Sleep' seems to have been influenced most by the poetic impressionism of Virginia Woolf; and it is somehow, in certain passages, a little uncomfortable-making because it sounds at once so very much like and so very much unlike its original. . . . The story has life and moves; it immediately creates suspense without our understanding how or why; it carries us to an unexpected climax; and it subsides through two final chapters that show, on the part of the author, a remarkable technical skill in continuing to create interest and contributing essential values through incidents not exciting in themselves." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22:113 O 26 '46 1400w

"With a sensitive, perspicacious, and satirical eye Miss Bolton has seen the multicolored pre-war scene, and with an adept and relentless pen recorded it . . . Miss Bolton is not always as clear as she should be, and there are times when the persistence of her method seems excessive; but she thinks on unusual planes. She is just sharp enough, just soft enough. And her little novel leaves no doubt that she has, as she says, 'thought deeply and worked hard.'" N. G. Chaikin

+ Sat R of Lit 29.28 N 9 '46 400w

"Miss Bolton's talent is clear in her portrayal of Millicent, the woman who is the victim of her own confusion. Perceptive, sensitive, analytical, she is 'perpetually hungry—searching for perfection, and turning after every disappointment with fiercer hunger, intenser vision toward that perfectibility—for beauty, which she somehow, and without much warrant in experience, continued to believe was accessible.' It is through her mind, her memories, her sense of personal inadequacy that the incidents and the characters of the book are filtered. She is completely sympathetic, holding deep claim to kinship with every individual who has been torn by self-criticism and self-doubts." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p2 O 20 '46 650w

BOND, NELSON S. Mr Mergenthwyrker's lobbies, and other fantastic tales. 243p $2.75 Coward-McCann

46-7639

A collection of fantastic stories. The title story which first appeared in 1937 in Scribner's Magazine is about the mild little Mr. M. and his two familiars, the lobbies Henry and Japheth. The other stories are in similar vein.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p13 O 20 '46 60w

Booklist 43:102 D 1 '46

Kirkus 14:304 Jl 1 '46 110w

"Up to the end of 'Union in Gehenna,' one feels that it may turn out to be the prize of the collection. . . . But the end is a let-down which unfortunately points up the fact that the original joke has been carried a little too far. As a matter of fact, all of Mr. Bond's stories tend to go a little too far. There's generally one idea per story and that's made to do, along with some rather snappy repartee and sensible editing." B. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p20 O 13 '46 350w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 20 '46
300w

"There is too much use of the time-dimension variants but it isn't necessary to read all the stories at once. Egbert Haw neatly combines all of the talking-horse chestnuts now mercifully passed from our suffering brows—but with a neat twist. Not Saki or John Collier, but very good fantasy." Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 29:16 O 19 '46 180w

BONIFACE, MARJORIE. Wings of death. 208p $2 McBride

46-3691

Mystery story.

"Inept."

— Kirkus 14:82 F 15 '46 90w

BONIFACE, MARJORIE—Continued

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
 N Y Times p34 Ap 28 '46 140w
 Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 28 '46
 200w
 "Soft-boiled, harmless offering." Will Cuppy
 Weekly Book Review p28 Ap 14 '46
 100w

BONINO, LOUISE. Cozy little farm; il. by Angela. (Wonder bks) [42p] 50c Random house

46-22122

Picture-story book for three to five year olds. It describes the little farm which Johnny and his father and mother lived on, and the gradual addition of animals to the farm as some new need arose.

Kirkus 14:540 N 1 '46 30w

"A gay but uninspired book." M. F. Cox
 Library J 71:1717 D 1 '46 60w

"Three-to-five-year-olds will love the gay colors of the attractive illustrations and the simple text." R. A. G.
 + N Y Times p42 N 10 '46 80w

BONNER, CHARLES. Ambition. 278p $2.75 Coward-McCann

46-7562

Novel of life in Brooklyn and the south side of Long Island, not so long ago. It is the story of Jonkip Hoyt and his domineering father who had great ambitions for his son. But Jonkip did not do well in the family banking business, and did not marry wealth, and he did want to be a writer. The crash of 1929 finally brought him to a firmer resolution.

"The flashes of irony and psychological shrewdness, and such good parts of the book as the descriptions of summer boarding-house life on Long Island and Wall Street on the day of the crash, seem to have been slipped in almost surreptitiously. Bonner makes amends for such diversions by winding up every incident with some platitude that is altogether in character: for instance, the vivid and excellent description of a young heiress makes you sit up and take notice, but your interest is immediately allayed on learning that her color is 'nature's own cosmetic.'" George Dillon

+ Book Week p18 N 17 '46 300w

"Through most of the book, Jonny is too namby pamby to win sympathy, and at the close, his self pity and blindness to what is happening is very tiresome."

— Kirkus 14:308 J1 1 '46 120w

"Small public libraries will be glad to have this around." F. A. Boyle
 + Library J 71:1206 S 15 '46 70w

"Obviously the author has abjured consideration of the complications inherent in the father-son theme. The intention must have been a novel of fast, intriguing narrative; but it is not achieved." Frederick Brantley
 N Y Times p61 N 10 '46 320w

"There is pathos, if not tragedy, in the elder Hoyt's ambitions for his son. And a fine family affection illuminates the whole book. Mr. Bonner has recaptured a small portion of our past, a simpler and quieter way of life in the memory of many of us, when he did not sit down at breakfast, lunch and dinner with the atom bomb. He writes with sympathy and understanding of that other world." Dorothy Van Doren

+ Weekly Book Review p10 O 20 '46 600w

BONNER, MARGERIE (MRS MALCOLM LOWRY). Last twist of the knife. 190p $2 Scribner

46-5942

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
 Book Week p4 J1 28 '46 70w
 N Y Times p26 J1 21 '46 140w

"Readable."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:38 J1 27 '46 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p15 J1 14 '46 150w

BONNER, MARGERIE (MRS MALCOLM LOWRY). Shapes that creep. 202p $2 Scribner

46-1550

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
 Book Week p10 F 10 '46 100w
 Kirkus 14:8 Ja '46 80w

"This can scarcely be considered a first-rate detective story, but it is definitely amusing." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 F 3 '46 180w

"All right if you can take it. Infuriating, if you can't."

— Sat R of Lit 29:28 F 2 '46 40w

Springf'd Republican p4d F 3 '46 70w
 "You'll find lots of action in this tale of triple murder on a small island off Vancouver, even if Miss Bonner's characters do seem a little naive at times." Will Cuppy
 Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 20 '46 150w

BONNER, MARY GRAHAM. Something always happens; il. by Avery Johnson 137p $2 Knopf

46-6623

Billy was nine and the kind of boy about whom people said, "Something always seems to happen when you're around." This is the story of everyday pleasures which Billy enjoyed in his small town home. For grades three and four.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 178:166 D '46 30w

Booklist 43:58 O 15 '46

"Vivid, comfortable family story."

+ Kirkus 14:325 J1 15 '46 90w

"Large print, simple vocabulary and sentence structure make it easy for nine- and ten-year-olds with reading difficulties." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 71:1130 S 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by M. E. Hawk

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 10 '46 100w

BONSAL, STEPHEN. Suitsors and suppliants; the little nations at Versailles; introd. by Arthur Krock. 301p $3.50 Prentice-Hall

940.3141 Peace conference, 1919. European war, 1914-1918—Territorial questions 46-3680

The behind-the-scenes story of the Paris Peace conference of 1918-1919, as the author set it down in his secret diary, which he kept at the request of President Wilson and Colonel House. The suitsors and suppliants were the lesser nations of Europe and the Near East, who brought claims to the conference. Index.

Reviewed by C. E. Black

Am Hist R 52:103 O '46 550w

"Mr. Bonsal has made available a valuable and interesting amount of source material which will enable the reader better to evaluate present issues at the Peace Conference. Although the diary method of narrative has its disadvantages, in this book it is used to perfection." J. B. McConaughy

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:1224 D '46 380w

Booklist 42:314 Je 1 '46

Bookmark 7:8 N '46

Reviewed by Edward Skillin

Commonweal 44:267 Je '46 270w

Current Hist 11:48 J1 '46 100w

Foreign Affairs 25:159 O '46 70w

Kirkus 14:144 Mr 15 '46 190w

"Authentic and important source material. Essential for larger libraries." G. W. Hill
 + Library J 71:755 My 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery

Nation 163:562 N 16 '46 600w

"The interesting and lively book which Mr. Bonsal presents us out of his rich memory will leave its readers with a thoughtful understanding of the difficulties of peacemaking then and now." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p4 Je 30 '46 1250w

New Yorker 22:95 Je 15 '46 90w

"Sutors and Suppliants will henceforth be among the historic documents to be studied for the better understanding of peacemaking. Yet it fails to provide a signpost to the way to real peace; for the nationalist issues struggled over at Paris in 1919, and again in 1946, are not of the essence of peace. Unfinished Business, Bonsal's earlier volume, dealt with the pertinent matter: world organization. It must be added that Bonsal's good humor on the most dismal days, and particularly his readiness to sacrifice his reputation as a diplomat in order to tell a fascinating inside story, make his book far more interesting and real than the usual diplomatic memoir." Alan Cranston

+ Pol Sci Q 61:614 D '46 700w

Reviewed by Edgar Sisson

Sat R of Lit 29:12 Je 1 '46 1750w

"Although the historian will not find any startling disclosures in the book, he will find in it a wealth of personal anecdotes and thumbnail sketches of the figures who strode across that memorable stage. For the general reader, the book has a peculiar timeliness because of the striking parallelism between the situation of that time and the present Paris Conference. Then, as now, minor events were frequently to prove of greater future significance than was realized at the time. It is to be hoped that the present conference will produce as fascinating a portrayal of its leading personalities as is to be found in these two volumes."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:213 S '46 200w

"It may as well be admitted at once that this book is what Stephen Bonsal had left over after publishing his really startling volume, 'Unfinished Business.' It does not follow, however, that because it consists of left-overs it lacks either interest or importance. It does not come home so closely to our 'business and bosoms' as the earlier volume, but the situation it describes is more closely paralleled today than is the other situation, Wilson's battle for League of Nations." G. W. Johnson

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Je 16 '46 550w

Wis Lib Bul 42:113 Jl '46

"The importance of Colonel Bonsal's latest contribution to the forgotten history of the day before yesterday is obvious. No one else could have made that contribution, which is perfectly timed to enlighten an understanding of international problems in a period of crisis. . . . His volume is a source-book for the strategy and tactics of handling the problems of the smaller nations." Charles Seymour

+ Yale R n s 36:145 autumn '46 1300w

BOOTH, EDWARD TOWNSEND. God made the country. 350p $2.75 Knopf 809 Country life in literature. Authors

Agr46-3

A volume of essays dealing with the influence of country life and farming on the works of great writers from Hesiod and Horace to Melville and Tolstoy.

Booklist 42:208 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7:6 My '46

"The author leads us along paths of thought at once pleasant and profitable, as he distinguishes genuine pastoral poetry from its vacuous imitation, discusses the proper relation of writing to farming, and delves into the problem of the artist's retreat from society. Mr. Booth knows whereof he speaks being himself both farmer and writer, and evidently proficient in both arts. His book is to be commended for its mellow scholarship, its fascinating notes, and its good bibliography and index."

+ Cath World 163:285 Je '46 180w

"Something of the strength and plainness of the farmer's life is reflected in Mr. Booth's fresh, strong style of writing." S. C. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 16 '46 550w

Reviewed by Emerson Hynes

Commonweal 44:100 My 10 '46 650w

Kirkus 13:503 N 15 '45 130w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 162:322 Mr 16 '46 180w

"It is a charming book, written with erudition and distinction, and it is delightful reading for almost anyone—whether he be a true dirt-farmer like Hesiod, who lived in the eighth century B.C., or like Pope, who sought to formalize and even to ornament nature. It touches that instinct for nature which exists in all but the most calloused city dwellers. It is, indeed, a book for very nearly everybody."

Louis Bromfield

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 3 '46 1400w

"A stimulating and thoughtful book."

+ New Yorker 22:88 F 23 '46 150w

"The book was written 'in defense of old fashioned virtue' and against the triteness and falseness of urban sophistication and cynicism. For the most part, the great writers here assembled admirably reinforce that defense. Some, to be sure, replaced one kind of false sophistication with an equally false kind; but of this Mr. Booth is aware, and thereby adds to the vigor and charm a balance and proportion which give the essays effectiveness and conviction."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:87 Je '46 280w

"Mr. Booth writes a vivid and penetrating prose. He has his notions of what's the matter with the world today and his expositions indicate him a man of sound faith, not to be lured from his course by the easy shibboleths of our throaty iconoclasts. His is the sort of book all writing farmers dream of getting around to some day. It is the ideal compound of scholarship, history, literary criticism and brilliant personal assertion that makes it perfect to read contentedly by open fireplaces or in snug beds amid the rural silence." Richardson Wright

+ Weekly Book Review p4 F 17 '46 900w

BORCHARD, EDWIN MONTEFIORE. American foreign policy. 77p $1 Nat. foundation press, 46th st. & Sunset av, Indianapolis 7

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy 46-3403

"This brief volume presents the sequence of American foreign policy from its inception in 1776 to the preparation of the United Nations Charter and also considerations involved in the dilemmas which will be faced in the future. The problems inherent in American foreign policy, its history, and the basic principles involved should be known to every citizen. . . . This summary is written for the average citizen who wants to know what American foreign policy has been in order to be better informed and qualified to discuss and evaluate the current problems of international relations." (Pref) The author is Justus S. Hotchkiss professor of law at Yale university.

Reviewed by C. E. Martin

Am Pol Sci R 40:591 Je '46 320w

Reviewed by T. K. Finletter

Sat R of Lit 29:17 Je 29 '46 800w

"Professor Borchard has written a provocative book, and his volume might serve for an exercise in critical analysis by an advanced group studying recent American foreign policy. Both as to historical and contemporary interpretation, the book seems to the reviewer to possess grave faults. The book does not present an objective and scholarly discussion of the origins and nature of American foreign policies. It presents the viewpoints of one of the more distinguished of the non-interventionists." C. C. Qualey

Social Educ 10:232 My '46 400w

Spring'd Republican p6 Mr 16 '46 360w

BORDEN, MARY (LADY SPEARS). Journey down a blind alley. 364p $3.75 Harper

940.5476344 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939-1945—Medical and sanitary affairs 46-6919

An account of the author's own mobile hospital unit in France, Syria, Tobruk, Cairo, and the Middle East during World war II. It was her husband, Sir Edward Spears, who took General de Gaulle to England, and she interprets de Gaulle's attitude toward France, England, and the world in general, as it appeared to her.

BORDEN, MARY—Continued

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p10 S 15 '46 550w

Christian Science Monitor p18 O 10 '46 750w

Kirkus 14:268 Je 1 '46 170w

"A personal, inside story well worth reading and guaranteed to hold the reader's attention all the way to its surprising end. Recommended for public and college libraries." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 71:975 J1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Mary Mian

N Y Times p28 N 3 '46 700w

"Miss Borden gives a vivid and skillfully written account of her war, and contributes an intimate, if not flattering, portrait of General de Gaulle."

+ New Yorker 22:118 S 21 '46 80w

Reviewed by Jane Volles

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 5 '47 250w

"This book is too long by half. Lady Spears has much in her memory and is loyal to her friends; she has let down the drawbridge and they have come trooping across to overcrowd the book. . . Where one is able to check Lady Spears' accuracy, it is not always unimpeachable—a fact which undermines one's confidence when she is leading us across strange ground. . . Their story was well worth telling; and here it is." Bernard Fergusson

Spec 177:486 N 8 '46 600w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springfield Republican p4d S 22 '46 950w

Time 48:112 S 30 '46 410w

Times [London] Lit Sup p639 D 28 '46 800w

"The mass of the book consists in anecdotes, some humorous and some tragic, all singularly feminine in the kind of detail included, about the personnel of the unit and their difficulties with each other, the clashes with authorities, and, of course, the main task of life-saving so bravely done." Virgilia Peterson

+ Weekly Book Review p5 S 22 '46 950w

BORDEN, WILLIAM LISCUM. There will be no time; the revolution in strategy. 225p $2.50 Macmillan

355.4 U.S.—Defenses. International cooperation. Military art and science 46-8052

"The combination of atomic bombs and continent spanning rockets has completely altered the strategy of future wars which will be so devastating as to defy imagination. Cities and industries will be of no use in defense once the battle starts; only weapons stored before the catastrophe will be of retaliatory value. Science is the terrible master; the classic concepts of war were blasted to bits at Hiroshima. A vigilant, alert, prepared America can help keep a long armistice, only other alternative is a separate supergovernment which would settle all international problems through law or by force if necessary." (Library J) The author spent three years in the army as pilot of a B-24 Liberator. He is now studying law at Yale.

"This is a panic book if there ever was one. Not that there isn't plenty to be panicky about, if one considers the world's political instability and the potentially world-wide distribution of atomic bombs and rocket vehicles to carry them. But the problems of military strategy and of statesmanship which are posed by these facts require a more mature wisdom than is exhibited in this discussion. . . If America is vigilant, 'there is promise of a long armistice.' Still, there is need of a world government. How that is possible, in such a trigger-happy situation is not made clear."

—Christian Century 63:1535 D 18 '46 320w

"This little volume may provoke a revolution in your thinking about war and peace. Its greatest importance lies in its grimly realistic attitude toward life in the atomic age. . . [It] is neither an alarmist's book nor a pessimist's wailing; it does contain a great many unpleasant problems that must be faced and solved." W. P. Sears

+ Churchman 161:16 Ja 15 '47 270w

"A book that may precipitate controversy, but that is written in such a sober, undramatic way that it may not catch the public imagination."

Kirkus 14:509 O 1 '46 340w

"Recommended." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 71:1539 N 1 '46 140w

BORLAND, HAROLD G. An American year; country life and landscapes through the seasons. 200p il $3.50 Simon & Schuster

814 Country life 46-5320

Leisurely essays on the seasons and nature in the American scene, illustrated with woodcuts by well-known contemporary artists. Some of the essays have appeared in the editorial pages of the New York Times.

"For people who care for pictures, or people who care for the gentle spell of the country caught into the pages of a book as compellingly as the passing fragrance of a field of new mown hay, Hal Borland's An American Year is a double delight."

+ Book Week p5 J1 28 '46 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '46

"Gift book appeal."

Kirkus 14:122 Mr 1 '46 110w

"The essays will appeal to all nature and country lovers." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 71:975 J1 '46 70w

"An American Year" is illustrated, but these bucolics need no marginal decoration. Readers of the editorial page of this newspaper will be glad to know that they have been gathered into one volume. It is a good book to have in this parlous century—a book that yields truth, beauty and sustenance, no matter where you open it." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p5 J1 21 '46 600w

"A good antidote for these troubled days."

+ New Yorker 22:67 J1 27 '46 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 S 1 '46 100w

"An American Year" is more than charming nature writing. It blends description, experience, folklore, and fact to catch the real earthy quality of rural America. . . The book's beauty and charm is greatly enhanced by 50 illustrations—etchings, woodcuts, lithographs by leading American artists—that fit nicely into the mood and tempo of the essays. If ever a book was written from the heart it is this one. It is a book to be read and cherished; not because it is great, but because it has the enduring qualities of country things." Henry Christman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 Ag 3 '46 410w

"American Year" makes no pretense at being a day-to-day record; each month has its quota of essayettes, and since these are of such a high order and of such wide variety, [Mr Borland's] measure of beauty and penetrating observation is pressed down and running over. His book is ideal for bed-reading at any season of the year, the sort that makes you interrupt the most breathlessly entranced mystery-story partner with 'Listen to this.' The drawings with which it is illustrated are well selected and especially apropos." Richardson Wright

+ Weekly Book Review p2 J1 28 '46 750w

Wis Lib Bul 42:147 N '46

BOSTON, ORLAN WILLIAM. Bibliography on cutting of metals, 1864-1943. pts 1-3 in 1v 547p $6.50 Am. soc. of mechanical eng.

016.62193 Metal cutting—Bibliography 45-35153

"The 4124 items in this bibliography review and extend the previous volumes on this subject published by the author in 1930 and 1935. References are grouped according to date of publication; references within each group are listed in alphabetical order. The subject matter of each item is indicated briefly, unless the title is self-explanatory. An author and classified subject index add to the usefulness of the book." U S Quarterly Bkl

Library J 70:760 S 1 '45 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:58 O '45
U S Quarterly Bkl 1.59 S '45 80w

BOTHWELL, JEAN. River boy of Kashmir; il. by Margaret Ayer. 246p $2 Morrow

46-25242

Continues the story of life in India begun in Little Boat Boy (Book Review Digest 1945). In this book Hafiz comes to the River school where his brother had been before him, and learns many things. Along with his school life, his worries over family matters, especially the harsh money lender, are narrated.

Book Week p3 N 10 '46 160w
Booklist 43:19 S '46

"Miss Bothwell happily sustains the reality of her characters and the flavor of oriental life throughout, as in her earlier books. The drawings are sympathetic."

+ Horn Bk 22:350 S '46 160w
Kirkus 14:346 Ag 1 '46 120w

"A quiet story with distinction and a real charm. Characters and background particularly well done. Situations varied enough to hold the young reader's interest." Claire Nolte
+ Library J 71:1544 N 1 '46 70w

"Hafiz' adventures are small, everyday ones, but to him they are supremely dramatic. The author gets inside his earnest mind so successfully that we live his school days with him, sharing his devotion to Teacherji, his acceptance of British-style education. His is a warm, safe and friendly world, where everyone is kind except the villainous money-lender, who himself responds to kindness in the end. It is a pleasant world for a little boy to grow up in, and a pleasant one for any child of 8 to 12 to share vicariously." N. B. B.

+ N Y Times p5 N 10 '46 110w

Reviewed by K. S. White
New Yorker 22:141 D 7 '46 60w

"The story is not as closely knit or as absorbing as Little Boat Boy, but it gives a good picture of school life in modern India. The characters are quite as real and engaging as in the earlier book. Both show the kinship of children everywhere." R. A. H.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:58 N 9 '46 180w

"Well sustained story interest, combined with picturesque details of schoolboy life in India, bring that country close to an American school boy by the very differences between this River School and that in which he spends his days at eight years of age." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p3 O 27 '46 400w
Wis Lib Bul 42:134 O '46

BOTHWELL, JEAN. The thirteenth stone; a story of Rajputana; il. by Margaret Ayer. 225p $2 Harcourt

46-25121

A present-day Hindu boy is the hero of this story. Jivan Singh lives in a mud hut with his guardian, Babban. All he knows about himself is that he belongs to an aristocratic warrior caste. The story follows Jivan's adventures as he solves the mystery of his own birth.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p7 JI 21 '46 230w

Booklist 42:303 My 15 '46
Churchman 160:3 N 15 '46 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '46

"Miss Bothwell knows and loves India as her first book, Little Boat Boy, so convincingly proved. She writes here vividly of its sights and sounds and of another boy whose adventures hold absorbed attention. Margaret Ayer's drawings carry out the spirit of this brave, colorful story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:205 My '46 120w
Kirkus 14:198 Ap 15 '46 90w

"Thirteen-year-old Jivan's skill with the black stallion at the Pushkar Fair, a slight mystery and a little more vigor than the conventional place picture usually has may give a wider appeal to this romantic, almost sentimental story of India." E. W. Turpin
+ Library J 71:827 Je 1 '46 60w

"Although nothing can be more remote than this from the experience of American children, it is Miss Bothwell's peculiar gift to make these Oriental youngsters as real as the boys in the next block. . . . It is a pity that the format is too young for the text. The book will be hard reading for the third-graders who might be attracted by the big print and charming drawings—the very features that may repel older readers who would most appreciate Miss Bothwell's distinguished writing." N. B. Baker

N Y Times p14 Ap 21 '46 270w
Sat R of Lit 29:30 JI 13 '46 320w
Spring'd Republican p4d My 12 '46 150w

"Unusual richness of characterization in a story of life in the Orient for our own twelve-year-olds, marks this in its class." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 28 '46 320w
Wis Lib Bul 42:116 JI '46

BOTKIN, BENJAMIN ALBERT, ed. Lay my burden down; a folk history of slavery. 285p il $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press [20s Cambridge]

326.973 Slavery in the U.S. Folklore, Negro
A45-5576
For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by Olive Westbrook
Am J Soc 52:70 JI '46 480w

"In spite of the distortions inherent in multiple collecting and editing, Mr. Botkin has done a remarkably good job of allowing the ex-slave to speak his own mind." N. N. Puckett
+ Ann Am Acad 245:219 My '46 420w

Booklist 42:158 Ja 15 '46
Bookmark 7:4 Mr '46

"It would be difficult to imagine a reader who could turn the pages of this book without finding something of interest."

+ Cath World 162:477 F '46 200w
Commonweal 43:412 F 1 '46 240w

"Though many inaccuracies must occur because the ex-slaves relied on memory, one gets the feeling that the narratives are essentially true and that an adequate picture of what slavery was like is recorded here. Many things, well-known and things not generally known, are brought to the fore. . . . Though the book gets monotonous at times, it is interesting reading and the public is indebted to the Federal Project Writers and to Mr. Botkin for giving the world this insight into slavery and its horrors from those who experienced it and know it best. The testimonies show that in the main Negroes hated slavery and were not happy in it as many people would have us believe." B. E. Mays

+ Crozer Q 23:296 JI '46 1250w
Current Hist 10:257 Mr '46 80w

"The editor of this fascinating compilation had the excellent idea of securing from the survivors of the slavery system testimony to its realities. Of course such 'folksay,' as the editor calls it, is of very uncertain value in detail, but the tone is significant and the accumulation of detail makes some cross-checking possible. . . . This is a notable record of a great victory of liberty." D. W. Brogan

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 7 '46 320w

"It is salty, pungent folksay, beside which Joel Chandler Harris and Paul Laurence Dunbar seem too sweet and arch. Together with the fine photographs—the one on the jacket evokes the tragic reality of slavery as much as any picture can—the speech helps to restore human dignity to people whose history was nearly ruined by sentimentality and condescension and downright lying." S. A. Brown

+ Nation 162:574 My 11 '46 1300w

Reviewed by Gamel Woolsey
New Statesman & Nation 33:16 Ja 4 '47 600w

BOTKIN, B. A.—Continued

"'Lay My Burden Down' is that rarity in the modern world, a book that is to be savored best when read aloud." Lloyd Lewis
+ N Y Times p4 Ja 6 '46 1500w

"Lay My Burden Down will stand as the definitive collection of American slave narratives. In a decade or so the last of the ex-slaves will have passed away, and we shall be increasingly grateful for this treasure-store of their recollections. . . This work is a welcome addition to folklore and literature, and it is a valuable supplement to the history of slavery. It is illustrated and it contains a list of informants and interviewers." G. B. Johnson

+ Social Forces 24:477 My '46 280w

"This book is of great significance from various points of view. It is important as a record of folk ways, folk superstitions, folk society. It is important as a source of social history, as a picture of a way of life which is past. It is important as a treasury of idiom and linguistic usage. It is important as literature—that is, as a human record. The greatest importance is as a human record."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:10 Mr '46 240w

"Both good narrative and good material for the study of American culture. It is a timely rescue. It won't be long now before the last American who has known what it was to be a slave will be dead." Horace Reynolds

+ Yale R n s 35:736 summer '46 800w

BOTSFORD, HARRY. Valley of oil. 278p $3
Hastings house

622.338 Petroleum—Pennsylvania 46-7854

"Reworking of rich vein of Americana developing out of first decade (1860-1870) of oil welling in Pennsylvania in terms of men who did it—Edwin L. Drake, John Wilkes Booth, Francis Brewer, Johnny Steele and many others—the wells they worked, the methods they used, and towns they developed, Oil City, Titusville and Pithole City." Library J

Book Week p5 O 27 '46 40w

"A robust and colorful drama, which encompasses most of the experimental years, the trailblazing—the trial and error methods by which oil was mastered. Uneven in style, often repetitious, the book still has a certain glamour of a dramatic period and story."

+ Kirkus 14:537 O 15 '46 190w

"Suffers from insufficient editorial attention but does capture colorful legends and exciting facts. Note masculine and local appeal. Recommended general purchase." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 71:917 Je 15 '46 110w

"The author has presented the oil business in its cradle days, without attempting to delve into the corporate machinations that brought the industry to maturity. However, in reverting mostly to magazine style after the first chapter, he has sacrificed much of the dramatic value inherent in that period." Murray Schumach

N Y Times p36 N 3 '46 420w

"Mr. Botsford brings out little that will be new even to casual students of the industry, but he does know what he is talking about and his book is authentic if not inspired." S. H. Holbrook

Weekly Book Review p38 N 24 '46 270w

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS (MRS ERNAN FORBES-DENNIS). Life line. 352p $2.50 Little

46-2117

A prim young Eton master, with a sincere love of all things Austrian, is persuaded to undertake to operate as an English runner, under the very noses of the Gestapo. In order to conceal his identity he becomes an inmate of a mental hospital, in the vicinity of Innsbruck. With a Jesuit priest, an artist, and a woman doctor as his co-workers, Mark Chalmers does successful work, but in the end falls into Nazi hands. His broken body is rescued, but for months his mind will not heal, until the woman doctor cures him by her understanding and love.

"It is too bad that the book wasn't written two years ago. One is troubled by the author's hindsight, and by the fact that many such novels have already been forgotten. However, the characters are fresh, especially Ida, and the set is handsome." Dorothy Hillier
+ Atlantic 177:172 Ap '46 360w

Reviewed by D. M. Weil

Book Week p14 Mr 10 '46 650w

Booklist 42:247 Ap 1 '46

Bookmark 7:15 My '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '46

"This is definitely not in the groove of Underground adventure—it is a good yarn, with an unusual setting, a substantial percentage of fresh material in the plot, and characters that are three dimensional."

+ Kirkus 14:1 Ja '46 350w

"One of Miss Bottome's most deft blends of melodrama and psychiatry. An immensely readable melange of rapid action, picturesque scenery, passion, lunatics, wild bulls, Spanish dancing horses and lycanthropy. Interspersed is really thoughtful and penetrating study of Nazi psychology. Will make splendid A-minus picture and pile up many library reserves. Recommended; why not." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 71:344 Mr 1 '46 130w

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p3 My 24 '46 150w

"This story is excellently done—in spots. Miss Bottome has always been a novelist with a strong sense of stage-craft, capable of telling a tale of sound and fury often signifying much more than nothing. But in 'The Life Line' melodrama and melodramatic revelation prove too strong a lure. Background figures that might have slipped closer to the foreground—German artists ignored by the New Order; Fraulein hardened to faithlessness—are left where they are. The sound and the fury increase; but the significance dwindles." William Kehoe

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 24 '46 360w

"Miss Bottome, of course, knows all there is to know about her Austrian background; she also knows a little too much about manipulating her plots."

New Yorker 22:101 Mr 9 '46 120w

"'The Life Line' is a tense and sombre narration of events past; it reveals the destruction, disintegration, and dismay that were the Nazi gifts to Middle Europe. The course of events is familiar, and hardly less familiar are the joyless purpose of the German people, the sullen endurance of the subjugated nations, and the dark little rivers of resistance that ran underground in the occupied countries. But 'The Life Line' is so tightly and articulately written, so steadily mounting in its tensions, that it has no less compulsion. On that score it is a brilliant and irresistible book." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R of Lit 29:31 Mr 23 '46 750w

Reviewed by V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

Spec 176:516 My 17 '46 160w

"In this novel small matters give more pleasure than great ones. The Spanish dancing horses, for instance, spirited out of Vienna and put through their paces in a barn attached to a private lunatic asylum—these seem livelier than the tormented persons of the story."

Times [London] Lit Sup p257 Je 1 '46 230w

"After getting off to a slightly ragged start, 'The Life Line' catches the best beat and moves forward as a dramatic story. . . Indeed, it is something more than this, for the author is not satisfied merely to present action and romance for their own sake, but seeks to discover the spiritual source—or perhaps one should say the source in the spirit—from which Nazism sprang. She has set her story against a background of towering peaks, tiny mountain farms and the once charming city of Innsbruck, all of which she describes lovingly from what must be intimate personal knowledge." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 10 '46 800w

Wis Lib Bul 42:75 My '46

BOURKE-WHITE, MARGARET. See White, M. B.

BOUTELL, CLARENCE BURLEY. Fat baron; pictures by Frank Lieberman. [44p] $2 Houghton 46-7096

Cautionary tale about a very fat baron who was besieged in his own castle by another knight. When the meat gave out the fat baron and his retainers took to eating vegetables, and grew thinner and thinner, while the besiegers grew fat on a meat diet. The result was that the siege was won, by the no-longer fat baron.

Reviewed by Martha King
Book Week p17 N 17 '46 230w

'A story full of flavor and fun, with enough feel for authentic detail to give it quite an air.'

Kirkus 14:324 J1 15 '46 120w

"Recommended for ages 8-10." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 71:1544 N 1 '46 70w

"Five to 8-year-olds will chuckle over the immense absurdities of the Baron, which are ably depicted by Frank Lieberman. Just how long, however, distracted parents can use this tale as an incentive to eating vegetables depends on how soon small realists will recognize the fact that its principles of nutrition aren't strictly scientific." E. L. Buell
N Y Times p31 Ja 19 '47 180w

Weekly Book Review p40 N 10 '46 360w

BOWDEN, ABERDEEN ORLANDO, and others. Day before yesterday in America; il. by Lorence Bjorkland. 283p $1.44 Macmillan 970.1 Indians—Juvenile literature. Eskimos—Juvenile literature 46-1886

Supplementary material on the Eskimos and on the Indian tribes of North and South America, of long ago. Contains a word list and an index. For grades four to five.

Booklist 42:369 J1 15 '46

School & Society 63:366 My 18 '46 80w

BOWEN, EDMUND JOHN. Chemical aspects of light. 2d ed rev 300p $5 (15s) Oxford 535 Light. Spectrum analysis. Radiation [47-267]

"The second edition of this book has the same aim as the first [Book Review Digest, 1943] to present modern ideas of matter and light as far as possible in a non-mathematical form. Much of the text has been rewritten, partly to correct errors, but chiefly to replace the particle concept of electrons in atoms by the wave concept. Wave-mechanics is a difficult subject which cannot by its intrinsic nature be conveyed in a pictorial form, yet such a theoretically unsound task is what is attempted here. So long as the resulting limitations are kept in mind it is better to have a useful but imperfect tool adapted to the chemist's purposes than the pure truth in an unusable form. The treatment is deliberately extensive rather than intensive, and is intended to supplement rather than to replace existing text-books and articles." (Pref) Index.

"The author states that his treatment of the subject is deliberately extensive rather than intensive and is intended to supplement rather than replace existing textbooks and articles. In this way it becomes a most valuable addition to the literature in the fields of spectrochemistry, photochemistry, and the chemistry of luminescence. . . . Divested of the necessity of dealing with a large amount of experimental material and of an excessively mathematical treatment the author has presented the various subjects in a comprehensible form that will attract and instruct both students and research workers." S. C. Lind
+ J Phys Chem 50:490 N '46 220w

"In this, the second edition, extensive revision has been made. This brings it into accord with modern ideas of the atomic electrons, whose shifts are responsible for light emission. Once thought of as particles, these electrons are now considered from the point of view of waves. That is the approach of the author, who has here produced a valuable summary of these important concepts." James Stockley

+ Weekly Book Review p38 O 27 '46 180w

BOWEN, ELIZABETH (MRS ALAN CAMERON). Ivy gripped the steps, and other stories [Eng title: Demon lover, and other stories]. 233p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Cape, J] 46-3134

Contents: In the square; Sunday afternoon; The inherited clock; The cheery soul; Songs my father sang me; The demon lover; Careless talk; The happy autumn fields; Ivy gripped the steps; Pink May; Green holly; Mysterious Kör.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Book Week p3 Ap 14 '46 360w
Booklist 42:317 Je 1 '46

"One has learned to expect only the best from Miss Bowen. Every passage bespeaks the utmost attention to style. It is a thoroughly modern style, not lavish, 'poetic,' smelling of the lamp. As style should in fiction, it draws no adventitious attention to itself." D. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 20 '46 450w

Reviewed by Kappo Phelan
Commonweal 44:311 J1 12 '46 1200w

"The very particular qualities associated with Elizabeth Bowen, the fine fastidiousness, the refinement of intelligence, again displayed to happy advantage in a selection of twelve short stories. . . . Hers is a very special talent; a subtlety, occasionally carried to an excess where substance is dissipated; an immaculacy which, within its self-imposed limits, reaches artistic perfection."

+ Kirkus 14:108 Mr 1 '46 170w

"For all readers who appreciate delicacy of perception and poignancy of expression and for those who care for cultivated and intelligent English and Irish people." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 71:484 Ap 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse
Manchester Guardian p3 N 2 '45 60w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 162:484 Ap 20 '46 240w

"There's little doubt that Ivy Gripped the Steps is one of the most important contributions to 'home-front' literature. It is the only work of fiction I've read that deals with the psychological states, or what Miss Bowen calls the 'overcharged subconsciousness,' of civilians in a besieged and bombarded country." James Stern

+ New Repub 114:628 Ap 29 '46 1350w

"Her short stories possess the qualities of her novels, but inevitably the atmosphere in her short stories is richer and more concentrated. The more elaborate of them suggest the climaxes or the elements of novels, but in a necessarily muted or diminished form; it is their atmosphere which moulds them, and which at times perhaps even brings them into existence." Henry Reed

+ New Statesman & Nation 30:302 N 3 '46 1000w

"Elizabeth Bowen has been writing fiction for over twenty years and has enjoyed the appreciation of an ever enlarging audience. But hitherto her deserved praise has generally been qualified by some comparison to Katherine Mansfield or Virginia Woolf, presumably because there is an inevitable affinity among all upper-middle-class English women of sensibility and intelligence who are seriously interested in writing. Actually, she was never much like either of them, but by now, in her new book, she deals with original problems in such complete control of her art that she is herself a standard figure in contemporary fiction to whom others may henceforth be referred, for all the truth there's likely to be in the comparison." John Farrelly
+ N Y Times p1 Ap 7 '46 1250w

BOWEN, ELIZABETH—Continued

"Although these twelve beautifully written stories are by no means the most notable of Miss Bowen's works, they are a completely successful explanation of what war did to the mind and spirit of the English people."

+ New Yorker 22:105 Ap 20 '46 200w

"These are deeply charged, intensely subjective stories, compactly and beautifully written. Much has been written about the actual physical violence of war; in these stories the physical violence is present chiefly by inference, but there is an atmosphere of terror and savagery which by its very underplaying is the more pervasive and compelling. Miss Bowen gives us an emotional landscape through which the senses go, alert, bare-nerved, watchful. Her place among contemporary writers is already assured; this collection only further emphasizes the brilliance and distinction of her talent." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29:70 Ap 13 '46 750w

Reviewed by V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

Spec 175:444 N 9 '45 210w

Time 47:104 Ap 15 '46 440w

Times [London] Lit Sup p521 N 3 '45 850w

"Nothing quite like these stories has appeared before. Although much has been written, and written brilliantly, about the spirit, tenacity, humor and heroism of the English people under fire, Miss Bowen's oblique, half-hidden revelations give a completely fresh insight on a people at bay. . . The play of Miss Bowen's mind across her war-darkened world is like the play of the searchlights on the sky above an embattled city. As the shafts cross and recross, probing for one point at a time in their endless search, yet suffusing the whole horizon with their glow, so her imagination, sharp and yet fitful, sheds on the strange night of these stories a special light." Virgilia Peterson

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 7 '46 1100w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 35:766 summer '46 400w

BOWEN, MRS LOUISE HADDUCK (DE KOVEN). Open windows; stories of people and places. 272p $2.50 Seymour

B or 92 Addams, Jane 46-18939

"Reminiscences of girlhood days, world travels, and welfare work at Hull House with Jane Addams, covering a space of eighty-seven years." Social Studies

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks

Book Week p4 Jl 7 '46 140w

Reviewed by E. E. Perkins

N Y Times p70 O 6 '46 230w

Social Studies 37:286 O '46 30w

BOWEN, ROBERT SIDNEY. Make mine murder. 252p $2 Crown

46-6949

Detective story.

"This is a rough-and-tumble yarn both in the action involved and in the telling of it."

N Y Times p24 N 3 '46 130w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 13 '46 40w

"Tuff and torrid."

Sat R of Lit 29:47 O 19 '46 50w

BOWER, MRS BARBARA EUPHAN (TODD). Miss Ranskill comes home. 247p $2.75 Putnam [8s 6d Chapman]

46-6174

Miss Ranskill, a gently reared English spinster, fell overboard while on a cruise in 1938. She found refuge on an island, whose sole inhabitant was a marooned ship's carpenter. For four years the two lived there and then the carpenter died and Miss Ranskill embarked on the boat which they had built. After her rescue by a ship in a convoy Miss Ranskill was set down in England at war, an England she had never known. There follows the account of her disillusionment and her readjustment.

"I found this not-at-all-usual desert island story a small treasure. It is sensitively written, with deftness and restraint and not a little beauty. Miss Ranskill's viewpoint of civilization is stimulating in a way similar to Gulliver's. I should think returning servicemen might share her impatience, feminine though it is, with the meaningless trappings of our lives. There are necessarily improbabilities, but the reader certainly will not take sides with the dull and incredulous to whom Miss Ranskill has such difficulty explaining her freakish situation." Elizabeth Stewart

+ Book Week p5 Jl 28 '46 360w

Booklist 43:16 S '46

"In spite of the prefab structure on which the story is based, there are moments of telling sentiment and warm characterization, of clearcut contrasts in values, of quizzical questioning of spurious all-out-for-victory activities. . . A definite popular appeal in this, with its capable narration and characterization."

+ — Kirkus 14:258 Je 1 '46 250w

"A witty first novel that besides being continuously entertaining displays a fine appreciation of life's values. . . There are some delightful pieces of portraiture in the course of the story; indeed, every person in the book comes to life under Miss Bower's inspired hand." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 12 '46 140w

Reviewed by Anne Richards

N Y Times p10 Ag 18 '46 320w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p17 O 20 '46 300w

"Miss Bower's novel is a variation on the theme of human behavior. It is somber, satiric, often bitter, a mixture of realism and romanticism. The book approaches a modern morality play; it is an idea, an allegory in a way, in which fantasy is blended with fact for the purpose of the whole. . . What Miss Bower intended to do, she has done. Her book is a subtle, and an unsparring, criticism of our times, written with great skill, charm and originality." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29:26 Ag 3 '46 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p341 Jl 20 '46 480w

"In 'Miss Ranskill Comes Home,' Miss Barbara Bower, a young English writer, loads a well worn literary vehicle with as nice a payload of pungently satirical social criticism as has been seen driving along these roads for many a day. A Model T plot piloted by a very skilful driver can out-carry and out-manuever, it seems, the sturdiest of newfangled jeeps. . . 'Miss Ranskill Comes Home' is probing and witty and at the same time gentle and humane. It makes us feel anew how much nicer it would be to live a sweeter, honester, less trivial life in a sweeter, honester, less trivial world." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Jl 28 '46 850w

BOWKER, BENJAMIN CUSHING. Out of uniform. 259p il maps $2.75 Norton

355.115 Soldiers. Veterans. World war, 1939-1945—U.S. 46-8182

"An author, who became a lieutenant colonel and saw foreign service in some 18 countries in both Europe and the Pacific, and who at present is chief foreign correspondent of the New York Evening Post, has undertaken to give a comprehensive survey of the American soldier and sailor in World War II. He has combined in his pages statistics from the War Department together with his own observations and general investigation and he has attempted to give a concrete idea of what both men and women in the armed forces 'thought, were taught, and did in the service, and what they expect out of uniform.'" (Book Week) Index.

Book Week p2 D 1 '46 100w

Booklist 43:128 Ja 1 '47

"This is probably the fullest, frankest and most objective study of the effects of military service on the manners, morals, attitudes, opinions and vocabulary of the men who were engaged in it. Here is an immense amount of factual information, some of it statistical, together with opinions and generalizations."

+ Christian Century 64:18 Ja 1 '47 120w

"There has been—to my knowledge—no other book of this type: the evidence it offers holds fascination as well as a sociological import. The timing, however, and the many other veteran books, make its market questionable."

+ Kirkus 14:370 Ag 1 '46 190w

Social Studies 38:48 Ja '47 20w

BOWLES, CHESTER. Tomorrow without fear. 88p il $2.50; pa $1 Simon & Schuster

338.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S. 46-26199

"By 1960, says the champion of the O.P.A. . . . this country can have an annual income of four hundred billions and a higher standard of living for everybody. . . . The author explains how this pleasant state of affairs can be achieved. Mr. Bowles' first requisite is, of course, keeping the lid on prices, and his argument for the O.P.A. is considerably more explicit and lucid than the stuff you have been reading during the battle of the newspaper advertisements." (New Yorker) No Index.

Booklist 42:324 Je 15 '46

Bookmark 7:4 N '46

Christian Science Monitor p18 My 29 '46 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '46

"Mr. Bowles must be aware of all the muck and chaos in our national life, but out of it he sees the possible blossoming of the pond lily of an almost perfect state. Mr. Bowles' America, if his advice is followed, will be as good as anything that Plato, Sir Thomas More, Bacon, Campanella, William Morris or H. G. Wells ever imagined. It will be better, or at least more to the American taste, than the Muscovite Utopia which is so perfect that practically no one from the outside world can be permitted to look at it. Yet it is merely a projection of the best tendencies we have, and the adverse criticism that will be made of it is that it overlooks our worst tendencies. . . . Economically sound or not, Mr. Bowles is psychologically wholesome. In this country we don't have to be poor. We have proved that we can produce beyond the dreams of avarice. If we can forget our jealousies and work together there is really nothing to be scared of." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p3 My 26 '46 1800w

"Possibly the most sanguine book of the year."

New Yorker 22:95 Je 1 '46 100w

"As Chester Bowles states in the foreword to his book, he is not a professional economist, and the facts and ideas which he has gathered and presented in his book are not startlingly new. His thesis as to why we have depressions, how they can be overcome, and what the future can hold in store for America is not essentially distinctive or radical, nor is it developed in any blueprint detail. Yet this book rates a top must on the reading list of every thoughtful American. It is the clearest and most persuasive book yet written in support of the only kind of economic program which can assure sustained prosperity without compromising the basic principles of our economic system." R. R. Nathan

+ Sat R of Lit 29:8 Jl 6 '46 1200w

"As a successful advertising man now in the public service, Mr. Bowles writes in a vividly appealing style and in the manner of heart-to-heart talk well calculated to get his thesis across to the layman in political economy. His exposition is augmented with charts and pictographs by Howard Sparber, which sum up his points in lucid picture language." E. A. F.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Je 16 '46 700w

"The value of this book lies to a considerable extent in the clarity with which the argument is presented. Important factors in our economy, historic and contemporary, are highlighted in a remarkable way, and the graphic illustrations are both attention-getting and enlightening." Persla Campbell

+ Survey 82:196 Jl '46 600w

"The book is a very good example of the popular exposition and affirmation of a thesis. Its statements are easy to understand, its argument lucid. The theme is illustrated by much statistical material attractively presented. Graphs and charts show not only the total, or national, significance of figures, but also what they mean for individuals at various points in the American economy, by such communicative devices as family budgets."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 2:198 S '46 330w

"'Tomorrow Without Fear' is an excellent vehicle for political purposes. Moreover, the ideas expressed are appealing and challenging, a tonic for the mood of angry frustration which seems to have gripped the country. But it has the defects of its qualities. Simplicity, compactness and vigor are fine in themselves, but when used by a writer (who confesses he is not a 'practicing economist') in dealing with complex economic factors, they are likely to leave a good many serious questions unanswered." H. W. Baehr

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 2 '46 750w

BOWRA, CECIL MAURICE. From Virgil to Milton. 246p $4 (16s) Macmillan

808.13 Epic poetry. Virgil (Publius Vergilius Maro). Camões, Luiz de. Tasso, Torquato. Milton, John 45-6069

A study of the literary epic as exemplified in Virgil's Aeneid, Camões' Os Lusíadas, Tasso's Gerusalemme liberata, and Milton's Paradise lost. The studies of the individual poems follow an introductory essay on the characteristics of literary epics.

Booklist 42:197 F 15 '46

"Few living critics could have written a volume with such a range, and all who value the art of poetry or the interpretation of human life will find themselves in Mr. Bowra's debt." B. I. E.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 18 '45 300w

"Dr. Bowra's versatile learning is impressive: he seems equally at home with Greek, Latin, Symbolism, Russian verse and the epics of four countries. As one would expect, he has written on his four chosen epics an extremely interesting book. . . . There is not space to do justice to the scope and accomplishment of this book. To read it straight through (it should be thus read) is to be shown by a revealing interpreter a pageant of great poetry and great issues, decorated all the way with the superb, fantastic beauties and richness of men's minds. The imaginative analysis of each of the four great poems clarifies and enhances them, even where it may provoke argument; their juxtaposition links them into a magnificent synthesis." Rose Macaulay

+ New Statesman & Nation 29:340 My 26 '45 950w

"It is pleasant to report that in spite of Mr. Bowra's rather terrifying learning he is as enthusiastic as a boy who, suddenly feeling the excitement of the Iliad, begins to spell his way faster among the hexameters. This quiet verve is appealing and so is the reverent modesty with which he approaches the great poems of great poets. In short Mr. Bowra does not resemble at all those critics who regard noble writers as so many opportunities to exhibit what simulates wit or passes for penetration." Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 F 16 '46 1400w

"No doubt here and there in this work, which is at the same time scholarly and popular—a distinction we now to our shame accept without flinching—every reader will find some little bone or other to pick agreeably with Mr. Bowra. This will perhaps occur more especially with Milton. . . . This, however, is irrelevant to the issues of the book, which makes one desire yet another one, very soon, from so happy and discursive a pen." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec 174:480 My 25 '45 1000w

BOWRA, C. M.—Continued

"Into this close and select company Mr. Bowra introduces us with great skill and knowledge, wasting no words. It is a survey which covers some 1,600 and more years in time, yet there is a unity which binds these four poets together."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p198 Ap 28 '45
2600w

"This volume is remarkable for critical acumen, breadth of scholarship, and grace of style." S. C. C.

+ Weekly Book Review p22 My 12 '46
450w

BOYD, ELIZABETH FRENCH. Byron's Don Juan; a critical study. 193p $3.50 Rutgers univ. press

821 Byron, George Gordon Noel Byron, 6th baron—Don Juan 45-6838

A scholarly study of the background, composition and philosophy of Byron's Don Juan. "Miss French is impelled to inquire, 'Why did Byron not complete this poem?' Her own answer, in part, is this: 'He had carried Juan's story as far as he could on the basis of his present positive knowledge and belief. The introduction of the supernatural was a brake on his creative momentum, for it brought him up sharply against his inhibiting skepticism.' Where so many motives are observable in the inception of such a work as 'Don Juan' it is difficult to agree on the most important of them; but the apparently casual ending, the bursting of a bubble, taken in connexion with Byron's last days and valiant death, suggests that the chief motive had ceased to matter." (Times [London] Lit Sup)

"Rarely has a single literary work of the romantic period been discussed with such breadth of interest and sympathy in so agreeable a style and with so much good sense. Miss Boyd's study of Byron's reading is especially fresh and fruitful." J. T. Frederick
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p414 S 1 '45
2750w

BOYERS, BETTINA. White mazurka. 191p $2 Doubleday

Detective story. 46-4934

Kirkus 14:185 Ap 15 '46 60w

"The background and the people of the story give it a curious old-world flavor and do not detract in the least from its merit as a mystery." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 Je 23 '46 130w

"A novel of curious atmospheric charm and psychological subtlety." Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 21 '46
50w

"Odd—but good."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 Je 29 '46 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p22 Je 30 '46
270w

BOYLE, KAY. A Frenchman must die. 213p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

46-1435

A young American engineer, whose mother was French, is the central character. He escaped from a German prison, joined the Maquis, and after the liberation is still engaged in hunting spies. His pursuit of one elusive collaborator and his entanglement with this man's beautiful secretary is the story. A shorter version was serialized in the Saturday Evening Post.

"Kay Boyle is rightly considered a gifted writer. But this novel is a far cry from the general excellence of her earlier performances. The writing is spotty and not in the best Boyle tradition, while the content is both trivial and tawdry. . . . The characters are irritatingly cut-and-dried. The heroine looks at the hero with a 'cool and mocking glance.' The hero gets all confused when he gazes at our heroine. The book is replete with similar banalities and thus becomes just another tedious novel." David Karno

— Book Week p6 Mr 31 '46 270w

Booklist 42:247 Ap 1 '46

"Accomplished adventure, with just the right flush of ardor and idealism."

+ Kirkus 13:534 D 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 N 29 '46 80w

"By abandoning [the] singleness of effect Kay Boyle destroys the integrity of 'A Frenchman Must Die.' The novel begins as a man-hunt. . . . This would have been enough. . . . But Miss Boyle has added diversions. There is a girl to be kissed. There are the stream-of-consciousness aberrations of the central character. There are the clichés of personality delineation, such as that of the young Texas flier. These so flaw the surface of hard validity that the whole stone crumbles at last in the mind. Those who admire Miss Boyle are comforted only by remembering that she has also written recently such stories as 'Winter Night.'" Lawrence Lee

— + N Y Times p43 Ap 7 '46 370w

"For short stretches, Miss Boyle's fine writing makes you forget that you are reading what, if intended as such or not, is plain melodrama. Her descriptive passages are concise, well focused, and sometimes quite beautiful. Her characters are clear and speak to the point." Robert Pick

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:16 Ap 20 '46 650w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

— Spec 177:622 D 6 '46 100w

"Miss Boyle knows her France; and the incidental detail and descriptions in her novel, the maquis, the urban members of the resistance, the police of Laval's malice still plotting under ground, the Savoy landscape and the city bistro are convincing. Considered as what it claims to be, 'a story of love and intrigue,' the book may be unreservedly recommended."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p589 N 30 '46
480w

"With the cold beauty of language that is her special gift, Miss Boyle tells the story of Guy Mitchie's hunt of Charles Pliny. . . . The story of Mitchie and Danielle, which gives the novel its romantic theme, is the least satisfactory in the book. Compared to the rest of the material, it is a little pat and slick. It is in the description of French character that Miss Boyle excels. Pliny, effectively disguised as a priest, talking to Mitchie in the gentle accents of a man who abhors war, is a splendid portrait of a French collaborator." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 31 '46
700w

BOYLE, KAY. Thirty stories. 362p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

46-11845

Selection from the author's short stories published during the last twenty years. They are divided into the following groups: Early group: 1927-1934; Austrian group: 1933-1938; English group: 1935-1936; French group: 1939-1942; American group: 1942-1946.

Book Week p42 D 1 '46 90w

Booklist 43:132 Ja 1 '47

Kirkus 14:465 S 15 '46 160w

"The final emphasis in the collection is not one that has to do with men's failings. What the stories push home is the high-heartedness and faith and daring, the relationship, thicker than blood, of those of all countries whose ideals are more precious to them than their safety. It is itself a high-hearted book." E. R. Mirrielees

+ N Y Times p9 D 1 '46 1000w

"Three qualities stand out in these stories written over a period of 20 years. They have none of the earmarks of feminine fiction, they never strive for the neat ending and the emotion always has a genuine ring, although often it is an emotion that you can not name, that you only feel. . . . These stories show how Kay Boyle has experimented and how she has developed her 'art of the short story.' She has not been afraid of the untrodden path or of unfamiliar horizons." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p32 D 1 '46 250w

"Miss Boyle is a storyteller, a superb one; by and large, the best in this country, and one of the best now living. This somewhat belated point of view concerning her work emerges clearly, it seems to me, in this present volume of her collected tales, especially as they have been arranged chronologically and according to background; according, that is, to the country in which they are laid." Struthers Burt

+ Sat R of Lit 29:11 N 30 '46 1100w

"It is a welcome event to have the pick of Miss Boyle's stories available again in book form, and particularly in so careful and representative a selection. . . At her best, as James Gray has observed, Kay Boyle is an 'economical housewife of the short-story technique.' Her writing is always controlled and seldom contrived. Her mature talent is a thing of beauty for readers and writers alike." Richard Match

+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 1 '46 650w

BOYLSTON, MRS HELEN (DORE). Carol on tour; il. by Major Felten. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 205p $2 Little

46-7094

The fourth in this series about Carol Page and her stage career. It takes her from a part in a successful Broadway play to a season "on tour." For older girls.

Kirkus 14:326 S 1 '46 60w

Reviewed by E. E. Frank

Library J 71:1810 D 15 '46 90w

"An excellent new addition to the Carol Page series about life behind the footlights. . . Carol's experiences on the road will interest every young person who likes the theatre." Rosejeanne Slifer

+ N Y Times p4 N 10 '46 100w

Reviewed by K. Dombaugh

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 10 '46 250w

"The most valuable feature of this excellent story of a stage career is that it is the fourth of a series in which Carol has already appeared as high-school amateur, in summer stock and in bit parts on Broadway. For once serial type of publication has been amply justified. For a career story of this profession must not be rushed."

+ Weekly Book Review p38 N 10 '46 360w

BRACE, ERNEST. Buried stream. 290p $2.50 Harcourt

46-3590

Character study of a middle-aged man, a success in the business world, who suddenly realizes that his life has been a failure. He delves into his past in an attempt to discover where he took the wrong turn, and in his efforts to discover the secret, the story is told.

"'Buried Stream' is a novel about the treacherous cross-currents and eddies that swirl beneath the seemingly placid surface of American middle-class life. Aimed at a literate audience, the narrative is intelligently conceived and quietly written. It misses being literature simply because the author lacks the magic catalyst of art; but he has some next-best things, including acute perception and mature judgment." Martin Savelle

+ Book Week p13 Ap 21 '46 320w

Christian Century 63:724 Je 5 '46 140w

Reviewed by Francis Downing

Commonweal 44:124 My 17 '46 600w

Kirkus 14:184 Ap 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by Scott Adams

Library J 71:586 Ap 15 '46 70w

"'Buried Stream' is a very talky book and does not compensate in profundity for what it lacks in pace." Alfred Butterfield

N Y Times p28 Ap 21 '46 240w

"Mr. Brace does a difficult thing very well—he makes the spiritual awakening of a middle-aged, extroverted businessman credible and moving, and even takes him with dignity through a brief affair with a very young girl. Slow and too cautious at first, the novel, without ever becoming intense or profound, presents a thoughtful, intelligent tale about an honest man who starts thinking things out late in life."

+ New Yorker 22:106 Ap 20 '46 90w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 29:35 My 18 '46 650w

"As literature, this book may live, for it is well written and it portrays a mood that overtakes large numbers of people in times of social transition. The average reader, however, may find it tiresome, for though there is some action, especially toward the end, the great bulk consists of subtle psychological analysis of unexpressed thoughts and inhibited feelings. Even when the characters converse, what they say is less important than what they leave unsaid." M. F. Martin

+ Spring'd Republican p4d J1 28 '46 550w

"'Buried Stream' is an absorbing novel of ideas. Mr. Brace holds up the mirror of discontent to every intelligent person, and the reflection bears disturbing outlines. His portrayal of a man who lived with compromise and sought to escape in dreams of lost worlds is deeply moving. He is equally effective with the other characters of the book. All of them have the stature and stamp of individuals." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 21 '46 1000w

BRADFORD, MARGARET, comp. Keep singing, keep humming; a collection of play and story songs; accompaniments by Barbara Woodruff; il. by Lucienne Bloch. 66p $2 Scott, W.R.

784 Children's songs

46-3004

Thirty-seven songs, with music, for ages four to seven. They are in two groups, one called play songs, and the other story songs. Some are recorded from songs made up by small children themselves; others are traditional.

Booklist 42:303 My 15 '46

"The music is fitted to young voices, the pictures are bright and childlike and the printing is good. Such a book will be much enjoyed in schools and homes." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:204 My '46 140w

"The material has freshness and appeal, and deals with things of special interest to children from four to seven. The accompaniments are blessedly simple for parents who have only basic essentials of musical competence, and who are inexperienced in watching children and music at one and the same time. The tempo marks are in English, the music unpretentious but melodic."

+ Kirkus 14:103 F 15 '46 150w

Reviewed by E. M. Gordon

Library J 71:982 J1 '46 70w

N Y Times p18 Mr 31 '46 90w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:144 D 7 '46 80w

Sat R of Lit 29:45 Je 15 '46 10w

"The best songbook for children of four to seven years to be brought out in many a day." L. S. Bechtel

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 31 '46 230w

BRADLEY, CHARLES B. Design in the industrial arts. 254p il $3 Manual arts

745.43 Design, Industrial 46-1069

Study of the problems of art and design as applied to modern handicrafts and the selection of manufactured articles for daily use. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:209 Mr 1 '46

N Y New Tech Bks 31:23 Ap '46

School & Society 63:463 Je 29 '46 20w

BRADLEY, CLIFF. Building the small boat; il. by [the author]. 222p $1.95 Macmillan

623.823 Boat building 46-3544

Practical handbook for the amateur, describing the layout and building of small boats. Includes line drawings and blueprints. Index.

Booklist 42:312 Je 1 '46

"Good for camps, school libraries, etc."
+ Kirkus 14:73 F 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:345 Mr 1 '46 70w
Wis Lib Bul 42:84 Je '46

BRAHMS, CARYL, pseud. See Abrahams, D. C.

BRAMELD, THEODORE BURGHARD HURT. Minority problems in the public schools; a study of administrative policies and practices in seven school systems. 264p $2.50 Harper

371.9 Intercultural education. Educational surveys. School administration and organization 46-25180

"Dr. Brameld attempts to find out what administrative practices in schools help or hinder the development of good human relations. His book surveys with some considerable detail the policies of seven school systems in cities ranging in population from 80,000 to one million. Demographic and occupational patterns are analyzed as well as such factors as community relations, administrative machinery, educational organization, activity programs and parent-teacher cooperation. The guiding philosophies in these school systems were mixed: both clear-cut progressivism and the more usual acceptance of traditional values were evident. Nor was there a marked trend toward decentralization or greater staff participation in policy-making. Intercultural programs were consequently varied; only a few of the school systems made deliberate efforts to meet the minority problem." (New Repub) Index.

Booklist 42:324 Je 15 '46

New Repub 115:20 Jl 8 '46 200w

School & Society 63:397 Je 1 '46 20w

"This book should be of interest and value to any administrator, superintendent, or principal who wishes to know whether his present practices in dealing with minority problems are in accordance with the generally accepted definition of democracy in education. The book is objective and realistic." A. F. O'Hearn
+ School R 54:618 D '46 850w

"Candidate, realistic evaluations and specific recommendations conclude the survey of each city system. The standards of judgment thus established can be used by any administrator to assess the effectiveness of his own intercultural effort and to improve thereon." P. W. Coons

+ Social Educ 10:382 D '46 500w

Social Studies 37:286 O '46 20w

"The study is of course indeterminate, but interesting as dealing with a problem that all America is thinking about." H. W. Marr
+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 18 '46 700w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:308 D '46 220w

BRAMSON, ROY T. Highlights in the history of American mass production; il. from the Carl W. Drepperd collection. 144p $2 Bramson pub. co, 2842 W. Grand blvd, Detroit

609 Industrial arts—History. U.S.—Industries and resources—History 46-311

"The editor of Production Engineering and Management has assembled the highlights of America's mass production. Beginning with the new type of scythe invented and hammered out by water power in Massachusetts Bay Colony, he traces development in some fifty lines of production. Copiously illustrated." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:55 Ja 1 '46 70w

Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 17 '46 240w

BRAND, CHRISTIANNA, pseud. See Lewis, M. C.

BRANDT, HEIDI. Doing things [il. by the author]. 56p 50c World pub.

46-22077

"Simply told, this book is intended for the child who is just beginning to express an interest in books. The story is of two children, and the things they do from waking in the morning until they go to sleep again at night." San Francisco Chronicle

"A good idea, rather dully executed."

Kirkus 14:521 O 15 '46 40w

Reviewed by V. W. Schott

Library J 71:1544 N 1 '46 50w

"Because the things the children do in the story would be familiar to almost any 2 to 4-year old, this book should be popular with the very young reader. The print is large and the illustrations are attractive and in keeping with the story." Dorothy Peterson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 10 '46 80w

"These pictures are rapidly but carefully made; outlines are simple, color lifelike. Between getting up and going to bed, it would be hard to miss, with all these recorded enterprises, something on which a happy little four-year-old will not bring down a finger with 'That's me!'" M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 5 '47 220w

BRANSON, CLIVE. British soldier in India; letters. 124p $1.25 Int. pubs. [5s Central bks] 915.4 India. British in India [44-40357]

"Clive Branson, a troop sergeant in the Royal Armoured Corps, was killed in action on the Arakan front in February [1944]. This book consists of extracts from his letters to his wife, written from May, 1942, when he arrived in India, up to a few days before his death. In these letters he has set down simply what many British soldiers less articulate have felt and are feeling about what they see in India." Manchester Guardian

"Branson was often angry at what he saw, but he did not allow anger to cloud either his understanding or his sympathy. The descriptions in his letters are a valuable commentary on events in India during the period they cover." J. R. L. A.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 18 '45 200w

"Clive Branson, who wrote these letters from India, was a most unusual person. He was an artist who had the talent and courage to see... He saw the poverty of the Indian masses and the incompetence of our rule with a vividness and an anger that give this book a unique value. His letters were written in haste with no thought of publication. They are not a study of the Indian problem and leave untouched many of the complications on which journalists like to dwell. None the less, by the sureness of their vision and their skill in rendering things seen and felt, they convey more of the essential truth about India than a dozen of the pretentious volumes the experts write." H. N. Brailsford

+ New Statesman & Nation 28:356 N 25 '45 700w

Spring'd Republican p4 Ja 21 '46 240w

BRANT, IRVING. The new Poland. 116p $1.50 Int. univs. press

943.8 Poland—History. Reconstruction (1939-)—Poland 46-3920

"A conscientious attempt to get the Polish scene in focus and to straighten out some of the distortions made both by overeager apologists for Soviet Russia and by a part of the American press. Mr. Brant believes, after an extended stay in Poland, that the new government is not a Russian stooge, that the Communist Party is unpopular (even though some able Party members are in the Belrut Cabinet) and not very large, and that the leaders' first objective is to put their paralyzed nation on its feet. He ends by asking us all to wait and see what happens before getting shrill about things." (New Yorker) The articles which make up the book were first published in The Chicago Sun and The New Republic and have been re-edited and expanded.

"I do not hesitate to call 'The New Poland' mandatory reading." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 My 12 '46 170w

Reviewed by O. Halecki

— Cath World 163:372 J1 '46 480w
New Repub 114:940 J1 1 '46 160w
New Yorker 22:118 Ap 13 '46 120w
School & Society 63:320 Ap 27 '46 90w

BRAYMER, DANIEL HARVEY, and ROE, ARTHUR CECIL. Repair-shop diagrams and connecting tables for lap-wound induction motors; practical step-by-step information and instructions for connecting all types of windings for two-phase and three-phase motors of 2 to 24 poles. 2d ed 387p il $3.50 McGraw

621.31364 Electric motors, Induction 46-1190

"A standard book for vocational students, electrical maintenance men, and motor winders. This edition has been extensively revised, and a large amount of new text and illustrative matter added. The emphasis of the book is now on the three-phase motor. Accordingly, some of the more detailed material on the two-phase motor that appeared in the first edition (1927) has been deleted, but the basic data has been retained, and there is even some new matter on this type of motor. The useful Finding Index for connecting diagrams has been retained." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index

Library J 70 890 O 1 '46 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:7 Ja '46

BRAZEAL, BRAILSFORD REESE. Brotherhood of sleeping car porters, its origin and development; foreword by Leo Wolman. 258p il $3 Harper

331.88156 Brotherhood of sleeping car porters 46-2727

"Dr. Brazeal, Professor of Economics at Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga., has traced the history of the Pullman porter from the creation of the sleeping-car industry by George Pullman down to the present day, when the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters is an accredited union in the American Federation of Labor and a factor for the well-being of the Negro worker." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Daniel Bell

Am J Soc 52:280 N '46 600w

"The entire book is the result of clear thinking and painstaking research. It is recommended to students of both race relations and industrial relations." H. R. Northrup

+ Ann Am Acad 246:161 J1 '46 360w

Booklist 42:261 Ap 15 '46

"This record of their brotherhood's history is documentary evidence of the Negro's capacity to handle his labor problems with discretion and competence when given a chance."

+ Christian Century 63:463 Ap 10 '46 110w

Kirkus 13:540 D 1 '45 130w

Reviewed by George Streater

N Y Times p32 Ap 7 '46 430w

Reviewed by G. S. Mitchell

Social Forces 25:228 D '46 330w

"A scholarly, well-documented record of a highly interesting phase of trade unionism. Mr Brazeal has provided a well-balanced, authenticated record of one of the least publicized of the railroad brotherhoods." J. S. K. + Springfield Republican p4d My 19 '46 370w

"Persons interested in the labor movement, and especially in the racial aspects of it, will find the detailed account of this all-Negro labor union not only interesting, but often heavy with suggestions on the ways things might best be done. The author qualified himself to tell the story by extensive interviews with members and leaders of the Brotherhood, as well as by reading the voluminous records of the organization and related materials."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:233 S '46 220w

Reviewed by E. M. Herrick

Weekly Book Review p26 Ap 28 '46 400w

Wis Lib Bul 42:70 My '46

BREBNER, JOHN BARTLET. North Atlantic triangle; the interplay of Canada, the United States and Great Britain. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of economics and history. Relations of Canada and the United States) 385p maps $4 Yale univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—Canada. Canada—Foreign relations—U.S. A45-1973

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"This volume is a masterpiece of interpretation and synthesis. It reveals a remarkable grasp of the details of the history of three nations. Its emphases are correct, and the author has written in a spirit of tolerance and understanding, and with a modesty that realizes that not all the conclusions drawn from the present maelstrom can be expected to be completely valid twenty-five years after the war. The maps and bibliography are excellent. The book should be required reading in Canada and the United States." Carl Wittke

+ Am Hist R 51:286 Ja '46 550w

"One of the pleasant features of this readable study is the author's fondness for historical parallels and inclination to summarize historical trends in epigrammatic fashion. . . The value of this work is heightened by its ample supply of maps, many reprinted from earlier volumes in the series, and its excellent bibliographical notes. In a future edition the author might avoid the use of the inaccurate phrase 'Dominion of Canada.'" F. H. Soward

+ Canadian Hist R 27:58 Mr '46 1600w

Foreign Affairs 24:349 Ja '46 50w

"This book has been brewing for more than a decade, but the result is well worth the waiting. . . That study has already led to the publication of a score of scholarly volumes, and Mr. Brebner, whose insight set the scheme in motion, has now presented in this volume the final flower of a splendid effort." F. C. James

+ Survey G 35:56 F '46 1100w

BRECHT, ARNOLD. Federalism and regionalism in Germany; the division of Prussia. 202p maps $2.50 Oxford

943 Germany—Politics and government. Prussia 45-11294

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by H. C. Deutsch

Am Hist R 52:118 O '46 400w

Reviewed by C. J. Friedrich

Am Pol Sci R 40:364 Ap '46 280w

"The book may be likened to a little parcel, tightly packed. The intricacies of the historical background, the particulars of diverse solutions proposed and tried, and the details of painstaking documentation allow of no easy reading. But there may be compensation, for some readers at least, in the unquestionable popularity of the author's obiter dictum that 'Prussia must be eliminated as a single unit.'" Johannes Mattern

Ann Am Acad 244:214 Mr '46 450w

Foreign Affairs 24:557 Ap '46 40w

"Dr. Brecht writes with precision and detachment in the tradition of the great American and English lawyers. His book should be pondered by all those who are now called upon to lay the foundations of a new federal Germany."

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:213 S 21 '46 150w

Reviewed by J. H. Wuorinen

Pol Sci Q 61:138 Mr '46 450w

BRECHT, ARNOLD—Continued

Reviewed by Goronwy Rees

Spec 177:372 O 11 '46 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p3 Ja 4 '47
800w

"At first glance this book might seem designed for experts on constitutional history and comparative government only. But whoever takes the trouble to examine the slender volume carefully will find it a gold mine of information on pressing problems of our time."

F. E. Hirsch

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Mr 31 '46
600w

BRENNAN, DAN. Never so young again. 273p
$2.50 Rinehart [8s 6d Allen, G]

46-1518

"Mack Norton, American gunner in the RAF, is one of the many young men who set off to war to find themselves and returned after experiencing much, but never so young again." A story of young fliers at war—on missions over Germany or seeking relaxation on leave, or in the neighboring town. Mack is one of them, scared, proud, exultant, downcast, happy. Flying talk and description of missions predominate [in] the story." Library J

Kirkus 13:547 D 15 '45 170w

"The story has little plot, but good characterization. Recommended." M. P. McKay
+ Library J 71:344 Mr 1 '46 100w

"Though it reveals some skill in characterisation and contains some exciting incidents its chief interest lies in the telling glimpses it gives of the conditions of Service training. As a novel it is somewhat shapeless and incoherent." Wilfrid Gibson
+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 5 '44 50w

"The chief trouble with 'Never So Young Again' is that it is not quite old enough. Its author . . . experienced the boredom, cynicism and promise of war, all of which he has earnestly included in his novel. If he had been content to stop there, his book would have been better than it is. But he has thrown in a rather conventional and unconvincing love story, numerous flashbacks to his hero's past, and a great deal of youthful philosophizing. On the whole, it is an inordinately self-conscious piece of work." David Dempsey
+ N Y Times p20 Mr 17 '46 500w

"What distinguishes the narrative from a dozen like it is the author's convincing exposition of the sort of creeping spiritual paralysis that overcomes the men who have aged under the terror of continued bombing assignments. Mr. Brennan may develop into a more expert writer, but he can hardly become more uncompromisingly honest."

+ New Yorker 22:97 Mr 23 '46 120w

Reviewed by A. C. Fields

Sat R of Lit 29:18 Ap 20 '46 800w

"His book has numerous weaknesses; one can pick holes in his technique; jib at his plot; regret that he has read Mr. Ernest Hemingway not wisely but too well; sneer at his lack of objectivity and balance. And yet when his work is compared with that of such expert and practised writers of fiction as Miss Vicki Baum and Mr. John Brophy, it is the fumbling beginner, with all his clumsiness, who makes the deepest impression." John Hampson
Spec 172:600 Je 30 '44 300w

"The author is evidently anxious to reproduce the strain and tension which the night-bomber crews feel, but he writes with so little in hand that he tends to make them all merely egocentric in a way that obscures the war itself and indeed everything except the beer and kisses between the intervals of flying."

Times [London] Lit Sup p221 My 6 '44
360w

"Mr. Brennan's narrative is loaded with action, but his staccato style tends to become monotonous. Profanity is too pointlessly transcribed, and reiteration of the name of the Deity—which appears as often as eight times in one short paragraph—serves no useful purpose." George Conrad

Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 24 '46 230w

BRENNAN, ELLEN ELIZABETH. Plural office-holding in Massachusetts, 1760-1780; its relation to the "separation" of Departments of government. 227p $3 Univ. of N.C. press [18s 6d Oxford]

342.7449 Massachusetts—Politics and government—Colonial period 45-6802

"It has been assumed that the principle of separation of powers in American government was derived from colonial experience and justified by Montesquieu's theory of balancing power to prevent tyranny. Now Ellen E. Brennan demonstrates . . . that the obnoxious custom of prominent officials occupying several important offices at the same time was the primary cause of the separation of legislative, executive, and judicial departments in the first state government of Massachusetts. After mentioning some of the prevalent assumptions concerning the origin of the separation-of-powers idea, she proceeds to expound her thesis by means of logical conclusions from historical evidence, that the separation of personnel in the three branches was designed to prevent executive supremacy." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. F. Mullett

Am Hist R 51:390 Ja '46 320w

"From this interesting, well-written, and fully documented history of two decades, it appears that the arguments against oligarchy were based upon English common law and colonial experience, not upon abstract concepts of balanced power. Functions were shared, but offices were separated so that a government of laws instead of men might prevail. The book is a valuable contribution to American political theory." J. E. Briggs

+ Am Pol Sci R 39:1234 D '45 240w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Ag 19 '45 40w

"This is a useful study. With diligent scholarship the author has contributed to the reappraisal of a cardinal constitutional tenet." D. G. Morgan

+ New Eng Q 19:273 Je '46 650w

Reviewed by R. B. Morris

Pol Sci Q 61:157 Mr '46 650w

BRENT, HARRISON. Pauline Bonaparte; a woman of affairs. 279p $3.50 Rinehart

B or 92 Borghese, Maria Paolina (Bonaparte) principessa

Biography of Pauline Bonaparte, Napoleon's beautiful, but empty-headed youngest sister. "Author shows great restraint in placing no undue emphasis on the more scandalous aspects of her career, and conveys a clear picture of her devotion to her brother. Customs, manners and dress of the period are so fully described that this book should be read both for pleasure and information." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Kirkus 14:409 Ag 15 '46 180w

"Excellent account of life and activities of Napoleon's favorite sister, which vividly portrays her colorful personality, capricious tendencies, and love of extravagance. . . Good bibliography. Highly recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 71:1464 O 15 '46 100w

New Yorker 22:126 N 23 '46 120w

"The story as such is very well told. Harrison Brent has wit and great fluency of style. He provides a wealth of detail. One could wish, however, that he had dared to dramatize more, dissolving here a letter into dialogue, expanding there a vital interview into a full-fledged scene. His book might have gained intensity of life without seeming less true." Felizia Seyd

+ Weekly Book Review p41 N 24 '46 600w

BRENTANO, LOWELL. Ways to better hearing; diagrams by Ralph Graeter. 95p $2.50; pa $1 Watts, F.

617.8 Hearing. Deaf, The SG46-156

"Tells how the hard of hearing can meet their handicap, what mechanical aids will do, and what was done for deaf servicemen. Includes chapters on lip reading and speech training, addresses of local chapters of the American society for the hard of hearing, lists hearing aids approved by the American medical association, and gives directions for their care." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 42:294 My 15 '46

Spring'd Republican p6 F 8 '46 240w

BRERETON, LEWIS HYDE. The Brereton diaries. 450p $4 Morrow
940.544973 World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 46-6836

The personal record of World war II of General Brereton, a graduate of Annapolis, who served in every principal theater of the war. His diary covers the period from October 3, 1941 to May 8, 1945. "He started the war with MacArthur and ended it with Eisenhower; in between he served in Java, Australia, India, Egypt, North Africa, England and France." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by W. A. S. Douglas

Book Week p19 N 17 '46 600w

Booklist 43:84 N 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p16 O 19 '46 550w

"'Louey' Brereton pulls no punches; he is aggressive and quick in sizing up a tactical and strategic situation and he can be frank to the point of tactlessness. From such a man one might expect, therefore, war diaries of startling impact. Yet the reader will find little that is exciting and not too much that is new in the present volume. Neither in content nor in style do they reflect the same reckless, restless vigor that personifies the author." H. W. Baldwin

N Y Times p6 O 13 '46 1300w

"There is a lot of information about the war in the air, some of it new, but it is not very imaginatively presented. Many of the entries are straight communiqués and others are so heavily loaded with technical and military data that only readers who are up on such matters will get much out of them."

New Yorker 22:134 O 19 '46 120w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold

San Francisco Chronicle p10 O 27 '46 220w

"Brereton says in the beginning that he has not tried to write a history but has concentrated on giving a record of events as seen from his position. But this is not correct. The main fault in his book is that he has tried to write too much history into it, and has done it very inaccurately, and that he has failed signally to deal with those matters which seen clearly and reported fully at his own level would nourish alike the interest of those who are making an intense study of war and the reader seeking only entertainment. However, the latter is likely to find the Diaries refreshing. They are well though lively written." S. L. A. Marshall

Sat R of Lit 29:15 N 9 '46 850w

"Intended for readers of all types, the book must be considered an integral part of the semi-official literature of World War II. In so far as it discusses the formation and use of airborne troops in corps and army units, it contributes to the knowledge of what has come to be a most vital part of any nation's armed forces. . . . It is in this phase that the volume is most interesting and most valuable."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:287 D '46 210w

"There is much here of compelling interest and of lasting value, but little that is sensational, little, indeed, that is entirely new. While this diary may require a modification of many of the details of the history of the war, it does not force any change in the larger picture. And some of General Brereton's conclusions, based as they inevitably were on insufficient evidence, clearly demand modification." H. S. Commager

Weekly Book Review p1 S 29 '46 1800w

BRICK MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, CLEVELAND. Brick structures. See Stoddard, R. P., ed.

BRIDGE, ANN, pseud. Singing waters. 343p $2.75 Macmillan

46-4610

An unhappy young woman, half English, half American, wandering around Europe in the 1930's, is taken in hand by a philanthropic Norwegian. Nils opens Gloire's eyes to the beauties of simple living, citing Albania as the country in which the true values of life can be found. Once in Albania, Gloire falls in with the right people who add to Nils' teachings, and a transformation occurs.

"The narrative in Singing Waters moves slowly; it pauses to observe the birds, the landscape, the flowers of Albania; and it halts for long exchanges of dialogue which, as they verge on preachments, may dry up an American's interest. As a partisan of Old Europe, Miss Bridge has allowed herself to become both tart and didactic, and when her characters condemn the United States, our justice, our big business, our education, our scholarship, our classless society, or when they sing praises of Europe's peasantry and handwork, the author behind them is speaking with a condescension and a snobbery which are more than her people can bear. I am sorry that thesis has discolored what might otherwise have been a picturesque if tenuous story." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 178:144 J1 '46 280w

Booklist 42:348 J1 1 '46

Christian Century 63:1152 S 25 '46 200w

+ — Commonweal 44:337 J1 19 '46 460w

"Interesting solely for the introduction of the reader to a stalwart, magnetic people and a dramatic country; as a novel it is insignificant and superficial."

Kirkus 14:179 Ap 15 '46 190w

"The author stresses the value of a responsible aristocracy. There is little plot but much quiet charm." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 71:406 Mr 15 '46 70w

"Generally we look confidently to Ann Bridge for good story-telling entertainment: familiar characterizations among exotic settings, intelligent travelogue, snatches of political chatter—and a dash of romance to take away any suggestion of educational sting. 'Singing Waters' at first promises more of the same, although the book-jacket speaks mysteriously of a strikingly provocative theme. This turns out to be a species of bee-in-the-bonnet which sometimes attacks lady globe-trotters when they have tired of the romance of travel and begun to ponder on its vast significance. . . . At no point has the author allowed the dignity and splendor of Albanian life to sink into Gloire's consciousness or ours. We have seen Albania over the shoulder of some very fine speakers—that is all." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p5 Je 23 '46 800w

"Delightful travelogue, cunningly disguised as a novel. Miss Bridge has obviously a thorough admiration for the Albanian character and way of life, and she uses the artless questions of her heroine, who is really terribly dumb, to present some very interesting facts and opinions in favor of a non-mechanized civilization

+ New Yorker 22:87 Je 22 '46 100w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 4 '46 600w

"'Singing Waters' stirs no deep emotions, but provides a lot of engaging information attractively deployed. Its essential theme, however, is concern over how modern mechanization—which all eastern Europe, including Albania, hungers to adopt—can be integrated into a good life. Miss Bridge hopes for Albania that she may retain her simple village ways, and with a little help from the capitalistic Western world may use her vast potential hydro-electric resources to develop small industries everywhere. The theme and action of 'Singing Waters' everywhere suggests that it is just such a simple, natural method of living such as Gloire learned to love that must be resorted to all over the modern world if man is to keep in touch with the sources of his strength." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Je 23 '46 800w

BRIDGES, CLARK D. Job placement of the physically handicapped. 329p il $3.50 McGraw 331.86 Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc. Vocational guidance 46-3394

"This book as the author states has been written for the layman whose duties include responsibility for the effective use of workers. As such it is intended for the employer, the supervisor, the personnel manager, the safety engineer, and others who hire, select, place, and supervise man power. A practical guide to constructive action in the rehabilitation and employment of disabled and handicapped workers is also presented by the author. The first part of the book is devoted to a presentation of the most recent development in matching the worker with the job; the second part of the book contains a discussion in nontechnical language of the more common disabilities and a description of the restrictions imposed upon the worker by each disability." (Am J Pub Health) Bibliography. Index.

"If this book were read by both the industrial placement officer and the physician, each would have a better understanding of the other's problems, procedures, and terminology. Valuable reference material is included throughout the text, as well as in the appendix." Louis Long

+ Am J Pub Health 36:929 Ag '46 370w
Booklist 43:6 S '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:761 My 15 '46 70w

"The book is a very helpful compendium which the lay placement officer and the examining physician will do well to add to their reference shelves."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:324 D '46 140w

BRIER, HOWARD M. Skyblazer; il. by Dwight Logan. 265p $2 Random house 46-4662

A story of postwar commercial aviation for boys of junior high school age. In it Barry Martin, the young test pilot for Starwing, in spite of warnings, takes off for South America in Starwings' new stratosphere transport. A trip thru the stratosphere at 400 miles an hour, to save the life of a little South American girl, ends in success for all.

Booklist 42:350 Jl 1 '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 16 '46 210w

Kirkus 14:127 Mr 1 '46 60w

"Author has been at considerable pains to make technical background authentic. . . Full of action, mystery and realistic conversation. Better than most aviation stories available. Recommended" Maude Adams

+ Library J 71:984 Jl '46 90w

Reviewed by Frederick Graham
N Y Times p17 Je 23 '46 60w

"The author's technical accuracy, coupled with his ability to write the type of spirited narrative that boys demand, will make this book a favorite." Margaret Goodloe

+ San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 10 '46 90w

Sat R of Lit 29:65 N 9 '46 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p7 Jl 7 '46 400w

BRIER, ROYCE. Western world; a study of the forces shaping our time. 272p $2.50 Doubleday

901 Civilization, Occidental 46-3057

Study of the forces back of the rise of western civilization during the last six hundred years. In his foreword the author says: "In this book I have endeavored exclusively to show that our time, which I will call the Period of the Germanic Wars, grew and flowered naturally from the deep and intricate roots of the past; that, given those roots, such a plant must inevitably grow." No index.

Booklist 42:279 My 1 '46

"A highly instructive and interesting narrative. The opinions are [the author's], naturally, but for a quick once-over of our civilization during those centuries it offers much that is sound appraisal."

+ Current Hist 10:130 Ag '46 90w

Foreign Affairs 24:742 Jl '46 40w

"Learned, coldly analytical, comprehensive." Kirkus 14:30 Ja 15 '46 130w

"Mr. Brier succeeds in doing exactly what he intended. He gives comfort, the metaphysical comfort of seeing the cosmos whole. Once in a while his argument becomes rather obviously sleight-of-hand, and the rabbit's ears stick out from his coat-tails. But presently there is the sensation of looking down on mankind moving en masse, teeming and swarming, over a flashing plain far below. Mr. Brier, you will have gathered, is a very good man at his work." E. B. G.

+ N Y Times p10 My 19 '46 500w

"Fascinating reading."

+ New Yorker 22:95 Mr 30 '46 80w

"His 'study of the forces shaping our time' is a gross travesty of what it deals with. Not only is the book studded with incautiously worded generalities . . . but the author's mistaken will-to-teach makes him rattle around without force or direction inside the bounds of ignorance, pompous naïveté, and jargon." Jacques Barzun

— Sat R of Lit 29:9 Ap 27 '46 320w

"A fascinating essay, this, bright and witty on matters profound, fair and balanced, yet stated with deep conviction. An unaccustomed kind of analysis, it warms the heart and stretches the mind." J. R. Walsh

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 24 '46 700w

BRIGGS, BARBARA. Tobias. [24p] $1.50 Knopf 46-7563

Picture-story book about a very little tiger cub who ran away to try his luck in the jungle. There he was badly frightened and was glad to be rescued by his father. For the very young.

Kirkus 14:489 O 1 '46 40w

"One of the most engaging picture books of the season. The drawings by the author are adorably kitten-like—Tobias is a baby tiger; and the text has the lasting flavor of such nursery classics [as] Little Black Sambo, Millions of Cats and Peter Rabbit. Recommended." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 71:1717 D 1 '46 40w

"Everyone will fall in love with this lively yellow-and-black tiger which Barbara Briggs has drawn. They will be amused when he is feeling brave and sorrowful when he sits forlorn and homesick in the jungle. The design of the book is unusually attractive." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p2 N 10 '46 130w

Reviewed by Winifred Snedden

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 10 '46 100w

"The funny little story is so handsomely produced, with large print, large pages and lots of room for cubs, that its effect is pleasant throughout." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 20 '46 180w

BRIGGS, CHARLES WILLERS. Metallurgy of steel castings. 633p il $6.50 McGraw

669.1 Metallurgy. Steel castings 46-3928

"A comprehensive survey of the technology of the manufacture of steel castings. It covers the production of steel for castings in open-hearth furnaces, electric furnaces and converters, the molding of steel, the cleaning and rough-grinding of castings, heat treatment and metallography of steel castings, and the inspection of the finished product. Subjects such as the management of heats, the control of porosity and other casting defects, and molding sands are discussed in detail. The book is written from the viewpoint of technical men and operating men in the industry."

Extensive lists of references are included."
N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 43:8 S '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:55 Ja 1 '46 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:21 Ap '46

"This comprehensive assemblage of information will be valuable to professionals and amateurs in related fields as well as to those in the steel casting industry."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:255 S '46 240w

BRIGHT, ROBERT. The intruders. 306p $2.50
Doubleday

46-25071

Novel based on the intricacies of racial discrimination. The scene is a private clinic in a southwestern town. The clinic is run by an aristocratic southern gentleman and his not so gentlemanly nephew. The surgeon is a brilliant "white" Negro, and the internist a refugee from Hitler's Europe. The Negro doctor and the internist's half-Jewish daughter fall in love, and when a former lover of the doctor's joins the clinic, the stage is set for tragedy.

Reviewed by Lin Buck

Book Week p8 Mr 24 '46 450w

Booklist 42:247 Ap 1 '46

Kirkus 14:5 Ja '46 170w

"Wrappings of subtle analysis swathe the action, at times impeding its forward motion. There is a good deal of agony, sensuality and highly intensified self-awareness. One feels at moments that the material of the book is somehow private, somehow restricted to the experience of this particular odd group. . . . Readers of Robert Bright's earlier novel, The Life and Death of Little Joe, will not find here the lovely charm which distinguished that book. But they may recognize in the delicate texture and the often brilliant phrasing of The Intruders the author's unquestionable—but here somewhat tormented—talent." R. S.

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 7 '46 380w

"A bitter, moving book, quite lacking, however, in the subtlety of the author's earlier work."

New Yorker 22:100 Mr 16 '46 80w

"It would take an extremely able writer to make people such as these seem wholly convincing or alive on any except their own particular plane of hopped-up emotionalism. It is a compliment to Mr. Bright to say that he almost brings off the trick. The writing is very good, and the tautness of plot, the compact construction, and the macabre atmosphere combine to render the book stimulating and at times moving." T. M. Purdy

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 Mr 30 '46 480w

"It is difficult to believe, save for the simplicity of their style, that the violent and sensational 'Intruders' and the innocently disarming 'Little Joe' are from the same hand. They are bound together, however, by the close kinship of a common purpose." F. H. Bullock

Weekly Book Review p18 Mr 3 '46 500w

BRIGHTMAN, EDGAR SHEFFIELD. Nature and values. 171p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

141 Personalism 46-278

"Dr. Brightman, in this volume of Foudren lectures, sets his sights on the 'naturalists' with all the tools of his personalistic idealism. . . . The conclusion toward which Brightman moves throughout his lectures is that in a philosophy of personalism we can have a type of unity which will lead to 'one world.' The principles of personalism are respect for personality, nature as a revelation of Divine Personality, and spiritual liberty." Churchman

"This book is, according to an estimate printed on the dust-jacket, 'a brilliant answer to present-day naturalism.' This will be the judgment of the reader who is already committed to the metaphysics of personalism, including personalistic theism. But the book, since it is simply a reiteration of old arguments pretty badly shaken by new ones that are here ignored, will be unconvincing to the reader who previously knew the personalist tradition and was unmoved by it." V. C. Aldrich

+ Christian Century 63:175 F 6 '46 650w

"The most important factor in this book is that in a world of naturalism and irrationalism, there is a Christian rationalist and empiricist who gives us a reasonable universe with a living God." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 160:15 F 15 '46 240w

"Whether one can accept this philosophy in its totality or not, the argument is a searching critique of the superficialities of much contemporary philosophizing that claims for its conclusions the certainty associated with the reasoning of exact science. Many aspects of his solution have validity quite apart from their personalistic matrix. Throughout the book, the exposition is marked by generosity of spirit, exact scholarship, and clarity of expression." J. H. Howson

+ Crozer Q 23:381 O '46 500w

Reviewed by G. S. Spinks

Hibbert J 44:284 Ap '46 800w

BRILL, ABRAHAM ARDEN. Lectures on psychoanalytic psychiatry 292p $3 Knopf

131.34 Psychoanalysis. Psychology. Pathological SG46-253

"Dr. Brill, who is credited with introducing psychoanalysis to this country, presents a course of 10 lectures given by him to psychiatrists over a period of 15 years. In them he attempts to describe the development of Freud's concepts from 1893 to 1939." (New Repub) "Psychoanalytic methodology as in free association and interpretation; the processes of repression and suppression, of symptom formation and secondary gain from illness; the libido theory, phases of psychosexual development; and metapsychology are only hints as to the range of topics discussed and illustrated in the lectures." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"Though not popularized in any sense, much of this material makes fascinating reading. . . . Although accessible to the informed layman, this will be largely of interest to the practitioner."

+ Kirkus 14:265 Je 1 '46 170w

"The lectures make easy reading; they are illumined by excerpts from case studies and enlivened by the personal experience of the lecturer. They do not, however, give a rounded picture of the development of psychoanalysis."

+ New Repub 115:301 S 9 '46 180w

"The author's examples are pellucid, his reminiscences purposeful, his zeal infectious. The lectures have broad relevance for physicians, educators, and social scientists; in general, for those interested in the dynamics of human relations."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:334 D '46 280w

BRILL, ETHEL CLAIRE. Madeleine takes command; ill. by Bruce Adams. (Whittlesey house publication) 204p $2 McGraw

Verchères, Marie Madeleine de—Juvenile literature

In 1632 a fourteen-year-old girl, Madeleine de Verchères, in the absence of her father and mother, bravely defended the home fort against an Indian attack. This is the story of that gallant struggle. The scene is the St Lawrence river above Montreal. For ages ten to fifteen. Bibliography.

"The book fills a definite need for there are few stories about early Canada." A. N.

+ Book Week p17 N 17 '46 120w

Booklist 43:39 N 15 '46

"A true and exciting story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:469 N '46 80w

BRILL, E. C.—Continued

"A good story with a quaint foreign flavor; exceptional background material for school libraries."

+ Kirkus 14:298 J1 1 '46 90w

"The well-handled material makes an engrossing story for girls 11 to 14. . . Recommended." Isabel McLaughlin

+ Library J 71:1719 D 1 '46 90w

"Miss Brill makes those days of terror, fatigue and gallantry seem almost uncomfortably real for readers of 10 to 15." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p38 O 13 '46 160w

Reviewed by Faythe Elliott

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 10 '46 110w

Sat R of Lit 29:69 N 9 '46 20w

"Only the fact that Madeleine was a real girl with a statue to her honor and a known record of a later, happy marriage, keeps even an older person's blood pressure normal as suspense goes up and down. I haven't so held my breath over an Indian story for years, and it leaves a good taste in the mind. For it is a story of actual children, who live up to a sudden, desperate responsibility, acting in response to something deep in the tradition of their upbringing."

+ Weekly Book Review p38 N 10 '46 500w

BRILLOUIN, LEON. Wave propagation in periodic structures; electric filters and crystal lattices. 247p $4 (20s) McGraw

537.5 Electric waves. Electric filters 46-6703

"Some of the chapter titles in this brief but important book are: Elastic waves in a one-dimensional lattice of point masses; Early work and introduction; Mathematical treatment of a one-dimensional lattice of identical particles; Energy velocity, energy flow, and characteristic impedance; Two-dimensional lattices; Three-dimensional lattices; Mathieu's equation and related problems; Continuous electric lines. The author shows that all periodic structures behave like band-pass filters. His treatment of the subject is mathematical. The book is of interest to engineers in many fields from acoustics to u. h. f. radio." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1626 N 15 '46 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:49 J1 '46

BRIMBLE, LIONEL JOHN FARNHAM. Trees in Britain; wild, ornamental and economic, and some relatives in other lands. 352p il col pl $4.50 (15s) Macmillan

582.16 Trees—Great Britain 46-18105

"This volume is useful outside its country of origin. . . The author, a distinguished botanist, is as much interested in the influence of trees and flowers upon literature of the English-speaking world as in their identification, quoting so freely and wisely that the book is as much an illustrated anthology as a work of science. Trees have a great part in history; while the British passion for acclimatizing foreign species has gone on so long that the book is a sort of world arboretum in photographs and color plates." Weekly Book Review

"A volume that, in virtue of its instructional nature and the immense amount of information it contains, has every right to be called a textbook. But let no reader imagine that the use of this term implies some pedagogic treatise. . . It certainly gives, or one is prepared to believe that it does, all the facts about trees in Britain; but it does so with lucidity that makes light of the roughest going. Its charm, however, is far from ending there; for Mr. Brimble has interpreted his brief with a delightful latitude." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 11 '46 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '46

+ Weekly Book Review p29 S 29 '46 140w

BRINTON, CLARENCE CRANE. The United States and Britain; maps prepared under the cartographic direction of Arthur H. Robinson. 305p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

327.73 Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Relations (general) with U.S. U.S.—Relations (general) with Great Britain A45-5302

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by R. G. Usher

Am Hist R 51:693 J1 '46 650w

"The book is felicitous in style and the organization is admirable." G. L. Kirk

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:990 O '46 600w

"This is a wise book by a competent historian, that is all the better because the American walked the Home Counties and lived closely with the British when they had millions of Americans on their isles and minds. It is a meaty, not a souvenir, book; but the publishers may rejoice to find that it is the book that many observant but less articulate soldiers wanted to write because they wanted something like it to read." R. H. Heindel

+ Ann Am Acad 244:194 Mr '46 450w

Bookmark 7:4 Mr '46

"The information he gives is pertinent and accurate; his tone is reasonable; and the suggested reading is sufficiently comprehensive."

+ Cath World 163:189 My '46 200w

Foreign Affairs 24:352 Ja '46 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 162:696 Je 8 '46 120w

Reviewed by P. M. Sweezy

New Repub 115:53 J1 15 '46 750w

Reviewed by John Morton

New Statesman & Nation 32:404 N 30 '46 650w

"While his book has conspicuous merits as current debate, it has somewhat less organic quality than might have been expected of a historian. The author pretty well settles the dilemma between analysis and genesis by plumping for the former. . . By the frequently used device of stating polar opposites and commending courses between them, Mr. Brinton maintains a reasonable line of his own which tends on the whole toward a conservative kind of practicality. The device permits him some notably blunt speaking about extremists and it spares him some embarrassments from the effect of the course of events on a semi-prophetic text which was written during the summer of 1945." J. B. Brebner

Pol Sci Q 61:277 Je '46 550w

Reviewed by E. F. Goldman

Social Educ 10:285 O '46 600w

"For an explanation of Britain's present position, and of the problems of Anglo-American adjustment, this is an invaluable book. Incidentally, but of no less importance, it will help many Americans to a better understanding of their own country." R. A. Brown

+ Survey G 35:178 My '46 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p459 S 28 '46 1300w

"As a discussion of current problems, the book suffers somewhat because it was written during the war, from a wartime perspective, but it is a valuable study in a field of major interest and importance."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:42 Mr '46 240w

Wis Lib Bul 42:42 Mr '46

"Mr. Brinton is equal to his talk. His long familiarity with Britain, culminating in two years there on a war mission, has given him a better basis than most Americans for evaluating the changes wrought by the last five years; his description of those changes, especially in Chapter V, is one of the most interesting parts of the book. He is both a keen and a tolerant observer. He criticises the British often and frankly, as he does us, but a flavoring of humor makes his criticisms edible. His humor is not extraneous; it springs from a quality invaluable in an observer, the awareness and acceptance of human illogic." W. B. Willcox

+ Yale R n s 35:553 spring '46 1100w

BRITISH COUNCIL. See Great Britain. British council

BROBECK, FLORENCE RICHARDS. The lunch box, and every kind of sandwich. 266p $2 Barrows

641.5 Cookery. Sandwiches 46-2646

"What to put in the lunch box, especially for the worker and the school child, is the subject of a useful book by the author of Serve It Buffet [Book Review Digest, 1945]. The suggestions are accompanied by recipes and range from hot soups, cooked dishes, salads to relishes, sweeteners, beverages. Sandwiches, with a great variety of filling mixtures, are an important feature of the text, while brief chapters are devoted to the picnic lunch and baskets for the sick. Tables of measurements and equivalents. Index." Bookmark

Bookmark 7:7 My '46

J Home Econ 38:238 Ap '46 50w

BROCK, EMMA LILLIAN. Birds' Christmas tree; il. by [the author] [62p] $1.25 Knopf 46-6853

Pictures and brief text describe the effects of the wind and the snow upon the birds which stay in the North during the winter, and show what kinds of food are welcome to them.

Booklist 43:58 O 15 '46

"In children and bird lovers alike this picture book will waken sunny memories of the outdoor world." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:458 N '46 80w

Kirkus 14:420 S 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by V. W. Schott

+ Library J 71:1334 O 1 '46 70w

"Children to 5 to 8 will like this cheerful Christmas story with its gay binding and attractive illustrations." E. H.

+ N Y Times p11 D 22 '46 140w

Sat R of Lit 23:29 D 14 '46 120w

Wis Lib Bul 42:152 N '46

BRODIE, BERNARD, ed. The absolute weapon: atomic power and world order; by Frederick S. Dunn [and others]. 214p $2 Harcourt

623.45 Atomic bomb 46-4538

A conservative discussion of the use and abuse of the atom bomb, written for the general reader, by five members of the Yale Institute of International Studies. Contents: The common problem, by F. S. Dunn; War in the atomic age, by Bernard Brodie; Implications for military policy, by Bernard Brodie; The atomic bomb in Soviet-American relations, by Arnold Wolfers; Effect on international organization, by P. E. Corbett; International control of atomic weapons, by W. T. R. Fox. Index.

"This volume is the best study yet made of the impact of atomic weapons upon war and international politics. Analytical, restrained, and judicial, it offers no easy panaceas or categorical imperatives. Although it will disappoint enthusiasts for world government, it is on the whole optimistic concerning the feasibility of international controls of atomic energy by measures short of immediate and universal federalism. It is highly commended to students of politics and to the physical scientists whose interest in international affairs has been stirred so dramatically during the past year." E. M. Earle

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:739 Ag '46 1000w

Booklist 42:345 J 1 '46

Bookmark 7:5 N '46

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 63:989 Ag 14 '46 1350w

"Those who expect to find here a carefully thought-through discussion of ways and means for preventing an atomic holocaust will be disappointed. The chapters are confused, ambiguous and sometimes redundant. They contain many salutary awakeners—regarding what isn't likely to work in devising world controls. But the reader is likely to finish with the discouraged conclusion that probably nothing can be done." W. H. S.

—Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 8 '46 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '46

Reviewed by K. F. Herzfeld

Commonweal 44:530 S 13 '46 600w

Foreign Affairs 25:160 O '46 50w

Kirkus 14:233 My 15 '46 130w

"Sane scholarly nontechnical discussions by authorities—men from Yale Institute of International Relations—on effects of the atomic bomb on international politics and methods of world control." L. A. Eales

Library J 71:979 J1 '46 120w

"Avoiding panaceas and catchwords, the five collaborating scholars have prepared a serious analysis of the problem, studying the probable effects of the bomb upon the existing structure of international politics and exploring the practicable approaches to a solution. Their conclusions—to this reviewer, at least—seem sound, and the book deserves the widest possible reading by thoughtful men of good-will. Its greatest merit probably lies in the fact that it will be bitterly denounced by extremists of all categories." Grayson Kirk

+ Nation 163:104 J1 27 '46 850w

Reviewed by George Soule

+ New Repub 114:877 Je 17 '46 380w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:19 Ap '46

"This book, in which five distinguished scholars take part, is confused and contradictory in its thinking, and unimaginative and defeatist in its conclusions." R. M. Hutchins

N Y Times p6 Je 9 '46 2450w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p6 J1 14 '46 330w

"This book is not a cheerful one because it refuses to be swept along in the contagious enthusiasm for superhuman and supranational solutions which fire the emotions by circumventing or ignoring stubborn facts. But if it is not cheerful, neither is it pessimistic because its authors suggest lines of action which are within the realm of the possible and which give promise of being effective." L. H. Chamberlain

Pol Sci Q 61:443 S '46 1200w

Reviewed by Louis Wasserman

San Francisco Chronicle p12 J1 7 '46 850w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:227 S '46 300w

"This book is the most comprehensive, as well as the sanest, analysis which has thus far been published on the subject of the atomic bomb. Unlike the Smyth report, it is written in non-technical language easily grasped by the layman. Unlike 'One World or None' it does not present categorical imperatives. It is a scholarly performance, a product of the well proved intellectual techniques of cross-fertilization and critical evaluation evolved by Professor Frederick S. Dunn and his colleagues of the Yale Institute of International Relations. Although it is a collaborative work, it suffers from none of the usual shortcomings of a symposium." E. M. Earle

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Je 9 '46 1500w

"The 'Absolute Weapon' provides no neatly ribboned solution of our problem. Neither is it likely to be the last word on the subject. But it is an attempt to explore the means by which catastrophe can be held back until we can adjust to the new conditions of international life. We are given certain materials to work with, like it or not. The authors demonstrate a firm grip on them. This inadequate summation is presented as an invitation to the reader to enrich his thinking by following their explorations." R. C. Snyder

Yale R n s 36:162 autumn '46 1350w

BRODY, SAMUEL. Bioenergetics and growth. 1023p il $10 Reinhold [51s Chapman]

636.084 Metabolism. Growth Agr45-358

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"It is refreshing to encounter a book in which the literature in a rather broad field of endeavor is thoroughly reviewed and the available data completely integrated, interpreted and evaluated. . . There are a few small errors. . . But the errors are remarkably few when one considers the large amount of tabular matter." C. A. Elvehjem

BRODY, SAMUEL—Continued

+ — Am Chem Soc J 68:157 Ja '46 360w

"Brody seems to have packed into his book a record of everything he and his co-workers have done and read. The book is proof of the author's great capacity to collect data and ideas. Brody is less successful in classifying and organizing the collection, and he seems rather deficient in the ability to weed out unimportant or dubious material. . . Despite its defects, Brody's book is a great compilation of data and ideas and a valuable key to a vast amount of literature. I am glad to have this encyclopedic account of Brody's life work within easy reach on my shelf." Max Kleiber

+ — Chem & Eng N 24:1132 Ap 25 '46 350w
N Y New Tech Bks 30:53 O '45

BROEG, BOB, and BURRILL, BOB. Don't bring that up! skeletons in the sports closet; il. by Vic Donahue. 262p $2.50 Barnes, A.S. 796 Sports

True stories of sports boners and mistakes which have caused loss of games or contests Roy Riegels' wrong way run in the Rose bowl in 1929 is perhaps the most famous of the stories.

Book Week p7 Ag 18 '46 260w

Booklist 42:362 J1 15 '46

Kirkus 14:143 Mr 15 '46 110w

"These cases, well known to all sports fans, are faithfully recorded. But there are not enough of them to provide the stuff for a complete book, with the result that the collaborators often depart from their appointed course to rehash many another type of old tale. In so doing they try to point out the 'goat,' or even a number of goats, but their efforts are necessarily strained." J. C. Nichols

N Y Times p20 S 22 '46 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 7 '46 150w

Weekly Book Review p27 O 20 '46 150w

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. A few brass tacks. 303p $2.75 Harper

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy 46-4576

A successful writer of fiction propounds his ideas on some phases of American economics. He considers that agriculture should have first place in our economy, since it is in our natural resources that our wealth lies, rather than in money. He then takes issue with large industrial cities, and urges decentralization of industries, and concludes with a study of Russia's potentialities. Index.

Booklist 42:343 J1 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '46

Kirkus 14:208 My 1 '46 550w

"The author monotonously drives [his] thesis home in verbose, repetitive manner—and thus we have a book instead of an essay. Lacks the appeal of Pleasant Valley." H. G. Kelley

— Library J 71:822 Je 1 '46 100w

New Repub 115:20 J1 8 '46 320w

"Mr. Bromfield is an agrarian by choice, not by necessity. We cannot take what he says as a message from the American farmer. It is a message from an individual named Louis Bromfield. It is an indignant message, and in spite of some professions of humility, an intolerant one. Mr. Bromfield has a panacea of his own, but he is scornful of other people's. . . No, Mr. Bromfield in this book is neither humble nor tolerant. He is an angry gentleman farmer, striding up and down his sitting room and front parlor and, one would say, dictating and not revising. The result is a crop of words, full of the weeds of repetition, often downright clumsy in their arrangement, that will estrange many of those who are on many points inclined to agree with him. This is a campaign document and not in any way or degree a work of art." R. L. Duffus

— N Y Times p5 Je 9 '46 1400w

"Probably the only reason this book was published is that the author is one of America's top-flight novelists. There is certainly nothing new or startling in the contents. The few fundamentals that the author states with sometimes wearisome repetition have been more clearly set forth by others. It is some advantage to have them repeated, if Mr. Bromfield's name prompts any of his fiction clientele to read the book. . . This is not to say that there are not valuable sections in the book. The analysis of the artificial and harmful policy with respect to cotton forced on the United States by the southern Congressional contingent, and its cost to the nation and the South, is very well done. So are the emphasis upon, and description of, the measures and needs of Soil Conservation. It is unfortunate that some of the other illustrations Mr. Bromfield uses are not as well used. Indeed on one, the functioning of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, he does not even state the facts correctly." E. de S. Brunner

Pol Sci Q 61:615 D '46 650w

"He does his own thinking in his own way. Some of it, as I read it, fails to connect. . . I am glad, however, that in that pursuit of his declared effort to stimulate discussion and abuse' Bromfield so heartily dedicates this book to Chester Davis and Hugh Bennett. That should help moderate the moans of those who see in him only an irresponsible anarchist, invariably ag'in the Government and all Government men. Louis Bromfield, I have noticed, may bypass explicit facts at times but arrives at the right and penetrating answer, and generally as to persons he is uncannily right." Russell Lord

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:17 Je 22 '46 850w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Spring'd Republican p6 Je 26 '46 280w

"Informally written, and not without errors of fact, the book will perhaps have its chief appeal for those concerned over the international situation, and eager to explore any fresh approach to the elucidation of its difficulties" U S Quarterly Bkl 2:324 D '46 290w

Reviewed by P. M. Wagner

Weekly Book Review p7 J1 7 '46 1150w

BRONSON, BERTRAND HARRIS. Johnson Agonistes, and other essays. 156p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Cambridge]

B or 92 Johnson, Samuel. Boswell, James "[This volume] consists of three essays. The first, which gives the title to the book, shows how Johnson's conservatism was always at war with his violent and unruly temperament. It is marked by sound sense and some admirable quotations. The second is a brilliant study of Boswell which naturally owes most of its brilliance to the quotations from Boswell's private papers, including a delicious description of a meeting with Rousseau. The third is a scholar's essay on Johnson's 'Irene,' which tries to prove more than is necessary to justify what was obviously an enjoyable piece of research." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 S 15 '46 180w

"There is so much fresh and significant criticism in this small volume that it deserves every attention." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 31 '46 650w

"If none of the essays is a masterpiece all are interesting and readable, and for the English student they create a dangerous craving for the Malahide Papers." J. M. D. P.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 J1 10 '46 180w

Reviewed by Douglas Hubble

New Statesman & Nation 32:485 D 28 '46 1800w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 10 '46 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p297 Je 22 '46 800w

"Mr. Bronson is one of the ablest of the young American Johnsonians and his three essays are substantial as well as important—at least to that doubtless not too numerous company which delights to examine exhaustively questions concerning either Johnson or the members of his circle." J. W. Krutch
+ Weekly Book Review p20 S 29 '46
600w

BRONSON, WILFRID SWANCOURT. Coyotes (ki'yotes or ki-yo'tays) il. by the author. [63p] $1.75 Harcourt

591.5 Coyotes 46-6355
Description of the appearance, habits, and behavior of the coyote. Based on scientific research. For grades two to five.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb and H. D. Boylston
+ Atlantic 178:162 N '46 60w
Booklist 43:19 S '46

"Not all writers are as sympathetic toward the coyote as Wilfrid Bronson, so it is pleasant to learn in simple language what are some of the good points about the sharp-nosed dog who does not want to be tame." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 22:463 N '46 80w

"Companion volume to Turtles, and a much better book. The text material is better organized; the vocabulary is simple enough for third grade readers and advanced second graders; the combination of pictures, comic strip continuities and text is more cleancut than in the earlier volume of this natural science series."

+ Kirkus 14:384 Ag 15 '46 90w

"Large 24 point type with numerous asides in smaller type and a profusion of illustrations make a somewhat cluttered page, but the information is excellent." M. B. Snow
+ Library J 71:1466 O 15 '46 70w

"Based on scientific facts. The material is presented with so much enthusiasm that [it] reads more like [a story] than an educational book." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p11 S 1 '46 90w

"A natural-science book for young children that is ingenious, lively, and authoritative. . . The large primer type looks really too babyish for the content, though." K. S. White
+ New Yorker 22:143 D 7 '46 60w

Sat R of Lit 29:62 N 9 '46 30w

"'Coyotes' is the life story of this wild, freedom-loving American animal with whom the children will be delighted to become better acquainted." E. H. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d S 8 '46 120w
Wis Lib Bul 42:135 O '46

BROOKES, VINCENT J., and ALYEA, HUBERT NEWCOMBE. Poisons, their properties, chemical identification, symptoms, and emergency treatments. 209p il $3 Van Nostrand

615.9 Poisons. First aid in illness and injury SG46-144

"The first author of this work is a police officer, and it is probable that the book originated in a desire to furnish a manual for police use. However, only the first two chapters, which deal with poisons from the viewpoint of the police investigator, are limited in application. The remainder of the book gives compact information of more general interest. The principal poisonous substances are arranged alphabetically and brief information is given on their chemical properties, physiological effects, fatal doses, identification, symptoms, and emergency treatment. In addition to compounds commonly thought of as poisons, hazardous industrial chemicals are treated too; and there is some information on food poisoning, snakebites and poisonous plants." (N Y New Tech Bks) Glossary. Index.

"This book contains useful information presented in a systematic manner which should prove to be valuable to police and peace officers, particularly, and also to food and drug inspectors, industrial hygienists, pharmacists, nurses, and physicians. Some chemists may also find the book useful. It has an appendix which includes a glossary and several practical tables of measurement. A very few typographical errors noticed show care in proof reading and the large bold type used for captions for the poisons discussed should prove helpful in finding a reference. This text is a good book to have around." M. B. Jacobs

+ Am J Pub Health 36:1174 O '46 320w

"The book is easy to read and is supplemented by a glossary of terms used in the text. The chemical identification tests are relatively simple and can be performed rapidly at the scene with a minimum of equipment. . . Although intended primarily for use by the police and associated investigators, this book should have potential 'life saving' value in the hands of any intelligent person." C. W. Mushett

+ Chem & Eng N 24:1972 J 25 '46 350w

Reviewed by M. B. Jacobs

+ Chem Eng 53:273 Ag '46 250w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:761 My 15 '46 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:12 Ja '46

"'Poisons' is an excellent handbook for home or office, hospital or police headquarters." Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 Ap 27 '46 1500w

BROOKS, B. MARIAN, and BROWN, HARRY ALVIN. Music education in the elementary school. 376p $3.50 Am. bk.

372.878 School music. Education, Elementary 46-1611

"A textbook, employing the 'dynamic concepts of the new education as applied to music education in the elementary school,' that should prove especially useful in teacher-education institutions, colleges, universities, colleges of music, and all other institutions in which courses in this field are offered. A thorough and comprehensive study of the principles of the 'new music education,' with a brief historical study of the progress of music teaching and excellent suggestions for the future of music in helping to bring about a better world. Well indexed, with a well-selected bibliography." School & Society

"The announced intention of Brooks and Brown to weld modern educative theory and elementary-school music into a new organic whole has been largely realized in this volume. The design that emerges is not always clearly drawn or, at least, is not apparent without a careful re-reading of the whole book and the collating of parts to one another. The work's usefulness as a textbook would have been enhanced by the inclusion of thought questions and of problems relating to the closely wrought content of each chapter. It is too optimistic to expect that teachers and students will assimilate all that the book offers without such study aids." V. H. Talley

+ El School J 47:114 O '46 1000w

"This book should prove valuable to teachers of music everywhere."

+ School & Society 63:381 My 25 '46 180w

BROOKS, WALTER ROLLIN. Freddy, the Pied piper; il. by Kurt Wiese. 253p $2 Knopf

46-7367

Another nonsense story about Freddy, the clever pig from Mr Bean's farm. This time Freddy tries his hand at ridding Centerboro of mice, and aids a bankrupt circus.

+ Kirkus 14:490 O 1 '46 100w

"Less interesting than others in this long series." E. M. Gordon

Library J 71:1717 D 1 '46 70w

"If parents who have been forced to read the other twelve books aloud are a bit weary of Freddy's adventures, the children are certainly not. Before this one is cold they'll be wondering about the next book. The illustrations, as usual, are drolly appealing." Phyllis Fenner

N Y Times p38 O 13 '46 120w

Reviewed by Florence Little

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 10 '46 60w

BROPHY, JOHN. The human face. 250p il $3.50 Prentice-Hall [15s Harrap]

138 Face. Physiognomy 46-8450

"Mr. Brophy has attempted a survey or map of faces, mingling speculations psychological, ethnological, phrenological, with portraits of persons sharply defined; as with autobiographical references, a self-portrait, and even a history of his own moustache. The result is a miscellany of facial facts, combined with fancies; hardly scientific, but very suggestive: the first treatise, Mr. Brophy claims, after fifteen years' preparation for it, to summarise the history of the human face." (New Statesman & Nation) Index.

"With classical allusion and reference, with a certain formality of presentation, this is a specialist's specialty, with only slight general interest."

Kirkus 14:509 O 1 '46 140w

"Mr. Brophy is in love with life; he looks forward with hope; thus he has easily preserved a wholesome sanity in his long examination of human faces, through all ages and races. Some of his readers, less courageous than he, may close this book with a certain sense of fear, mingled with relief. They will be glad to escape from the obsession of human noses, eyes, mouths and cheekbones. They will turn, in this Springtime, to the contemplation of flocks and herds." Richard Jennings

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:399 Je 1 '46 900w

"[The book] is intensely personal in its approach and rises at times to a curious poetry; his study of 'The Grotesque' opens up many alluring avenues. . . There is not much logical development in the book. Rather is each chapter a separate essay. When we put down the volume we feel that we have been entertained as well as instructed and that if we have not clarified our minds very much on the subject at issue, we have at least learned a good deal about Mr. Brophy and made contact with a cultivated and curious mind."

Times [London] Lit Sup p32 Ja 19 '46 750w

BROTHERTON, M. Capacitors; their use in electronic circuits. 107p $3 Van Nostrand

537.24 Condensers (electricity) 46-6932

"Electrical and physical properties of capacitors are here described so that designers of electrical circuits can know what type to use under each operating condition. Organic and atmospheric, as well as electrical and mechanical, factors affecting the life of capacitors are enumerated. Emphasis is on the capacitor properties themselves, not on their physical causes. Although all types of capacitors are considered, the fixed, solid dielectric capacitors are given the greatest attention." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1128 S 1 '46 110w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:346 D '46 100w

BROWN, CLIFFORD ADAMS. Forty years of silence. 80p $2 Jones, Marshall

B or 92 Deaf 46-20045

Autobiographical reminiscences of a shy farm boy who became deaf at the age of ten, but whose life became happy and useful after he attended the Clarke school for the hard of hearing at Northampton, Massachusetts.

Booklist 43:52 O 15 '46

"The charm of this book lies in its ingenuous simplicity and the feeling of triumph the reader shares with the author at his having successfully overcome a grave handicap to arrive at a full and varied life. Because of a childhood illness which left him deaf and physically delicate, life was almost a torment to the shy boy. . . There is little that is pretentious about this book, nor is it a sermon, although there is much pleasant philosophizing; but rather it's like a leisurely winter's night conversation with an old and mellowed friend." H. L. Varley

+ Spring'd Republican p6 S 17 '46 320w

BROWN, DOROTHY FOSTER. Grimm death. 227p $2 Barnes, A.S.

46-3692

Detective story.

Kirkus 14:160 Ap 1 '46 80w

"The story is much too slow and not completely plausible."

— N Y Times p32 Ap 21 '46 140w

"We would be kindly disposed toward another mystery tale from Worcester's Dorothy Foster Brown, but with a little tightening and polishing of her style; she could make her point without so much rambling." R. H. R.

Spring'd Republican p4d My 19 '46 150w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p22 My 5 '46 160w

BROWN, ELEANOR. Golden Lady; the story of an American show horse; il. by Pers Crowell. 252p $2.50 Howell, Soskin

Horses—Legends and stories

The life of an American show horse, told in story form for ages ten to fourteen.

Kirkus 14:348 Ag 1 '46 100w

"Has something of the same absorbing interest in detail that attracts children to Black Beauty, but without its sentimentality." Maude Adams

Library J 71:1466 O 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Dorothy Hamilton

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 10 '46 70w

BROWN, FRANCIS JAMES. Educational opportunities for veterans. 142p pa $2 Am. council on public affairs

355.115 Veterans—Education 46-6416

"A book limited to the education and training of veterans, but making no claim to being all-inclusive in its description of the pertinent activities of colleges, schools, industries, government agencies, or veterans' organizations. Published as a help to the veteran in choosing the education and training that best serves his purpose . . . and suggesting to institutions further development of their educational programs." School & Society

Am J Soc 52:379 Ja '47 20w

Booklist 43:6 S '46

School & Society 64:71 Jl 27 '46 90w

Social Studies 37:380 D '46 20w

BROWN, HARRISON SCOTT. Must destruction be our destiny? a scientist speaks as a citizen. 158p $2 Simon & Schuster

623.45 Atomic bomb. International cooperation 46-5748

The author, an American scientist who worked on the Manhattan project, "tells us something about elementary atomic physics, but his chief concern is the control of atomic energy and the abolition of war. As a socially minded physicist he is worried by the potentialities of atomic fission and by the character of another war. His statement of the problem is not new; neither is his solution. To prepare the ground for his analysis, Dr. Brown paints a picture of what happened in Japan and what may happen if another war is waged." (N Y Times) No index.

"This is certainly one of the 'must' books of the times." David Karno

+ Book Week p2 Jl 28 '46 650w

Booklist 43:8 S '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '46

"Simply presented and well argued."

+ Kirkus 14:236 My 15 '46 170w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempfert

N Y Times p10 Jl 28 '46 330w

"This book is an extraordinarily forceful one. . . Mr. Brown has written this book to wake people up. It is mostly a restatement, yes, but it is done with new simplicity and undeniable authority, and by a young man. When a young man can speak with this kind of background, well, he's doubly worth listening to, it seems to me." J. E. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 J1 31 '46 550w

Reviewed by T. K. Finletter
Sat R of Lit 29:9 Ag 24 '46 1550w

Reviewed by H. M. Davis
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 13 '46 300w

"It is a typical scientist's book, objective, logical, convincing to the mind, yet written without grace and with no emotion but fear. It will probably fail of its purpose, as all previous arguments have failed, precisely because it is so sensible and instills no great emotional appeal to replace that of patriotism. It is the best that the scientist can do. And so we face sure destruction." Gerald Wendt
+ Weekly Book Review p8 J1 21 '46 500w

BROWN, HARRY PETER M'NAB. A sound of hunting; a play in three acts; introd. by John Mason Brown. 176p $2.50 Knopf

812 World war, 1939-1945—Drama 46-5048

A play about a group of American soldiers in Cassino, returning from a scouting trip to the vicinity of the enemy lines, and their attempt to rescue a comrade who did not return.

"In 'A Sound of Hunting' Brown hasn't made his characters sufficiently complex to hold the attention of the audience. We suffer for them en masse, but we are never aware that under the persiflage each of these trapped, haunted and possibly doomed American boys was as much the victim of fate as Hamlet or Oedipus Rex." Sterling North

Book Week p2 J1 21 '46 700w
Booklist 43:11 S '46

"An excellent one-act idea extended to a full length drama. Superb dialogue and extremely playable. Good for all amateur groups. Recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:1208 S 15 '46 70w

"Makes dreary and pointless reading: it is hard to believe that the author of that excellent war novel 'A Walk in the Sun' could have believed he was writing a play when he dumped his squad of GI's into a Cassino cellar and had them quarrel for three interminable acts over the rescue of a beleaguered comrade who is never even seen." C. V. Terry

— N Y Times p8 J1 21 '46 110w

"This is GI humor, bitterness, futility, comradeship, doubt and distrust with something like photographic clarity and strength." Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 2 '46 150w

"Moves sluggishly to its point." W. P. Eaton
— Weekly Book Review p21 S 15 '46 130w

BROWN, HILTON. Rudyard Kipling; a new appreciation; with a foreword by Frank Swinerton. 237p il $3 Harper [10s 6d Hamilton, H]

B or 92 Kipling, Rudyard 46-354

A biography of Kipling with extended critical appraisal of his works and his place in English literature.

"I have only praise for this sincere, modest, and persuasive interpretation of Kipling. Its unpretentious presentation does not obscure its oblique but searching criticism and its just appraisal of Kipling's proper place as a great man of letters. Mr. Brown's sympathy with his subject is evident but it never obscures his candor."

+ Atlantic 177:162 Ap '46 1700w

Reviewed by Bergen Evans

Book Week p8 Ja 20 '46 550w

Booklist 42:199 F 15 '46

"One feels that the case for Kipling has not been presented with quite the force that it deserves. Moreover, Mr. Brown shows a tendency to defend Kipling against criticism that is entirely unworthy of this honor. Only half the book is given to Kipling's work. The other half is a biography, and here Mr. Brown has done invaluable service. His study goes a long way to making a complex and contradictory nature understandable. No one interested in the subject can afford to miss this book." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 N 10 '45 850w

Kirkus 13:501 N 15 '45 160w

"Mr. Brown gives us an assembly of facts which will be useful, and Kipling's admirers can await serenely the verdict of posterity on his literary genius. Recommended for larger libraries." A. R. Eaton

+ Library J 71:119 Ja 15 '46 100w

"Mr. Hilton Brown has done an exceedingly full and interesting job. He is equipped for it by knowledge as well as enthusiasm." G. P. + Manchester Guardian p3 O 19 '45 300w

New Repub 114:422 Mr 25 '46 180w

Reviewed by Alexander Cowie

N Y Times p7 Ja 20 '46 500w

"Mr. Hilton Brown's 'Rudyard Kipling' hardly pretends to be a work of criticism, nor does it make any very serious attempt to analyze Kipling's personality. It is, however, biographically interesting, if you happen to be interested in Kipling. It embodies some new information obtained from Kipling's sister, Mrs. Fleming, and contains what must be so far the most complete account of Kipling's early life." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 21:76 F 2 '46 360w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat R of Lit 29:11 Ja 19 '46 1500w

"It is a singular fact that Kipling has fared worse at the hands of his friends and admirers than of his enemies and detractors. The late John Palmer, who might have been expected to write the best book on him, wrote easily the worst. Mr. Hilton Brown's 'appreciation' is little better." St. John Ervine

— Spec 175:269 S 21 '45 1350w

Reviewed by H. L. Varley

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 27 '46 600w

"It is a pity that Mr. Hilton Brown writes so allusively; much of the book will be intelligible only to those who know their Kipling pretty well."

Times [London] Lit Sup p464 S 29 '45 900w

"Mr. Brown's book is a solidly written job, perhaps a shade over-judicial in places, as if the author were at pains to stop readers from thinking he admires Kipling too much. His summing up, however, is well argued, and certainly does belated justice to a writer who, when all is said and done, possessed that rare quality, genius. . . . For myself, Mr. Brown's book did what I hope it will do to others—it sent me back to Kipling himself, whom I had not read much for years, and whom I found I enjoyed more than formerly and disagreed with no less." James Hilton

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 27 '46 800w

Wis Lib Bul 42:45 Mr '46

Reviewed by E. K. Brown

Yale R n s 35:740 summer '46 900w

BROWN, MRS JEANETTE (PERKINS), ed.

Little book of singing graces; pictures by Lloyd Dotterer. [28p] 50c Abingdon-Cokesbury

784 Children's songs. Grace (at meals)

Nine rhymed prayers of thanksgiving, set to music for little children.

Book Week p6 D 8 '46 20w

"The music is one line, simple, tried melodies."

+ Kirkus 14:344 Ag 1 '46 50w

"Useful book for kindergarten and Sunday school teachers. Not essential for small collections." G. E. Joline

Library J 71:1208 S 15 '46 50w

Reviewed by N. V. Morgan

San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 10 '46 30w

"These little graces have rhythm and brevity."

+ Weekly Book Review p24 N 10 '46 180w

BROWN, JOHN MASON. Seeing things. (Whittlesey House publication) 341p $3 McGraw 814 46-6335

Essays on the theater, personalities, and life in general by the one-time dramatic critic of the World-Telegram, who is at present an associate editor of the Saturday Review of Literature. Index.

"Mr. Brown would rather like than criticize, and it is very pleasant to bask and chuckle in the sunny Southern hospitality of his praise. I hope I am not being unfriendly if I suggest that Seeing Things would have been a better book had its editor pointed out certain obvious repetitions and those conversational excesses in which the author overreaches himself. For it is a pity to mar the spontaneity of a very spontaneous man." Edward Weeks
Atlantic 178:154 N '46 420w

"With his growth as a critic of drama, John Mason Brown's concern with life has also strikingly deepened. It is because of his wise understanding of what being alive really means, that these delightful essays—for the most part reports of a passing pageant—so bravely meet the somewhat acid test of being gathered into a book." J. W. Rogers

+ Book Week p1 S 15 '46 1500w

Booklist 43:32 O 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p16 O 5 '46 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

"He offers a sophistication balanced with a real effort of evaluation, a charm of style that is often brightened by a precise humor. Rather for his definite public than the general reader."

+ Kirkus 14:368 Ag 1 '46 150w

Manchester Guardian p3 O 25 '46 150w

"The new Seeing Things is crowded with people, with Mr. Brown as the amused and affable reporter. He knows when to be a scholar—and in the old days that scholarship sent contemporaries scurrying to drama reference books—and when to be a father. Mr. Brown wields a schizophrenic thunderbolt, which can kick Broadway in the stomach or pat the head of a child." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p6 S 15 '46 1900w

"The point about Brown—and this is what makes his book so much more than just a collection of reviews—is that any review he does, of a book or a play or anything else, becomes under his shrewd handling something else as well. If it were not for the fact that our schools and colleges, by poor teaching and poor texts, have succeeded too often in making the word 'essay' suggest all sorts of dreariness, I should be happy in calling Brown's pieces examples of [the] familiar essay at its best." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 12 '46 600w

"Mr. Brown's book is a sort of philosophical running commentary, a philosophy of life in these various aspects of it which impinge on Mr. Brown's lively and delicate sensibilities when he meets an engaging play, personality, or book, when his ranging and generous mind is challenged by the gravest issues of our time, as when he is making an address to the young students at the University of Montana. Oh, yes, there are one or two things I cavil at. There is almost too much alliteration, a shade too many epigrams and for, my taste, too unbridled enthusiasm for Alexander Woolcott and Noel Coward. But otherwise, as Mr. Brown himself might allow himself to say, you couldn't get into a nicer Brown study." Irwin Edman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:22 S 21 '46 1100w

"Although the book includes some essays on the war, the Brown heirs and other subjects which have taken the critic's attention since 1942, the theatre remains Brown's great love and he writes about it with eloquence and charm, in spite of a tendency to trick out his observations in self-conscious figures of speech."

+ Theatre Arts 30:621 O '46 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p522 O 26 '46 800w

"'Seeing Things' is gay, witty and informative, required reading for both friends of the theater and humanity." Richard Maney

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 15 '46 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 42:148 N '46

BROWN, MARCIA. Little carousel; il. by [the author.] 32p $1.50 Scribner

Picture-story about a lonely little boy who lived in Sullivan street in New York city. On a day when he was feeling very sad a gay little carousel invaded the street, but Anthony had no money. And then, while he was looking longingly at the other children riding the animals, a miracle happened. He earned a ride all by himself.

Booklist 43:138 Ja 1 '47

"A delightful picture book, especially for city children. The pictures are fresh and entertaining but there is too little text."

+ Cath World 164:382 Ja '47 20w

"The crisp drawings and clear bright colors make a festive picture book for Christmas." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 22:456 N '46 100w

"An attractive little story and a gay picture book"

+ Kirkus 14:521 O 15 '46 80w

Library J 72:82 Ja 1 '47 70w

"Marcia Brown has drawn, in words and gaily colored pictures, the part of New York in which she lives, Sullivan Street, below Washington Square, with a real feeling for the noise and color of the neighborhood. The 5-to-7 year olds will ask for more." R. A. Gordon

+ N Y Times p27 D 15 '46 150w

"These delightful pictures are printed in four colors. The red jacket with a little carousel standing out against it makes this a gay book for Christmas and birthday celebrations. We expect to see it in bookstores and in public libraries. We hope to see many copies of it in the hands of the children." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 N 9 '46 270w

"We have had carousels here on the grand scale—from the Prater, from the Gay Nineties, high, wide and handsome. This one is very little; one horse to draw it, one man to turn the crank, just a little while on the block—but even if you are grown up, if you ever lived in a city, you're going to love this gay, kind little carousel for five-year-olds." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 N 10 '46 300w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Little fur family; pictures by Garth Williams. $1.50 Harper

Tiny book bound in real fur which describes the life of a small wood's animal of unnamed variety. For ages four to six.

"Most original gift book of the year. Real fur cover. Exquisite miniatures. Pleasing story."

+ Book Week p13 O 20 '46 40w

"Both pictures and text—tiny type—will strain the child's vision—and the rather affected story of the wild wood adventures of the little fur child seems pointless"

— Kirkus 14:489 O 1 '46 120w

"The narrative is a bit skimpy for children who have progressed enough from the large pictures of their first books to be able to enjoy the miniature charm of Garth Williams' jeweled illustrations of the fur family, but 4, 5, and 6-year-olds will undoubtedly love this book for its visual and tactile appeal and for its engaging smallness." E. L. Buehl

N Y Times p30 O 20 '46 140w

Reviewed by Florence Little
San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 10 '46 170w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p8 O 20 '46 290w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE (GOLDEN MACDONALD, pseud). Little island; with ill. by Leonard Weisgard. [40p] $2.50 Doubleday

46-7383

A picture-story book about a little island in the sea, showing the season's effect upon it. The text is in rhythmic prose. For ages six to eight.

"Superbly beautiful pictures fill 20 full pages, their rich color flowing off the page to make them seem as unhampered as sky. This is a book to sharpen the senses and expand one's personal horizons. If the simple, poetic text seems to break when a cat comes by boat to the island, it is probably because the cat's smug appreciation of his own importance annoys the island."

+ Book Week p3 N 10 '46 210w

Booklist 43:89 N 15 '46

"An imaginative, charming book, with a bit of unnecessary preciousness. Weisgard's illustrations are completely out of key—plush and with more than oriental lavishness."

Kirkus 14:522 O 15 '46 80w

"Recommended." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 71:1629 N 15 '46 90w

"Though the text eventually edges over into silliness and the pictures are sometimes too melodramatic, the book will give a young child some of the feeling of a small, ocean-bound island, its seasons, and its weather." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:134 D 7 '46 90w

Reviewed by Leone Garvey

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 10 '46 110w

"Like last year's beautiful 'Little Lost Lamb' of the same author and artist; there is more in this than you need expect very little children to get; some of them will, even more quickly than grown-ups, but for most six year olds this will be just a series of lovely pictures full of things they love to look at. Later, when the comics are faded and forgotten, something may bring to mind this book and as it comes back it will open."

+ Weekly Book Review p10 N 10 '46 300w

Wis Lib Bul 42:171 D '46

BROWN, PAUL. Merrylegs, the rocking pony [ill. by the author]. [64p] $1.50 Scribner

46-1630

Picture-story book about a life-sized rocking horse and the little boy who rode him. Ages six to nine.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p23 Ap 14 '46 200w

Booklist 42:230 Mr 15 '46

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 26 '46 100w

"A pleasing story with lively illustrations for small horse-lovers six to nine years old." E. M. Gordon

+ Library J 71:668 My 1 '46 70w

"Six to 8-year-olds will be charmed by the variety of things to do which the two think of, all depicted in realistic style." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p24 F 3 '46 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 My 12 '46 180w

BROWN, RALPH MORSE. The singing voice. 167p $2.50 Macmillan

784.93 Singing and voice culture 46-5262

Discussions of the problems encountered by the serious student of singing, and suggestions of the ways in which difficulties may be met and overcome. Partial contents: Posture and breath control; Resonance, or "placement"; Phonetics; Every singer an actor; Volume; Confidence and self-assurance; The ears; Articulation; Keeping well; Teachers. No index.

Booklist 43:10 S '46

"This little book is a compendium of fine practical advice to both singers and teachers of singing. With sound observation and mature reason, the author insists on the absolutely automatic nature of the singing mechanism. . . The weaknesses of the book are found in Mr. Brown's lack of knowledge, or disregard, of recent scientific investigations concerning the workings of the voice mechanism." B. F. Wise

+ Christian Century 63:841 J1 3 '46 210w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '46

"Constructive analysis of singing attributes, techniques, voice production and training, that should be a good guidepost for the serious student as well as the teacher in training."

+ Kirkus 14:29 Ja 15 '46 110w

"A practical book for those who actually sing or wish to do so."

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Ag 11 '46 140w

BROWN, ROSE (JOHNSTON) (MRS ROBERT CARLTON BROWN). Land and people of Brazil. (Portraits of the nations ser) 120p ill $2.25 Lippincott

918.1 Brazil—Description and travel Brazil—Social life and customs 46-7554

A study of the history, geography, and manners and customs of the people of Brazil. For older boys and girls. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 43:105 D 1 '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 16 '47 260w

Kirkus 14:389 Ag 15 '46 90w

"An excellent presentation. . . A good addition to any South American collection." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 71:1629 N 15 '46 60w

Sat R of Lit 29:70 N 9 '46 40w

"Rose Brown writes better in this book, according to this reviewer's idea, than in her other book for children about Brazil; or perhaps it is because the facts about Brazil are in themselves more interesting than stories about them for the same time of life are likely to be. . . Forty-five well reproduced photographs, so chosen as to sweep the country, are placed in a section by themselves midway of the narrative."

+ Weekly Book Review p22 N 10 '46 320w

BROWN, WARREN. Chicago Cubs. 248p ill $2.75 Putnam

796.357 Chicago. Baseball club (National league) 46-6340

A detailed history of the Chicago baseball team from its beginnings in the 1870s to the present.

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis

Book Week p1 Ag 18 '46 1500w

Booklist 43:31 O 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '46

Kirkus 14:316 J1 1 '46 150w

Reviewed by V. W. Schott

Library J 71:1335 O 1 '46 80w

"Here is a rollicking chronology not only of an amazingly interesting ball club but of an entire major league as well and involving most of that circuit's outstanding figures over a span of seventy years." John Drebing

+ N Y Times p35 S 22 '46 700w

"Mr. Brown has larded his story with anecdotes picked up all around the circuit that are well and amusingly told." Irving Marsh

+ Weekly Book Review p20 S 15 '46 270w

BROWN, WENZELL. Dynamite on our doorstep: Puerto Rican paradox [ill. by Jack Crane]. 301p $2.75 Greenberg

917.295 Puerto Rico 46-10329

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by E. B. Reuter

Am Soc R 11:373 Je '46 200w

"Dynamite on Our Doorstep is the fantastic name of Wenzell Brown's book on Puerto Rico. The author allegedly presents to the United States a picture of the social, political, and economic conditions of the island. The work, instead of presenting a true picture,

BROWN, WENZELL—Continued
results in a grotesque caricature." T. S. de Muñoz

— Ann Am Acad 244:190 Mr '46 450w

Booklist 42:211 Mr 1 '46

"An unglamorous picture of life in Puerto Rico, painted in with much personal detail."
Foreign Affairs 24:757 Jl '46 20w

"Mr. Wenzell Brown is a Dickensian character. But the book he has written about Puerto Rico illustrates, I think, the truism that characters, Dickensian or otherwise, ought to stay in books rather than write them...
Mr. Brown caught the human, the fugitive, the superficial dislike of foreigners which exists in Puerto Rico, as indeed it does to a degree everywhere, and made it the theme of a motous book. But he failed to penetrate to Puerto Rican instincts and deep wisdoms. Down there it is known that Puerto Rico stands to gain from more, not less, unity in this newly dangerous world." R. G. Tugwell

New Repub 114:509 Ap 15 '46 2500w

Reviewed by L. N. Ridenour

Sat R of Lit 29:14 Je 22 '46 1300w

BROWN, WILLIAM ADAMS. Toward a united church; three decades of ecumenical Christianity. 264p $2.50 Scribner

280 Church unity

"This is one of the two books that Professor Brown left completed but unpublished at the time of his death nearly three years ago.
Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert has done the necessary editing and has added an epilogue. The work is both a history and an interpretation of the ecumenical movement from the Edinburgh conference of 1910 (with one chapter going back of that) to the organization of the World Council of Churches." Christian Century

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Book Week p29 N 10 '46 140w

Booklist 43:150 Ja 15 '47

"This will be one of the indispensable handbooks for students and promoters of Christian unity."

+ Christian Century 63:1281 O 23 '46
120w

"It is a book which church historians will find invaluable and which the increasing number of churchmen who are interested in the world-wide union of Christian churches will find helpful for reference and inspiration."

+ Kirkus 14:551 N 1 '46 170w

Wis Lib Bul 42:162 D '46

BROWN, ZENITH (JONES) (LESLIE FORD, DAVID FROME, pseud.). Honolulu story.
252p $2 Scribner

46-25200

Detective story.

Booklist 42:349 Jl 1 '46

Kirkus 14:206 My 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 Je 2 '46 150w

"The pattern of the story will be familiar to the author's admirers, but this time it does have some handsome tropical scenery."

+ New Yorker 22:108 Je 8 '46 150w

"Ford fans won't be disappointed." L. G. O.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 1 '46
60w

"Top stratum."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 Ag 3 '46 90w

Reviewed by M. F. Martin

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 23 '46 300w

"The devil to pay in an unusual setting, done to a turn. This was serialized as 'Man
From Japan.'" Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Je 9 '46 280w

BROWNE, WALDO RALPH, ed. Leviathan in crisis; an international symposium on the state, its past, present, and future, by fifty-four twentieth century writers. 430p $3.75
Viking

320.8 State, The

46-8354

Symposium composed of fifty-four essays by philosophers, anthropologists, social scientists and legal theorists, representing nine countries.

The theme of their discussions is the sovereign
State, its past, present, and probable future.
Biographical notes. No index.

"The reader will find this collection thought provoking, although lacking somewhat the unity which one might reasonably expect.
Notable for their excellence are the excerpts from the writings of John Dewey, Bertrand Russell, Lewis Lorwin and Alfred Cobban. For the novitiate, this will serve as a useful introduction to recent political thought, to be supplemented, however, by readings on the social backgrounds and methods of the contributors." L. G. Seligman

+ Book Week p16 N 24 '46 360w

Current Hist 12:60 Ja '47 60w

"Few will read the book through; many will find it valuable in reference, seeking support on this particular subject. Stimulating—challenging—a book for Public Library reference shelves rather than over the counter sales."

+ Kirkus 14:448 S 1 '46 190w

Library J 71:1543 N 1 '46 30w

"The book is a powerful weapon of criticism in the hands of the layman who cannot possibly read the many long and often highly technical treatises on the subject."

+ New Repub 115:701 N 25 '46 80w

BRUES, CHARLES THOMAS. Insect dietary; an account of the food habits of insects.
466p il $5 Harvard univ. press [21s Oxford]

595.7 Insects A46-913

"One of the outstanding authorities on insects here summarizes the knowledge derived from a lifetime of personal observations, combined with an exhaustive acquaintance with the exceedingly voluminous literature on the subject. The book covers the entire complex field of the food habits of insects, with an introductory chapter on their abundance and diversity, and a concluding chapter on insects as food for man and other organisms, including plants. The bibliography, of about 2,900 titles, is divided into sections which follow the several chapters." U S Quarterly Bkl

"Mr. Brues gives clear and unburdened information to the layman. He refers to dozens of specialists in many phases of insect life, as all scientific writers must do, but he has woven the findings of these scientists into his own special studies to make an intensely interesting story about the relations of insects to their environment. His story is dramatic, at times fantastic." J. J. Mathews

+ Sat R of Lit 29:66 Je 8 '46 800w

"This book is of equal interest to the layman interested in insects and to the professional entomologist."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:150 Je '46 200w

BRUFF, NANCY (MRS E. T. CLARKE). My talon in your heart. 60p $2 Dutton

811

46-2108

A volume of brief poems, the author's first published book of verse. Some of the poems were written years ago, and some are recent.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p13 Mr 24 '46 140w

"It is a slim volume, of so-called verse, full of sound and fury but signifying little. Completely devoid of technical skill are these 'free verse' jottings of an apparently emotional and over-wrought nature; for the most part any kernel of thought is lacking."

— Kirkus 14:84 F 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 29:9 Mr 23 '46 60w

"An ineffectual exposition of her conceptions of delam and frustration. Written in very free verse, this first attempt at terse imagery, a different approach to the problem of man's relationship to Nature and to his own world of urbanity, falls somewhat short of success.
Perhaps if she had spent less time attempting to create the startling, original image and more developing her fundamental sense of rhythm her work would have been more genuine. . . The trouble is her message isn't important, and she delivers it weakly." William Manchester

— Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 21 '46 240w

BRUNINI, JOHN GILLAND. Whereon to stand; with an introd. by Francis Cardinal Spellman. 302p $3 Harper

230.2 Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works 46-7225

"In this book (its title derives from Archimedes' 'Give me a place whereon to stand and I will move the earth') John Gilland Brunini, layman, poet, editor of Spirit and executive director of the Catholic Poetry Society of America, retells the facts of the Roman Catholic Church and clears up many popular misconceptions regarding its doctrine, practice, history and organization. His aim is simple exposition; his book is intended for those who seriously desire integrated information about the church." N Y Times

Reviewed by John Moody

Cath World 164:184 N '46 450w

"For a particular Catholic, 'Whereon to Stand' may seem to dwell too little for his subjective interest on one or another mystery or aspect of our religion: on the liturgy and prayer, perhaps; on mysticism in all; on analysis of emotion in will, in prayer, in love; on the social aspects of justice, and the relation of justice to charity; or on Catholic philosophies. Mr. Brunini's book holds carefully to its particular, objective job and completes it excellently. One of its high qualities is presenting definitions and mysteries and truths and their 'meshing' which call for more and more studying and musing and speculation." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 45:98 N 8 '46 950w

"One feels that it could have been done in fewer words, with less elaboration. . . For Catholics almost wholly. And for reference primarily."

Kirkus 14:495 O 1 '46 100w

"Complete, usefully indexed, this book is the answer to all who would begin to understand the center around which the life of the Catholic revolves." Elda Tanasso

+ N Y Times p26 O 20 '46 500w

BRUNNER, HEINRICH EMIL. Justice and the social order; tr. by Mary Hottinger. 304p $3 Harper [15s Lutterworth press]

323.4 Justice 46-707

A treatise on the idea of "Justice," its origins in classical philosophy and the Christian faith, the causes of its dissolution in modern times, and the possibility of defining it and applying it to the social order on the basis of Protestant theology.

Reviewed by J. A. C. Grant

Am Pol Sci R 40:585 Je '46 850w

Booklist 42:275 My 1 '46

"To many Americans, the author of this book will come as a new Brunner. The Swiss theologian is here thinking in a realm where they feel at home; the vocabulary and the line of argument will not be unfamiliar. The book makes good reading and rapid reading; those who have found Brunner a struggle in times past will be surprised to discover how seldom they have to back up and take a second start at the meaning of any paragraph. There will be less debate between the author and many of his American readers over the first than over the second part of the book, but on no page will the reader get the feeling that he is dealing with matters of less than immediate moment." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 63:304 Mr 6 '46 1050w

"In discussing international justice [the author], a native of Switzerland, makes wise observations about the place and rights of small nations. Yet throughout one has the feeling of distance from real life situations. It's all true, but it will have to be restated a couple of times before it is going to affect the actions of good Protestant bankers, employers, workers and statesmen." Emerson Hymes

+ — Commonweal 43:625 Ap 5 '46 650w

"The book is very clear, even in translation (thanks to the fine work of Miss Mary Hottinger), and should interest all who care about a deep-rooted Christian social message, or about the present status of law. . . The careful discussions of the nature of inequality, the relation of justice to love, the meaning of law will reward the reader who is willing to tackle a profound and extremely stimulating, as well as timely, book." E. E. Aubrey

+ Crozer Q 23:282 Jl '46 1300w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith

— Ethics 56:229 Ap '46 1400w

Foreign Affairs 25:162 O '46 30w

"This is solid reading, but theologians, students of Christian ethics, clergymen and other thoughtful Christians should be directed to this book as a 'must.'"

+ Kirkus 14:96 F 15 '46 170w

"No book has all the answers, and this one is written by a man far too earnest and modest to suppose that he possesses all of them. But it states a great thesis so clearly and effectively that it may well mark a new date in man's deliberation about the fate he holds in his own hands." G. N. Shuster

Sat R of Lit 29:21 Mr 30 '46 950w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman

Survey 82:305 N '46 800w

"Dr. Brunner's ideal society will be planned in the sense that it will be purposeful and co-operative, but its purposes are of a kind realizable only in the individual lives of those who compose it, and its cooperation must so far as possible be free, and must always be based on the independence of small social groups forming a series of links between the individual and society. This is the specifically Christian alternative both to anarchic individualism and totalitarian collectivism. Dr. Brunner presents it with a clarity and conviction which must produce a deep impression on any reader who is capable of approaching with tolerance and justice a critical examination of fashionable assumptions."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p484 O 13 '45 1950w

BRUNN, GEOFFREY. Europe in evolution, 1415-1815, 533p il maps $3.50 Houghton

940.2 Europe—History 45-7141

"This text aspires to survey the unfolding drama of European history, act by act, through four critical centuries. It seeks to characterize each century for the reader so that he will identify periods by their basic problems, their limitations, discoveries, and prevailing moods—so that he will, in other words, 'know his centuries.' Finally, it attempts to trace those dynamic forces within European society which have transformed that society so amazingly, and have enabled Europeans to transmit the impact of Western civilization to all parts of the globe." Pref

"Here is a fresh, vigorous introduction to the evolution of modern Europe. The transition from medieval to modern civilization is presented with particular skill, avoiding the sterile clichés anent the Middle Ages and the patronizing condescension which vitiate so many modern characterizations of medieval life." L. B. Packard

+ Am Hist R 51:351 Ja '46 320w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

+ Weekly Book Review p20 S 23 '45 270w

BRYN-JONES, DAVID. Toward a democratic new order. 288p $3.50; text ed $2.75 Univ. of Minn. [16s Oxford]

321.8 Democracy A45-4663

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"Professor Bryn-Jones brings to the task theoretical acumen balanced by practical insight, a fund of good sense, a careful avoidance of preaching, and an unusual capacity to recognize, without under—or over-estimating, both the difficulties and the factors favoring democratic society. He writes well and interestingly, and his scholarship is used to illuminate rather than oppress." T. I. Cook

BRYN-JONES, DAVID—Continued

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:353 Ap '46 1100w

"This book deserves a wide reading. Not since Leonard Woolf's brilliant essays have I seen such a penetrating or illuminating analysis of democracy as a living faith. Professor Bryn-Jones revives the historical foundations of democratic theory and practice. There is nothing new or startling in his description of the nature and meaning of majority rule, natural law, equality, fraternity, and the rights of man. But his restatement is clear, succinct, and in spots brilliant. The chapters dealing with 'Social Democracy' and 'Industry' are free of the ideological exegesis that obscures so much that is written in this field. The author is neither dogmatic nor vacuous. He is objective in presenting his data, but not indifferent to the moral and ethical issues involved. Moreover, there is a clear recognition of the hazardous mission democracy has to fulfill in this world of nuclear explosives and explosive political nuclei. The reader will find not only sound good sense in the chapters dealing with international affairs, but a note of hope." P. H. Odegard

+ Ann Am Acad 248:271 N '46 420w

Booklist 42:208 Mr 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '46

+ Foreign Affairs 24:550 Ap '46 20w

"A clear and well-documented analysis of the development of democratic thought. The historical section of his book, though it contains nothing new, is a useful and compendious summary of the works of previous writers and includes a particularly valuable comparison between democracy and dictatorship from the point of view of administrative efficiency."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p134 Mr 23 '46 300w

BRYNES, ASHER. Government against the people. 265p $3 Dodd

351.74 Police. Political science 46-2728

"The argument goes like this: You can judge how much sovereignty people have by observing the character of their domestic police systems. Where people are free, the police force is decentralized, limited in scope, and non-political. And where people are free, they will vote against war. Therefore the United States, to ensure peace, should throw her weight on the side of nations whose police forces are decentralized, limited etc." (New Yorker) No index.

"It is seldom that one finds a book so completely at variance with the expressed intention of the author as is the volume by Asher Brynes, called Government Against the People. The author's first statement, which occurs in a 'note on footnotes,' is that the book is intended for the general reader. Since its chief contents are two long and very dull essays seeking to interpret certain historical developments in Russia and England respectively, the style is ponderous despite brilliant sentences, and the argument loose and quite unrelated to much of the material intended to support it, the general reader can hardly be expected to derive much nourishment from this meager feast of reason." M. E. Oatman

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:791 Ag '46 750w

Reviewed by Albert Parry

Book Week p6 Ap 14 '46 450w

"Brynes's book is in many respects very imperfect, it suffers from a lack of clarity, as well as from an insufficient development of sociological analysis; the historian will raise his eyebrows at some passages, but nevertheless, it is a most stimulating work, full of suggestions and implications." Waldemar Gurian

+ Commonweal 44:266 Je 28 '46 600w

Current Hist 10:129 Ag '46 50w

"A careful historical study in the theory of government. However, a difficult style and awkward presentation will limit interest in the book to specialists. Distinctly not for the general reader." Margaret Owen

Library J 71:404 Mr 15 '46 140w

"The author has discovered that there is a connection between the nature of police systems within states and the propensity and ability of those states for war. Upon that partial truth he has built his book, as curious an example of plausible rhetoric and confused ingenuity as I have read since inquiring into bimetallicism." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 162:787 Je 29 '46 500w

"Among recent books on the international situation, this is one of the most stimulating, both for the novelty of its approach and the lucidity of its analysis." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p31 Ag 11 '46 400w

"The chapters on the police systems in England, Russia, and the United States are a good deal more stimulating than the thesis itself."

New Yorker 22:94 Mr 30 '46 120w

"Mr. Brynes's book is written on a foundation of sound scholarship, in a tone of moderation and reasonableness, in a style which has the imprint of personality. It will interest and win the respect of the general reader as well as of the expert in political science, the specialist in police and judicial administration, and the student of international affairs." M. R. Konvitz

+ Sat R of Lit 29:46 Ap 13 '46 1600w

"This unusual book approaches the broad problem of political organization at home and relations abroad from a fresh and highly interesting angle. It is a scholarly and well written study of the growth and development of the police systems in Russia, Great Britain and the United States as illustrative of a basic factor making for war or peace in the modern world." F. R. Dulles

+ Weekly Book Review p28 Ap 28 '46 700w

BRYSON, GLADYS EUGENIA. Man and society; the Scottish inquiry of the eighteenth century. 300p $3 Princeton univ. press

301 Sociology. Philosophers, Scottish A45-5326

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"This book is a contribution of a high order to historical sociology, both in its wide learning and sound scholarship, and also in the intelligence and insight which the author exhibits in interpreting the materials assembled." H. E. Barnes

+ Am Hist R 51:496 Ap '46 650w

"Man and Society is a most useful and unique addition to the literature of the history of social thought." J. O. Hertler

+ Am J Soc 52:33 Jl '46 900w

"At times she writes with an enthusiasm that leads the reader to suspect that the moral philosophers, in her opinion, had something really important to say about human nature and society; but, on other occasions, her manner is so condescendingly tolerant that the reader is forced to revise his first judgment. It seems to this reviewer that the author would have made a much greater contribution to the actual clarification of the dilemma in which the modern social sciences find themselves if she had approached the moral philosophy of the eighteenth century without the preconceptions that spring from a deep and abiding loyalty to John Dewey." J. H. Hallowell

Am Pol Sci R 40:171 F '46 550w

"The book appears to have been produced by competent, painstaking scholarship. It is provided with adequate notes, bibliography, and an index." F. N. House

+ Am Soc R 11:373 Je '46 550w

Reviewed by G. R. Negley

Ann Am Acad 245:217 My '46 500w

J Philos 43:361 Je 20 '46 1050w

"Miss Bryson's approach is sound and competent. But one must notice various inadequacies—all related to her work as a study in the history of ideas. First, some minor inadequacies. . . She overemphasizes (p. 79) 'nostalgia' as a force in the Scots' historical writings; for, whatever might have been their personal idiosyncrasies, they were constrained to demonstrate the inevitability of social development and to rationalize 'nostalgia' out of existence. Indeed, her whole chapter on the Scottish view of 'Man's Past' is disappointing. . . Furthermore, as a study in the history of ideas ('a chapter of another kind') Man and Society exhibits certain major structural inadequacies. One would like, as support for a necessarily idea-by-idea analysis, a brief chronological sketch of the writers and writings involved; perhaps an appended outline would do." R. H. Pearce

+ — Pol Sci Q 61:282 Je '46 750w

Reviewed by M. H. Williams

Social Forces 25:106 O '46 550w

"The method of the book is to summarize the contributions of each of the Scottish philosophers to the subjects of the various chapters. Readers familiar with the source material may find the summaries and selected passages too full; they would prefer a bolder synthesis. Those unfamiliar with the original documents will find here much digested information concerning them. Full chapter notes serve in lieu of bibliography, and there is an index."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:17 Mr '46 200w

BUCHANAN, DONALD W., ed. Canadian painters, from Paul Kane to the Group of seven (Phaidon press art bk) 25p 87pl $6.50 Oxford [25s Allen, G]

759.11 Paintings, Canadian 46-7473

Brief biographical sketches of some recent Canadian artists, a sketch of Canadian painting thru the 19th and early 20th century, with four color plates and eighty-seven black and white reproductions showing the scope of the work of the principal artists. Index of artists and collections.

Book Week p2 O 13 '46 70w

Booklist 43:87 N 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p15 N 16 '46 150w

"The plates are generous in size and well chosen, and Mr. Donald Buchanan has performed his task as editor with admirable understanding and brevity. His introduction and biographical notes could not be improved upon, and the four colour plates give an adequate indication of the brave and often violent colour harmonies that characterise the 'Group of Seven.'"

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 31 '46 140w

Reviewed by W. E. Parker

San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 13 '46 270w

BUCHANAN, NORMAN SHARPE. International investment and domestic welfare; some aspects of international borrowing and lending in the post-war period. 249p $3.75; student ed $2.75 Holt

332 67 Investments, Foreign, Economic policy. Reconstruction (1939-) 45-7652

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"The reviewer shares the author's concern over the view, rather freely advanced, that extensive foreign investment can achieve a commensurate degree of good will and higher living standards. He believes, however, that Professor Buchanan assumes a postwar world economy less dynamic than that which a prosperous America might conceivably galvanize into being under the stimulus of a carefully planned international investment program and international agreement assuring the removal of all forms of restrictive trade devices." A. E. Taylor

+ — Ann Am Acad 243:169 Ja '46 600w

Current Hist 10:537 Je '46 70w

"A solid and significant monograph."

+ Foreign Affairs 24:350 Ja '46 20w

"Remarkably unbiased work of lasting value; might be too specialized for majority of readers, but highly recommended for large public, educational and special libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 71:343 Mr 1 '46 150w

Reviewed by A. D. Gayer

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 18 '46 1300w

"Timely and important book. . . As the book was completed shortly before the fighting ended, the picture is inevitably out of date in some particulars; but it is fully adequate as a background for the discussion of the real investment, domestic as well as international, which is necessary for the restoration of the capital stock of the countries affected." Ragnar Nurkse

+ Pol Sci Q 61:254 Je '46 1950w

"The author's style of writing is clear and forceful. Excellent organization of material, assisted by introductory statements, well chosen footnotes, capitalized headings, and frequent summaries ease the task of reading the rather heavy content. The study is well documented. Statistics and tables are well arranged and contain considerable data not older than the war itself." F. W. Moore

+ Social Educ 10:328 N '46 1050w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:32 Mr '46 280w

BUCHANAN, ROSEMARY. House of friendship; decorations by Margaret Ayer. 165p $2 Longmans

46-3806

Based on the author's own experiences in her brother's parish in New Mexico. It is the story of the girls in a parochial high school, who form a girl scout troop with the help of the people in their community.

Cath World 163:285 Je '46 110w

"A good story of a parochial school would be welcome—but this is the kind of story that will do more harm than good. It is deadly dull, smug, self-satisfied, and almost wholly lacking in story interest."

— Kirkus 14:70 F 1 '46 170w

"This tells of their activities during one year. Because their projects are of more importance than the plot, the story is a little slow and will be of interest only to Catholic girls or to Girl Scouts who could get ideas for their own troops. Recommended only for that purpose, not for its story value." Elizabeth Johnson

Library J 71:828 Je 1 '46 70w

BUCK, FRANK, and FRASER, FERRIN L. Jungle animals; ill. by Roger Vernam. 55p $1.50 Random house

590 Zoology—Juvenile literature 46-133

Descriptions of some of the animals, birds, and reptiles of the jungle, which the author has come in contact with in his years of travel around the world. Grades five to eight.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p11 My 5 '46 200w

Booklist 42:201 F 15 '46

"Large and beautifully illustrated by Roger Vernam, this book is authoritative and fascinating. . . Best for the pre-high school age, but would interest all." M. L. Goodwin

+ Library J 71:185 F 1 '46 50w

Sat R of Lit 29:45 My 18 '46 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 31 '46 230w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Pavilion of women. 316p $3 Day

46-8001

On her fortieth birthday Madame Wu, a beautiful upper-class Chinese woman, voluntarily retires from married life. It is her plan to select a concubine for her husband and live a freer life as chief arbitrator of the house of Wu. The difficulties which ensued changed all the life within this "pavilion of women."

"As a review of the manners and customs of one of China's old families, the book is rich and appealing in detail. . . As a treatise on the salvation of Madame Wu's soul, it is impressive but less successful." Mary Pinchot

BUCK, PEARL—Continued

+ — Atlantic 179:111 Ja '47 280w

Reviewed by S. K. Workman

Book Week p3 N 24 '46 600w

Booklist 43:132 Ja 1 '47

"One puts down 'Pavilion of Women' with a small sigh that it is hardly Mrs. Buck at her supreme best." Margaret Williamson

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 17 '46 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"As a character piece, the book seems static, surface. One is never convinced of reality. The figures never take on the emotional values that made her Good Earth so poignantly moving. But as a beautiful stage set, with successive pictures of Chinese life, the novel leaves a vivid impression on the mind. The story moves along, paced by the slow tempo of her characteristically studied style."

+ — Kirkus 14:553 N 1 '46 260w

"Highly recommended." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 71:1625 N 15 '46 80w

"A slight pallor, emanating from the dispassionate heroine, pervades the book. Yet it is a searching, adult study of women written with high seriousness and sympathy, which should find a multitude of women readers. Mrs. Buck's grave, unaccented prose is well suited to the delicate matters at hand." Mary McGrory

+ — N Y Times p6 N 24 '46 1050w

"It is the first novel in which the author has concerned herself with Chinese of wealth, and when she is illuminating one detail after another in the panorama of upper-class life . . . the book is vivid and extremely interesting. When, however, she is telling the story of the aging wife and her sublimated passion for a dead foreign priest, she loses her grip on reality, even Oriental reality, and becomes a mite dull."

+ — New Yorker 22:122 N 23 '46 160w

"Some of the minor characters in the story are excellently done. We cannot vouch for their truth to Chinese life but they are true to human life, especially Madame Kang who laughs and weeps at the least provocation and Madame Wu's greedy, old mother-in-law. . . Many of Pearl Buck's readers will feel that in this book she missed an opportunity. 'Pavilion of Women' is centered around a vital theme which deals with one of the essential problems of being, the struggle of the human spirit to free itself. But Pearl Buck has combed her subject to shreds and writes this time with what amounts to the plain assumption that her readers' I.Q.s are very low-level affairs indeed." Jane Volles

San Francisco Chronicle p5 D 1 '46 350w

"'Pavilion of Women' is Miss Buck at her best, the dedicated storyteller. Beneath the deceptive simplicity of the narrative flows the clear, swift tide of human life—the small commonplaces of daily living, the clashes of personality, the episodes mean and magnificent." A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 29:11 N 23 '46 850w

"Pavilion is likely to be a popular novel, especially with women, but its popularity will be due not to its literary or philosophical qualities but to its precise and colorful descriptions of women's lives and customs at the other end of the world."

Time 48:110 N 25 '46 440w

"The book is written in the somewhat Eurasian English Miss Buck reserves for her novels of Chinese life. That has been proved advantageous in communicating atmosphere and a sense of remoteness, but it does not seem to be the happiest vehicle for philosophic discourse. As I have already said, I feel sure that I am in the minority when I find myself regretting the breaking up of a very readable and pleasant story of life in a wealthy Chinese family by the intrusion of Brother André and his mysticism. I do not doubt that 'Pavilion of Women' will be hailed as a moving and profound love story by the many thousand readers it is certain to have." J. J. Espey

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 N 24 '46 1500w

BUCKINGHAM, NASH. Game bag; tales of shooting and fishing; il. by H. P. A. M. Hoecker. 185p $2.50 Putnam

799 Hunting, Fishing Agr46-152

Short stories and sketches about hunting and fishing, by a well-known American sportsman. Illustrated with photographs and line drawings.

Reviewed by George Applegren

Book Week p2 Mr 24 '46 200w

Booklist 43:10 S '46

"Should be of great interest to sportsmen."

+ New Yorker 22:100 Mr 23 '46 60w

"A new collection of colorful, well told tales of days afield, drawn from the memory of one of America's best known outdoor writers, who also is a crack wing shot, field trial judge, ardent conservationist, sportsman and capable raconteur. Mr. Buckingham has been a professional football player, and an amateur heavyweight boxing champion and has written five books regarded as authoritative." Leo Marceau

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Mr 22 '46 200w

"Nash Buckingham has done more in this volume than write thrilling tales of the outdoors from an era of plenty to the threshold of an often not too wise conservation policy. He has contributed a thought-provoking chapter on artificial propagation of game birds and its effect, often so disastrous to wild instincts that even a self-respecting bird dog is reluctant to work on the product."

+ Weekly Book Review p23 My 26 '46 300w

BUFF, MRS MARY (MARSH), and BUFF, CONRAD. Big tree [il. by the authors]. 80p $3 Viking

582 Sequoia 46-7347

"Beautiful drawings in duotone illustrate the story of Wawona, one of the great Sequoia trees. Beginning before history began it carries the story through the centuries, ending with the establishment of The National Park. Birds and beasts and men come and go and 'Wawona, giant of giants, grew more noble with the passing years.'" Sat R of Lit

"Without undue personalization the Buffs have made their account of a giant sequoia and its centuries of life not only interesting, but very dramatic. The illustrations are beautiful." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:166 D '46 40w

Booklist 43:74 N 1 '46

"Though the text is perhaps for ten upwards, the illustrations in duotone, shadowy drawings of the great tree, lovely sketches of the animals that live in the woods—owls and skunks, deer and bears—will hold a true appeal for much younger children. Their sensitive imaginations will be quickened by the pictures even though the story itself is a bit beyond them. . . As story, too, the book is satisfying and many are the adventures that happen as Wawona, the Big Tree, lives through the centuries." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 12 '46 240w

"A distinguished book for older children and adults." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 22:457 N '46 90w

"A moving and dramatic interpretation of five thousand years of earth history. . . Most impressive are the beautiful illustrations, bringing out in the pattern of the forest the semblance of a mighty cathedral." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:464 N '46 120w

Kirkus 14:526 O 15 '46 120w

"The author-illustrators of this beautifully designed book communicate to the reader a sense of wonder at the grandeur and antiquity of the Sequoias and a deep need to preserve them for all time. The story of a special sequoia, Wawona, symbolizes the growth of these magnificent trees. A distinguished book for a limited group of readers ten and older who are sensitive to the beauties of nature." Dorothea Dawson

+ Library J 71:1719 D 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hodges
N Y Times p4 N 10 '46 200w

Reviewed by J. H. Cole
San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 10 '46
150w

Sat R of Lit 29:60 N 9 '46 60w

"This is in every sense a family book, a nature-loving child will love it, but his elders, city-locked, will find in it that spaciousness of the illimitable forest and the poet, tired of time, will be refreshed by the hushed timelessness of 5,000 growing years."

+ Weekly Book Review p9 N 10 '46 500w

BUGBEE, EMMA. Peggy goes overseas. 276p
$2 Dodd

45-10645

"Older girls who have followed the 'Peggy Foster' series of journalistic career stories will be interested in Peggy's overseas assignment. As a war correspondent for the New York Star, her day-by-day experiences are told during 1944 and 1945 as she follows our Army to Paris after D-Day." Library J

"Story, although fictional, is parallel to some extent to the experiences of Mrs. Elizabeth May Craig, Washington correspondent." V. W. Schott

+ Library J 71:186 F 1 '46 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p6 D 16 '45 360w

BULLA, CLYDE ROBERT. The donkey cart; drawings by Lois Lenski. 89p $2 Crowell

46-6089

Tale of two children who receive a belated Christmas present in the summer. It is a donkey and cart, and each of the stories of the children and their present on their uncle's farm is introduced by a little song. For second-graders.

Booklist 43:38 O 1 '46

"Solid bookmaking and ever-popular Lois Lenski pictures, plus a gay little song at the beginning of each chapter make this a nice book for good little boys and girls."

+ Kirkus 14:592 D 1 '46 80w

"Format and vocabulary are just right for second-graders ready for their first book-length story." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 71:1131 S 1 '46 70w

"With attractive looking pages in large type, nice spacing, and written in simple sentences, this quiet little 'every-day' story will be an addition to the home and library for the child who is beginning to read and needs a book that looks easy and is easy." P. F.

+ N Y Times p21 Ag 25 '46 160w

BULLARD, FREDERIC LAURISTON. Abraham Lincoln and the widow Bixby. 154p $3 Rutgers univ. press

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. Bixby, Mrs Lydia (Parker)

The famous letter which President Lincoln wrote to a mother who was reported to have lost five sons in the war, has been the subject of much controversy: Did Lincoln actually write the letter—and was the Widow Bixby worthy of it? Mr. Bullard here reviews all the evidence pro and con.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p5 D 29 '46 180w

"Mildly interesting as a minor footnote to history and a picture of complications in establishing the authenticity of records. Its relation to a heart warming episode gives it some value. For limited library purchase." M. C. Manley
Library J 71:1204 S 15 '46 50w

"Another notable piece of detection on the Lincoln story."

+ New Yorker 22:125 N 9 '46 80w

"This book is history, but it has the pace and interest of a detective novel." Alfred Kay
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 17 '46
500w

BULLITT, WILLIAM CHRISTIAN. The great globe itself; a preface to world affairs. 310p $2.75 Scribner

909.82 International relations. World politics. Russia—Foreign relations 46-5554

A discussion of world politics and international relationships especially from the point of view of the United States and the other Western democracies, and as they are affected by the policies of Soviet Russia. The author was American ambassador to Russia from 1933 to 1936. Index.

Reviewed by W. L. Godshall

Am Pol Sci R 40:1024 O '46 450w

Booklist 43:12 S '46

"This book has an indisputable claim on every intelligent man whatever his nation, whatever his political creed; for only the incorrigible believer in fairy tales will be able to brush aside these strictly logical deductions from undeniable facts. It must be added that although a very useful, it is also a very annoying book—most annoying to those who find it most useful. For in order to get the full value of its pages, the reader must create for himself whatever he needs in the way of table of contents, section titles, chapter headings. All these helpful features have been omitted from the volume, despite an ancient rule for the extending of such courtesies to the public." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 164:181 N '46 700w

"[This] is a significant addition to the expanding shelf of new books probing Russia's every action. It aims to help the United States make its decision—by warning that Russian and American aims are incompatible. Considering the magnitude of its topic, the book is surprisingly brief. This at times results in a lack of documentation and even explanation on matters which, in the absence of fuller treatment, leaves the reader less than convinced by Mr. Bullitt's argument. Yet there is this advantage; the author wastes no time in stating his thesis. 'We fear the Soviet Union,' he charges bluntly on Page 4, discussing the advent of the atomic bomb and averring that there is but one nation in the world that may one day use it against the United States." H. S. Hayward

Christian Science Monitor p12 S 10 '46
750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '46

"The book clearly and almost recklessly sketches out a program for American governmental action toward Russia and the world. . . The Bullitt policy is all written in a challengingly flat manner, and aimed directly against the Soviet Union." Philip Burnham

Commonweal 44:404 Ag 9 '46 1950w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 11:226 S '46 1050w

Foreign Affairs 25:334 Ja '47 110w

Reviewed by W. J. Gold

Nation 163:413 O 12 '46 650w

"The experience of William C. Bullitt as Ambassador to Russia (1933-1936), after sixteen years of non-recognition, and to France (1936-1940) entitles his book to consideration, even if his sharp swing from early enthusiasm for the Russian revolution to increasingly bitter hostility toward the Soviet regime (which he does not undertake to explain) inspires caution in appraising his conclusions. . . Mr. Bullitt presents a vigorous case against Russia; but he does not give equally vigorous presentation of his own convictions in favor of policies which, if followed by the United States before 1939, might have averted or at least mitigated our present dilemma." V. M. Dean

New Repub 115:180 Ag 12 '46 1600w

Reviewed by Michael Karpovich

N Y Times p1 Jl 21 '46 1300w

"The book is provocative and will stir readers to sharp criticism or lusty praise. It is something of a popular call to arms." J. N. Hazard

Pol Sci Q 61:599 D '46 1400w

BULLITT, W. C.—Continued

"Should interest all those who would like to see the United Nations function genuinely for peace and not as just one more demonstration of how cleverly diplomats can manipulate practically anything." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 26 '46 550w

"A year ago most liberals would have denounced a book like this, no matter what the authorities adduced. Today the actions of Russia and her relations with the Western world have given all liberals to pause. . . Bullitt, who knows the score, says: Stop Stalin before it is too late. 'The most legitimate use of force on earth is to gain time to permit the growth of moral ideas.' With that view this reviewer, for one, has no quarrel." John Barkham

+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 J1 13 '46 1150w

Time 48:100 J1 22 '46 600w

"To any reasonable American present-day Russian policies seem unfortunate in inspiration and bad in effect. I am not undertaking to defend them. But I think it important at least to seek to understand them. Mr. Bullitt does not even make the effort. On the contrary, so gross are the distortions, so fallacious the arguments, so blatant the omissions, so immoral the proposals of this book that it can only serve to promote misunderstanding. 'The Great Globe Itself'—the phrase is taken from 'The Tempest'—might well be called 'Hysteria, Unlimited.'" H. S. Commager

— Weekly Book Review p4 J1 14 '46 1650w

Wis Lib Bul 42:127 O '46

Reviewed by W. T. R. Fox

Yale R n s 36:164 autumn '46 350w

BULLOT, IVAN. Air travel guide to Latin America. 369p maps $5 Watts, F.

918 Latin America—Description and travel. Aeronautics, Commercial 46-6235

"In Part 1 full information is given on air travel in general, including names of air lines serving Latin America, rates, routes and requirements. Part 2 suggests itineraries and Part 3 is an alphabetical, descriptive summary of each of the Latin American countries. Impartial hints on hotels, stores, history, climate, language, currency, sports, holidays and the proper clothing for the different regions, make this a completely useful handbook for business travelers as well as tourists. Contains maps." Library J

Book Week p4 O 13 '46 50w

Foreign Affairs 25:349 Ja '47 10w

Kirkus 14:317 J1 1 '46 90w

"Highly recommended." Barbara Overton

+ Library J 71:1046 Ag '46 90w

BULOSAN, CARLOS. America is in the heart; a personal history. 326p $3 Harcourt

B or 92

46-25065

These autobiographical reminiscences of the Filipino poet, cover his boyhood in his native village, his coming to America, and the years of hardship and bitterness here during the thirties. The book ends with Pearl Harbor just as the author is beginning to achieve some success as a writer.

Reviewed by John Norcross

Book Week p4 Mr 10 '46 500w

Booklist 42:225 Mr 15 '46

"To most Americans, the conditions that the author describes must seem incredible. But, after his appealing and beautifully written account of life on Luzon, he certainly persuades his reader that he is a sincere and truthful witness of the terrible events he portrays." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 14 '46 550w

"The first part of the book which recalls his childhood is the best. Here is poetry, emotion recollected in tranquillity, in language memorable and pathetic. . . The second part of the book is a terrible record of the kind of democracy that many good people in Alaska and California, Washington and Oregon think to be good enough for the strangers who 'don't speak their language' but who do their dirty work dirt cheap. . . America owes much to Bulosan because he has such a great love of her and because he is most literate in that love. Better than anyone else, men like this man know that the soul of America is sound, that America is democracy, that the spirit is more than the meat, that this land of ours is the heart's home of freedom." John Monaghan

+ Commonweal 44:149 My 24 '46 420w

Foreign Affairs 25:165 O '46 10w

Kirkus 14:84 F 15 '46 170w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

Library J 71:343 Mr 1 '46 140w

"With no education to speak of, Bulosan made himself a writer of some charm in an alien language. He tells all this quietly, almost shyly, and the impact is not up to the possibilities of the material. But I hope it is read by all the people who have a lot to learn about the Philippines and America." Max Gissen

+ New Repub 114:421 Mr 25 '46 300w

"A book that is bitter and beautiful, that will be abused and praised and misused by many kinds of people and toward many ends." C. P. Romulo

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 10 '46 1250w

"People interested in driving from America the scourge of intolerance should read Mr. Bulosan's autobiography. They should read it that they may draw from the anger it will arouse in them the determination to bring to an end the vicious nonsense of racism. They will not find it difficult to read. The author writes simply and well. He makes no effort to spare the reader's nerves; he recounts his incidents shamelessly and realistically, be they love, murder, or brutality. But he never shrieks with the stridency of many of our other proletarian authors who confuse comradeship with shrillness and who solve all problems by calling the other fellow a Fascist." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 29:7 Mr 9 '46 1350w

"Although addressed to the general reader, this autobiography is also the kind of 'life history document' which provides the flesh for the bones of social theory."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:96 Je '46 280w

Reviewed by J. J. Espey

Weekly Book Review p3 Mr 10 '46 750w

Wis Lib Bul 42:45 Mr '46

BUNCE, WILLIAM HARVEY. Dragon prowls westward; il. by Lorence Bjorklund. 199p $2 Harcourt

46-6297

Erik, a Viking lad, on his first visit to Vineland, is captured by an Iroquois tribe. He makes his escape and joins an Algonkin family and with the aid of the Viking ship helps the Algonkins in their war against the Iroquois. For older boys.

Kirkus 14:388 Ag 15 '46 160w

"This is a fast moving adventure story full of Indian and Viking customs. Recommended for older boys." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 71:1335 O 1 '46 70w

"The added illustrations, by Lorence Bjorklund, add clarity to a thrilling story." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p41 S 15 '46 200w

"An interesting, fast-moving story, well illustrated."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:56 N 9 '46 50w

BUNN, CHARLES WILLIAM. Chemical crystallography; an introduction to optical and X-ray methods. 422p il $7.50 (25s) Oxford

541 Crystallography. Stereochemistry

[A46-4278]

"The ultimate purpose of this book is to instruct research chemists in the use of crystallographic methods for the identification of substances. As would be expected, a large proportion of the work is concerned with the interpretation of the results of X-ray and optical tests; but throughout, the author's aim of making crystallographic methods a practical tool in chemical laboratories has been kept firmly in mind. Although the book is called an introduction, the treatment is comparatively full; and, for most topics, it is adequate for the average research chemist's use. Literature references indicate the location of fuller treatment of specific topics." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The author has an especially clear style in explaining the elementary principles involved, and has illustrated them with many excellent drawings and half-tone reproductions. . . The printing and binding have been well done. Thus, from all angles, the book is one which the reviewer can heartily recommend." H. P. Klug

+ J Phys Chem 50:490 N '46 400w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:22 Ap '46

Reviewed by James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p31 O 6 '46 70w

BURBANK, ADDISON, and NEWCOMB, COVELLE. Narizona's holiday; drawings by Addison Burbank. 155p $2 Longmans

46-7723

Narizona is a Mexican coatl, an animal "like monkeys and squirrels and bears and kittens and puppies all rolled into one." Worn out with her work in a circus, Narizona is rescued by a little Mexican boy, who loves her and cares for her even after she is banished because of her mischievous propensities.

Booklist 43:120 D 15 '46

"The entertaining story, with drawings by an adept artist, brings reality and fun into the Mexican scene."

+ Horn Bk 22:350 S '46 100w
Kirkus 14:385 Ag 15 '46 80w

"Frequent use of Spanish terms may tend to limit the reading of the story." A. H. McGinly

Library J 72:82 Ja 1 '47 80w
Sat R of Lit 29:31 D 14 '46 140w

"The story moves swiftly, with sustained interest, and gives much of the Mexican scene and people. Many Mexican words and expressions are woven into the story. It is a whole-some story that children will like."

+ Social Studies 38:45 Ja '47 180w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p10 D 8 '46 500w

BURCH, GLADYS. Famous violinists for young people. 232p il $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

927.8 Violinists—Juvenile literature 46-4939

Following a short history of the violin and its makers are brief biographies of fourteen famous violinists. They are: Arcangelo Corelli, Antonio Vivaldi, Giuseppe Tartini, Giovanni Battista Viotti, Niccolò Paganini, Louis Spohr, Ole Borneman Bull, Joseph Joachim, Henri Wieniawski, Pablo de Sarasate, Leopold Auer & his pupils, Eugene Ysaÿe, Fritz Kreisler, Albert Spalding. Index.

Booklist 42:369 Jl 15 '46

"Advanced violin students, music teachers and libraries will find much valuable material in Gladys Burch's book." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 16 '47 90w

"Music school and library material primarily."

+ Kirkus 14:242 My 15 '46 90w

Sat R of Lit 29:64 N 9 '46 30w

"The idea of this book is valid but Miss Burch has tried to record every fact, date and name (interspersed with a multitude of exclamation points, italics and dashes) and has ended with a jumble which sends the confused adult running to Groves for consolation and leaves the young utterly lost."

— Theatre Arts 30:744 D '46 60w

BURGESS, ERNEST WATSON, and LOCKE, HARVEY JAMES. The family, from institution to companionship. 800p maps $4.25 Am. bk.

392 Family 46-204

"The thesis of the book is that the family is in transition from an institution where the unifying factors were authority and tradition to a companionship where unity inheres in the mutual affection and comradeship of its members. Materials have been drawn from a wide variety of sources to document and to analyze this fundamental trend in family organization. Use of personal documents to introduce the problems discussed makes the volume very readable." J Home Econ

"This book is more than a text for classes in sociology. The student who is in a class where this book is used as the basis of discussion should come out at the end of the semester a more understanding member of a family, a more promising potential parent." C. G. Woodhouse

+ Am J Soc 52:274 N '46 600w

"The book contains a wealth of case-history material which gives reality and vividness to the factual analysis." Clifford Kirkpatrick

+ Ann Am Acad 245:218 My '46 600w

"When so many books on the family are merely new arrangements of old material, it is a stimulating experience to find the new conceptions, new ways of treating materials, and reports on new research found here. To me the book is a 'must' as research material for those of us who are teaching in the field of marriage and family living." M. I. Morgan

+ J Home Econ 38:237 Ap '46 360w

"The authors paint a vivid and realistic picture of the family as a unity of interacting personalities. This emphasis, together with the abundant use of case materials, infusing real life blood into the conceptual framework, causes the reviewer to recommend this book most enthusiastically." Orden Smucker

+ Social Educ 10:238 My '46 550w

"If we assume that a textbook should be a guide for the student who is seeking knowledge and insight in a special area of study, this volume on the family by Burgess and Locke is eminently qualified to fulfill its purpose. It is difficult to see how a student could come away from a serious study of its pages without a greatly increased knowledge of the nature, functions, and problems of the family, and an appreciation of its place in contemporary American life." D. S. Klaiss

+ Social Forces 24:480 My '46 1050w

BURGIN, MIRON. Economic aspects of Argentine federalism, 1820-1852. 304p $4 Harvard univ. press

330 982 Argentina—Economic conditions. Argentina—Politics and government

A46-3762

"The opening chapter sets forth the ways in which the mercantilist and protectionist character of the Spanish colonial system contributed to the economic prosperity of the provinces of the interior and militated against such development in the province of Buenos Aires. The remainder of the book explains why the economic development of post-revolutionary Argentina was characterized by a shift of the economic center of gravity from the interior to the sea-coast, leaving Argentine politics a contest between Buenos Aires and the interior." Am Pol Sci R

"A valuable contribution to the all too inadequate literature in English on Latin American political science." W. M. Gibson

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:1021 O '46 230w

Reviewed by Walter Hausdorfer

Library J 70:1189 D 15 '45 90w

"Emphasis in this book is placed on economic and financial developments in Buenos Aires; more needs to be done with respect to the other Argentine provinces."

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:298 D '46 220w

BURKE, KENNETH. Grammar of motives. 530p $5 Prentice-Hall

191.9 Reasoning. Knowledge, Theory of. Thought and thinking. Semantics 45-10249

"First volume of a projected three-volume work (Grammar, Rhetoric, Symbolic) intended to foster linguistic skepticism and linguistic appreciation. Burke, a literary critic, here analyzes materials from metaphysics, theology and political writing which illustrate interpretations of human motives. Major section examines vocabularies of Aristotle, Hobbes, Spinoza, Berkeley, Kant, Marx and Santayana in relation to the author's suggested terminology: Act, Agent, Scene, Agency, Purpose." Library J

Reviewed by S. I. Hayakawa
Book Week p4 F 17 '46 950w

"His snug fitting of the world's philosophies into his pentad is brilliantly done, and as delightful as a child's game: the red bricks into the red box, the blue into the blue. . . Luckily, Mr. Burke falls under his own definition of a tyro: he has a great deal to say about something." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 44:120 My 17 '46 1950w

Current Hist 10:257 Mr '46 80w

Kirkus 13:483 N 1 '45 170w

"A difficult work, technical, abstract, inconclusive; but likely to reward those who will follow this agile and quizzical mind." H. W. Hart

Library J 70:1134 D 1 '45 140w

"Kenneth Burke's 'A Grammar of Motives' is the first work of a trilogy, to be followed by 'Rhetoric of Motives' and 'Symbolic of Motives.' The series may be regarded as a detailed mining of the territory staked out in the earlier 'Permanence and Change.' It is the same Burke with the same quest and the same strategy, as baffling, as inconclusive, as penetrating, as rewarding as ever, working on the largest and most important job of criticism that is being done among us." Charles Morris

+ Nation 163:106 J1 27 '46 950w

Reviewed by J. C. Ransom

New Repub 114:257 F 18 '46 1800w

"'A Grammar of Motives' is difficult reading. Burke seems fearful of talking down to his readers with simplified style and vocabulary. This reader, for one, confesses to bogging down in several parts of the sections called 'Ways of Placement' and 'On Dialect.' Integrating summaries at the ends of major sections would help. But it is a profound and provocative book, with many flashing insights. It will prove most rewarding to persons keenly interested in philosophy, linguistics and literary criticism." S. S. Sargent

N Y Times p23 Ag 4 '46 850w

Reviewed by F. C. Golfing

Poetry 67:338 Mr '46 850w

"This work, the first of a projected trilogy on human relations, is an original contribution in a field whose limits are hard to define. It will, however, appeal only to the reader who is prepared to follow much closely reasoned philosophical argument."

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:4 Mr '46 320w

"The whole essay is an attack, at the same time massive and subtle, against crude logic, unchallenged 'eternal verities,' single keys to the problems of the universe, ultimate motivations, or 'God-words.' This grammar must be considered as an elaborate warning, not as a guide. Perhaps the other two volumes will give us Kenneth Burke's 'God-words.'" Albert Guerard

+ Weekly Book Review p20 Mr 10 '46 1220w

BURKE, RICHARD. The fourth star; a Quinny Hite mystery. 255p $2 Curl

Detective story.

46-6625

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p4 O 6 '46 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 S 8 '46 140w

"Quinny is, as always, a Runyonesque delight; but his latest exploit seems to have been written and edited with careless haste."

Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p15 S 15 '46 50w

BURKE, RICHARD. Reluctant hussy. 336p $2.75 Curl

46-4852

California in 1904 is the scene of this novel. The heroine, just out of high school, decides she will save her father's mine for him by posing as a dangerous woman. She is both tactful and successful.

Kirkus 14:226 My 15 '46 170w

"The innocent worldliness of the era is reflected in the author's winking asides and violent double-takes. His prose style, designed only to keep the plot boiling on the fires of misunderstanding, is wordily facetious. And while the characterization may not be subtle, it has been thoughtfully designed to afford fat type parts to every star on the MGM lot from Lionel Barrymore to Judy Garland." Mary McGrory

N Y Times p10 Je 16 '46 270w

"It's a fine kettle of fish that spills all over the stove. Mr. Burke gets the fish back in the pan and does them up brown in this 'light-hearted tale of San Francisco.'" J. V.

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 11 '46 150w

BURLINGAME, ROGER. Of making many books; a hundred years of reading, writing and publishing. 347p $3.75 Scribner

655,4747 Authors and publishers. Publishers and publishing. Scribner, firm, publishers. New York 46-8389

In celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the publishing house of Charles Scribner's Sons, the author has dipped into the firm's almost complete files of correspondence with its authors and presents here a picture of a great publishing house. "This is his book, based on his personal knowledge and on material gleaned from the files. Since this was to be a picture of the past, it was agreed that the use of letters should be limited to those of authors who were no longer living. In the few cases where living authors are mentioned or quoted, the subject under discussion would have been inadequately treated without their inclusion." (Publisher's note) Index.

"This is the story of Scribner's bookmaking for one hundred years, a story which Roger Burlingame, with access to a fascinating correspondence, has told so congenially and so fairly that I would wish the book in the hands of every beginning writer and as a source in our schools of journalism." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 178:146 D '46 200w

Booklist 43:151 Ja 15 '47

"For the general reader, it is perhaps as well that Mr. Burlingame has made his book what it is—chatty and personal. The student of bookmaking can, after all, find the more recondite material elsewhere." D. S.

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 23 '46 650w

"One finishes reading what Mr. Burlingame has written with a feeling of gratitude. Any business which has had a history of a hundred years inevitably must have made mistakes, and Mr. Burlingame does not try to conceal this—he tells with some wit, for instance, how the house missed its chance to publish Emily Dickinson. But no matter how many mistakes may have been made, no matter how much stuffiness may have been shown, one comes away with a feeling that one has been reading about four generations of honorable people honestly seeking to make a contribution to something more than their own pocketbooks." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 45:232 D 13 '46 1100w

"I think it is not arguable to say that Mr. Burlingame's volume is one of the more realistic approaches to the vexed problem of merchandising genius. I wish other leading publishing houses would follow the lead of Scribner. If we had access to more data of this kind, our understanding of literary history would be better, our training of authors would be more responsible, and our notions of the way art is channeled to the public would be vastly improved." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Times p4 O 27 '46 2700w

Reviewed by Arthur Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 1 '46 300w

Reviewed by F. B. Adams

Sat R of Lit 29:20 N 30 '46 650w

"The fascination of this book lies in scores of quotations from correspondence between Scribner's and its authors, proving how intimately their fortunes are allied. The Scribner sun was surrounded by a constellation of bright stars, and what attracts the admiration of a publisher is the fixity of that sun and the regularity of the orbit of its planets. . . Best-sellers leave a hot scent behind them and if you are a hound for sales, you can pick up the trail in a dozen places as you turn the pages of Mr. Burlingame's pleasant book." Ellery Sedgwick

+ Weekly Book Review p7 N 3 '46 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 42:163 D '46

BURN-MURDOCH, HECTOR. Church, continuity and unity. 196p $3.50 Macmillan [15s Cambridge]

260 Church unity. Church history [45-10017]

"The author presents the argument for the Episcopal view of a necessity of a continuity of orders in order to achieve unity of the church. He holds that 'the fact of succession' was never in doubt in the early years, though there is no evidence that any importance was attached to it. He would infer, of course, that it was important, even though it remained for later generations to discover how essential it was to the 'organic' life, and consequently to the unity, of the church. The conclusion is that 'a unanimous and loyal acceptance of the ancient outward organism of the church [i.e., episcopal continuity and ordination] is possible without requiring it to be an article of doctrinal belief,' and that unity is possible only by such acceptance. In other words, it is not essential that there should be general belief that episcopal continuity is essential; it is only essential that it shall exist." (Christian Century) Index.

"The publisher's note tells us that this 'is a new approach and a new contribution to the still unresolved problem of Christian disunity.' Actually it is but another presentation of the Via Media of Newman without its depth, power, or logical consistency." E. M. Burke

Cath World 162:281 D '45 500w

Christian Century 62:1385 D 12 '45 140w

"The book is extremely well-written, and merits the attention of historical scholars." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 160:15 Mr 15 '46 360w

Reviewed by M. M. Deems

J Religion 28:223 Jl '46 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p501 O 20 '45 550w

BURNET, FRANK MACFARLANE. Virus as organism: evolutionary and ecological aspects of some human virus diseases. 134p $2 Harvard univ. press

616.01 Virus diseases. Infection and infectious diseases A45-4844

"Deliberately eschewing the physico-chemical approach . . . the author of this small volume considers viruses from a strictly biological viewpoint. Regarding viruses as degenerate organisms, probably from bacteria, and simplified in extreme cases practically to single molecules, he traces virus evolution and relationships. Variation is interpreted in terms of mutation and survival power of the different strains in varying ecological conditions. A penetrating analysis of host-parasite relationship leads to an understanding of the virulence of virus, of occasional flare-ups, of the epidemiological character of virus disease, of the age and other factors affecting incidence in man and animals, and of some future changes which may be anticipated in particular virus diseases. Separate chapters are devoted to herpes simplex, poliomyelitis, the poitacosis group, the small-pox group, yellow fever, and influenza." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The book is provocative, since the author has frankly permitted himself the privilege of indulging freely in theory; for this reason the reader must guard against factual acceptance of all the ideas expressed. It serves, however, an important function in seeking to concentrate attention upon the broad concepts of epidemic disease in terms of the agent involved rather than in minutiae which at present are difficult to interpret. It is highly recommended reading." Thomas Francis

+ Am J Pub Health 36:188 F '46 320w

"While considerable fact and evidence is presented, the author paints an overall picture intelligible to all biologists and physicians."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 1:56 D '45 200w

BURNETT, WILLIAM RILEY. Romelle. 253p $2.50 Knopf

46-6627

Roma Smith, known as Romelle La Rue, the singer, to the habitués of a cheap café, meets and falls in love with a mysterious young man who claims to be a member of a fine old Southern family. After their marriage Romelle learns little by little the truth about her husband's past but when she is given a chance to save herself from the disaster that overtakes him, she chooses to remain at his side.

Kirkus 14:353 Ag 1 '46 100w

"The Bluebeard pattern, as such, is an acceptable vehicle for melodrama; it demands only that the terror lurking just outside be real—and that it will seem worth waiting for when it actually appears. Mr. Burnett's difficulty lies in the fact that his audience gets too many peeps through the cracks in his décor, too many telegraphed punches, and far too much supine writhing on the part of his heroine. The audience has guessed the nature of her husband's racket long before Romelle; from that point on, the anti-climax is as constant as the fog that always comes drifting in on cue from the barren California scenery." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p22 S 15 '46 500w

"Admirers of Mr. Burnett's fast-paced, tough stories will be grieved to learn that this one is neither fast nor particularly tough."

New Yorker 22:109 S 14 '46 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 O 20 '46 80w

"It's one of those narratives of contrived tension and fear, clarified by confession. The climax, it must be admitted, lets you down." George Conrad

Weekly Book Review p10 S 15 '46 330w

BURNEY, CHRISTOPHER. Dungeon democracy. 164p $2 Duell [6s Heinemann]

940.547243 Concentration camps. World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German. 46-4664

A description of the organization and daily life of the notorious Buchenwald concentration camp, by an English officer who was interned there for fifteen months. In an appendix he discusses the social destiny of Europe as foreseen in this horrible backwater. No index.

"The author's conclusions suffer from the fact that he bases them on the great English assumption, namely, that England and America must carry 'the white man's burden.' But as a reminder of the extent to which the war has poisoned the wellsprings of human goodness, this book should be read." Emmett Dedmon

+ Book Week p22 Ap 14 '46 270w

"There is neither charity nor tolerance here. Why publish such a book? It seems neither creditable nor warranted."

-- Kirkus 14:87 F 15 '46 150w

BURNEY, CHRISTOPHER—Continued

"The individual is rare who can write of such experience with clarity and objectivity. Dungeon Democracy is second-rate reporting and third-rate writing." Scott Adams

— Library J 71:482 Ap 1 '46 130w

"'The Dungeon Democracy' is an attempt to analyze the illness of our time. The result is one of the most remarkable books of the year." Shepard Stone

N Y Times p6 S 8 '46 1550w

"This is a painful tale, one that has been only hinted at in other books. The author shows that victims of the Konzentrationslager system, by intent, were crippled morally as well as physically, so that in their agony they turned on each other and sank to the level of their tormentors. An unpretty book, but one that should certainly be read."

New Yorker 22:90 Ap 27 '46 120w

"This book is poorly written. It shows many signs of incomplete information, historical and otherwise. Surely some readers will also be annoyed by what they are not unlikely to call the British condescension of its author. Yet 'The Dungeon Democracy'—a book 'at once wise and ignorant,' as Rebecca West has called it—is one of the most important, if one of the most saddening, post-Hitler publications. . . . The bulk of 'The Dungeon Democracy' deals with an aspect of Buchenwald's domestic affairs which has thus far been unknown. It all but destroys the myth of anything resembling a comradely spirit prevailing among concentration camp inmates." Robert Pick

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:25 Ap 20 '46 1350w

"'The Dungeon Democracy' is not a horror book. [The author] has been anxious not to seem to pander to the love of morbid sensation, and in any case he knows that the foulest abominations at Buchenwald were perpetrated in the earliest years of its existence, from 1935 onwards. . . . Mr. Burney is determined to avoid any show of passion in himself, since passion distorts. If, in spite of that determination, he exhibits something of vehemence at the start, if some of his first words are not quite so well chosen as they might be, the reasons are only too intelligible. Buchenwald, it is beyond doubt, has left an ineffaceable mark upon his view of men and society."

Times [London] Lit Sup p580 D 8 '45 650w

"Mr. Burney is a poor reporter; he indulges in generalities, he gives opinions where one should present facts; and when he gives facts, they are often wide of the mark. Yet, his report on Buchenwald gives an interesting insight into an English officer's reaction to Nazi barbarism." Stefan Lorant

— + Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 18 '46 1260w

BURNS, ARTHUR FRANK, and MITCHELL, WESLEY CLAIR. Measuring business cycles. 560p $5 Nat. bur. of economic research

338.54 Business cycles 46-6004

"The present volume is the long-promised sequel to Wesley C. Mitchell's Business Cycles: The Problem and Its Setting, 1927. An integral part of the comprehensive studies of business cycles by the National Bureau of Economic Research, Measuring Business Cycles prepares the way for more detailed and more specialized monographs to be published later. It can, however, be read profitably without reference to the other related works." U S Quarterly Bk1

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1626 N 15 '46 70w

"Students of business cycles will find here valuable materials relating to turning points of cycles, the duration of the various phases of cycles, the amplitudes of cyclical fluctuations, and the behavior of individual series during the various phases of cycles. The value of the work is much enhanced by numerous tables and charts."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:299 D '46 260w

BURPEE, LAWRENCE JOHNSTONE. Discovery of Canada; drawn end papers by James Sim. 280p $3 (12s 6d) Macmillan

971.011 Canada—History [45-7479]

Brief, popular sketches of the men who discovered and explored Canada from the days of Leif Ericson to Amundsen and Stefansson. The materials are grouped under four heads (1) The valley of the St Lawrence, (2) Hudson Bay and the plains, (3) The Pacific slope, and (4) The far north. Partial contents: Lief Ericson; John Cabot; Samuel Champlain; Henry Hudson; David Thompson; James Cook; George Vancouver; Alexander Mackenzie; Samuel Hearne; Exploring the Arctic; Robert Campbell; The Arctic Islands.

Bookmark 7:12 Mr '46

"The method Dr. Burpee has adopted has, of course, its drawbacks. It means that he has to side-step deliberately nearly all of the most interesting problems that the story of Canadian exploration presents—such as the location of Vinland, the place of Cabot's landfall, the course of Radisson's explorations, and the identity of the sons of La Verendrye, to mention only a few. But he makes up for these omissions by printing at the back of his book an admirable bibliography, for those who wish to go into any phase of the subject more thoroughly; and he prints also as a sort of appendix a useful series of 'biographical notes,' giving a brief account of the lives of the chief explorers mentioned in the book. There is an excellent map illustrating the exploration of Canada, printed on the end papers; and there is a full and satisfactory index." W. S. Wallace

+ Canadian Hist R 27:62 Mr '46 270w

"Lawrence J. Burpee for several active decades has been one of the most eminent leaders in the study of Canadian history and geography, and he remembered that in his own school days what proved to be his great interests had seemed distinctly uninteresting. This present volume is written to rehabilitate first Canadian history and present the story again for general knowledge and spontaneous attraction. . . . The reader can be glad indeed to have the material so well and straightforwardly given to him." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 44:100 My 10 '46 600w

"The style is simple and straightforward, the type large, the subject picturesque. Though addressed to adult readers, it is also a very suitable book for a school library. There is a useful collection of short biographies in an appendix. The maps are hardly adequate."

Times [London] Lit Sup p411 Ag 31 '46 800w

"Discovery and exploration is a fascinating subject, and Mr. Burpee has made an interesting, competent and authoritative book, including many biographical sketches and an immense bibliography." S. H. Holbrook

+ Weekly Book Review p26 F 24 '46 320w
Wis Lib Bul 42:44 Mr '46

BURROUGHS, BETTY, ed. Vasari's Lives of the artists. See Vasari, G.

BURTON, ELI FRANKLIN, and KOHL, WALTER HEINRICH. Electron microscope; an introduction to its fundamental principles and applications; drawings by Dorothy Stone. 2d ed 325p il $5 Reinhold

578.1 Electron microscope 46-2069

"The present edition contains nearly one hundred pages more material than the 1942 edition [Book Review Digest, 1942]. Besides extensive textual revision, many excellent reproductions of micro-photographs have been added. Also included is a noteworthy bibliography of some five hundred twenty entries on electron microscopy, which, minus a few recently added references, first appeared in the August, 1944, issue of the Journal of applied physics. The work is introductory, as its title indicates. It is useful chiefly to lay readers with some background in science, and to scientists interested in the uses and manipulation of the electronic microscope but who are not specialists in electron optics." N Y New Tech Bks

"The book is written much like a general science book for college freshmen, but since it is directed toward a specialized subject, it probably will not find much use as a text. Indeed, the reviewer wonders if any substantial group of people, including those particularly interested in the electron microscope, can make effective use of the book." F. T. Wall
Chem & Eng N 24:1444 My 25 '46 450w

Library J 71:485 Ap 1 '46 110w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:7 Ja '46

"The Electron Microscope," a new edition of a book first published in 1942, is a considerable improvement over its earlier incarnation. The material has been considerably rearranged and some of the topics covered before have been omitted as of insufficient general interest for an introductory work." James Stokley
+ Weekly Book Review p50 My 19 '46 150w

BURTON, MRS KATHERINE (KURZ). According to the pattern; the story of Dr. Agnes McLaren and the Society of Catholic medical missionaries. 252p $2.50 Longmans
B or 92 McLaren, Agnes. Society of Catholic medical missionaries. Dengel, Anna 46-989

The life story of Agnes McLaren, born a Scotch Presbyterian in 1837, who became a doctor in her forties, was converted to Roman Catholicism at sixty, and dreamed of the establishment of an order of nuns to minister as medical missionaries to the women of India. She died in 1913, but another woman, Anna Dengel, took up Dr McLaren's dream, and made it come true. Bibliography. Index.

"Perhaps because of the bleak style in which the story is told, it makes more horrifying reading than did 'Mother India' some years ago." Eddie Doherty
Book Week p3 F 24 '46 300w

"Mrs. Burton writes with her usual facility of style and her book makes interesting and inspiring reading." B. L. Conway
+ Cath World 163:89 Ap '46 430w

"At first I found 'According to the Pattern' disappointing. The figures moved through the pages stiffly—even such a colorful figure as Dr. McLaren. It was only as the idea itself began to take shape that human personalities appeared in their true importance, or unimportance. Instead of circumstances moulding the individual, here the individuals were themselves the circumstances; it was the idea which took on color and vibrant life; which grew and flexed until the very canon law of the Church could no longer check its headlong strength. . . Katherine Burton already is well known for her biographies of Catholic contemporaries. In 'According to the Pattern' she has written well. Quietly, with emphasis by understatement, she has let her subject speak for itself. This is a book that anyone will enjoy, and profit by enjoying." L. J. Trese
+ Commonweal 43:606 Mr 29 '46 350w

"A well-told account of an unusual woman, all too little known."

+ Kirkus 14:98 F 15 '46 260w

Weekly Book Review p14 Mr 10 '46 200w

Wis Lib Bul 42:74 My '46

BURTON, MILES. Accidents do happen [Eng title: Early morning murder]. 223p $2 Double-day [8s 6d Collins]

Mystery story. 46-306

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p12 Mr 10 '46 110w

Booklist 42:266 Ap 15 '46

Bookmark 7:15 N '46

Kirkus 13:499 N 15 '45 60w

"The plot is ingenious and quite unusual." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p35 Ja 27 '46 200w

— Sat R of Lit 29:28 F 2 '46 40w

"It's honest detection without any synthetic science. Desmond Merrion, late of Admiralty Intelligence, answers all questions after mighty sleuthing and some talk about coincidences in real life. He's one of the better thinkers." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p24 Ja 27 '46 350w

BURTON, RUTH GUTHRIE (THOMSON) HARDING (MRS RICHARD BURTON). Three parts Scotch; an informal autobiography. 288p $2.50 Bobbs

B or 92

46-6186

An "informal autobiography" of an American poetess, lecturer and writer on poetics, the widow of the late Professor Richard Burton. The memoirs cover the whole span of life from a childhood in a small Pennsylvania town in the 1880s to the present. Included are many anecdotes of the great and near great Mrs Burton has known. Sinclair Lewis, Ambrose Bierce, William Gillette, and others.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch

Book Week p4 Ag 11 '46 340w

Kirkus 14:314 Jl 1 '46 150w

"It is as a whole refreshing and entertaining reading, although a little slow in getting under way. The early reminiscences of childhood might well have been omitted." R. M. Morgan
+ — Springf'd Republican p4d S 15 '46 240w

"To produce an eminently readable autobiography one need not be personally eminent. Mrs. Richard Burton, born Ruth Guthrie Thomson in Tunkhannock, Pa., provides people who have reached the status of memoir-readers with a book to bring out those sudden hoots of joy that mean something will be read aloud. Nothing told is of transcendent importance. . . But every one in the book, from Ambrose Bierce, who comes in at full length in action, to the least Hungarian cook, enters at a moment when he is grand good company." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p14 S 22 '46 400w

BUSCH, NIVEN. Day of the conquerors. 276p $2.50 Harper

46-4660

A Pacific news correspondent, Mark Gregory, returns to San Francisco on V-J day. He has suspected his wife of unfaithfulness, and when he cannot locate her he tortures himself with jealousy. Finally the truth of her perversion dawns on him, and Mark meets the situation sensibly and goes on to care for their small son. But during the course of the hours of torture and confusion, the day of victory has been pictured as it affected a number of people.

"A feeling for contrasts, for complex individual problems, for types of civilians and military, gives this a sophisticated approach to what might have been sensational material. Swift, dramatic, sure fire renter."

+ Kirkus 14:154 Ap 1 '46 200w

"Vitriolic and disturbing. Suggestive of John O'Hara in content and treatment. Cautious purchase after careful examination indicated." R. E. Kingery

Library J 71:757 My 15 '46 90w

"As a journalist Mr. Busch is interested in public events, their reportage and interpretation. As a journalist-novelist his aim is to record the 'private meeting of public events,' but he sees his characters as manifestations rather than individuals and his action as facts rather than motivated drama. In combination, these skills manufacture a rough sketch of a story interpolated with editorial comments which bear the relation to the narrative of the caption to the photograph. This convertible hybrid, designed for immediate publication and eventual screening, we call, at the moment, for lack of a better word or a better product, the novel." John Farrelly

N Y Times p14 Je 2 '46 700w

"A discerning, if not profound, picture of Americans at an important moment of history, by a writer with a lucid style and a nice satiric touch."

New Yorker 22:93 Je 1 '46 80w

BUSCH, NIVEN—Continued

"Day of the Conquerors" has one good story and contains excellent reporting of scenes of celebration and violence in the streets and parks of San Francisco but, though it makes gestures in that direction, it carries no full realization of V-J Day and its possible significances." J. P. Wood

— + Sat R of Lit 29:17 Je 15 '46 850w

Reviewed by P. H. Bickerton
Spring'd Republican p4d Je 2 '46
300w

Time 47:108 Je 3 '46 480w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p13 Jl 14 '46 400w

BUSH, MRS MARGARET, ed. Gilbert and Sullivan songs for young people. See Gilbert, W. S.

BUSH, VANNEVAR. Endless horizons; introd. by Frank B. Jewett. 182p $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

504 Science. Technology 46-1568

"Papers, reports, and speeches by the eminent engineer and scientist who headed the Office of Scientific Research and Development during the war and has been one of the foremost advisers to the administration on atomic matters. Dr. Bush ranges from war on disease to control of atomic energy." New Yorker

Reviewed by H. S. Harned
Ann Am Acad 246:172 Jl '46 450w

Reviewed by Rufus Oldenburger
Book Week p16 Mr 31 '46 600w
Booklist 42:243 Ap 1 '46

Reviewed by S. G. Cole
Christian Century 63:1470 D 4 '46
1000w
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 27 '46 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '46
Reviewed by K. F. Herzfeld
Commonweal 44:556 S 20 '46 400w
Library J 71:485 Ap 1 '46 100w
New Repub 114:454 Ap 1 '46 240w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:12 Ja '46

"The student who is interested in what is called 'the social impact of science' will find good stuff in this collection of articles. He may not agree with Dr. Bush's social point of view, but he will be provided with fine material for his own cogitations." Waldemar Kaempffert
+ — N Y Times p26 Mr 17 '46 900w

"If Dr. Bush does not always dig very deeply (after all, some of the most important of these reports were made to congressmen), he states his position very plainly; that a free and peaceful world can be maintained only if there is free international exchange of scientific knowledge and ideas."

+ New Yorker 22:102 Mr 16 '46 120w
School & Society 63:175 Mr 9 '46 30w

"The publication in book form of otherwise scattered articles makes this extremely valuable material readily available in relatively permanent form."

+ Scientific Bk Club R p3 Ap '46 400w
Social Studies 37:240 My '46 40w

Reviewed by B. C. Gruenberg
Survey G 35:229 Je '46 700w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:155 Je '46 200w

Reviewed by Gerald Wendt
Weekly Book Review p5 Mr 24 '46
1200w

"Now that Congress is wrestling with the mighty problem of just what part government should play in furthering the beneficent and checking the baneful results of scientific research, 'Endless Horizons' is a particularly timely publication. With its sound and long-range suggestions on both ends and means, it is a valuable document for politician and layman alike." J. H. Bradley
+ Yale R n s 35:729 summer '46 850w

BUSS, TRUMAN C. Simplified architectural drawing, with examples and graded problems. 258p il $4.75 Am. tech. soc.

744.42 Architectural drawing 46-2276

"Written to fill a gap between instruction in mechanical drawing and that in architectural design. Principles and methods involved in architectural practice. General scope of book is techniques involving equipment, supplies, lettering and graphic procedures; working drawings and construction including specifications, etc. and excellent chart on symbols of materials. Display drawings and problems. For text or general study. Supplementary reading. Well illustrated." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 42:278 My 1 '46

Library J 71:485 Ap 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:6 Ja '46

BUTCHER, HARRY CECIL. My three years with Eisenhower; the personal diary of [the author] naval aide to General Eisenhower, 1942 to 1945. 911p il maps $5 Simon & Schuster 940.542 World war, 1939-1945. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. Eisenhower, Dwight David 46-3000

"The day-by-day diary of things both personal and military by the Naval aide and friend of General Ike. It begins with Eisenhower's assignment in 1942 as commander of the U.S. forces in the European theatre of operations and ends with his triumphal journey home after V-E day. This warm and friendly portrait of a great man in a world crisis, balances Ingersoll's critical view in Top Secret." (Booklist) Index.

"An unconscionably long book which lacks a sense of proportion, is slipshod in reporting the vitally important, and exasperatingly detailed in reporting the trivial. A historian using this book will do a good deal of intellectual placer mining, sorting an enormous amount of sand for a relatively few nuggets. . . . On the other hand, the volume will have to be used with the utmost caution. To begin with, it is not a true diary. There were a good many consecutive days when no entries were made; an attempt was made later to supply some of the missing entries from memory, from correspondence, and from documentary records. These ex post facto entries are of doubtful value and authenticity. . . . The diary itself is a curious combination of Pepys, Boswell, and Walter Winchell. Caveat emptor." E. M. Earle

— Am Hist R 51:689 Jl '46 1300w

"Mr. Butcher would not have been the author of this book had he not been a great admirer, almost an idolater, of Eisenhower; but the fact that he was these things limits the book's usefulness as history, however entertaining it may be as a diary. You will come away from these pages with a genuine affection for both the Supreme Commander and Mr. Butcher, but you will not know the full story of Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Forces (SHAEP)." E. M. Earle
Atlantic 177:162 Je '46 1500w

"The charm of the diary lies in its informality. The brass hats will think that the book will do Gen. Eisenhower no good because it shows him in his relaxed moments with his dignity forgotten. Such critics don't know us Americans very well. . . . 'My Three Years with Eisenhower' is worth $5 of anybody's money." Quentin Reynolds
+ Book Week p1 Ap 28 '46 1100w

Booklist 42:279 My 1 '46

Bookmark 7:8 N '46

"The whole book bears witness to Captain Butcher's fine powers of observation, to his organizing ability, to his discretion. Of its 900 pages, not one is uninteresting; and as a source of supplementary information about the political and military history of World War II, it possesses permanent unique value." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 163:371 Jl '46 550w

"Few readers will have sufficient inside information to remain unimpressed with this frank, unpretentious, faithful chronicle of both momentous and trivial events in the topmost echelon of the Allied military and diplomatic hierarchy. But, primarily, this is a book about a simple, smiling-faced man who was raised in Kansas and did not expect to lead the war against the Axis—but who proved eminently gifted for the job. . . All in all, the reader gets the impression that the man Eisenhower was more than a good general—even more than a good general and diplomat." H. S. Hayward

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 25 '46 700w

"Captain Butcher's narrative is generously weighted all along the line with international wartime bric-a-brac, and there is considerable information on that relatively new dimension in history known as public relations. The Captain and General Eisenhower are keen students of the public relations facts of life and became very adept at glancing back to see how the war was being relayed to the public through their unanointed ministers of the press and radio. There has been an excellent choice of photographs for the book and a useful monthly summary of the progress of the war in both theaters has been included. The only thing that annoyed me at all was Captain Butcher's occasional tendency toward cuteness, rather surprising in a full grown naval reserve officer." John Broderick

+ — Commonweal 44:144 My 24 '46 2000w
Kirkus 14:83 F 15 '46 320w

"Full running account, colorful, gripping, thrilling—mostly crescendos. . . Consciously written for posterity." A. B. Lindsay
Library J 71:583 Ap 15 '46 140w

"Butcher's record corrects the melodramatic oversimplifications of the Ingersoll book. It demonstrates amply that SHAEF had other functions than providing expensive settings for brass; it gives quite a different and certainly more authentic picture of the relations between Eisenhower and Bradley; and it makes abundantly clear that Ingersoll's sketch of Eisenhower as a British stooge is hardly just. Eisenhower, though the central figure, never quite emerges as a person from Butcher's muzzy pages. Yet any light on the man who is going to be so important in this country for the next few years is of absorbing interest." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ — Nation 162:629 My 25 '46 1550w

Reviewed by W. H. Hale

New Repub 114:664 My 6 '46 1000w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 32:250 O 5 '46 1600w

"'My Three Years With Eisenhower' is the first major book about the European phase of the war by one of the higher-echelon participants. It is not Eisenhower's book; from him—when he gets time to write it—we can expect more of the stuff of history, more of the strategic and tactical, than this book contains. This volume's chief value lies in the light it throws upon Eisenhower the man, in good humor and in bad, under stress and strain and in periods of calm, rubbing shoulders with GIs and royalty. . . Despite its faults 'My Three Years With Eisenhower' is the raw material, particularly the 'human interest' raw material, of a great epoch in history." H. W. Baldwin

+ — N Y Times p1 Ap 28 '46 1800w

Reviewed by C. J. Liebling

New Yorker 22:80 Ap 27 '46 2200w

"This book is not a military biography in the tradition of Henderson and Freeman. It is not a history of our greatest campaign. It is just what its title says, and no more: the diary of a man who spent three years in close association with America's greatest captain of armies during the time when he established his right to that proud preeminence. As such, it is invaluable to the further biographer and historian who will, in the fullness of time, produce the careful, patient, reflective works which will record General Eisenhower's life and victories. And as such it is likewise invaluable to the reader of today as a faithful picture of the man to whom we all owe so much. As we read it, we will be grateful that it was written by a first-class reporter, and that such a reporter had the unique opportunities afforded to Captain Butcher." G. F. Elliot
+ Sat R of Lit 29:7 Ap 27 '46 1100w

"The Supreme Commander's theory, if not always effective in practice, came very near to achievement, and largely as a result of his own example. Captain Butcher seems to have been a brilliant pupil; for, although full of the frankest opinions on matters of the day, written originally without thought of subsequent publication, his diary is remarkably fair to the British and Russians and only slightly less so to the French. . . When all is said, there are many things of interest and historical value hidden away in this book among the gossip and trivialities, which are themselves sometimes entertaining." G. P. Griggs

+ — Spec 177:318 S 27 '46 700w

"The document is incomparable as a source for formal historians, presenting any amount of first-hand information and on-the-spot facts to which no one else could have had access. While there's a sense of tension, of waiting for momentous events with unpredictable results, the reader is always conscious of Capt Butcher's own blithe spirit and unfailing sense of humor—the light touch, the offhand manner, though the style is jerky and disjointed and you have to get used to a sort of code language full of special words and names." D. B. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d My 5 '46 900w

"My Three Years is good-natured, modest, knowledgeable reporting. . . Ike Eisenhower can be grateful to his old friend & aide for an assignment well done."

+ Time 47:102 My 6 '46 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p460 S 28 '46 1350w

"There is about this diary a frankness and informality which is refreshing, but there is reflected at the same time a lack of awareness of basic issues. It would have been interesting had the author seen fit to illuminate the considerations that were involved in arriving at vital and fatal decisions, rather than to devote so much space to the comings and goings of V. I. P.'s, the playing of poker and the consumption of alcohol. These were understandable and enjoyable forms of relaxation, but it may be doubted that they contributed materially to the conduct of the war. The diary contains a considerable amount of unpublished material. There are many revealing glimpses of Allied commanders. The boldness and the bombast of Patton is there. So, too, is the whimsical, civilized humor of Tedder. Captain Butcher reveals that Eisenhower was, from the beginning, opposed to unconditional surrender. Butcher's reporting of the friction between Montgomery and Eisenhower is impeccable, and even the British are unlikely to object. . . The diary also contains a great deal of trivia which is interesting and amusing to those of us who were occasionally admitted behind the scenes." E. R. Murrow

+ — Weekly Book Review p1 Ap 28 '46 1700w

"A thoroughly attractive, very human, adoring rather than critical portrait of the Supreme Commander at work and play. Although this is enough to give the book a certain modest stature in the memorabilia of the war, it is difficult to credit it with anything more. As the story and the author made the long journey from a London apartment to the red school house at Rheims, the reader senses something of the atmosphere of that unique High Command, SHAEF, and something of the incredible variety of problems, faced by the Supreme Commander. But Butcher was of necessity always 'in the background', and lacked direct or constant contact with the greater part of the work being done. Thus the narrative, while it contains an occasional revelation on the genesis of the North African policy or the ill-fated Anzio diversion remains too sketchy to be anything more than an informal portrait of a great general and his headquarters." T. C. Mendenhall

+ — Yale R n s 35:743 summer '46 1000w

BUTLER, GEORGE PAUL, ed. Best sermons, 1946 [covering Easter 1944 to Sept. 1945]. (V2) 324p $2.75 Harper

252 Sermons

(44-51581)

Out of 5,674 manuscripts submitted, the editor and his advisory committees chose these 52 sermons, by Protestant, Catholic and Jewish preachers, representing eighteen denominations. Contains brief biographical sketches of each of the clergymen represented. Index.

BUTLER, G. P.—Continued

"This is a collection of excellent examples of contemporary preaching by preachers of eighteen denominations and five nations."

+ Christian Century 63:843 J1 3 '46 70w

"Many a person will find here nuggets of wisdom and sources of inspiration for his own pulpit work, and as for the lay reader, I can only say 'tolle, lege!'" K. M. Chworowsky

+ Churchman 160:17 S 1 '46 180w

"Admittedly the selection gives permanency to a good deal of distinguished preaching. And though each will have his favorites, there is at least enough to go around for every type of taste, with something more to spare. It need not be said that the theology of the volume varies with the preacher. What the dogmatic Christian will note in several of the sermons is the absence of a clear cut creedal basis: their theme is theistic rather than specifically Christian. Of the discourses herein contained, three set forth a Jewish and nine a Catholic view; of these latter, five mirror the mind of the universities and three that of the episcopate; so that in the main the Catholic parochial pulpit passes without representation." H. G. J. Beck

+ Commonweal 44:270 Je 28 '46 150w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton

Crozer Q 23:383 O '46 1200w

"The volume will be of interest to preachers as giving examples of the pulpit art at its contemporaneous best, indicating what the pulpit has been saying to the church-going people of America during these times. Though sermons should be heard, not read, not many of us can hear the great preachers, and all of us can read these sermons."

+ Kirkus 14:496 O 1 '46 170w

N Y Times p33 Je 9 '46 270w

Wis Lib Bul 42:126 O '46

BUTLER, GERALD. Kiss the blood off my hands. 216p $2.50 Rinehart [7s 6d Nicholson]

46-1627

"In this novel, first published in England in 1940, Gerald Butler comes just about as close as an Englishman can to writing like James M. Cain. 'Kiss the Blood Off My Hands' lives up to its garish title from beginning to end. It contains four murders (committed with varying degrees of intent) one flogging, one attempted rape, one case of blackmail, countless robberies and sluggings and more minor infractions of the law than you can shake a nightstick at. Naturally, the basic theme of any such book has to be that of pursuit, or, will the murderer get away with it?" Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p3 Mr 10 '46 370w

"A tight narrative of recklessness, ruthlessness, which in its way is holding."

Kirkus 14:8 Ja '46 170w

"Mr. Butler has written three other novels, one of which, 'Dark Rainbow,' was published here last year and had some success. They're both gitty books, well written, somewhat vague in setting and character, and not characteristically British. Compared with Graham Greene, Mr. Butler's work is rather uninventive and drab. A showdown with an American expert like James Cain, whom Butler resembles far more than he resembles Greene in both plot-structure and intent, gives Cain a considerable edge in pure violence. But Butler's books do have a style all their own." B. V. Winebaum

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 10 '46 650w

"The book is overcrowded, and it is further marred by a contrived ending, which, while it might conceivably happen, sounds preposterous in fiction. A very good thriller, all the same," which just misses being a very good novel."

+ New Yorker 22:97 Mr 23 '46 100w

"The writing is tight and tense, and since, fortunately, it is a short novel, no one would or could lay it aside until he had finished the last sentence. Naturally, the book has not an ounce of literary merit, and the ending is unbelievably anticlimactic. . . But those of us who unashamedly, never miss a Hitchcock movie, who read mysteries for the pure enjoyment of them (never apologizing that they 'relax' us), and who would honestly rather see a new novel by Cain than one by, say, William Faulkner, will be thankful for even so small a favor as this." Merle Miller

Sat R of Lit 29:83 Ap 13 '46 450w

Time 47:104 Mr 4 '46 270w

"The story is all recounted at such a furious pace that the reader never notices until afterward the implausibility of the whole business. The narration is too exciting, the suspense too keen for anybody to worry much about the verisimilitude of Mr. Butler's story while he is reading it. It is rough, tough and uninhibited. Not every one will like it, but every one will finish it." Herbert Kuperberg

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 17 '46 450w

BUTLER, GERALD. Mad with much heart. 244p $2.50 Rinehart [7s 6d Jarrolds]

46-18820

A psychological thriller which involves an idiot boy as the murderer, his blind sister who tries to protect him, and the Scotland Yard detective who pursues the boy thru a blinding snowstorm and falls in love with the sister when he reaches the lonely farmhouse where the two live.

Reviewed by Helen Woodward

Book Week p2 S 1 '46 270w

"Butler's sure touch gives to this genre of psychopathic thriller a very direct intensity."

+ Kirkus 14:283 Je 15 '46 110w

"Not recommended." J. M. Brittan

— Library J 71:1049 Ag '46 90w

"In describing the over-long chase sequence that precedes the falling-in-love, and the over-extended climax that comes later, when the murderer is cornered on the snowy moor, Mr. Butler's pen stutters like a faulty victrola needle in its effort to out-do the familiar Hemingway devices of terseness, iteration and side-of-the-mouth philosophy. The result, to this reader's mind, only proves once again that the Hemingway manner is not for export." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p12 Ag 25 '46 500w

"Unfortunately, Mr. Butler does not make the best of his props and the story peters out to a sadly foolish end."

+ New Yorker 22:100 S 7 '46 60w

"Many critics praise Mr. Butler's simplicity and compassion; this minority report finds him synthetic in both style and emotion." Anthony Boucher

— San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 8 '46 70w

"[A] bare and sketchy outline of the plot cannot capture the breathless black magic Mr. Butler has breathed into his spare prose, any more than a summary of Edgar Allan Poe's 'The Pit and the Pendulum' could let the reader know what a magnificent and frightening few minutes he would forever miss unless he read that classic short story for himself. And there is a tenderness in Mr. Butler's story that Poe never had, although he had greatness, which Butler does not. . . 'Mad with Much Heart' is heartily recommended for all those who like almost every movie ever directed by Alfred Hitchcock and who unashamedly have cold chills when they listen, in the proper atmosphere, to 'Lights Out' on the radio." Merle Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 29:36 S 21 '46 600w

"Written in a swift, laconic style, with good dialog and atmosphere, 'Mad With Much Heart' is more than good horror fiction; it is a strong love story with a deep conflict shaped about sharply drawn characters." J. E. English

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 25 '46 260w

"Better than his plot and character portrayal is Mr. Butler's description of a man hunt through a blinding snowstorm. It is his ability to write clean, crisp prose which makes the sentimental, soul-searching passages even less palatable." Rose Feld

— + Weekly Book Review p15 S 8 '46 360w

BUTLER, NICHOLAS MURRAY. World today; essays and addresses. 225p $2.50 Scribner

814

46-5611

With one exception these essays and addresses are of recent date. The first address, entitled 'The Age in Which We Live', was delivered by the author in 1875, when he was thirteen, and was graduating from high school. The other addresses, by the president emeritus of Columbia university, were made between 1942 and 1946, and deal in the main with present day problems. Index.

"It is encouraging to find in this book . . . a pervading atmosphere of optimism and faith in a better future for all the world." Emmett Dedmon

+ Book Week p3 J1 28 '46 140w

Booklist 43:6 S '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '46

"Last year this veteran Republican delivered a moving memorial address after the death of President Roosevelt. He is a man who could grow, intellectually and emotionally, after fourscore years. These speeches are neither tedious nor platitudinous. They reveal a courageous man laboring for the public weal as he sees it, long after the normal age of retirement." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 25 '46 900w

"Dr Butler's book is a characteristic and scholarly work filled with many revealing reminiscences that should serve as important sidelights upon modern history, especially in the educational field." E. A. F.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d S 15 '46 480w

Reviewed by W. M. Houghton

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Ag 11 '46 900w

BUTLER, PIERCE, ed. Books and libraries in wartime. 159p $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press

940.531802 Libraries. World war, 1939-1945—Literature and the war A46-541

Collection of lectures by authorities, all considering the "cost of war's cultural destruction." Contents: War in library history, by Pierce Butler; New rivals of the press: film and radio, by H. D. Lasswell; Books and the soldier, by R. L. Trautman; War and journalism, by P. S. Mowrer; War and the book trade, by J. A. Brandt; War and the reading public, by Leon Carnovsky; War and the academic library, by R. A. Beals; The library and the nation, by Archibald MacLeish. Index.

Reviewed by Arnold Rose

Am J Soc 52:87 J1 '46 800w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 F 24 '46 60w

"The reader of these stimulating chapters wonders why they are introduced with some note of apology. They have good reason for being." Esther Johnston

+ Library J 71:400 Mr 15 '46 1200w

Reviewed by F. G. Melcher

Library Q 16:172 Ap '46 700w

School & Society 62:440 D 29 '45 40w

Special Libraries 37:52 F '46

Weekly Book Review p12 My 5 '46 200w

Wis Lib Bul 42:126 O '46

BUTSCH, RUSSELL LEWIS CARL. How to read statistics. 196p il $2.50 Bruce pub.

311.2 Statistics

46-5145

"The primary purpose of this book is to assist those workers in the fields of education, social science, and psychology, who do not have a thorough knowledge of statistical techniques. The book carries the reader through a non-technical interpretation of statistical treatment and terminology without going into computational details." Am J Pub Health

"While the section on the frequency distribution and graphical methods makes interesting reading, the long section devoted to the various correlation coefficients is rather poorly done and certainly of no interest to the public health worker. The section on chance variation is likewise of limited utility and appears to be very ill-balanced." J. W. Fertig

Am J Pub Health 36:1169 O '46 150w

"The material of this volume is well organized and clearly presented. It is difficult for a person who is acquainted with statistical terms to evaluate the book from the standpoint of one without this type of background. Nevertheless, the book ought to serve its purpose admirably for any reader willing to learn the statistical language which is used, and it could also well be used as a means of motivation for students of statistical method. One is more likely to desire the answer to 'How is it obtained?' if he first has the answers to 'Why is it done?' and 'What does it mean?'" Frances Swineford

+ El School J 47:175 N '46 900w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1626 N 15 '46 70w

School & Society 63:447 Je 22 '46 20w

BUTTERS, JOHN KEITH, and LINTNER, JOHN VIRGIL. Effect of federal taxes on growing enterprises. 226p $3 Harvard univ. Division of research

658.1712 Corporations—Taxation A45-4847

"This study presents the final results of a pioneer research project which has been carried on for the past eighteen months at the Harvard Business School. . . Although the study is primarily concerned with the effect of federal taxation on new and growing enterprises, it also contributes to a better understanding of the problems of a particularly significant type of small business by illustrating through its case records some of the conditions which are encountered in starting and developing a new business." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by A. G. Buehler

Ann Am Acad 244:218 Mr '46 600w

"Messrs. Butters and Lintner have written a book which should appeal to a wide range of readers, both because of its content and its style. Taxation and investment in new and growing enterprises are matters of concern to all who are interested in the structure and functioning of the economy. The presentation of materials on business management and finance, accounting records, and general economics is clear and often sprightly, but the authors have made few if any sacrifices of accuracy and objectivity to achieve it. . . The book is weakest in its consideration of the hard question of choice among alternative tax policies." Richard Goode

+ Harvard Law R 59:470 F '46 1350w

"The book is interesting for more than its immediate subject. In chapters vii and viii a variety of materials illumine the inadequacy of our institutional provisions for channeling savings into productive undertakings. . . The five detailed case studies are live-business histories which will interest many students of business finance. Apart from the technical competence with which the study has been executed and the clarity and vigor of the presentation, this reviewer was favorably impressed by the breadth of view and the discernment of the authors, who, in studying the effects of high taxes on small business, did not forget that these taxes are only a part of a whole tax structure, and the whole tax structure only a part of a broader economic environment." L. H. Seltzer

+ J Pol Econ 54:469 O '46 1500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:104 Je '46 270w

BUTTRICK, GEORGE ARTHUR. Christ and man's dilemma. 224p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury 248 Christianity 46-2856

"Dr. Buttrick's book was written at white heat in the thirty days following the dropping

BUTTRICK, G. A.—Continued
of the atomic bomb. 'This apocalyptic event' revealed in one dread instant how 'our ignorance, badness and mortality' have ruined us beyond any power of our own to save ourselves, and that Christ alone can bring us help. 'The real Christ'—by which the author means 'the incarnate God.' Moving narrowly within the confines of traditional Christian orthodoxy, Dr. Buttrick applies the basic doctrines of atonement and redemption to the modern dilemmas of business, education and the machine, with war and its horrors ever in the background. Christ has 'what it takes' to save the world, but must wait upon man's acceptance and use of His divine gospel." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 42:311 Je 1 '46

"For people who have tended to make light of sin and salvation, whether for the individual or for man's institutions, whether in education, business, politics or economics, this book will cause a rethinking of the whole matter of this dilemma which man faces: Christ or chaos?" Erdmann Smith

Christian Century 63:364 Ag 7 '46 500w

"The atomic bomb, Dr. Buttrick tells us, produced this book in thirty days! The spiritual heat of it is thus explained; but the stuff of it was not born so hurriedly, and if the style is rather fast-paced, the thought is solid and cool enough. . . Clergy and laity alike will find this book both stimulating and provocative; and to the former it offers excellent material for sermon-making." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 160:14 My 15 '46 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '46

"A great deal of study and thought and time lie behind this volume. . . Dr. Buttrick's preaching is better than his writing, but this represents the best thought and deepest insight of contemporaneous Protestantism. It should command a wide reading among ministers and thoughtful laymen."

+ Kirkus 14:193 Ap 15 '46 260w

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes

Weekly Book Review p18 My 12 '46 190w

BUXTON, MRS BESSIE (RAYMOND). Begonias and how to grow them. 163p il $2.25 Oxford

635.933468 Begonias

Agr46-151

This volume, issued under the auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural society, is by an expert on growing begonias. The handbook is comprehensive and illustrated with photographs and diagrams. It contains material on the growing of begonias for the beginner, but also is authoritative enough for the expert grower. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 My 5 '46 60w

Booklist 42:277 My 1 '46

"The volume is a useful addition to practical garden and house-plant books on specific flowers." Millicent Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 F 23 '46 140w

Springf'd Republican p6 F 7 '46 240w

"Begonia fans, both present and future, will welcome this small but thorough volume by a leading authority on the genus. . . With her book as a guide one goes as far with these varied and often extremely handsome plants as inclination, time and facilities permit."

+ Weekly Book Review p20 Ap 7 '46 160w

BYNG, MARIA EVELYN (MORETON) viscountess. Up the stream of time. 274p il $2.75 (12s 6d) Macmillan

B or 92

[46-16423]

Autobiography of the wife of an English soldier and statesman, Viscount Byng, who led the Canadian Army in France in the first World war, and later was Governor-General of Canada, 1921-1926.

"Lady Byng, in these entertaining recollections of a fairly long life, and one that, partly, perhaps, because of her courage and saving sense of humour, seems to have had fewer dull moments that most of us have to endure, has something to say about her life and travels and the people she has known in many parts of the world. . . Perhaps the most worthwhile aspect of these reminiscences is the intimate glimpses they give of the man who commanded the Canadian Army in the First Great War and represented the King in Canada for five years. A wife may not write an impartial biography of her husband, but she can give her readers impressions of his character that no one else is in a position to offer." L. J. Burpee

+ Canadian Hist R 27:73 Mr '46 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46

Manchester Guardian p3 My 3 '46 300w

"There was an idea that John Buchan before he became Lord Tweedsmuir might have collaborated with Lady Byng in a life of her husband, the redoubtable 'Bungo', who commanded the Canadian force at Vimy Ridge, became Governor-General of the Dominion and ended a picturesque career as chief of London's police. For that ordered biography, as it would have been, this delightful indiscretion by the lady herself is a welcome substitute." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p6 F 24 '46 400w

"It is a book which makes no pretence to belong to high literature but at the same time one which will give pleasure to readers of the most diverse tastes"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p184 Ap 20 '46 900w

"The value of the book, not as entertainment but as record, lies in the odd juxtaposition of times, classes and places. There is something disarming in Lady Byng's corrupted vocabulary, as she uses Canadian and American slang embedded in an often stilted early Victorian paragraph. What she was and what she is, after so full and varied a life, is all oddly pieced together." Ernestine Evans

+ Weekly Book Review p22 Mr 17 '46 2000w

BYTNIIEWSKA, MME JAN. See Orska, I.

C

CABELL, JAMES BRANCH. There were two pirates; a comedy of division; decorations by John O'Hara Cosgrave II. 121p $3 Farrar, Straus

Gaspar, José—Fiction

46-6145

Purports to be the true story of the Spanish pirate, José Gasparilla, who is said to haunt the streets of St Augustine, Florida. The real Gasparilla died in 1821, but the author refuses to believe it. He says it was 1828. And so he tells the story of José and his Isabel, in this world, and in the land of no shadow.

"'There Were Two Pirates' makes very pleasant reading for an evening. The highly imaginative plot is a relief from modern novels, which, whatever their merits, lack inventive power. It is a relief, too, from the terribly serious novels which afflict us with their heavy solemnity; because Cabell still can make one chuckle, every page or two, with some of his wittily turned sentences. This latest book won't, perhaps, give readers as much delight as Cabell's comedies of the 1920s did, nor will it win such fame. Nevertheless, it is pleasant and highly readable—well worth the price." Walter Blair

+ Book Week p1 Ag 11 '46 1250w

Booklist 43:16 S '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '46

on plot but entertaining and delightful."

Current Hist 11:512 D '46 40w

Kirkus 14:269 Je 1 '46 110w

"A graceful variation on a theme from legend, but a slight addition to the Cabell shelf." H. W. Hart

Library J 71:1049 Ag '46 90w

"If, as is undeniable, 'There Were Two Pirates' is paler and less lusty than the better known novels of the Poictesme cycle, it is likewise less mockingly cynical and bitter, less obtrusively priapic. And there are, as one would expect, flashes of the old magic—the wit, the urbanity, the playfully bookish but superbly cadenced style, the literary gusto, the ability to create images of compelling loveliness—which during the Twenties called forth so much deserved praise along with so much that was immoderate. Mr. Cosgrave's decorations are effective and apt." A. C. Gordon

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 11 '46 1450w

"The best summer reading of the year, and a gentle exposition of an excellent way of writing historical novels."

+ New Yorker 22:89 Ag 17 '46 120w

"Read it as you please. You'll still find in it whatever you choose. Because that is Mr. Cabell, who has written comedies of division before this. Over and above this you will have the pleasure of enjoying once more the subtle flavor of Mr. Cabell's admirable ironies, his humor—often broad but always disguised sufficiently to seem indirect when it's most direct—his firmly controlled style, his classic view of life as well as letters." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 16 '46 600w

"The history flows smoothly, exciting a constant interest, and the darting lights of Cabellian irony are everywhere, on the surface and beneath it. . . The second portion of the narrative is a little less simple than the first portion. Suffice it to say, here, that it involves a bit of the magic of which Mr. Cabell has always been fond, and a journey into the land without shadow, which is a land of which he has also been fond, for it is there that one returns to the contentment of boyhood and the felicity of first love." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:7 Ag 10 '46 1350w

Theatre Arts 31:71 Ja '47 40w

Reviewed by Jan Valtin

Time 48:102 Ag 19 '46

"It is the ancient, basic myth of the soul's journey through the lower regions, told . . . by Mr. Cabell in a prose as faultless as a Spanish hidalgo's manners. Like the hidalgo's manners, however, it has a rigidity which becomes, inevitably, monotonous. There should be modulations in a gentleman's bow to a lady, his compliment, and his invitation to a rival to go duelling; not all women can live up to such high jinks. An author, too, should have room in his style for a fool, a trollop, or an idiot. But Mr. Cabell, with whom the style is the man and the man is adamant, is concerned with dreams and romance and magic and the inner life which articulates itself without a stutter or a stripped verb." Thomas Sugrue

Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 11 '46 950w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 36:189 autumn '46 320w

CABLE, EMMETT JAMES, and others. Science in a changing world. rev ed 622p $5 Prentice-Hall

500 Science

46-3062

"Many new advances have been made in the field of the physical sciences since the first edition [with title: The Physical Sciences, Book Review Digest, 1941] . . . The chapters on Our Atmosphere, Winds and Weather, and Weather Forecasting have been rewritten. The Bohr theory of atomic structure has been given prominence over the Lewis-Langmuir theory. A chapter on Weights and Measures has been added, and that on the history of astronomy has been incorporated into other chapters. The bibliographies have been revised and consolidated. Throughout the book many sections have been rewritten in the light of new information. Certain illustrations have been replaced by more appropriate ones, and a number of new ones have been added." (Pref) Index. Also published in a textbook edition with the title: Physical Sciences, (684p $5 Prentice-Hall).

"Although rockets are overlooked and the atomic bomb receives scanty mention, 'Science in a Changing World' is a veritable encyclopedia of the physical sciences. The topics are well chosen, brilliantly presented and cleverly applied to current phenomena. The contents of this book should be familiar to everyone, not only for a better understanding of our world, but for the intelligent evaluation of new discoveries which constantly impinge upon our lives." Rufus Oldenburger

+ Book Week p4 Ap 14 '46 300w

Booklist 42:368 Jl 15 '46

"Here is an amazing amount of information presented in a clear and interesting manner." J. M. Wright

+ Chem & Eng N 24:1854 Jl 10 '46 300w

"Nonmathematical in scope and written in pleasing style. Bibliographies revised." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:761 My 15 '46 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:12 Ja '46

CADY, FRANK WILLIAM, ed. See Shakespeare, W. Shakespeare arranged for modern reading

CADY, WALTER GUYTON. Piezoelectricity; an introd. to the theory and applications of electromechanical phenomena in crystals. 806p il $9 McGraw

537.2 Pyro- and piezoelectricity 46-4782

"This work is a comprehensive treatise rather than an introduction as the subtitle indicates. It provides the fullest treatment yet published of piezoelectric phenomena, and the principles of their application. The entire field of piezoelectricity is surveyed, and allied subjects such as pyroelectricity and piezo-optics are treated. Although a large proportion of the book is devoted to quartz crystals, Rochelle salt and other crystals are also discussed at some length. The treatment is on the level of graduate students in physics and physicists engaged in piezo-electric work in laboratories and industries. The main bibliography contains six hundred and two numbered items to which statements and formulas in the text are keyed. In addition to the main bibliography, supplementary lists of references appear at the ends of several of the chapters." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 43:8 S '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1135 D 1 '45 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:28 Ap '46

"In an orderly arrangement, this book brings together for the first time most of the fundamental information and theory required for a thorough general understanding of piezoelectricity. It is well suited for use as a textbook on the subject for an advanced or graduate college course, and as a reference work for the research worker. Although many of the topics require considerable knowledge of physics and mathematics to be intelligible, each chapter proceeds from a simple elementary explanation, so that much information is made available for those not especially trained in these subjects."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:254 S '46 260w

"Dr. Cady's book comprehensively covers the entire field from fundamentals through all the theoretical aspects and the principal uses. It will be a valuable reference in many branches of physics and engineering." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p31 O 6 '46 150w

CAESAR, IRVING. Sing a song of friendship [musical arrangements by Leo Russotto; il. by Albert Barbelle; songs have been tr. or adapted into the following languages: German, French, Spanish, Russian, Chinese, Japanese]. 69 $1.95 The author, 1619 Broadway, N.Y. 19

784 Children's songs

46-8325

"In ballad form, these songs explain why the nations of the world must unite. Proud American traditions are the subject of some songs. Other songs of amity are calculated to encourage thinking, feeling and singing about one peaceful world with dignity for all. Parents and children will find the songs easy to sing, with swinging choruses for group participation. Fairly simple accompaniments should give them a wide appeal." N Y Times

CAESAR, IRVING—Continued

Booklist 43:138 Ja 1 '47

Reviewed by H. T. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p12 N 14 '46
180w
N Y Times p46 N 10 '46 140w

CAIN, JAMES MALLAHAN. Past all dishonor.

232p $2 Knopf

46-3855

Melodrama of Virginia City in Civil war days. The hero is a handsome Confederate spy; the heroine, a prostitute with whom the spy falls in love. Shootings, fights, frontier life, and a train robbery are part of the background.

Reviewed by Jex Martin
Book Week p6 My 26 '46 500w

"Again a savage, sensual pursuit of passion, this time toned down by familiarity—or maybe it's just fatigue. Anyway, it does not rank with his best."

— Kirkus 14:181 Ap 15 '46 150w

"A violent and explosive story in the hard-boiled tradition, written with gusto and skill accompanied by some perfunctory moralizing. Shows careful research into ways of making a living—and of staying alive—in the early West." H. W. Hart

Library J 71:757 My 15 '46 90w

"All the research necessary for this work could have been gathered in an afternoon at a third-rate movie house. For the rest, the clichés of speech and the line of sentiment operative here don't antedate the prohibition era, and, as the story is told in the first person of the hero, these absurdities are inescapable. If Mr. Cain intended a little study in antiquity, he has achieved a major blunder in anachronism." John Farrelly

— New Repub 114:909 Je 24 '46 350w

"Horse opera plus, to put it mildly. Zane Grey must be whirling in his grave—and not from envy. . . . It's all there: the Technicolor prism with its dime-store moral, the raging action, the camera angles suggested neatly. An old-fashioned, on-the-cuff director could build a 3-act shooting with no more than this to guide him. But why should any literate lover of novels waste his time reading the notes on a director's cuff?" C. V. Terry

— N Y Times p28 My 26 '46 900w

"A shocker about the period of the Civil War. . . . The characters talk straight post-Hemingway, full of phrases unknown in 1861, with occasional laddings-in of the language of 'Huckleberry Finn' when the author remembers his period. I laughed more times in the wrong places than I usually do with Cain. Yet I could not help feeling depressed as I rapidly flipped the last pages, in which the lovers derail a train in order to accomplish a robbery. I had liked James M. Cain's early novels, which have so much more surprise and point than most of this kind of fiction. I studied the blurb on the jacket. 'Here is Cain at his peak,' it said. Poor fellow, he is at his nadir. The worst is that he seems utterly unconscious of it." Edmund Wilson

— New Yorker 22:90 My 25 '46 400w

"Cain is a superb story-teller; his pages breathe excitement rather than life, but, for a pleasurable evening, that's enough. Perhaps his writing tools have been somewhat dulled by his years in Hollywood; his hero seemed too beautifully blond, his heroine too darkly handsome, but, while the cautious men who operate the studios are spending months, maybe years, trying to make Roger and Morina more chemically pure, a great many of us will have spent a few exhilarating weeks in that unbelievably noisy and pushing town, Virginia City." Jay Adams

Sat R of Lit 29:10 Je 1 '46 950w

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 30 '46 350w

"A well-told tale whose deadpan savagery suggests that it was written with the tip of an icicle, it features enough lust and mayhem per page to shame a pulp novel."

Time 47:102 My 27 '46 360w

"Mr. Cain is a master at describing this sort of thing: he generally has the reader breathless from trying merely to keep up with the conniving that goes on. Still, in 'Past All Dishonor,' he is somewhat less adroit in the telling than in some of his earlier books. Roger Duval's machinations become so involved that at times they confuse as well as astonish the reader. The book is better in its components than it is as a whole. There are plenty of scenes to satisfy readers who like their novels fast and raw—gun battles in saloons and gambling joints, wild rides on stage coaches and railroads, passion in brothels, shacks and abandoned mines. The postman sometimes rings thrice." Herbert Kupferberg

— + Weekly Book Review p14 My 26 '46
500w

CAIRNS, WILLIAM T. Religion of Dr Johnson, and other studies. 137p $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

824 Johnson, Samuel

This volume contains a number of essays by Dr Cairns, an Edinburgh minister who died in 1944. In addition to the essay on Johnson, there are essays on Alexander (Jupiter) Carlyle, Andrew Melville, and John Newton, and one on "The constituents of a good hymn."

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 S 15 '46 180w

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 30 '46 300w

Reviewed by S. C. Roberts

Spec 177:70 J1 19 '46 600w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Weekly Book Review p20 S 29 '46 140w

CALAHAN, HAROLD AUGUSTIN. Geography for grown-ups; il. by Stephen J. Voorhies; diagrams by the author. 351p $3.50 Harper

910 Geography

46-8263

"From a science of speculation geography has become a science of observation and record; a 'fuzzy-edged' science, and by way of orientation the author takes broad excursions into the sister sciences of geology and astronomy. His exposition of natural formations and manifestations is highly competent. As a navy man and an author of books on sailing, he makes much of the development and practices of navigation by water, and takes naturally to the air in 'great circle routes.' He clarifies our picture of the earth, damns the 'Geopolitikers,' but seems to favor a new Geopolitik-American model." (Library J) No index.

Reviewed by Rufus Oldenburger

Book Week p3 D 15 '46 460w

Booklist 43:154 Ja 15 '47

"This is really amazingly interesting."

+ Kirkus 14:444 S 1 '46 100w

"Interesting and effective in operation and record, fuzzy in speculation. Recommended with reservations." J. E. Cross

+ — Library J 71:1460 O 15 '46 150w

"Naturally, he has slighted the facts here and there. Most of his errors arise from a tendency to prefer the vivid theory as well as the vivid way of expressing a theory. In general, however, he has been accurate and circumspect, considering the immense variety of his information and the simplicity of his prose. . . . By choosing a subject we all need to know more about, organizing it imaginatively and writing it up with charm and clarity, Mr. Calahan has set three examples for the popularizers of science." Donald Barr

+ — N Y Times p4 D 29 '46 800w

"The purpose and plan are excellent. But when we examine the execution we are inclined to say let the sailor stick to his mast. For in spite of much that is accurate in this work, it is hopelessly infected by an excessive sprinkling of error in fact and expression. For example, after an introductory section of maps and charts (in many ways excellent), Mr. Calahan essays to tell us how the Mercator projection is constructed. What he describes and diagrams is not Mercator at all, but the central cylindrical projection, a particularly useless one. It seems to me that this borer nullifies the author's good description of the properties and uses of the projection. There are also many minor but irritating inaccuracies in the section on other projections." R. E. Harrison

— + Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 5 '47
1050w

CALDWELL, CYRIL CASSIDY. Speak the sin softly. 332p $2.75 Messner

46-18715

A young Italian priest, who had traveled halfway around the world to his first parish in Ecuador, is the hero. Father Nicotera was very sincere and naive when he entered this explosive land, and most of his parishioners were simple people too. But there were evil members of the community also, and in time Father Nicotera was drawn into contact with them. The course of the priest's life, his conquering of temptation, and his rise to almost legendary fame, makes up the story.

"Diffuse action and an occasionally obtrusive anticlerical note are compensated by Caldwell's highly competent narrative style, his gentle humor, and the obviously sincere affection he has for his characters. In his characterization of Padre Salvatore he seems at times to confuse sentimentalism with the theological virtues, but on the whole the padre is convincing and appealing, and compares favorably with such recent fictional clerics as Fathers Chisholm, Smith and O'Malley." Jex Martin

+ — Book Week p8 D 8 '46 650w

Kirkus 14:45 F 1 '46 170w

"Cy Caldwell has had a colorful career and reveals a gusto for life that is reflected in his book. He writes with sly satire, and attacks human frailties with a biting thrust. Without attempting to evaluate any controversial or clerical issues, and judging it solely on its ability to hold the reader's interest, this story of Padre Nicotera cuts out a place of its own." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p6 J1 28 '46 500w

"The novel has warmth and color, and several memorable characters. . . Another interesting aspect is the fine, although incidental, descriptions of the customs and living conditions of the Indians of Ecuador." W. E. Parker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 5 '46
430w

"A successful mixture of exotic setting, colorful character study, and philosophic comment. Caldwell has something to say and says it well." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 29:17 S 28 '46 450w

"'Speak the Sin Softly' mingles humor and sex with mayhem and mob, and the combination is highly successful." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 4 '46 360w

CALDWELL, MRS ELSIE (NOBLE). Alaska trail dogs. 160p il $2.50 Smith, Richard R.

636.73 Dogs—Legends and stories Agr46-1

"Seven stories of Alaskan trail dogs: Gold-fang, winner of All Alaska sweepstake race, Blossom, who carried medical supplies to Point Barrow, Arctic the hunter, Hurricane, Lasco, Pickpocket, and Rowdy. Dogs any boy would be glad to know." Booklist

Booklist 42:159 Ja 15 '46

Springf'd Republican p4 D 22 '45 240w

CALDWELL, ERSKINE. House in the uplands. 238p $2.50 Duell

46-3952

A tragic story of a decadent family of southern aristocrats caught between their own incompetent, tyrannical natures and the stirrings of new desires among those they had lorded over, accentuated by bad social and economic conditions. The principal character, Grady Dunbar, finally pulls down his house of cards, bringing unhappiness to his young wife and an evil end to his own life.

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 My 5 '46 900w

Reviewed by L. D. Milani

Canadian Forum 26:189 N '46 260w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears

Churchman 160:14 My 15 '46 180w

Commonweal 44:390 Ag 2 '46 200w

Kirkus 14:79 F 15 '46 210w

"Vintage Caldwell, this expanded anecdote is unwontedly moderate in language, written with great competence, and bristles with life-like dialogue. Whether or not worth doing, novel could hardly be better done. For tolerant readers." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 71:586 Ap 15 '46 120w

"Caldwell's best work is literally pornographic, but it gives us the complex satisfaction of feeling shocked, charmed, amused and sociological all at once. In 'A House in the Uplands' the formula has significantly changed. . . It is good for writers to change their formulas. But art is an irreducible complex of interdependent forces. If one element is changed, all must be changed. Erskine Caldwell could write a book like 'A House in the Uplands' only because he does not think about his art. Apparently he still writes with the arrogant, uncritical dependence on impulse that he describes in his preface to the Modern Library Edition of 'God's Little Acre.' That remarkable document of the creative life shows how such a novel as 'A House in the Uplands' can come to be. It also suggests at least one of the things that are wrong with American letters." R. G. Davis

N Y Times p6 Ap 28 '46 1200w

"The most disastrous piece of feeble pretentiousness I have ever read by an author of presumably serious intentions." Hamilton Basso

— New Yorker 22:89 My 11 '46 750w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat R of Lit 29:8 My 18 '46 1100w

Reviewed by S. L. Jackson

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 28 '46
240w

"The slightness of the story and its failure to find the middle ground of reality upon which fine novels (including several by Mr. Caldwell) are built indicate strongly enough that Mr. Caldwell's private mine of folklore is pretty much played out. The total impression left by 'A House in the Uplands' is that things in Mr. Caldwell's backwoods Georgia are pretty bad and nothing much can be done about it." Herbert Kupferberg

Weekly Book Review p22 Ap 28 '46
600w

CALDWELL, JAMES RALSTON. John Keats' fancy; the effect on Keats of the psychology of his day. 206p $2 Cornell Univ. press [9s Oxford]

821 Keats, John 46-1425

The author's purpose in this volume of scholarly criticism is to show the effects of eighteenth and nineteenth century psychological theories of association on Keats' theory and practice of poetic composition.

"[Professor Caldwell's] study from the Hartleian angle of certain of Keats's poems and letters throws new light on the complex mystery which he acknowledges the creative process to be and on the distinctive quality of Keats's experience." H. P. A. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 26 '46 200w

"Mr. Caldwell's book is highly original, yet it is restrained within the bounds of assured learning." Robert Hillier

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 Mr 23 '46 270w

"Professor Caldwell has written a baffling book; from first to last it begs the question whether poetry is written in accordance with psychological theory or whether the latter is a rational explanation, after the event, of the working of a poet's mind. . . Thoughtful argument and close analysis are in this study, which may, as the author hopes, lead some readers to a better appreciation of Keats; but to others it must still appear that the poet himself makes easier reading."

CALDWELL, J. R.—Continued

Times [London] Lit Sup p380 Ag 10 '46 650w

"Professor Caldwell does not claim that he has found the one infallible key to Keats. He merely suggests that the value of much of the poet's early writing is enriched when it is understood as conscious experimentation stimulated by what was then accepted as valid description of the mind's operations. This is a modest claim. The book, which is lucid, witty, and at times profound, shows how a scholar may be erudite to good purpose and still keep a sense of proportion and a light touch." G. F. Whicher

+ Weekly Book Review p37 Ap 28 '46 500w

CALDWELL, JANET TAYLOR (MRS. MARCUS REBACK) (MAX REINER, pseud). This side of innocence. 499p $3 Scribner

46-25092

"History of a town and a family. In 1868, the Lindseys of up-state New York were a peaceful, contented group until beautiful Amalie Maxwell decided to marry Alfred, the adopted son, for his money—and promptly fell in love with his dashing brother. The household soon seethed with passion, bitterness and hatred, a situation which was not resolved for twenty years. Yet, because of it, agrarian Riversend grew into an industrial Utopia." Library J

"If you hunger for a 200,000-word period piece on the '70's and '80's with not too much significance, but an excess of emotion, this is it." Edith Roberts

Book Week p5 Ap 7 '46 500w

Booklist 42:265 Ap 15 '46

"She has a gift of story telling which is all too rare. Too bad she has no gift of style to go with it."

— + Kirkus 14:74 F 15 '46 210w

Reviewed by H. G. Kelly

Library J 71:484 Ap 1 '46 130w

"Miss Caldwell takes a quarter-million words to tell this one. . . For all that, it's a safe bet that she'll remain a Womrath wonder, and, perhaps, a book club's darling to boot. This reader, for one, is still wondering why." James MacBride

N Y Times p42 Ap 7 '46 500w

"Miss Caldwell still misuses everyday words in her Amos 'n' Andy fashion and her pages are still crowded with 'vile scoundrels,' but she or someone else has been using a large blue pencil on her customary exuberance. Anyway, she is not nearly as much fun as she used to be."

New Yorker 22:116 Ap 13 '46 160w

"Faithful readers of Taylor Caldwell—and they are legion—will be grateful that she has only a modest cast of characters, and not the bewildering regiments of Bouchards who march through the pages of the horrifying trilogy of the munitions family. This novel gains in intensity by the simplification and also from the skilful, Ibsenish manner in which the characters work out their destinies without resort to outside aid or deus ex machina." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R Lit 29:36 My 11 '46 550w

Reviewed by Jennings Rice

Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 7 '46 800w

Wis Lib Bul 42:75 My '46

CALDWELL, TAYLOR. See Caldwell, J. T.

CALHOON, RICHARD P. Moving ahead on your job. 295p $2.75 McGraw

174 Success. Business 46-708

Chapters on analysis of the personal characteristics which make for success in any job.

The work is based on the author's own experience in industrial personnel work. Index.

Book Week p4 F 3 '46 60w

Booklist 42:293 My 15 '46

"Practical, written for those who wish to improve their ability and handle jobs." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:56 Ja 1 '46 50w

CALHOUN, DONALD GILMORE. The little president [il. by the author]. [32p] $1.50 Crowell

817 Satire

46-3683

Satire for adults. It is the story of one Michael Calhoun, aged five, who became president on his "Peace—no shooting," platform. Things went well for a time, and then Michael discovered power. That was a mistake and the end of the little president.

Kirkus 14:237 My 15 '46 60w

"Michael will revel in the delightful drawings as he grows up, but grown-ups will ask, 'Save for Michael, why the book?' It may be a left-handed treatise on Truman and his penchant for outdoing Nicholas Murray Butler in honorary degrees, or on Truman's treatment of domestic and international problems, or maybe I'm unduly suspicious and it has nothing to do with realities at all, but I'm still in a daze. For exactly what age was the book written, and why?" Harold Fields

Sat R of Lit 29:24 Je 22 '46 250w

Spring'd Republican p4d Jl 7 '46 100w

CALKINS, EARNEST ELMO. And hearing not—. 387p il $3.75 Scribner

B or 92 Deaf

A well-known American advertising executive, who has been deaf since childhood, writes his autobiography and describes therein his efforts to find a place for himself, despite his handicap. Index.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p18 N 17 '46 360w

Booklist 43:100 D 1 '46

Reviewed by John Brubaker

Commonweal 46:357 Ja 17 '47 320w

"The style at this point is disconcerting, with a rather self-conscious cuteness. But when he gets to the printing and advertising experiences, he gets into his stride and turns out a sound and convincing picture of the men who have made advertising what it is today."

+ — Kirkus 14:446 S 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by Fern McGrath

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 24 '46 110w

"Mr. Calkins's book [is] one of the literary legacies of a troubled time. Like all men whose accomplishments are real and lasting, Mr. Calkins is a human being of mind and heart so large that it is inevitable that readers of his book must fall in love with him. Once that emotional state is reached, how can anyone pretend to be doing an objective and dispassionate critique or commentary? The writer makes no pretense of such human flawlessness. . . Not only is 'And Hearing Not—' a highly inspirational book; it is a magnificently informative book—informative about publishing and advertising, informative about living and learning, and especially informative about the things outside your work that can enrich each day of your life." J. R. Cominsky

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 Ja 4 '47 650w

"Mr. Calkins's story swings back and forth from the Main Streets of small towns to that of the metropolis, with an occasional view overseas. Its discussion of people, places, events and ideas, and its record of the life of an ad man and a deaf man, hold, as an ad man's story should, eager interest for many different kinds of people." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p10 O 27 '46 850w

CALLAHAN, GENEVIEVE A. California cook book, for indoor and outdoor eating; decorations by Philip Little. 381p $2.50 Barrows

641.5 Cookery 46-4109

Partial contents: California ways with salads; Soups and chowders that are really different; Best ways to cook meats on range or garden grill; Hearty dishes with little or no meat; Favorite desserts for all occasions; Beverages and accompaniments as served by Californians; Planning and serving meals the California way; Additional menus for special occasions. Index.

"Informality and imagination have replaced elaboration and fussiness in this collection. It is international too, but, mainly, it is devoted to California ideas and recipes that are equally at home in New York and New Mexico." Elizabeth Rannels

+ Book Week p7 S 1 '46 80w

Booklist 42:361 JI 15 '46

"The material is interestingly organized and clearly presented. . . If the collection has a fault, for universal use, it is perhaps the multiplicity of recipes using wines. In conclusion there is an excellent chapter on patterns for meal planning and serving—the California way." Madge Miller

+ J Home Econ 38:606 N '46 100w

"Here is a regional cookbook with a distinctly regional flavor. There is less done with citrus fruits than I would have expected, but there's a different 'feel' to the section on fish—there's an opening chapter on salads (and where else are salads a first course?)—there's a great deal of space given to outdoor cooking, barbecues and grills."

+ Kirkus 14:237 My 15 '46 80w

CALVIN, ROSS. River of the sun; stories of the storied Gila. 153p il $3.50 Univ. of N. Mex. press

978.9 Gila valley. Southwest 46-3275

"Ross Calvin's chosen river, the Gila, seems to deserve the title because the region it waters is the sunniest in the United States. Dr. Calvin's authority is not 'some super salesman, but the Federal weather bureau,' which finds that along the Gila 80 per cent of the days are sunny. The Gila is little known, though its legends are legion and it is important, as Dr. Calvin well shows, not only in the history of its own watershed but in that of the United States." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by E. S. Watson

Book Week p14 Ap 14 '46 500w

Booklist 43:33 O 1 '46

"Dr. Calvin, an Episcopal minister in New Mexico, has a Harvard Ph.D. in English philology. (The southwest is full of little surprises like that.) He knows the region from books and on the hoof. His earlier book, Sky Determines [Book Review Digest, 1934], is one of the best books ever written about New Mexico, and this one is of the same quality."

+ Christian Century 63:563 My 1 '46 280w

"A biography of the Southwest's river Gila, which is more sober, more scientific in approach than the Rinehart series, with greater historical—than human—interest, but offering one of the finest pieces of bookmaking of the year."

+ Kirkus 14:172 Ap 1 '46 90w

"With his facts and fables [Dr. Calvin] makes the Gila, at first glance only a muddy stream, one of the great rivers—at least historically—of the world." John Weld

+ N Y Times p8 Je 23 '46 360w

"Mr. Calvin has given us a scholarly and readable account of this old and storied land, describing the course of the river from its high pine forests and snow peaks through the sunniest region in North America, where eight days out of ten there is scarcely a cloud in the sky. He presents a dramatic pageant of human history." Stanley Vestal

+ Sat R of Lit 29:24 Je 8 '46 600w

"Altogether this is an authentic book, valuable as an introduction to a region of strange beauty and as an exposition of some little understood aspects of our history. One of the book's greatest beauties is in the ten full-page photographs, many of them taken by the author." Erna Fergusson

+ Weekly Book Review p2 My 5 '46 650w

CAMERON, DONALD CLOUGH. Dig another grave. 288p $2 Curl

46-3766

Detective story.

"A pretty good detective story." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p34 My 12 '46 90w

"Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 My 11 '46 40w

"'Dig Another Grave' is rather dull fare—half-a-dozen undistinguished suspects, a threadbare plot and a dragging-slow pace to a conventional solution." J. S. K.

—Springfd Republican p4d My 19 '46 180w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p30 My 26 '46 100w

CAMERON, OWEN. The antagonists. 328p $2.75 Doubleday

46-6908

The antagonists were Ed Robey, whose whole life revolved around his wife and their two sons, and Cram, a white man who spent much of his time with the Indians in the Western river valley where they lived. Cram was a man with a message: the Indians regarded him as a healer, but the white people were divided. Some regarded him as a saint; others thought him a quack. The conflict came when Ed's wife joined the ranks of Cram's adorers.

Kirkus 14:302 JI 1 '46 170w

"Robey's impiety may disturb some readers. The secular majority will find it hard to work up a lather over Mr. Cameron's war of religion." R. M.

N Y Times p14 S 22 '46 420w

"'The Antagonists' is somewhat sprawling in form, and slow-paced in reaching its climax, but it possesses undeniable force. In the conflict between the bewildered farmer and the disturbing hermit, Mr. Cameron has evolved real drama." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p10 S 22 '46 230w

CAMMAERTS, EMILE. The peace that is left [Eng title: Peace that was left]. 150p $2 Harper [6s Cresset]

261 Peace, Christianity and politics 46-3833

"Written before V-E Day, this book is a series of somewhat unsystematic though profound meditations upon peace and the spiritual conditions of peace as seen through the smoke of war. Each chapter begins with a text and ends with a prayer, but the purpose is not merely to stimulate 'devotion' but to quicken Christian thought and action. The divisions of the church weaken it in a crisis when it needs all its spiritual strength." Christian Century

"The Reformation was no doubt caused by the abuses of Rome, but these abuses might have been corrected from within, without an open schism, if the religious movement had not been exploited by rival states." Well, John Hus tried it, and what happened to him? But this point is marginal as concerns this book except as it indicates a slant. It is a sincere and thoughtful book."

+ Christian Century 63:722 Je 5 '46 160w

"The book is reflective and devotional in character, combining a thoroughly realistic appraisal of things as they are with a positive confidence that God's purposes for man cannot be defeated, although they may be delayed." M. C. Westphal

Crozer Q 23:391 O '46 160w

Foreign Affairs 25:162 O '46 10w

Times [London] Lit Sup p561 N 24 '46 360w

CAMPBELL, ALFRED STUART, and CAMPBELL, MRS HELEN MONTEITH. Applejack for breakfast; il. by Alice Harvey. 191p $2.50 Scribner

630.1 Country life

46-1728

Describes the experiences of a young New Jersey couple who bought a farm near Lambertville, and made a go of it. The house needed practically everything, and the place was unstocked for farming, but they went at it with zest and a sense of humor, and conquered.

"The story is told alternately, with Helen writing a couple of chapters and then Alfred. Both have the gift of humor and tolerance. Alfred Campbell can make the description of a woodchuck exciting while his wife tosses words and phrases around with charm and gaiety. 'Applejack for Breakfast' is meant to entertain and is a vast success. But it is also informative for those soulful city folk who yearn to get back to the soil and warns them that farming is far from an unmitigated joy without work." David Karno

+ Book Week p2 F 24 '46 250w

"A gay, cheerful view of farm life but with a realistic attitude toward its traps for the city-gone-rustic gentleman farmer. Light reading, but with practical hints for the would-be-farmer."

+ Kirkus 14:55 F 1 '46 90w

"A commendable feature is that the authors avoid the pitfalls to which so many succumb who have written in this field. They don't preach; they don't try to convert the reader; they don't include information that one can get in more useful form from a Government bulletin." H. S. Pearson

+ N Y Times p28 Ap 7 '46 120w

"The book has the flavor and informality of letters you might receive from a congenial couple who find life amusing even when it is beset with faulty plumbing and broody hens. It is the fruit of hard work and it is fun to read." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p12 F 17 '46 150w

CAMPBELL, MRS ALICE (ORMOND). With bated breath. 309p $2 Random house

46-5234

Detective story.

"Effective mystery atmosphere, with intricate multiple plot."

Kirkus 14:206 My 1 '46 150w

"An ingenious baffler with well maintained suspense."

+ New Repub 114:941 J1 1 '46 120w

"The solution of this crime puzzle is logical enough, but a certain foginess in the narrative makes for rather difficult reading." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 J1 7 '46 180w

"Fairly hair-raising, if you're not too skeptical."

+ New Yorker 22:80 Je 29 '46 110w

"Readable puzzle." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p14 J1 7 '46 260w

CAMPBELL, BRUCE D. Where the high winds blow; il. by Philip Bear. 215p $2.75 Scribner

B or 92 Arctic regions. Eskimos 46-6517

From 1934 to 1937 the author was an employee of the Hudson's Bay company in the eastern Arctic. During the war his bomber was shot down over Germany, and for nearly four years he was a prisoner of war. This book of his experiences in the north was written while he was a prisoner, and illustrated by another prisoner, who had spent two summers aboard a whaler in polar regions.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson

Book Week p7 Ap 28 '46 400w

Bookmark 7:10 N '46

"Graphic description of life among the Eskimos. Valuable contribution to the literature of the far north and his portrayal of his fellow employees and the 'mounties' is vivid and appealing. Recommended for both adults and young people." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 71:583 Ap 15 '46 100w

"Bear's chapter-head drawings illustrate the book and add greatly to it. They are jolly and fresh, and rather more original than the text. For it must be noted that Mr. Campbell does not write very well, and that his observations on the curious and fascinating ways of Eskimos . . . are all observations made years ago and with greater profundity by Peary, Stefansson, Rasmussen, de Poncins and many another. Nevertheless, there is charm in the book, charm that comes almost inadvertently from the growing picture of a young apprentice being made strong and wise and enduring by the power and beauty of northern life." Elliott Merrick

+ N Y Times p10 Je 9 '46 1050w

"Campbell writes with warm affection about these simple people who dwell at the top of our continent. One feels his admiration and friendship for the Eskimos, even though he fails to make the most of many episodes." It. L. Neuberger

Sat R of Lit 29:16 Je 22 '46 550w

Time 47:20 My 20 '46 390w

"The book was purely an effort of memory, without notes or references. But it was and is far more than that; the unique nature of this creation has brought out qualities that might never have gone into the book had it been written in normal surroundings. Sitting in a prison camp in the midst of a world war, with death and destruction all around, thinking intensively of a past experience, the greatest in his life, the true relations of things came to Campbell's mind with a force and clarity that are reflected in strong and simple writing on every page." Lincoln Colcord

+ Weekly Book Review p4 My 19 '46 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 42:85 Je '46

CAMPBELL, CAMILLA. Star mountain, and other legends of Mexico; il. by Ena McKinney. (Whittlesey house publication) 82p $2.50 McGraw

398.2 Legends—Mexico

46-6481

Stories and legends of the saints, nature subjects, and even street names of Mexico. Glossary. For young readers.

Booklist 43:38 O 1 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:462 N '46 120w

+ Kirkus 14 296 J1 1 '46 90w

"Interesting and full of the atmosphere of the country. A [few of the legends] would be suitable for storytelling. Will be useful in connection with the study of Mexico. Good print and make-up, colorful illustrations by Ena McKinney." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 71:1334 O 1 '46 90w

"That these tales are simply told is good. On the whole this collection is an interesting addition to our store of Mexican folklore." P. F.

+ N Y Times p11 S 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by Dagney Juell

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 10 '46 70w

Sat R of Lit 29:48 N 9 '46 40w

Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 18 '46 120w

"Mexico has seldom come so pleasantly and persuasively to her young neighbors in the North as in this book. Its looks make one ready to like what it says. The pictures use the clear yellows, scarlets and greens we have come to expect, with strong black outlines; they have a right romantic touch rather than the grotesque element often emphasized in illustrating Mexican legends." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 25 '46 240w

Wis Lib Bul 42:153 N '46

CAMPBELL, HARRIETTE (RUSSELL) lady. Crime in crystal. 232p $2 Harper

46-813

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p10 F 10 '46 130w
Kirkus 13:499 N 15 '45 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p26 F 3 '46 180w

"Enigmatic girl suspect most interesting person in highly emotional blend of crime, clairvoyance, and canny deduction. Adequate."
Sat R of Lit 29:39 Ja 19 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 20 '46 250w

CAMPBELL, MRS HELEN JONES. Diary of a Williamsburg hostess; drawings by Alison Mason Kingsbury. 177p $3 Putnam
975.5425 Williamsburg, Virginia—Historic houses, etc. 46-3816

"Which recites the every day events of life in the restored capital of colonial Virginia as seen and recorded by a lady of that city in an entirely fictitious manner." Subtitle

"Mrs. Campbell's Hostess will appeal to feminine readers who like their gossip tart, with humor and taste tempering its malice."
Marlon Strobel

+ Book Week p10 My 5 '46 550w
Booklist 43:12 S '46

Kirkus 14:139 Mr 15 '46 130w

"A highly refreshing treat. Written, as the title makes obvious, in the form of a diary and, as the author avows, 'an entirely fictitious manner,' the book records in light vein a 'reasonable facsimile' of 12 months in the life of a native of the restored capital of colonial Virginia who decides to 'go a-hostessing.'"
E. A. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 16 '46 300w

"Helen Campbell's 'Diary' provides a behind-the-scenes tour of Williamsburg's restored buildings, as well as many interesting and agreeable glimpses of life in Colonial America. The shadow of the two old wars falls almost tenderly over it, the old wars that seem almost gentle wars today, although of course they were not. History becomes an intimate thing, as the Hostesses lead the crowds along. The 'Diary,' brisk, evocative and engaging, must add to the zest and swell the numbers of this year's invasion of interesting people and visitors to the restored Colonial capital."
Lorine Pruette

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Je 9 '46 750w

CAMPBELL, LEVIN HICKS. Industry-ordnance team. (Whittlesey house publication)
461p il $5 McGraw

338.476234 U S Army Ordnance and ordnance stores U.S.—Industries and resources. World war, 1939-1945—Economic aspects 46-6744

"Popular chronicle of achievement of mass production in American industry and the Ordnance Department of the Army in production of battle weapons and ammunition for our armed forces and our allies. 40 billion dollar ordnance program included the design, production, storage, packaging, shipment and overseas distribution and maintenance of 2000 major pieces of fighting equipment and 700,000 different kinds of spare parts to keep this equipment, ranging from bicycles to 40-ton tanks, in combat condition. Illustrated with photographs and charts." (Library J) Index.

Kirkus 14:317 Jl 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:825 Je 1 '46 100w

"General Campbell pays tribute to American scientific research, skill in mass production, and manpower utilization. Writing from his point of view it is natural, perhaps, that he has little to say of the alleged waste and extravagance now being criticized. In discussing the relationship between the Ordnance Department and the War Production Board he also puts his best foot forward. The book is well illustrated with photographs and charts. It discusses many different types of equipment and ends with General Campbell's program for the postwar Ordnance Department."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:300 D '46 320w

CAMPBELL, MARIE. Folks do get born; il. by Clare Leighton. 245p $3 Rinehart 618.2 Negro midwives. Public health—Georgia SG46-176

Describes the lives and activities of the Negro granny-midwives of a community in rural Georgia, where about one-fourth of all the babies, black and white, are attended by these midwives. The first part of the book is an account of old and new customs; the second part contains stories told by and about the midwives.

"The book is delightfully written, beautifully illustrated with Clare Leighton's woodcuts. It is just the kind of warm, human, accurate record of that American institution—the hereditary granny midwife—that needed to be written. For every nurse, for everyone who lives or works with Negroes—and that means all of us—there is inspiration as well as information and entertainment in this book."
Hazel Corbin

+ Am J Pub Health 36:1442 D '46 360w

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p11 My 19 '46 300w

Booklist 42:312 Je 1 '46

Kirkus 14:90 F 15 '46 170w

"The book makes a contribution to the literature on maternal and infant welfare by telling realistically how basic training is given to a group of illiterate, superstitious midwives. It presents incidentally, especially in the second part, considerable folklore. The material should be valuable to public health and welfare officials as well as to the general reader."
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:330 D '46 280w

"Clare Leighton's illustrations add to Marie Campbell's unassuming and warm-hearted narrative in making a little book that commemorates a tradition worthy of honor and remembrance."
Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 19 '46 700w

CAMPBELL, WALTER STANLEY (STANLEY VESTAL, pseud). Jim Bridger, mountain man; a biography. 333p $3.50 Morrow

B or 92 Bridger, James. Frontier and pioneer life 46-7051

Biography of one of the most famous of American fur-trappers and explorers of the West. Bridger served as guide on many government and military expeditions in the West during the years from 1822 to 1868. He was also the discoverer of Great Salt Lake, Yellowstone Park, and South Pass. Index.

Reviewed by E. S. Watson

Book Week p13 N 3 '46 290w

Booklist 43:57 O 15 '46

"Mr Vestal's book is a bit choppy in construction and style, and in the early pages particularly he invents dialogue and thought in what is to many of us the unfortunate manner of fictionized biography. He also drops into dialect, some of which has a synthetic ring. . . Mr. Vestal also italicizes important sentences, a practice likely to irritate the reader who feels competent to judge emphasis for himself. On the other hand, he has presented new material; he documents his book well. He presents us with what is probably the fairest portrait of Jim Bridger in existence."
Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 O 26 '46 850w

"Accurate biography, vivid historical background, and forceful frontier fare in good combination."

+ Kirkus 14:373 Ag 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 71:1329 O 1 '46 100w

"[The author] has done a painstaking job of research among the usual Bridger sources and among some others which have been neglected, and the excellent notes and bibliography add much to the book's value. On the whole he has adequately set the scene for his hero's adventures and has honestly appraised the great guide's historical stature." J. K. Howard

CAMPBELL, W. S.—Continued

+ N Y Times p5 O 20 '46 850w

"A new work on Bridger for some years has been a pressing want, and Stanley Vestal has attempted to supply it. Our painful conclusion, however, must be that we are still as badly in need of that new book as ever. What Mr. Vestal has given us is not the penetrating new study of Old Gabe we had every right to expect, but a pretentious popularization of Alter's biography. As a contribution to Western Americana, Mr. Vestal's book has an almost exclusively literary interest; the serious student will find in it nothing of much value except some investigations in Indian philosophy and an incomplete tabulation, from the National Archives, of the dates of Bridger's employment as a government scout at various times between 1858 and 1868." D. L. Morgan

Sat R of Lit 29:37 O 26 '46 900w

"It is true that there still remains a need for a scholarly biography of this important figure in the early West. But it is also true that for the history teacher who seeks interesting and essentially truthful material with which to interest his students, this book is a bonanza." R. A. Brown

+ — Social Studies 38:44 Ja '47 360w

"Mr. Vestal knows a great deal about the early West, and he always writes engagingly. . . He is tolerably vague about the decline of the mountain trade and seems to me to miss the principal point in Bridger's relations with the Mormons. Also, there are at least two Mormon sources which put Jim's famous offer of a thousand dollars for a bushel of corn grown in Salt Lake Valley in so clear a light that no one should misunderstand it, as Mr. Vestal in part does. The last third of the book, which deals with Bridger's career as a wet nurse to army officers, is fresher and better stuff. The material has been worked over less and Mr. Vestal seems more interested in it. Even here, however, his treatment is sketchy and in the main based on earlier biographies." Bernard De Voto

+ — Weekly Book Review p6 O 6 '46 750w

CAMUS, ALBERT. The stranger; tr. from the French by Stuart Gilbert [Eng title: The outsider]. 154p $2 Knopf [6s Hamilton, H]

46-3068

An ordinary little clerk living in Algiers is the subject of this novel by one of the leading writers of the French resistance, who is the editor of Combat. The little man lives quietly and for the most part unemotionally until he becomes involved in another man's folly. He shoots an Arab, is tried for murder, and condemned to die. As he contemplates his fate he does seem on the verge of a bit of human emotion.

"'The Stranger' is required reading for those who want first-hand evidence of the most curious literary manifestation of the last decade, and casual readers, whether or not they accept Camus' moral messages, will be rewarded by a well-developed psychological narrative, told in conventional, effective prose." Jex Martin

Book Week p21 Ap 14 '46 360w

"A strange interlude, in the first person, in which a young man, nameless and emotionless, tells of the circumstances which led ironically, implacably to his death. . . For all its impervious detachment, this has a certain odd fascination, though its market will be limited."

Kirkus 14:109 Mr 1 '46 150w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 28 '46 120w

Reviewed by Nicola Chiaromonte
New Repub 114:630 Ap 29 '46 1900w

"The Outsider is disappointing. It will be read as a partial expression of the total mind-stuff of a serious, too widely engaged artist." Rayner Heppenstall

— New Statesman & Nation 31:474 Je 29 '46 480w

"An entertaining little story. It is well written and well told. But I can't quite see it as a 'conte philosophique,' a piece of literature with profound implications, as Camus's admirers do. . . I am sorry that I have not been able to get hold of the French text of 'The Stranger.' I have been told that the process of translation has sometimes made too downright and definite passages that were intentionally ambiguous and that put the psychology of the hero in a slightly different light, and I hope that this has not led me to miss anything of the author's intention. But, for the rest, Stuart Gilbert's translation seems an absolutely splendid job." Edmund Wilson

+ — New Yorker 22:113 Ap 13 '46 1000w

"This is an excellent piece of short fiction, in the classic French tradition. Like many French novelists before him, Camus excels in delineating the narrowness of French provincial life. The handling of the shooting on the beach would almost serve as a model to many American writers of the tough school. The trial itself is reported with a detached irony which makes the underlying horror only the more noticeable. Stuart Gilbert's translation merits unreserved praise. Camus emerges as a master craftsman who never wastes a word." Richard Plant

+ Sat R of Lit 29:10 My 18 '46 600w

Time 47:92 My 20 '46 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p293 Je 22 '46 550w

"It always takes courage to introduce a new foreign writer. What goes in his own country may not appeal here. Just now the French have more reason than ever for prizing pessimism and lucidity. But Albert Camus does not write for the moment. His message will have a universal appeal to some minds, to those who like Kafka and Dostoevsky, who know why they like Gide and Malraux. And like the best writers of his nation, this young man writes with an assurance, a mastery that are apparent in the excellent translation by Stuart Gilbert." Justin O'Brien

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 14 '46 1000w

CANER, GEORGE COLKET. It's how you take it. 152p $2 Coward-McCann

150.13 Psychology, Applied. Mental hygiene. Conduct of life SG46-178

A psychology for young people, written by an American neuropsychiatrist. "The purpose of this book is to bring together common sense and useful information which every person over sixteen should have about the use of the mind and the effect of emotion, and about types of reaction to various circumstances that everyone meets both in school and in later life. Attitudes toward work, authority, other people, and toward misfortunes and difficulties are discussed with the purpose of making clear which attitudes will foster good adjustments and emotional stability, and how these attitudes may be cultivated." (Pref) No index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '46

San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 8 '46 60w

Reviewed by J. E. English

Spring'd Republican p6 Je 13 '46 240w

Weekly Book Review p14 Ag 4 '46 140w

CANNON, MARIAN. Twins at our house; pictures by [the author]. $1 Lothrop

Picture book for very little children all about the twins Kathy and Stephen, aged two, and what they did each day.

"A first-grader will love to read the large-print text. Should be preboud for library use. Recommended." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 71:122 Ja 15 '46 70w

"The author's own two-year-old twins were the models for these two, so they're remarkably natural in their activities." W. H. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d D 9 '45 60w

CANT, GILBERT. Great Pacific victory; from the Solomons to Tokyo; with maps and battle diagrams. 422p $3.50 Day

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Pacific ocean 46-147

A sequel to the author's America's Navy in World War II (Book Review Digest, 1943). It covers the American offensive in the Pacific from Guadalcanal to the Japanese surrender, and considers the exploits of the Army, the Navy, and the Marines, as parts of a single force. Index.

Reviewed by Ralph Peterson
Book Week p5 F 17 '46 750w
Booklist 42:181 F 1 '46
Bookmark 7:10 My '46

"One criticism should not go unanswered. He describes the Guam censorship as 'niggling, bumbling, and unintelligent' during the Okinawa campaign. . . But most correspondents accredited to Admiral Nimitz' headquarters appeared to those on the ground to feel that the censorship there, while as bad from a news standpoint as any censorship inevitably must be, generally was ably handled, and reasonable; and that so were the policies guiding it. But this is a minor point. Mr. Cant has done an excellent job of surveying the whole Pacific war, including a wealth of detail, without being burdensome." DeWitt John

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 15 '46 600w

"This well-articulated, reliable and readable story of the campaign in the Pacific from Guadalcanal to final victory is one of the better books on the war."

+ Foreign Affairs 25:163 O '46 30w
Kirkus 13:538 D 1 '45 250w

"Great care is given to the details of the landings on each island and no commander's name is omitted. Much of the material giving exact information about men, ships and equipment could not have been published during the war. Illuminating chapters are devoted to Nimitz, Halsey, Spruance and Mitscher. Recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 71:119 Ja 15 '46 110w

"Occasionally the reader encounters statements about which some questions might be raised. . . The book as a whole, however, seems certain to find general acceptance and approval." H. S. Ford

+ Nation 162:321 Mr 16 '46 550w

Reviewed by Louis Falstein
New Repub 114:356 Mr 11 '46 700w

"Mr. Cant's book unavoidably has many blanks, and the writing, while clear and logical, is not distinguished. Nevertheless, it is probably the best general account yet published of the Navy's great offensive in the Pacific." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p3 F 24 '46 650w

"Considering the difficulties of compressing so much material into one normal-size volume, this is a fine job, well written, exciting, and authentic."

+ New Yorker 21:78 F 2 '46 100w

"Next to actually seeing the Pacific war—and Europe was enough for most of us—reading 'The Great Pacific Victory' gives a precise enough picture of what it was like out there." Joseph Hirsh

+ Sat R of Lit 29:33 F 23 '46 650w
Social Studies 37:240 My '46 40w

"This is not definitive history—that may wait for fifty years to be written; perhaps it will never be written, for the scale of operations was so tremendous and the interplay of forces so great—but it is excellent contemporary appraisal. The book has a number of excellent charts and diagrams and is throughout, highly readable and entertaining." R. A. Brown

+ Social Studies 37:377 D '46 550w

"It will probably be some time before there is a better history of the last 2½ years of the naval war in the Pacific than 'The Great Pacific Victory.'" R. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d F 3 '46 1550w
Time 47:104 F 11 '46 300w

"It was a bloody and costly advance to victory that Mr. Cant reports with skill and objectivity. This is interim history—sober, detailed and clear, but doubtless too close to the events to judge strategic conception and performance with complete justice to all concerned."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:116 Je '46 240w

"'The Great Pacific Victory' is an exceptionally fine book, excellently written, comprehensive. No other work this reviewer has seen provides as clear an account of the entire Pacific campaign." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p3 F 8 '46 1400w

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH. Penny wise. 238p $2.50 Putnam

46-236

A story of a girl in war time England who wanted both love and security, and found them, too, though not at first, with the same man.

Book Week p4 F 24 '46 180w

Kirkus 13:533 D 1 '45 80w

N Y Times p14 F 24 '46 230w

"The novelist keeps turning the situation round and round, viewing it from all angles, wrapping every fact in yards of sterile verbiage. The emotions in 'Penny Wise' are not deep, but they certainly are carefully bandaged." Lisle Bell

— Weekly Book Review p22 F 17 '46 180w

CARLISLE, MRS KATHLEEN (SMITH). Rampant refugee. 251p $2.75 Dutton

B or 92

45-11298

"The amazing story of how one 'screw-ball' American girl used her exceptional sense of humor to make life bearable in a Jap concentration camp. Mrs Carlisle was born in Canada, married an Englishman, is a citizen of the United States and has spent most of her life in China. . . At the age of 17, she married Sidney Carlisle, a British official in the Inspectorate General of Chinese customs. Her stay in China was interrupted by a flying trip to England and the United States but she returned to Shanghai despite the Chinese-Japanese war. . . When the threat of Jap occupation of Shanghai reared its ugly head, Mrs Carlisle and her small daughter departed for Manila. Soon afterward Manila was declared an open city and the Japs made their entrance. . . Then followed months of constant questioning before she and Ginka were allowed to rejoin her husband in Shanghai. One by one, friends of the Carlises were taken to the concentration camp at Lungwha, she reports. Then came the day when the Japs called on the three Carlises and took them too." Spring'd Republican

Reviewed by Marion Strobel

Book Week p4 Ja 27 '46 550w

"Ludicrous but real."

Kirkus 13:537 D 1 '45 130w

"Has Emily Hahn set an unfortunate example? Rampant refugees may have an unbounding sense of humor, but they may be nuisances. Mrs. Carlisle admits that she is 'screwball,' but she insists that she feels the tragedy of Shanghai and Lungwha Concentration Camp. Most readers will agree with her first admission; they will hope that she is honest in her self analysis. For libraries with unlimited book funds—and all sorts of readers." K. T. Willis

Library J 71:54 Ja 1 '46 80w

"'The Rampant Refugee' is a brightly entertaining narrative, which takes some of the sting out of recent events by the manner in which they are treated. It is the author's frank and sometimes feverish fascination with her own engaging but hardly remarkable personality that many readers will find trying." J. P. Wood

N Y Times p8 F 3 '46 450w

New Yorker 21:88 Ja 26 '46 120w

"Her story, under its veneer of outrageous facetiousness, is one of real courage, resourcefulness, and genuine gallantry, of adaptability and cheerfulness in the face of catastrophe and heartbreak, and one wants to shake Mrs.

CARLISLE, KATHLEEN—Continued

Carlisle for her determined effort to picture herself as an irresponsible scatterbrain. She was nothing of the sort. . . She emerges from the pages of her book, in spite of her efforts to the contrary, as a thoroughly likable and admirable young woman. And her story is a lively, engrossing, and moving chronicle." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 29:52 F 16 '46 850w

"Despite her gay, breezy, laughing manner, Mrs Carlisle is able to give the reader a feeling of the hardships and deprivations endured at camp in a much more personal and intimate way than in some more serious accounts one reads. . . In keeping with the old English proverb, 'A fool will laugh even when he is drowning,' Mrs Carlisle has written a fascinating and thoroughly enjoyable book." E. R. Weltman

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ja 20 '46 700w

"The author is firmly resolved to describe with chronic hilarity everything that happened to her, her English husband, their three-year-old daughter and a host of minor characters. As a technique of autobiography, this is confusing because there is no line between truth and clowning, and as a picture of war—to appraise it gently—it has little more reality than a collection of anecdotes."

— Weekly Book Review p14 F 10 '46 140w

CARLISLE, NORMAN V. Modern wonder book of trains and railroading. 289p il $2.50 Winston

385 Railroads 46-5226

History of railroading and story of some of the colorful personalities connected with it. Includes famous rides, speed records, unusual and little-known trains, and the part played by railroads in the development of the nation. There is a chapter on the "language of the rails" meaning the jargon used by railroad men. Index.

Booklist 43:19 S '46

Horn Bk 22:359 S '46 120w

"A well illustrated volume which should be popular in adult and juvenile collections alike. Reference librarian will welcome its detailed index; boys will delight in the table for identifying locomotives and in the chapter on model sets. Recommended." Eileen Riols

+ Library J 71:1057 Ag '46 70w

"Mr. Carlisle's book will win the heart of everyone for whom trains hold a fascination. . . Both in its subject matter and the skill with which it is presented, this is one of the finest books on trains ever published." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 4 '46 100w

Sat R of Lit 29:65 N 9 '46 30w

"Railfans and general readers, young and old, will welcome this excellent general account of the American railroads. . . The pictures are numerous, and well processed, though small, and altogether the book sets a high standard of accomplishment for a popular series to deal with modern, highly technical forms of transportation. More than a juvenile, the book will especially appeal to boys."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:256 S '46 140w

CARLSON, JOHN ROY. See Derounian, A.

CARLSON, OLIVER, and BLAKE, ALDRICH. How to get into politics; the art of winning elections. 210p $2.50 Essential bks.

329 Politics, Practical 46-8047

"How to win friends and influence people" politically with detailed specific information not so much on how to get into politics as to 'get in' office. Assumes that most political campaigns are haphazardly planned and run. Offers counsel on budget and campaign funds, precinct organization, publicity, political 'bibles', speech making, etc. Some attention to the ethics of political activity including consideration of patronage and pressure groups." Library J.

Booklist 43:150 Ja 15 '47

"Here is the lowdown in an excellent introduction to what is variously a crusade, a game, or a racket. This book is not as cynical as it could be, but by the time you have followed its advice you will have enough experiences to make you cynical. . . No high school or college library should be without this book and every citizen should know what is inside it." C. G. Hamilton

+ Churchman 161:16 Ja 15 '47 100w

"It makes unpalatable reading."

— Kirkus 14:475 S 15 '46 120w

"Good on the grand strategy of winning an election. Without entering into discussion of the larger moral issues book is recommended as accomplishing what it sets out to do." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 71:1461 O 15 '46 130w

"The politically uninitiated will derive more good from this book if they treat it as a commentary on practical politics rather than as a sure-fire guide to getting into politics and winning elections. Accepted in this light, the volume should be helpful to the candidate embarking upon a first campaign, for it poses and seeks to answer many basic problems. . . As a whole, however, the book should prove informative and interesting both to the casual reader and to the individual eyeing politics longingly. Neither should be tempted into believing it offers any pat formula for success." Clayton Knowles

+ N Y Times p29 D 15 '46 320w

Reviewed by W. A. P. White

San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 16 '46 650w

Weekly Book Review p15 D 29 '46 140w

CARMER, CARL LAMSON. The Jesse James of the Java sea. 119p $1.50 Rinehart

940.5451373 World war 1939-1945—Naval operations—Submarine. Sturgeon (submarine) 46-87

A partially fictionalized account of the adventures of the U.S. Submarine Sturgeon in the China and Java Seas in the months following the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch

— Book Week p4 Ja 13 '46 400w

Booklist 42:182 F 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 26 '46 160w

"The story fails to rise above the story teller's tendency to repetition and lack of dramatic build-up."

Kirkus 13:465 O 15 '45 170w

"Just another war book, but its story form and brevity may encourage readers. Recommended." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 70:1189 D 15 '45 140w

Reviewed by R. G. Martin

N Y Times p5 Ja 6 '46 430w

"The narrative, accented by eight successful encounters with Jap shipping, is vivid and engrossing up to a point, but, as the men on the submarine often remark, there is a monotony about undersea warfare, and this monotony, in spite of Mr. Carmer's expert work, finally begins to tell."

New Yorker 21:74 Ja 5 '46 120w

"This was one of the lost submarine books and the text bears the marks of censorship. Of course, the publishers could have restored the censored passages after the war ended, but apparently they found it not worth the trouble for some reason or other. This book accordingly has a faintly passé air; it reads as though it were produced in a hurry and out of insufficient information. Or perhaps it is just that Mr. Carmer's style is not exactly the best in the world for handling tales of derring-do and bloodshed." Fletcher Pratt

— Sat R of Lit 29:38 Ja 19 '46 270w

"Carl Carmer's book about submarine warfare in the Pacific is short, disconnected, filled with dozens of exciting and amusing incidents, and a lot of fun to read." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 6 '46 600w

CARMICHAEL, JOHN PETER, ed. My greatest day in baseball; forty-seven dramatic stories by forty-seven stars. 243p il $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

796.357 Baseball 45-10462

These articles were first published in the Chicago Daily News and include stories of Babe Ruth, Dizzy Dean, Ty Cobb, Hans Wagner, Johnny Evers, Hank Gowdy, Johnny Vander Meer, Christy Mathewson, Connie Mack, Walter Johnson, Morton Cooper, and others.

Booklist 42:144 Ja 1 '46

N Y Times p33 Mr 17 '46 320w

New Repub 113:813 D 10 '45 80w

CARMICHAEL, LEONARD, ed. Manual of child psychology: contributors: John E. Anderson [and others]. 1068p il $6 Wiley

136.7 Child study 46-3832

"An advanced textbook consisting of 19 chapters, each by a recognized authority on some of the most important aspects of research in the scientific psychology of human development. The extensive bibliographies for each chapter include many periodical references. Partial contents: Physical growth, by Helen Thompson; The ontogenesis of infant behavior, by Arnold Gesell; Language development in children, by Dorothea McCarthy; Environmental influences on mental development, by H. E. Jones; Research on primitive children, by Margaret Mead; Psychological sex differences, by L. M. Terman." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:5 S '46

"This book is addressed to the advanced student in psychology. As such, it is a reference book rather than a classroom text for the beginning student in child psychology. The bibliographies are very extensive. The period since 1933 is especially stressed by most of the authors. Understandably, very little has been included beyond 1944, although the book carries a January 1946 date line."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:232 S '46 320w

CARPENTER, FRANCES (MRS W. C. HUNTINGTON). Canada and her northern neighbors. 438p il maps $1.40 Am. bk.

917.1 Canada—Description and travel. Alaska—Description and travel. Greenland—Description and travel. Newfoundland—Description and travel 46-1028

"Following an overview of the dominion through an imaginary airplane flight over Canada, and a section on Canada's history, the author describes, with emphasis on the people and their habits of living and working, each of the provinces and territories and Alaska, Greenland, and Newfoundland. Pictorial facts about the dominion appear as an appendix. Rather irritating semi-narrative style but will be useful as supplementary material. Many good photographs. Grades 6-8." Booklist

Booklist 42:319 Je 1 '46

"The material is well organized . . . The style of writing and the vocabulary are well adapted to the age group for which the book is intended. Illustrations and maps are plentiful. The former are, on the whole, attractive and useful. The latter, though of adequate size, are too detailed and cluttered for easy reading. Ten pages of charts show the relative importance of leading industries and the distribution of population. The book is of value chiefly as a reference rather than as a textbook—study helps, supplementary reading lists, topics for individual investigation are lacking—and its merit rests on the basis of the organization and content of the third unit." Alleen Ross

+ — Social Educ 10:333 N '46 650w

CARPENTER, IRIS. No woman's world. 338p $3 Houghton

940.548142 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English 46-6726

The author was a British journalist and war correspondent, and is now married to an American army officer. Her book tells the story of her experiences in France and Germany from the invasion to the end of the war.

"'No Woman's World' is of special interest as a good reporter's war report on one section of the latest war. It is of further interest as a social document on the position of the female war correspondent in our day and the reaction of a woman to what she saw and heard." Elizabeth Hawes

+ Book Week p3 S 15 '46 490w

Booklist 43 51 O 15 '46

Foreign Affairs 25:340 Ja '47 20w

"A good reporter, she writes of both military strategy and actual battles with a tough masculine competence, combined with a woman's flair for dramatic and poignant detail."

+ Kirkus 14:335 Jl 15 '46 170w

"Her book is significant as a woman's firsthand account of the war. Her views, even where they only echo and corroborate those of the male contingent, would seem essential to a rounded record of our vast effort in international stabilization. The book presents ample justification for the scope reluctantly permitted to women correspondents—the good ones—and may rejuvenate some of the War Department's gray hairs." Gladwin Hill

+ N Y Times p8 S 15 '46 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 1 '46 20w

Reviewed by John Barkham

Sat R of Lit 29:49 O 12 '46 600w

"Much of No Woman's World reads about as a woman's war report might be expected to read: human-interest stories, hard-boiled anecdotes, Perils-of-Pauline asides."

Time 48:112 S 9 '46 330w

"The suffering and the stupidities of war-making, the agonies and the bravery of the western European peoples who had to endure so many years of German dominance, poison and terror, the ghastly, pathetic mass of 'displaced persons,' who were victory's first legacy to the bewildered Allies—of these things Iris saw much and has written with accuracy and understanding. . . It would have been enough for her to have confined herself to all that, for no lady can be an Ernie Pyle, an Ingersoll, a Butcher and a Bedell Smith all rolled into one. Her war story, still worth the while of any civilian reader who isn't squeamish, is somewhat spoiled in spots by her sallies into the strategy and tactics of the campaign." Edward Angly

+ — Weekly Book Review p9 S 1 '46 1200w

CARPENTER, RHYS. Folk tale, fiction and saga in the Homeric epics. 198p $2.50 Univ. of Calif.

883.1 Homer. Folklore A46-4752

"Examines the Homeric poems from a viewpoint completely outside of Greece and apart from all things specifically Homeric, in order to put them into their proper perspective as popular oral literature. It utilizes the archaeologically established strata of cultural sequences in pre-Hellenic, proto-Hellenic, and Early Classical Greece, in order to fit the poems correctly into their chronological setting. And it reduces these intricate findings to a readable and coherent account available to every intelligently interested layman." (Publisher's note) Index.

"It is my strong personal conviction that renewed interest in Greek literature and in the classics generally is all to the good for contemporary writers, writing and thought in general. Such a book as Prof. Carpenter's will do much to stimulate, direct and reward such interest." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p4 O 6 '46 700w

"The union of lively speculations with fresh interpretation of familiar facts should make this volume interesting to all students of popular literature."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:273 O '46 260w

"Though this book involves a marshaling of highly technical knowledge, it can be enjoyed

CARPENTER, RHYS—Continued
by any interested reader. . . It is easy to believe Mr. Carpenter when he declares that this book was a stimulation to write and a diversion to read in public. He has constructed a literary detective story of the first water." G. F. Whicher

+ Weekly Book Review p25 O 13 '46
650w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). He who whispers. 250p $2 Harper 46-2640

Detective story.

Booklist 42:283 My 1 '46

Kirkus 14:25 Ja 15 '46 80w

New Repub 114:48 Ap 8 '46 80w

"Anyone who can read the first chapter of this book without continuing to the end is no true mystery fan." I. A.

+ N Y Times p32 Mr 31 '46 150w

"Fell's explanation of these baffling matters is of the tricky variety which always delights his followers. It isn't, however, nearly as unnerving as it is intended to be."

+ New Yorker 22:96 Mr 30 '46 110w

"Required reading."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:54 Mr 30 '46 40w

"Here's more proof that Mr. Carr yields to no man or woman in the art of mystery trickery, the great desideratum of most mystery fans. . . Grade A of its kind, with such a display of mystery jugglery as you'll hardly find elsewhere." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p22 Ap 7 '46 230w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). My late wives. 282p $2.50 Morrow 46-7348

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p12 N 17 '46 80w

Booklist 43:103 D 1 '46

"Top notch intellectual cat-and-mousing, manipulation of large deceptions and misdirections."

+ Kirkus 14:437 S 1 '46 100w

New Repub 105:638 N 11 '46 20w

"It is a fantastic picture at best, with drama and real life so intermingled that it is difficult to say where one ends and the other begins. Sir Henry is, of course, the god out of the machine, and what a god he is and what a machine!" Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 N 3 '46 140w

"The plot is above average, but you may have difficulty downing the heavy doses of Sir Henry's ogreish whimsy."

+ New Yorker 22:128 N 2 '46 100w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 10 '46
90w

"Good!"

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 N 9 '46 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p24 N 3 '46 270w

CARRE, MEYRICK HEATH. Realists and nominalists. 128p $2.75 (8s 6d) Oxford

189 Philosophers, Medieval, Reason A47-1

"The author is lecturer in philosophy at the University of Bristol, England. His purpose is to give an exposition of some of the questions relating to knowledge which occupied the medieval schools, and the way in which they were discussed by representative thinkers. . . The four thinkers whose views are outlined are St. Augustine, Peter Abelard, Thomas Aquinas and William of Occam." Christian Century

Reviewed by H. T. Houf

Christian Century 63:1182 O 2 '46 360w

"In his Preface Mr. Carré observes that 'students of philosophy are still apt to flit from the theories of classical Greece to the scientific assumptions of the seventeenth century without bestowing more than a hasty glance at the intervening eras of speculation. To say the least, this is an unhistorical procedure. The bond which unites the ancient outlook with the new is the persistence of Greek principles within the context of Christian doctrine. And the new conceptions, despite their loud rejection of Scholasticism, were deeply indebted to the mediaeval methods, and are inexplicable without them.' The book is to be welcomed in general as a contribution to a more historical view, and in particular as illustrating the method and quality of 'scholastic' argument." S. H. Mellone

+ Hibbert J 45:89 O '46 1550w

"This book remains a welcome addition to our small shelf of English studies of medieval thought."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p262 Je 1 '46
1400w

CARRERA ANDRADE, JORGE. Secret country; poems; tr. by Muna Lee; introd. by John Peale Bishop. 77p $2.50 Macmillan 861 46-5202

A selection from the work of an Ecuadorian poet, including The Perfect Life, written when he was eighteen. The Spanish originals are included.

Booklist 43:152 Ja 15 '47

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 44:601 O 4 '46 380w

Kirkus 14:89 F 15 '46 90w

"His work is lyrical by nature, he has humane interests, and he is an innovator in the manner of Lorca, by reason of his brilliant and provocative metaphors, which break up the languid flow of Spanish verse."

+ New Yorker 2:102 S 7 '46 80w

"A rich document, interestingly presented." George Snell

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 11 '46
110w

"This is a volume of graceful and beautiful poetry which will hold one's excited interest. It should not be missed." C. M. Sauer

+ Spring'd Republican p6 S 24 '46 420w

"Muna Lee provides an excellent English text facing the original Spanish. Even where she has departed slightly from the actual words used she has rendered the text with fidelity and poetry." Eugene Davidson

+ Yale R n s 36:150 autumn '46 200w

CARRINGTON, HEReward. Invisible world. 190p $2.50 Beechhurst press

133.072 Psychical research 46-5442

The director of the American Psychical Institute discusses his views on spirit messages, haunted houses, and other psychic phenomena, based upon his own experiences during his forty-five years in this field.

Reviewed by E. J. Garrett

Book Week p44 D 1 '46 450w

"In connection with Mr Carrington's mediums, it is obvious that because one is a fake not all are necessarily dishonest, but it is curious that a scientific investigator should be willing to accept one part of a medium's work when another part was proved to be bogus." R. F. H.

Spring'd Republican p4d Jl 14 '46 300w

CARROLL, MRS RUTH (ROBINSON), and CARROLL, LATROBE. The flying house [Il. by Ruth Carroll]. 127p $2 Macmillan

46-8401

The adventures of Mr Bing, as a soap salesman, and his family in their helicopter house which was very useful in rescuing people and animals stranded during a flood.

"This may seem too much a flight of sheer fancy to adults critical of mixing scientific discoveries already made with conjecture. . . Ten- and eleven-year-olds will find absorbing the details of the gadgets the family uses in their everyday life. And who knows what conveniences sky traffic holds for the people of tomorrow?" M. B. Snow

Library J 71:1208 S 15 '46 70w

"This is a very gay and amusing story, and the illustrations are even better than those in 'School in the Sky.'" M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Ja 18 '47 70w

"The book is for small children who will not be fussy about facts. The soap salesman's career sounds more like radio than reality, and the book is evidently meant to amuse rather than to convince. The end papers show a fearsome sight: the blue sky teeming with advertising aircraft, each in the shape of the thing it advertises, from fresh fish to ice-cream cones." M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 5 '47 310w

CARRUTHERS, OLIVE. Lincoln's other Mary; appendix by R. Gerald McMurtry. 229p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. Vineyard, Mary S. (Owens) 46-6097

"A new approach to the love affair of Lincoln and Mary Owens. Olive Carruthers has gathered scattered records and with some poetic license has woven them into a story. To this R. Gerald McMurtry has appended biographical matter, letters and other source material, thus appealing to the casual reader and exacting students who may be interested in this phase of Lincoln's life and development." Library J

Booklist 42:365 J1 15 '46

"The author has written with insight and feminine intuition. There are many touches which few if any men would have found hidden between the lines of the documents. Miss Carruthers has managed to orient herself in Sangamon County and the New Salem of a century ago. She strives with a good deal of success to make her characters talk as 'folks' did in that faraway time." F. L. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 J1 13 '46 450w

"Generally recommended, although not an important book." Jacqueline Overton

+ Library J 71:757 My 15 '46 90w

"The reader who wants a story told him in pleasing narrative form is satisfied, while the reader who wants the historical facts gets his money's worth, too. . . . With a good bit of skill and sensitiveness, Miss Carruthers has recreated the background of the affair and given Miss Owens and Mr. Lincoln character, dimension and life, setting each in colorful atmospheric perspective as to the place and period." Lloyd Lewis

+ N Y Times p4 J1 7 '46 950w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 7 '46 110w

Time 48:102 J1 8 '46 700w

Reviewed by W. M. Kunstler

Weekly Book Review p12 Je 30 '46 850w

Wis Lib Bul 42:132 O '46

CARSE, ROBERT. Deep six. 311p $2.50 Morrow

46-25193

Adventure story about one phase of World war II. An American vessel is sunk off the African coast, and the survivors are marched into the desert by a German-commanded band of Vichy French. The novel describes their terrible experiences, a bit of the past lives of the prisoners, and the experiences of the group which escaped.

Booklist 42:329 Je 15 '46

Kirkus 14:181 Ap 15 '46 150w

"From its deep water start to its mountain top end, it is adventure in the best flight and pursuit manner. Probably not since John Buchan crowded the thrills into his last man-hunt has so much happened to one set of characters between one set of covers. . . . An ending that trails off weakly doesn't matter.

It was a good fight. Perhaps the author intended that his running lecture on the issues of the war—which reveals a burning hate for those who tolerate a Vichy, then or now—be taken more seriously. I doubt it. Mr. Carse was really writing a hefty tale of the uphill fight of the underdog, who only incidentally has right on his side." Austin Stevens

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 23 '46 600w

"What you get in the end is part straight adventure yarn, written with wide knowledge of seamen and what they're like, and part psychological study, the latter done never profoundly but always sensibly. The combination is a sound one and here furnishes above-average reading." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 10 '46 950w

"Few writers know merchant seamen as well as Mr. Carse does. He served in the maritime service himself during the war, rising from able seaman to lieutenant. In his new African novel he is extremely effective when he describes the gruelling trek of his little band of seamen across the desert, and much less so when he pries into his characters' past lives and tries to make them rationalize the war. The main narrative itself is related with rare skill. . . . Throughout the book Mr. Carse's straight account of how the men react to the perils of their journey illumines their characters much more brilliantly than do his flash-backs of their past life." Herbert Kupferberg

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Je 16 '46 600w

CARSON, MRS JULIA MARGARET (HICKS). Home away from home; the story of the USO. 221p il $2.50 Harper

940.5477 United service organizations, incorporated. World war, 1939-1945—War work 46-6743

"Little of the evolution of the USO will appear on the surface of this book though it is implicit in its substructure. This book is, as the title indicates, the story of the USO, not a history, not an analytical account. It is written in terms of people, as the work itself was done. The people are fictitious characters who might have helped in the USO. The story told is true, however, chiseled as closely as possible to the spirit of the undertaking." Introd.

Booklist 43:51 O 15 '46

Christian Century 63:1094 S 11 '46 70w

"The book is an uncritical appreciation, not a true 'story of the U. S. O.' . . . Mrs. Carson has adopted a narrative method of presentation which succeeds in holding the reader's attention and introducing poignant elements of human interest. The anecdotal sketches at the end of each chapter are gems of humor and pathos. Only when the style falls into passages of excessively saccharine sentimentality does the author lose her audience. A minor fault is that some attempts to reproduce soldier dialogue have little recognizable G. I. flavor." W. R. F.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 7 '46 600w

Kirkus 14:293 Je 15 '46 170w

"The astonishing range of these anecdotes shows better than a series of graphs how much was attempted and accomplished by the United Service Organizations. This reviewer felt two inches taller for the reading. Important purchase for small public libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 71:1046 Ag '46 100w

Reviewed by F. McGrath

San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 13 '46 300w

Reviewed by A. C. Fields

Sat R of Lit 29:37 N 9 '46 650w

Springf'd Republican p6 S 3 '46 300w

+ Survey 82:336 D '46 100w

Wis Lib Bul 42:148 N '46

CARSON, WILLIAM GLASGOW BRUCE, ed. See Kean, C. J. Letters of Mr and Mrs Charles Kean relating to their American tours

CARTER, JEAN (MRS JESSE OGDEN), and OGDEN, JESSE. Small communities in action: stories of citizen programs at work; foreword by George Baskerville Zehmer. 244p $3 Harper

323.35 Community life 46-7898

"The authors, who work out of the University of Virginia as promoters of adult education throughout the south, tell of the practical achievements of many small communities in public health, improvement of schools, organization of libraries and museums, agricultural and industrial experiments, and many other projects looking to cultural and economic betterment and to the building of public-spirited citizenship." Christian Century

"The spirit of this book is admirable. The writers don't think they know it all, and they are neither doctrinaire nor patronizing. Instead, their book is marked by that wise humility, that genuine objectiveness, so notable in Granville Hicks' 'Small Town': qualities which make that eminently readable book so much worth while." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p6 D 15 '46 90w

Booklist 43:150 Ja 15 '47

Christian Century 63:1441 N 27 '46 80w

"The authors have made a practical contribution, not only in telling these success stories, but in analyzing the effective devices for letting people know, and stimulating action"

+ Kirkus 14:411 Ag 15 '46 170w

Wis Lib Bul 42:162 D '46

CARTMELL, VAN H., and CERF, BENNETT ALFRED, comps. Famous plays of crime and detection; from Sherlock Holmes to Angel Street; introd. by John Chapman. 910p $3.75 Blakiston

808.82 Dramas—Collections 46-6655

Contents: Sherlock Holmes, by William Gillette; Within the law, by Bayard Veiller; Seven keys to Baldpate, by G. M. Cohan; On trial, by Elmer Rice; Under cover, by R. C. Megrue; The thirteenth chair, by Bayard Veiller; The cat and the canary, by John Willard; The bat, by M. R. Rinehart and Avery Hopwood; Broadway, by Philip Dunning and George Abbott; Payment deferred, by Jeffrey Dell; Kind lady, by Edward Chodorov; Night must fall, by Emlyn Williams; Angel street, by Patrick Hamilton.

Book Week p5 S 15 '46 70w

Booklist 43:115 D 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 71:1208 S 15 '46 100w

"Had the compilers chosen to break the thirteen curse they might well have added 'Arsenic and Old Lace,' even though it does not, strictly speaking, belong in this category. Otherwise it is difficult to imagine how the collection could have been improved either by addition or by subtraction." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p13 S 1 '46 140w

"A very satisfactory collection."

+ New Yorker 22:104 S 7 '46 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 1 '46 70w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 1 '46 550w

CARVER, GEORGE. Alms for oblivion; books, men and biography. (Science and culture ser) 325p $3 Bruce pub.

920 Biography (as a literary form). English literature—History and criticism

46-4762

"Part history, part handbook and part grammar, this is an interesting account of biographical writing in England. Dr. Carver, a Professor of English at the University of Pittsburgh, has traced life-writing through the works of its finest practitioners from Adamnan to Lytton Strachey and has shown how it changed from panegyric to the all-inclusive vehicle it has become today, with tycoon and racketeer in the niche once reserved for saint and noble." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

"One is grateful to Dr. Carver for rescuing these stately shades from oblivion. . . Dr. Carver denies the biographer's right to replace truth with fiction. Always just, always urbane, he handles the Duchess of Newcastle's delusion of a strategist and a genius in her easy-going husband more gently than the malicious distortions of a superb stylist like Strachey, for it deserves more delicate treatment. But he decries both methods, whatever the motive, lest there be said about biography what Oscar Wilde once wittily remarked, 'Whenever now an eminent man dies, there enter those with the undertaker who forget they came to serve as mutes.'" M. F. Lindsley

+ Cath World 164:378 Ja '47 450w

"The book is marred by unnecessary asides and by typographical errors; but a large number of quotations serve as a pithy and running commentary on the art whereby men have saved themselves and often their subjects from oblivion." T. L.

+ — N Y Times p29 Ag 11 '46 230w

"Professor Carver's method does not make for sharp definition or lead to striking conclusions. In fact, his book is so little incisive that readers may be forgiven if they fail to find in it any leading idea or thesis. Perhaps by way of compensation for this lack the general editor of the series in which the book appears calls our attention to an injustice in the scheme of things—the vast discrepancy between the small number of men whose memory has been preserved by the work of human biographers and the countless multitudes whose lives are recorded nowhere but in the Book of Life, the only and final Who's Who of all the ages." The force of this indictment is weakened by the fact that nothing much can be done about it" G. F. Whicher

Weekly Book Review p50 D 1 '46 500w

CASE, ARTHUR ELLICOTT. Four essays on Gulliver's travels. 133p $2 Princeton univ. press

827 Swift, Jonathan—Gulliver's travels

A46-568

"These essays are extended discussions of new and important ideas first advanced by Professor Case in 1935 in his edition of Swift's Gulliver's Travels. The first two essays deal with problems that any editor of the book must face: establishing a text and explaining the inconsistencies, both real and apparent, in the chronology and the geography of the four voyages. The third essay proposes some new interpretations of Swift's political satire. . . The last essay reinterprets the entire book as a politico-sociological treatise with satirical passages rather than as a misanthropic attack on human nature." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Ja 27 '46 250w

"Students of Swift will find much that is valuable and suggestive in these essays; but something of the greatness of the book is lost in this interpretation. Gulliver's Travels is all that Mr. Case says it is—but it is more."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 2:5 Mr '46 280w

"In this compact volume—the last of Professor Case's works to be published before his death—the author has chiefly addressed himself to reconciling obviously inconsistent details in 'Gulliver's Travels.' . . The first essay concerns the text of the 'Travels,' and is perhaps the most detailed study yet made of the many textual problems of 'Gulliver.' Case discounts ably, but not completely, the merits of the text of 1735, and prefers as basic that of 1726. Here as elsewhere the volume will provoke argument. One can only hope that the arguments will proceed as graciously and equably as one finds them urged in this valuable book. Here as in whatever else he wrote Professor Case always combined incisive scholarship with an amiable and ingratiating manner." George Sherburn

+ Yale R n s 35:760 summer '46 700w

CASE, JOSEPHINE (YOUNG). Freedom's farm [poems; woodcuts by Clare Leighton]. 73p $2 Houghton

811

46-5624

A collection of lyrics and longer narrative poems by the author of the dramatic At Midnight on the 31st of March (Book Review Digest 1938).

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

"Add this slim volume of verse to the growing mass of tender and sincere poetry about New England. There is something about the Maine coast, the Connecticut hills, the Massachusetts meadows, their farms and woodlands, that creates deep love, loyalty and a sense of the eternal verities in this torn world."

+ Kirkus 14:265 Je 1 '46 90w

"Mrs. Case's book is not good enough because of a lack of poetic skill." John Holmes

— N Y Times p22 S 29 '46 330w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 12 '47 40w

"Admirers of the succinct, bucolic flavor of Josephine Young Case's verse are sure to be delighted with her latest offering. . . . Occasionally her efforts show the results of a strain for the original, and her thought, though never banal, never trite, is not always poetic." William Manchester

+ — Spring'd Republican p6 Ag 15 '46 100w

"Some of the lyrics, characteristic of the verse familiar to readers of 'Harpers' and 'The Atlantic Monthly,' are traditional in form, feeling, diction—neatly-packaged themes to be grasped in a casual reading. . . . But some of the poems written during the war years are deft and memorable. . . . However, as she so ably demonstrated in 'At Midnight on the 31st of March,' Mrs. Case is at her best in the longer narrative poems in which her shrewd understanding of character and event are allowed full scope for development. She is particularly skilled at investing a contemporary setting or occurrence with a legendary timeless quality." Ruth Lechtner

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 11 '46 650w

CASEY, LEE TAYLOR, ed. Denver murders. (Regional murder ser) 217p $2.75 Duell

364 Murder

46-4177

Narratives of eight murder cases, all of which were perpetrated in Denver. They are: The Gordon case, by W. M. Raine; The man from Rome, by W. E. Barrett; Gertrude Gibson Patterson, by Frances Wayne; Murder at the Brown palace, by Brett Halliday; The United States vs. Tse-ne-gat, by Forbes Parkhill; The Sunday gun mystery, by C. B. Davis; The Pearl O'Loughlin case, by Ray Humphreys; The spider man, by Gene Lowall

"Does not rank with its predecessor in this series, Chicago Murders, [Book Review Digest, 1945] in either case history interest or chronicling, but this collects a new series of murders which reflect the city from her disorderly frontier days to the present. These are stories of murder, rather than mystery. . . . Open season in a wide open city, with Clyde Brion Davis, William MacLeod Raine, and Forbes Parkhill providing robust recitals."

+ — Kirkus 14:219 My 1 '46 130w

"All in all, this collection is notable both for the unusual circumstances of the crimes here recorded and for the excellent reporting." I. A.

+ N Y Times p26 My 5 '46 290w

"Mr. Parkhill's account of the trial of Tse-ne-gat, a Ute Indian who almost started a war in 1915, has a good deal of historical interest, and Mr. Davis's reminiscences about the Rodgers shooting in 1920 are very funny indeed. On the whole, though, Denver's murders lack the finesse which most admirers of this school of writing consider indispensable." New Yorker 22:92 Ap 27 '46 120w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 My 4 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p33 Ap 28 '46 320w

CASEY, ROBERT PIERCE. Religion in Russia. 198p $2 Harper

274.7 Russia—Church history. Orthodox Eastern church, Russian 46-3423

Study of the changes in the religious ideas in Russia from the time of Peter the Great to Stalin. "There are interesting chapters on the early Soviet attempts to supplant orthodox religion by a kind of national-cultural religion and on the anti-God propaganda of the swaddling clothes era of Bolshevism. The author believes that the present revival of Christianity in Russia is part of the revival of patriotism caused by the war and not an effort to appease Russia's Western allies." (New Yorker) Index.

"It is a well-written, sometimes even fascinating, book by a well-informed author. It gives the American reader many a new detail and revealing illustration concerning enigmatic Russia." G. Fedotov

+ Am Hist R 52:184 O '46 400w

Booklist 42:311 Je 1 '46

"Professor Casey writes with 'a private enthusiasm' for building a cooperative world with Russia. He has given his readers new insights to understand this essential task, even though he has not analyzed some of Russia's social policies—in which there may be as much of the spirit of Christianity as in her new nationalistic church." H. A. Jack

+ Christian Century 63:720 Je 5 '46 900w

"The author combines the objective spirit of the practised historian with the practical goodwill of the Anglican priest who wishes to interpret the Orthodox mind and further any possible rapprochement with Orthodoxy. The result is an uneven but exceedingly useful book." W. H. Melish

+ — Churchman 160:15 Je 1 '46 250w

"The author of this small book undertook an ambitious project: nothing less than the story of Russian Christianity from its beginnings after Vladimir's reign to our day. The remarkable thing about it is that he has succeeded quite well in his project. The story is a mere sketch, particularly that prior to Peter the Great; there are, necessarily, many omissions. But what it includes rests on competent knowledge of the whole field which is evident throughout. One feels that the author's knowledge of the subject is like an iceberg; only a small part of it is in sight; the bulk is below the surface. Beside the feat of telling the story of the Russian church succinctly, the author managed, in the short space at his disposal, to insert a surprising amount of germane (and sometimes not germane) material which is not often found even in ponderous tomes devoted to the same subject. Most of it is freshly minted bullion from the mines of widely dispersed source materials." Matthew Spinka

+ Crozer Q 23:298 Jl '46 400w

Foreign Affairs 25:169 O '46 50w

J Religion 26:306 O '46 250w

"Those who are interested in familiarizing themselves with the history of the Church under the Czars, with the anti-religious campaign of the Bolsheviks and with the role of the Church in Russia's battle against Germany will find this helpful and illuminating."

+ Kirkus 14:195 Ap 15 '46 190w

"A long time and a large subject to be covered in 200 pages! But this objective historian has done it successfully. Excellent book for general purchase since it may be valuable for reference in small libraries and an indispensable addition to large collections." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 71:482 Ap 1 '46 130w

Nation 162:602 My 18 '46 140w

"Probably as good a history of this delicate subject as exists in English."

+ New Yorker 22:118 Ap 13 '46 140w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:186 S '46 200w

"Here is an honest and scholarly book on Soviet Russia. Honest, because Professor Casey neither denies nor dodges facts, nor degrades them to the uses of propaganda. Scholarly, because the author has exhausted and ordered his material." J. H. Holmes

CASEY, R. P.—Continued

+ Weekly Book Review p22 Ja 26 '47 600w
Wls Lib Bul 42:126 O '46

CASPARY, VERA. Stranger than truth. 319p
$2.50 Random house

46-11808

"John Ansell, who edits one of those real-crime periodicals, is annoyed when his superiors refuse to let him publish an account of a recent, and unsolved, murder. After some digging around, Ansell finds that the clues to the case lead to his own office, and, with the help of friends on the New York police force, he uncovers a highly unsavory situation." New Yorker

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Book Week p18 D 8 '46 90w
Booklist 43:102 D 1 '46

"Again a decorative, devious study in crime and punishment which continues the very effective entertainment standards of Laura, Bedelia, [and] offers much originality in its own right."

+ Kirkus 14:359 Ag 1 '46 170w

"To this reader's mind, Miss Caspary has bitten off a great deal more than she can chew. Save for a few expertly contrived sequences . . . the novel falls, with a muted crash, between two well-known stools. . . . Her love story, hemmed in by bogus Freud, is foreordained as a Van Johnson rigadon, from the moment boy and girl waltz to Muzak. Her plot, which jumps frantically from mind to mind in an effort to cover the emptiness of her theme, is simply too exasperating to require comment here. A loyal Caspary fan can only hope that she'll narrow her field next time. Tycoons (of any stripe) are boomerangs when served up as a major threat." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p24 D 1 '46 600w

"A good idea, handled rather more pretentiously than the material would seem to warrant."

New Yorker 22:130 N 23 '46 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 1 '46 60w

"The author of 'Laura' and 'Bedelia' displays a remarkable knowledge of the pulp and advertising fields and exercises what amounts to compassion or at least an easy tolerance in portraying the inhabitants thereof. . . . The main show for most readers will be the whodunit puzzle containing an additional murder and smart detecting by Captain Rirdan, the whole adding up to plenty of guessing. As for technique, Graham Greene testifies, 'I am filled with admiration for the devilish cunning with which she has constructed it.'" Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p42 D 8 '46 250w

CASSIRER, ERNST. Language and myth; tr. by Susanne K. Langer. 103p $2 Harper

401 Language and languages. Mythology
46-1035

"A book which, according to the translator, 'changes our whole picture of human mentality,' showing how language enables man to develop from the myth-making stage to that of logical thought." (School & Society) Index.

Reviewed by Gustav Ichheiser
Am J Soc 52:161 S '46 550w

Reviewed by I. J. Lee
Book Week p4 Mr 3 '46 500w
Current Hist 10:257 Mr '46 30w
J Philos 43:582 O 10 '46 750w
Kirkus 13:486 N 1 '45 110w
School & Society 63:15 Ja 5 '46 40w

Reviewed by H. S. Ficke
School & Society 64:262 O 12 '46 600w

"A tiny volume of only 99 pages, but it is full of close philosophical reasoning and deductions on the relation between the two title subjects." H. W. Marr

Springfd Republican p4d Ja 27 '46 420w

CASSIRER, ERNST. Myth of the state. 303p
$3.75 Yale univ. press

320.1 State, The A46-5936

"One of the outstanding philosophers (Hamburg, Oxford, Yale, Columbia), late leader of New-Kantian school, explores in part I, 'What is Myth,' concept of myth in language, psychology and social life. In part II the struggle against myth in the history of political theory is traced from earliest Greek philosophers to Enlightenment and Romanticism. Part III follows development of concept of myth through Carlyle, Gobineau, Hegel to our times." Library J

Reviewed by J. G. Kerwin
Book Week p7 D 1 '46 400w

"Any one, wishing to follow the tortuous course of political thought, from the divine Plato to the most modern and monstrous Moloch worship or Devil-worships of 'Leaders,' 'Supermen,' and 'Superior Races,' will find a fascinating and illuminating guide in Cassirer. His scholarship is thorough, his insight unerring, and his style free from that heaviness and obscurity traditionally associated with German philosophers." J. A. Leighton

+ Churchman 160:19 D 15 '46 360w

Current Hist 11:509 D '46 30w

"For sound students of political theory—not the ordinary public."

+ Kirkus 14:338 Jl 15 '46 120w

"Too difficult for average reader, this scholarly work by a truly great spirit should be read by every trained mind in search of deeper understanding of the world. One of the rare 'grand' books." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 71:666 My 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by Kenneth Burke
Nation 163:666 D 7 '46 1000w

"This posthumous volume, the text of which was completed by Ernst Cassirer just before his death in April, 1945, constitutes in a true sense his philosophic last will and testament. It is, indeed, a testament of wisdom. To its writing Cassirer devoted a double legacy—his rich store of historical learning and the distinctive insight developed years ago in his philosophy of symbolic forms. The philosophical vision which he had applied, in a series of notable works, to problems of language, science, art and religion he finally directed to the crucial question of political ideology in our day." James Gutmann

+ N Y Times p8 N 10 '46 900w

"Professor Cassirer, who died last year in New York and whose reputation in his adopted country (he was born in Germany) is not yet what it should be, was a brilliant historical philosopher, and his analyses of vogues in political alchemy, from Machiavelli through Carlyle and his 'hero-archy' to Gobineau, Spengler, are savagely forthright. The fact that many countries would have been glad to shoot the author of this book for his remarks about patriotism, national leaders, race, and allied matters only points up the urgency of his discussion of them."

+ New Yorker 22:117 O 26 '46 160w

CASTIGLIONI, ARTURO. Adventures of the mind; tr. from the Italian by V. Gianturco. 428p il $4.50 Knopf

133.4 Magic. Occult sciences. Medicine, Magic, mystic and spagirc 46-3026

"What Dr. Castiglioni set out to do, few but himself have the equipment to attempt. Trained in the medical sciences, at home in a dozen literatures, possessing an immense historical knowledge, he has also ranged widely in anthropology—too much, perhaps, in the often obsolete writings of the early Nineteen Hundreds—and in psychoanalysis. Drawing upon fifty years of scholarship, he seeks the psychological constants in collective 'adventures of the mind' by exploring the history of magic, ritual, mass suggestion and other efforts to control man or nature through the use of non-rational techniques from primordial times to the present day." N Y Times

Reviewed by Ethel Shanas
Am J Soc 52:160 S '46 360w

Reviewed by S. I. Hayakawa
Book Week p10 My 19 '46 600w
Booklist 42:360 J1 15 '46

— Kirkus 14:118 Mr 1 '46 90w

"Dr. Castiglioni, a distinguished medical historian now at Yale, has written a fascinating history of magic and its use by both primitive and modern man."

+ New Repub 114:708 My 13 '46 180w

"Those who know Dr. Castiglioni's widely acclaimed 'History of Medicine' will not need to be told of his gift for consolidating a thousand details into a creative synthesis, without sacrifice of the salient facts. It is pleasant to report that his lucid and dramatic style has again survived a translation, and we are indebted to Mr. Gianturco for having so faithfully preserved the atmosphere of the original." R. K. Merton

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 21 '46 1500w

"This is a fascinating and at the same time somewhat disappointing book. It is fascinating because it presents within the space of some four hundred pages a really remarkable array of facts bearing upon that dark hinterland of the human mind. . . If, on the other hand, the book is disappointing, it is so not only on account of its turgid style, which makes for a certain difficulty of reading, but because it somehow seems, at least to the present reviewer, to fail to live up to the alluringness of its title." H. A. Bunker

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:28 My 25 '46 950w

"This is a challenging theme, but the book does not do justice to the author's thesis. It is a series of discursive lectures. It is rhetorical rather than, in the words of the jacket, 'a scientific analysis'. It is neither a collection of vivid instances like Frazer's 'Golden Bough,' nor yet a serious attempt to come to grips with the human history of unreason. . . The book is badly translated and some of the factual errors are distressing. . . The chapters on medieval magic are the best and there are far too few of them. The forty or so plates in the book are delightful and informative, but they are not mentioned in the text." Ruth Benedict

+ Weekly Book Review p20 S 8 '46 700w

CASTLE, MRS MARIAN (JOHNSON). Deborah. 372p $2.75 Morrow

46-3685

Character study of a dominating woman who wanted her children to have all the "culture" which was denied her in her youth on a Dakota farm. The story follows three generations of the family, from the Dakota farm in the nineties, thru the twenties in Chicago, and back to the old Dakota farm during the depression years.

"Underlying this animated and excellent story of a woman's life from the 1890s to 1946 is the half-secret surge of one of the strong directive impulses in American history—the escape from 'crudity,' the great neo-pioneer flight from the word 'ain't.'" George Dillon

+ Book Week p1 My 19 '46 1600w

Booklist 42:317 Je 1 '46

Kirkus 13:547 D 15 '45 150w

"Recommended." Barbara Overton
+ Library J 71:757 My 15 '46 80w

"As a panorama of American life, 'Deborah,' for all its naive romanticism, is curiously colorful, with a profusion of well-absorbed historical details that don't get in the way of uncountable happenings. With a lot more humor and irony, Deborah might have been an American Becky Sharp; but, then, she couldn't have been a heroine in the best American tradition of radio and the women's magazines." Nona Balakian

+ — N Y Times p14 Je 9 '46 550w

"Miss Castle's story scarcely cuts into life's quick tissues, but it tries to put over, and not unsuccessfully, what one woman learns from life." J. V.

San Francisco Chronicle p13 S 1 '46 100w

"Mrs. Castle's book reveals no more promising talent than the ability to skip swiftly and sentimentally through the high spots in the intellectual history of the United States which most of us remember from college. Her book fails not only in evaluation, but in statement." Nancy Groberg

— Sat R of Lit 29:43 Je 22 '46 550w

"Mrs. Castle tells Deborah's story solidly and well. Sometimes, as in most of the material of the '20s, she becomes merely the good reporter with a delightfully accurate, antiquarian knowledge of her period; but throughout most of the novel she goes far deeper than that to tell this tale of a well endowed American woman moving with lively reality against the background of her times." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p2 My 19 '46 850w

Wis Lib Bul 42:115 J1 '46

CASTLE, MOLLY. New winds are blowing. 282p $2.50 Crowell

46-6622

"Peg, an English girl and Steve, her American husband who met while both were successfully employed in movie production in England, find their marriage affected not only by the personal adjustments which all working couples face, but by problems of war-time living which brought strain to everyone. Action takes place in England, Hollywood, and New York." Library J

"A perceptive, aware job, which may shock the ultraconservatives but which will find many appreciative readers."

+ Kirkus 14:281 Je 15 '46 170w

"Writing is uneven. Characterization is well done. Will appeal to women readers." M. A. Johnson

Library J 71:1126 S 1 '46 100w

"A crisis which is supposed to be the dramatic highspot of the book somehow doesn't come off. The pages that hold tension are those of the first third of the story which describe Peg's life as she grows up in England." Lucy Greenbaum

N Y Times p8 S 22 '46 450w

"In tracing Peg's spectacular rise to the peaks of romance and equally spectacular skid into the bleak valley of lost allure 'New Winds Are Blowing' boxes the compass in sex relations, and says some very wise things vigorously and entertainingly. But there are so many cross currents that you grow uncertain and confused. The author has assurance and narrative skill and knows her own mind, but emotionally she leaves the reader feeling wind-blown." Lisle Bell

+ — Weekly Book Review p9 Ag 18 '46 280w

CATLIN, MARY, and CATLIN, GEORGE. Building your new house. 267p il $2.75 Current bks.

728 Architecture, Domestic. Building. Dwellings 46-5125

"The authors' experience derived from building eight houses of their own has gone into this book of practical pointers on materials, general arrangement of rooms, special considerations for particular rooms, financing, and real and false economies. The book is for the budget-conscious planners who want a substantial but not costly house. The only floor plans are those of the authors' houses, used for illustration." Booklist

Booklist 42:362 J1 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '46

"Here is a thoroughly down-to-earth, practical handbook, for the prospective builder." + Kirkus 14:220 My 1 '46 130w

CATLIN, MARY—Continued

Reviewed by L. E. Cooper

N Y Times p27 S 8 '46 550w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright

Weekly Book Review p8 Je 30 '46 90w

Wis Lib Bul 42:112 J1 '46

CAUGHEY, JOHN WALTON. Hubert Howe Bancroft, historian of the West. 422p $5 Univ. of Calif. [27s 6d Cambridge]

B or 92 Bancroft, Hubert Howe

"This is the first comprehensive biography of an unusual man with an unusual mind. Hubert Howe Bancroft (not to be confused with his contemporary George, the New Englander) in his 85 years was businessman, publisher, collector, essayist, philosopher and writer of history. He made his mark as all six, but most of all he is known as the chronicler of western America. While Dr. Caughey's biography treats Bancroft in all his mutations, it dwells quite properly upon Bancroft the historian, though certainly other facets of his many-sided personality as they appear in this study are no less interesting." Book Week

Reviewed by R. B. Nye

Book Week p2 O 27 '46 450w

Booklist 43:152 Ja 15 '47

Reviewed by Kenneth MacGowan

N Y Times p34 N 3 '46 900w

"Hubert Howe Bancroft has long deserved a biography. Mr. Caughey's book should have a wide reading." Oscar Lewis

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 S 29 '46 1200w

"Mr. Caughey's study turns out to be an admirable critical biography of an American who deserves to be far better known. His book has two unfortunate weaknesses as a piece of publishing. Excellently designed, well printed and bound, its index is weak, and the dust-jacket gives it the aspect of a strictly amateur production." J. H. Jackson

+ Weekly Book Review p2 O 27 '46 2900w

CAVANAH, FRANCES. Benjy of Boston; il. by Pauline Jackson. 31p $1 McKay

46-1316

Story of ten-year-old Benjy who was spending "the duration" with his great-aunt in Boston, while his father was at war. Great-aunt Prue was very stately, like her Beacon Hill mansion, but Benjy met a little Italian-American who made him understand the city of his forefathers.

"Chicago writer Frances Cavanah manages a magic combination in these books about historic American cities. She captures the flavor of the city, the feeling its people have toward it, much of its historical background, and does it all through the solid method of telling a really good story." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p15 Mr 24 '46 130w

"Not particularly penetrating—but useful." Kirkus 14:105 F 15 '46 40w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr

Library J 71:487 Ap 1 '46 100w

"Slight but agreeable." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '46 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 Je 30 '46 270w

CAVANAH, FRANCES. Our country's story; pictures by Janice Holland. 71p $2.50 Rand McNally

973 U.S.—History—Juvenile literature 46-73

A profusely illustrated story-history of the United States from the days of the early explorers to the 1940's. For primary grade scholars.

Book Week p16 N 11 '45 90w

Booklist 42:201 F 15 '46

"Clearly written text is entertaining and simple enough for third-graders. Many beautiful illustrations in soft colors add greatly in creating atmosphere. Should be effective in arousing an interest in United States history and lead to further reading." R. M. Davis

+ Library J 71:185 F 1 '46 70w

CAVANAH, FRANCES. Sandy of San Francisco; il. by Pauline Jackson. 30p $1 McKay

46-1317

Short story about an American boy, a refugee from Hawaii, who lands in San Francisco in the midst of the Chinese New Year celebration. Because his uncle failed to meet him, and he had no other friend than a Chinese boy, Sandy stayed the night in Chinatown and helped to celebrate New Year's.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p15 Mar 24 '46 80w

Kirkus 14:105 F 15 '46 40w

"Profusely illustrated in soft, pleasing colors." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 71:408 Mr 15 '46 70w

"There is more color than substance to this story but the lively pictures will titillate any child's imagination." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '46 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 Je 30 '46 100w

CAVANAH, FRANCES, and WEIR, RUTH CROMER. Private Pepper comes home; il. by Diana Thorne and A. G. Peck. 30p $1.25 Whitman, A.

Dogs—Legends and stories

Sequel to Private Pepper of Dogs for Defense (Book Review Digest, 1944). In this story Private Pepper returns from the Pacific war, wounded. He is rehabilitated for civilian living and returns to his beloved master, Keith..

Kirkus 13:472 O 15 '45 90w

Reviewed by V. W. Schott

Library J 70:1137 D 1 '45 50w

Spring'd Republican p4d F 3 '46 90w

CAVANAH, BETTY. Going on sixteen. 220p il $2 Presbyterian bd.

46-2683

Understanding story of a shy teen-age girl, who gradually manages to overcome her self-absorption, and to become a part of the activities of home and school. For junior and senior high school ages.

Book Week p19 Je 2 '46 230w

Booklist 42:319 Je 1 '46

"Good story telling—sound characterization—contemporary."

+ Kirkus 14:223 My 1 '46 110w

"The author's best to date." M. M. Clark

+ Library J 71:828 Je 1 '46 100w

"This is a warm, convincing story of a girl's growing up." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p20 Je 9 '46 140w

"Mark this down for any library which teen-age girls frequent: seldom one finds a story so well within their own world. High-school stories of today are hard to write." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 My 5 '46 400w

Wis Lib Bul 42:88 Je '46

CECIL, LORD DAVID. Hardy, the novelist; an essay in criticism. 235p $2.50 Bobbs [7s 6d Constable]

823 Hardy, Thomas

46-6152

Critical analysis of the writings of Thomas Hardy, based on lectures delivered by the author at Cambridge. Contents: His scope; His power; His art; His weakness; Style and summing up. Index.

"It is high time that so rare and delightful a book as this should be made known to American readers. For David Cecil's book is a delight. It is genial without being flippant; it is wise without being ponderous. As a critical thinker Lord Cecil shows himself to be perceptive, discriminating, and scholarly; as a writer he is gracious in attitude and graceful in utterance. In short, this is one of the most enjoyable books that have appeared in a long time." C. J. Weber

+ Atlantic 178:160 O '46 400w

Reviewed by Bergen Evans

Book Week p6 S 15 '46 350w

Booklist 43 32 O 1 '46

"'Hardy the Novelist' is not only an illuminating guide to its subject; by virtue of its urbanity, its discrimination and its sound commingling of all the literary elements, it is also a model of critical exposition." J. X. Connolly

+ Commonweal 44 625 O 11 '46 700w

"Most of what Lord Cecil has to say is plausible, but much of it is also unoriginal. Written to be presented as the Clark Lectures at Trinity College (Cambridge), his book has ease and urbanity; and it provides a pleasant renewal of one's association with Hardy. Yet Lord Cecil brings to his task no special insights, and the work as a whole lacks grip and power. Perhaps, as the presence of a few slips in syntax would suggest, it was written in too short a time. At all events it does not come up to the standard set by the author in 'The Stricken Deer' and 'The Young Melbourne.'" Alexander Cowie

N Y Times p36 S 15 '46 450w

"A delightful essay on Thomas Hardy. . . In the chapter on Hardy's shortcomings, the author almost demolishes his man altogether and, incidentally, writes one of the funniest pieces of literary criticism in a long time."

+ New Yorker 22:109 S 14 '46 80w

Reviewed by A. Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 3 '46 120w

"One could not anticipate whether Lord David Cecil, whose experience of life and its tragic necessities and compromises must have been fundamentally different from Hardy's, would approach the task of criticizing the Wessex novels with proper sympathy. That he does so is clear from his first chapter on Hardy's scope, and his book is a lucid and gratifyingly intuitive commentary. Every reader familiar at least with Hardy's major novels will find Cecil's insights a welcome addition to his own." F. B. Adams

+ Sat R of Lit 29 10 S 28 '46 650w

Time 48:108 S 9 '46 1050w

"The sound sense and humor that marked Cecil's 'Early Victorian Novelists' are everywhere apparent in his book on Hardy. The insight and sympathy that suffused his recent biography of William Cowper, 'The Stricken Deer,' are again finely manifest when at the conclusion of his brilliant analysis of Hardy's merits and defects he puts aside his critical tools and speaks with honest affection for the writer as one might speak of a willful and unhappy child who had endeared himself by his ingenuousness and sensibility." G. F. Whicher

+ Weekly Book Review p5 S 1 '46 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 42:148 N '46

"The analysis of Hardy's style is penetrating, and the estimates of most of the novels are excellent. Only in regard to 'The Well-Beloved' does Cecil seem to me to go wide of the mark. To dismiss this as 'the same sort of book as 'Two on a Tower,' and not so good,' is to miss the ironic comedy which is the dominant note of the story. Indeed, the least satisfactory part of Cecil's criticism is the scanty and inadequate treatment of Hardy's irony. But with full allowance for this defect, the book is a vividly painted and subtle portrait of a great artist in fiction." H. E. Woodbridge

+ Yale R n s 36:376 winter '47 750w

CERF, BENNETT ALFRED, ed. Anything for a laugh; a collection of jokes and anecdotes that you, too, can tell and probably have; il. by O'Connor Barrett. 217p $1 Grosset

817.08 Humor. Anecdotes [46-8518]

Collection of jokes and brief funny stories, some old, some new, similar to the editor's earlier collections, Try and Stop Me, and Laughing Stock (Book Review Digest 1944 and 1945).

Booklist 43:115 D 15 '46

"It's as fresh as possible, with a sprinkling of old friends refurbished or dry-cleaned, equipped—as the editor says in his foreword—with this year's license plates."

+ Weekly Book Review p16 D 8 '46 110w

CESBRON, GILBERT. Innocents of Paris; tr. from the French by Marguerite Waldman. 212p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Collins]

46-5000

Imaginative, fictional adventures of six half-grown boys, played out against the backdrop of the city of Paris. Their hangout is an old hut just beyond the city fortifications, and one of their great friends is a customs official whom they call Mr Widower.

Reviewed by Felix Mendelsohn

Book Week p2 J1 14 '46 330w

"'The Innocents of Paris' never quite comes off. It has moments of vitality and perception, but its moods are sustained only briefly, and the high points are followed by abrupt sagging in style, plot and characterization. How much of this is due to the translation is difficult to judge. I do know that the first chapter, which seemed to me badly over-written, got the book off to a very bad start with one reader. . . . However, the book's main trouble is not language. It is that the characters do not come to life, except fitfully." Kermit Roosevelt

— Commonweal 44:338 J1 19 '46 420w

"Mischievous and mishaps in a blend of quiet affection and amusement, for a limited market."

+ — Kirkus 14:227 My 15 '46 150w

"A new and pleasant flavour in stories about children is contained in The Innocents of Paris. . . M. Cesbron, who has been well translated by Marguerite Waldman, has a remarkable gift for effective smiles, as when he describes the sky before storm as swelling up like an angry cat, leaving the houses stiff with fright." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 3 '46 270w

"The adventures are told with a reasonable facsimile of the wonder and suspense of childhood, but as most of the narrative is presented through the consciousness of children, there are awkward moments when, to account for the progress of the story, a child is made to think what he would never think, or to think explicitly what he might be aware of but obscurely. This peep show was designed strictly for adults who care to join the author in his orgy of infatuated indulgence." John Farrelly

— New Repub 115:108 J1 29 '46 160w

"Although there is little doubt that 'The Innocents of Paris' is a book with an unusual and individual style and manner, there is a curiously unsatisfying air about it, too. Its perversity should have made it so much more striking. Perhaps the translation, which has the boys saying 'hullo, old thing,' and 'oh fudge,' and then switching to 'who's the old phony?' and 'slow on the uptake,' is partly to blame." Richard Watts

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 23 '46 900w

"Occasionally one comes across a novel which is filled with good intentions, is written with a flair for style, and has an original way of telling a story and imagination. Yet, when the book is finished, it leaves the reader with a curiously cold feeling, a sense that nothing that has been said actually matters much. 'The Innocents of Paris' is such a volume." Jay Adams

Sat R of Lit 29:44 J1 27 '46 410w

"The discovery of a royal coach in a disused railway tunnel, a drive round Paris with the police during a raid, a children's battle in the Parc Monceau—all these things are beyond the experience of a normal childhood, but Gilbert Cesbron has written with such humour and gravity, [that one] accepts everything. The scenes may be exceptional, but the quality of the laughter, the fear, the excitement, and the tragedy (for there is tragedy) is irreproachable." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

CESBRON, GILBERT—Continued

+ Spec 176:410 Ap 19 '46 360w

"M. Cesbron writes of poor children in Paris with great charm and imagination. For their adventures here are far better than childish adventures ever are. Those are dreamed, these happen. M. Cesbron takes the liberty of a gifted man and adds to the odds and ends of memory a lively and original fancy. He depicts the most enviable of childhoods. His little company live on the border between terror and delight. No child could ask more though adults might."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p161 Ap 6 '46 500w

"M. Cesbron's novel is perhaps not tightly enough conceived; nor, from the craftsman's viewpoint, well enough integrated. But because of the way in which he has wed young dreams to an old city, and especially because of the way he has written about Paris—which no power on earth can uproot from its place at the core of our civilization—he has turned 'The Innocents of Paris' into a moving book." Virgilia Peterson

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Je 30 '46 1000w

CHADWICK, HECTOR MUNRO. Nationalities of Europe and the growth of national ideologies. 209p $4 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge]

320.15 Nationalism and nationality. Language and languages [46-2962]

"The purpose of Professor Chadwick's book, as stated in his Introduction, is to stimulate the desire for knowledge of foreign peoples—to call attention to the need for more knowledge not only of national movements—their characteristics and causes, and the ideologies associated with them—but also and more especially for more knowledge of the nationalities themselves." The author undertakes to fulfill this purpose, first, by a brief survey of the development of nationalities in Europe and, second, by a series of concrete educational proposals for the future. The survey occupies the bulk of the book and is composed of a series of connected essays on nationality and language, the evolution of the linguistic map of Europe, and the development of its political divisions." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"The author had a praiseworthy purpose in writing this book, but he failed to achieve sufficient structural unity of the parts to render the work useful. . . . In the reviewer's opinion, the title of the book is misleading and betrays the author's confusion of thought. The reader will discover that the work offers nothing of consequence about the 'Nationalities of Europe' except linguistic facts, and will be entirely disappointed with the author's meager conception of the 'Growth of National Ideologies.'" E. N. Anderson

— Am Hist R 51:740 Jl '46 320w

Reviewed by Otto Wirth

Am J Soc 52:159 S '46 1400w

"The book represents a considerable amount of research. Unfortunately, one is aware of a haphazard and at times slipshod employment of the elements, which do not mix or merge, and often coexist in a clumsy independence of one another." J. S. Roucek

Ann Am Acad 248:280 N '46 260w

Foreign Affairs 25:160 O '46 30w

"In spite of a one-sided approach and of some errors, the author has made a valuable contribution to the better understanding of a troublesome question." Rustem Vambéry

Nation 163:275 S 7 '46 220w

"A well-known authority in the field of comparative literature, Professor Chadwick makes a real contribution, in these essays, to our knowledge of the early history of the nationalities question. It is to be regretted, however, that, especially in his discussion of the development of national ideologies, the author has restricted himself almost entirely to a consideration of the linguistic factor, which is—as he himself would admit—only one of the factors involved." G. A. Craig

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:28 Je 8 '46 900w

"Professor Chadwick's book supplies a full and accurate survey and an expert classification of the nationalities of Europe, and thus complies with the first and major phrase in its title. It is remarkable for the breadth and wealth of its information. . . . Less satisfactory is the part of the book on 'the growth of national ideologies': replete with historical information of a rather elementary kind, it fails to attempt a systematic analysis of the character and spiritual development—or dégringolade—of those national movements, although it contains shrewd observations which might have served as starting-points for searching inquiries."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p63 F 9 '46 650w

CHAFFEE, LETITIA. Can you? pictures by Marian Throck Morton. [28p] 50c Fell

Tom and Trudie, small brother and sister, play a happy game all day long, beginning with the robin's early song. "I can sing like a robin," says Trudie, "and I can button my clothes; can you?" and Tom answers "I can button my clothes, and I can lace my shoes; can you?" and so it goes thruout the small duties and pleasures of the day to bedtime.

Reviewed by Miriam Snow

Library J 71:487 Ap 1 '46 70w

"The game suggests all sorts of personal additions and the colored pictures are uncommonly taking." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 28 '46 90w

CHAGALL, BELLA (MRS MARC CHAGALL). Burning lights; 36 drawings by Marc Chagall [tr. by Norbert Guterman]. 268p $3 Schocken bks, inc. 342 Madison av. N.Y. 17

B or 92 Jews—Social life and customs 46-8515

Portrayal of life in a middle-class Jewish home in Russia at the beginning of the century. The author was the late wife of the artist Marc Chagall.

"Autobiographical, well written, by the wife of the painter Marc Chagall, with thirty-six interesting drawings by the artist. Of limited appeal for the general public." Rudolph Hirsch

Library J 71:1539 N 1 '46 70w

"Tears and laughter fill the memoirs which [Mrs Chagall] wrote in a slow-moving, rather playful style. What the book lacks in persuasiveness and vigor is balanced by Marc Chagall's masterly illustrations, expressing a wealth of emotion through a few bold lines, depending upon swift suggestion rather than upon precise definition." Alfred Werner

N Y Times p9 D 22 '46 550w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 3 '46 220w

"The most delightful thing about all of these memories of Bashke is the absence of retroactive arrangement. They seem a matter almost of total recall, as if the mystical intensity of the Hassidic rites had precipitated them into permanent, unspooled form. They are pure pleasure to read, evocative, wistful and full of a peace long gone in the world. Marc Chagall has given them drawings to suit their spirit, lights to burn for the candles that have gone out. Jew or non-Jew, there is none who will not love this little book." Thomas Sugrue

+ Weekly Book Review p6 D 15 '46 850w

CHAIKOVSKII, PETR IL'ICH. See Tchalkovskii, P. I.

CHALMERS, AUDREY. Kitten's tale; il. by [the author]. [45p] $1.50 Viking

46-11814

Picture-story book about a kitten with a hopeful tail and disposition, who spent a whole day looking for a home, and finally succeeded in her quest. Ages four to seven.

Booklist 43:120 D 15 '46

"Children and indeed cat lovers of any age will follow with eager sympathy the hopeful kitten's story which is so engagingly told by Mrs. Chalmers' inimitable full-page drawings and a text which is brief and full of gentle humour." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 17 '46 150w

Kirkus 14:592 D 1 '46 50w

"This is the best of this author's work, so far. Pictures especially are delightfully appealing. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 71:1807 D 15 '46 50w

"In sensitive text and pictures this story speaks for all lost things in terms which 4 to 6 year olds will understand, and, as a reward to the hopeful, ends with a sigh of contentment." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 Ja 12 '47 140w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p9 D 29 '46 150w

CHAMBERLAIN, GEORGE AGNEW. Scudda-hoo! scudda-hay! 208p $2.50 Bobbs

46-1251

The story of a New Jersey farm boy whose most prized possessions were a pair of mules who would work for no one but him. With their aid Snug was able to get back the farm his father had left him, but which his step-mother had claimed. The mules were even a help to him in winning the girl he loved. The title is an old mule-drivers' cry.

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Book Week p6 F 10 '46 300w

Booklist 42:265 Ap 15 '46

Kirkus 14:2 Ja '46 110w

N Y Times p26 F 17 '46 270w

"This is a moving story that holds the interest and is suited for all ages. It takes rank with the better animal books." C. T. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d F 10 '46 120w

"Any reader who doesn't enjoy this story is, in our opinion, more stubborn than a you-know-what." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p22 F 17 '46 200w

CHAMBERLIN, JOHN GORDON. Church and demobilization. 117p $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury

259 Church work with veterans 45-9083

"What is the church doing about the returning veteran? How is it helping him solve the problems of his demobilization, reemployment and reintegration as a normal member of society? Can we rescue him from the exploitation of the racketeer in business and politics? These are immediate questions which Mr. Chamberlin discusses in this book." (Churchman) The author is Chairman of the committee on demobilization of the International council of religious education.

"This is not a book on the psychiatric treatment of the returned service man. In fact, there is surprisingly little about the individual in these chapters. This is not a weakness. The author is satisfied with other books that deal with the personal problems of returnees, and he lists several of these. His purpose is to help churches see the whole range of problems which are related to demobilization, and comprehend their task in relation to the work of other agencies. . . . One section of this book is timeless and will continue to stimulate those who read it after the demobilization crisis is past. This part is entitled, 'The Church's Growing Edge.' It deals with young adults in the church. Suggestions are made here on the arresting premise that the process of young adulthood is almost identical with the process of demobilization." Hampton Adams

+ Christian Century 62:1257 N 14 '45 420w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 160:15 F 1 '46 100w

CHAMBERS, DANA, pseud. See Leffingwell, A.

CHAMBERS, MRS MARIA CRISTINA (MENA). Three kings; il. by Janice Holland. 38p $1.50 Oxford

47-180

A little Spanish boy, disturbed because the Three Kings had not come to his little village in five years, set out to make way for these bearers of gifts, and met with great success.

"This is a perfect story to cap the Christmas season."

+ Book Week p6 Ja 5 '47 270w

Booklist 43:173 F 1 '47

"An attractive little book, with pictures by Janice Holland, that is filled with the spirit of Christmas. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 72:82 Ja 1 '47 50w

"Eight to 10-year-olds will get an excellent picture of village life in Spain at fiesta time." R. A. Gordon

+ N Y Times p11 D 22 '46 140w

"It is a life-like little story, full of Christmas spirit." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p9 D 22 '46 130w

CHANCE, JOHN NEWTON. Death stalks the cobbled square [Eng title: Screaming fog]. 312p $2 McBride [8s 6d Macdonald & co]

46-4291

Mystery story.

Kirkus 14:82 F 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 My 12 '46 140w

Springf'd Republican p4d Jl 28 '46 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p437 S 9 '44 40w

"There's treachery in a cellar, underground rescue and goodbye to the cobbled square, with enough fog to hide a thousand murders." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p22 My 5 '46 110w

CHANDLER, ALBERT RICHARD. Rosenberg's Nazi myth. 146p $1.75 Cornell univ. press [8s Oxford]

901 Civilization, Modern. Race. Germany—Civilization. Rosenberg, Alfred 45-9183

"The writings of the 'philosopher' of Nazism, Alfred Rosenberg, are known only at third hand in this country. Rosenberg's principal work, Der Mythus des 20. Jahrhunderts, first published in Munich in 1930, ranked only second in importance to Hitler's Mein Kampf in the Third Reich. It was made required reading in all educational institutions, and any criticism of it was made a punishable offense. Copies of this work are still rare in the United States; for this reason, among others, Professor Chandler's exposition and criticism of the main features of Rosenberg's doctrine as expounded in Der Mythus is to be welcomed. As was to be expected, there can be little doubt left after reading the present volume . . . that from beginning to end, Rosenberg's book is nothing but a tissue of vicious rubbish." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"An analysis and interpretation of the Myth would be a most desirable contribution to the understanding of contemporary political movements. Whether Professor Chandler's book will fill this gap may be doubted. The reasons for the inadequacy of a well-intentioned effort lie in the author's approach. He considers the Myth a body of doctrine, fallacious in principles and inaccurate in detail; and he intends to 'expound and criticize' the main features of the doctrine. I am afraid that this is not the proper method to deal with a work which purports to evoke and to elaborate a myth. Such exposition and criticism can only result, as it does, in informing the reader about the painfully obvious. Still, the English reader who is unacquainted with Rosenberg's Myth may derive some introductory information from the book as well as a few bibliographical references." Erich Voegelin

CHANDLER, A. R.—Continued

Am J Soc 52:161 S '46 360w

Reviewed by E. C. Helmreich

Am Pol Sci R 40:175 F '46 380w

Reviewed by M. F. Ashley-Montagu

Ann Am Acad 243:166 Ja '46 550w

"Mr. Chandler somewhat regretfully remarks in the introduction to his work that the Nazi philosopher's masterpiece has never been translated into English. The omission seems rather pardonable. . . . Now, with Professor Chandler's comprehensive discussion available of Rosenberg's principal ideas, there will be less reason than ever to waste time on a study of the original. Mr. Chandler not only has covered the ground thoroughly, but he also has brought order in the amateurish confusion of Rosenberg's hodgepodge. In the end, there remains nothing to disguise the absurdity of a system built on a nonexistent race and crowned with the caricatures of honor and freedom." E. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 17 '45 480w

Foreign Affairs 24:557 Ap '46 30w

"The egotistic Rosenberg is rather easy prey and the author has good sport with him. His treatment of Rosenberg's racial dogmas and prejudices is particularly effective. The author presents his material simply and straightforwardly, in a semi-journalistic style. . . . It is to be hoped that readers will not be tempted by the author's easy exposure of the philosophical pretensions and absurdities of Rosenberg to refuse serious consideration of the basic doctrines of the philosophy of national socialism, as developed, for example, by Ernst Kriek and Franz Bohn, and to the disturbing realities which their philosophy seeks to explain." Marten ten Hoor

J Philos 43:530 S 12 '46 300w

CHANDLER, ALFRED NOBLIT. Land title origins; a tale of force and fraud. 550p $3 Robert Schalkenbach Foundation, Inc. 50 E 69th st, N.Y. 21

333.3 Land titles—U.S. 46-902

From the earliest days of discovery and colonization the author traces the story of the obtaining and use of lands in the United States—as royal grants to court favorites, thru the days of "buying" from the Indians, to the days of grants to railroads and individuals in the nineteenth century. Bibliography. Index.

"Even a cursory examination would show that Mr. Chandler has done a thorough piece of work. Not attempting the almost impossible task of going to the multitudinous sources, he has made use of all the more important secondary authorities, and the extensive bibliography shows with what discrimination he has selected his references. There is a comprehensive and usable index, and an excellent table of contents." B. W. Bond

+ Am Hist R 52:148 O '46 700w

Booklist 43:29 O 1 '46

"Mr. Chandler, traveler and economist, has been active in public affairs for more than 50 years. In his home State of New Jersey, he is known for his activities in matters concerning land reform. His book represents 13 years of labor, 10 for research and three for writing. It ought to have a far wider reception than, by its long and documentary content, it is likely to have. It presents a dark chapter of American history on one of the most fundamental issues before us: the future disposition of the ever-growing populations in a world where there is no more unexplored land mass.

Mr. Chandler's work will be invaluable as a source book for tomorrow's reformers." R. S. + Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 23 '46 320w

"The book is well documented, but could have been improved in emphasis and coherence by condensation."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:126 Je '46 200w

CHANDLER, RAYMOND. Red wind. 253p 49c World pub.

46-4721

"Murder, mayhem, blackmail, and other less easily classified forms of unpleasantness, dealt with in five long short stories which seem to take place chiefly in West Coast hotels and night clubs." New Yorker

"Not since the advent of Dashiell Hammett have we encountered a tougher crew of men and women, and it is arguable whether Hammett ever has packed more violence into a single book than is pictured here or has done it more skillfully." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p40 My 6 '46 100w

"Very satisfactory tough stuff."

+ New Yorker 22:112 My 4 '46 80w

"Interesting fare for Chandler fans and for readers who like their killings gory, frequent, and explosive"

Sat R of Lit 29 38 Jl 27 '46 50w

CHANDLER, RAYMOND. Spanish blood; a collection of short stories 221p 49c World pub

46-6327

"Collection of five 'long-shorts' written in late 1930's. Mainly Western locale. Variety of sleuths" Sat R of Lit

"Back in the days when Raymond Chandler wrote for the pulps he was even tougher than he is now, and here are five stories to prove it. They were originally published in the magazines 'Black Mask' and 'Dime Detective.' All the characters in them are hard-boiled, detectives as well as criminals, women as well as men." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 S 8 '46 140w

New Yorker 22:103 S 7 '46 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 4 '46 20w

"Good and tough."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:32 Ag 10 '46 40w

CHANDOS, DANE. Abbie. 245p $2.75 Putnam 818 46-25226

Aunt Abbie was a character. The wealthy wife of a British M.P., Abbie saved money with the avidity of a miser. She had blue hair, along with a large collection of other oddities, and her story is told by her half-American nephew, who was often taken on Aunt Abbie's penny-pinching jaunts.

Reviewed by Alice Kogan

Book Week p4 Jl 7 '46 250w

Booklist 42:365 Jl 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '46

"Highly affectionate, amusing anecdote."

+ Kirkus 14:215 My 1 '46 170w

"One hilarious incident follows another, but author never overworks his material. . . . Recommended." E. H. Kennedy

+ Library J 71:917 Je 15 '46 100w

"Mr. Chandos's 'Abbie' is described as 'the wickedly witty portrait of an appalling and delightful female.' Myself I found it more grisly than amusing, and not (I hope) as authentic a recollection as it purports to be." Diana Trilling

Nation 163:23 Jl 6 '46 210w

"Whether she is learning to milk a cow, selling poppies on Armistice Day, or blowing her whistle for quick service, Abbie never stops being a 'character.' And perhaps that's unfortunate, for 'characters' can become a bore after a while. Especially if they have admiring nephews who can't distinguish between idiosyncrasies and recognizable human foibles. Perhaps it takes real 'living' with Auntie to find out." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p5 J1 14 '46 650w

"Two hundred and forty-five pages of Aunt Abbie's spontaneity and irrelevance are, perhaps, a bit too much, but the book is very funny when read skipkipping."

New Yorker 22:53 J1 6 '46 70w

"It is a composite of feminine foibles, done with wit and sometimes without mercy. There are moments when the humor bears a surprising resemblance to a vaudeville routine, but that doesn't make it any the less funny. Chandos reaches for a laugh, but he usually gets it." Paul Speegle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 2 '46 450w

"Abbie's letters and her nephew's commentaries make savoring reading. Her knowledge and incidental advice on anything from laxatives to governesses, all of whom she scorned indiscriminately, are refreshingly entertaining. Abbie is a truly dreadful woman, and yet for all her irritating and insular qualities—qualities epitomizing everything that Americans are inclined to regret in the British—there is no doubt that she is a charmer. . . Her story is one of humor, irritation, and delight well told. But Abbie has two faults. She stretches your credulity almost to the breaking point and there is too much of her for one long dose. In small quantities she is excellent tonic fare. In one draught the effect is inclined to be toxic. Nonetheless there is no one like her and her activities make excellent casual reading." J. G. Dietz

+ — Sat R of Lit 29 25 Ag 24 '46 700w

"Dane Chandos presents his aunt almost wholly through letters she wrote over what must have been some twenty years and from a list of places that dips into both hemispheres and a wide stretch of the globe. Disagree as you may with her prejudices, prejudices and strictures (the last leveled at Americans only slightly less than at the Hun), you cannot but find her likable, even lovable, and her story lively and amusing reading." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p10 J1 14 '46 550w

CHANDRASEKHAR, SRIPATI. India's population; fact and policy; with an introd. by Warren S. Thompson. 117p $2 Day

312 8 India—Population 46-5750

Study of India's population problem which attempts to answer the question: Is India overpopulated and is it necessary for India to have her periodic great famines? In his Introduction Dr. Thompson, director of the Scripps foundation for population research, says "It should do much to help Americans understand how India's future and perhaps the world's is being determined by her population growth today. It should also add much to our understanding of what it means in terms of human welfare to have a crowded land with a people growing in numbers almost as fast as what Malthus called 'the means of subsistence'" Bibliography. Index.

Am J Soc 52:379 Ja '47 10w

Reviewed by David Karno

Book Week p2 O 20 '46 180w

"The book would have been better if the author had been more careful to give others credit for facts he retails and if the author, who has had unfortunately little opportunity to gain sobering experience in the land of his birth and youth, had restrained his impulse to crowd the little book with a host of recommendations for alleged reforms." M. D. Lyons

Commonweal 44:604 O 4 '46 320w

Foreign Affairs 25:346 Ja '47 20w

"The facts gathered together in this short book tell a cruel story, and for that reason are useful not only to the student of colonialism but also to impress Americans with the real need to assist India in attaining her independence so that she may build a new and better life. On the other hand, the reader should not expect to find here any profound analysis of India's population problem. It is unfortunate that this book lacks a solid theoretic framework which would provide it with fruitful inferences and avoid confusion."

John Bicknell

+ — N Y Times p39 S 15 '46 750w

"This is a small book, and it does not have room to analyze thoroughly the handicaps under which India struggles. But the argument is clear and convincing, and should be considered by those who make Indian policy."

Marvin Sargent

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 15 '46 270w

CHAPEL, CHARLES EDWARD. Aircraft electricity for the mechanic. 477p il $5 Coward-McCann

629.1354 Airplanes—Electric equipment. Airplanes—Maintenance and repair 46-1864

"Written in simple language, giving fundamentals of electricity with specific problems which electrical workers in the aviation industry must meet. Book stresses the most frequent troubles encountered in operation, with solutions." (Library J) Index.

"Well illustrated with charts and diagrams and has typical examination questions with answers. Useful for C.A.A. and other promotional examinations. Practical book for home study and applicable as a text in secondary and vocational schools." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:345 Mr 1 '46 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:3 Ja '46

"A good introduction to fundamental principles and their applications. . . His book will be useful to a group even larger than its title implies." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p30 Mr 31 '46 60w

CHAPMAN, HESTER W. I will be good. 476p $2 50 Houghton [10s 6d Secker & Warburg] 46-1519

This novel, written in the fashion of sixty years ago, tells the story of how an English lady novelist, acting as a companion to a wealthy young French girl, so manipulated the lives of those around her as to bring about a tragedy.

Reviewed by Susan Randolph

Book Week p7 Mr 17 '46 310w

Booklist 42:226 Mr 15 '46

"The skill of the author of I Will Be Good lies in her control of her own material, her gradual unwinding of the stream of consequences, her ability to convince the reader of Blanche's honest self-delusion. After its slow start, the story takes hold of the reader as he comes to appreciate the author's satiric purpose, and, finally, he is roused to a real interest in the people who would have been better off if they had been spared Miss Pevenence's kind offices." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 18 '46 550w

"A double-framed, Gothic-turned romance of bizarre qualities"

Kirkus 13:530 D 1 '45 190w

"An interesting conception. Execution is fairly successful; a bit on the slow side. Doubt any great popularity." Margaret Owen

Library J 71:121 Ja 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 My 25 '46 180w

"It is part of the great cleverness of the book that one is made to conjecture for oneself—and accurately, one believes—how the characters would have behaved if left to their real life. One knows, every time a wrong turning is taken, what the right alternative would have been. Between the amusing opening chapters and the beginning of the mischief there is an hiatus where one is out of step with the author's intention; as soon as this intention is clear the book is completely entertaining." Henry Reed

CHAPMAN, H. W.—Continued

+ — New Statesman & Nation 29:409 Je 23 '45 210w

"While 'I Will Be Good' inevitably points up the unreal, often melodramatic nature of the Victorian lady novelist's world, Miss Chapman does not seem to be writing a satire of Victorianism or of the Victorian novel. Her story is written perfectly straight; the rich, ornate details are heavily laid on, but not too heavily for the type. Better writing, a more knowing re-creation of the period, and intensive rather than extensive treatment of character and setting distinguish this book from run-of-the-mill costume fiction. The result is a tour de force and fine entertainment." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p6 F 10 '46 500w

"A long, intricate narrative, Victorian in setting, viewpoint, and even style. . . Nice for those who like tears and chocolates with their literature."

New Yorker 22:96 F 16 '46 130w

Reviewed by Grace Frank

Sat R of Lit 29:55 Mr 16 '46 320w

Reviewed by V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

— Spec 174:484 My 25 '45 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p281 Je 16 '45 550w

"The atmosphere of the story, particularly in the early scenes, is handled with noteworthy skill. Hester Chapman has a sure touch with detail—colors and costume and cluttered rooms—and you will relish the verbal fireworks which illuminate the perdurable chasm between French and English thinking and standards of value." Lisle Bell

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 F 24 '46 600w

"With all the leisurely pace and elaborate backgrounds of her models Miss Chapman has produced an engaging and an exotic story." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 35:576 spring '46 230w

CHARITINA, SISTER MARY. Adventures of the Redcrosse knight. See Spenser, E.

CHARLES, JOAN, pseud. See Underwood, C.

CHARTERIS, LESLIE. Saint sees it through. 223p $2 Doubleday

46-7995

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p18 D 8 '46 50w

Kirkus 14:437 S 1 '46 50w

"Never a dull moment." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p28 D 1 '46 140w

"The plot and action are well thought out, but the Saint's apparent inability to converse in anything except painful witticisms may bother you"

+ — New Yorker 22:136 N 16 '46 100w

"Can you imagine The Saint seriously in love and uninterested in Boodle? Or his creator writing as frequently like Hemingway as like Charteris? It's all a little disconcerting, but highly readable and, as a change, welcome." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 17 '46 90w

"Beautiful singer and resourceful Saint dash through typically Templar adventures to grisly climax in which luv and justice triumph."

Sat R of Lit 29:42 N 23 '46 50w

"There's no use pretending that Simon Templar, alias the Saint, is the man he used to be when he was sliding around London in his lousling car with Patricia Holm, functioning as a modern Robin Hood and playing hide and seek with Inspector Claud Eustace Teal, of Scotland Yard, all very smooth and debonair. . . The climax is of the brutal and painful sort employed by almost any hard author, with special reference to Raymond Chandler. Yessir, something has happened to the Saint during his sojourn in our midst. Something like Hollywood, maybe." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p39 N 17 '46 300w

CHASE, ESTHER H. (ANNEKE DE LANGE, pseud). Anna Luhanna. 281p $2.50 Greenberg

The scene of this story is the Canadian border country, peopled by descendants of Swedish immigrants and half-breeds. The chief character, Anna Luhanna, is the daughter of the strange, brutal, domineering mother of a large brood of children. Anna and her twin brother Ivan are the primary objects of their mother's hate and cruelty. Anna finally escapes but not before tragedy has touched her.

"Anna's story is told with sincerity and frankness in a narrative which has a certain pace. But the scenes are outlined rather than presented in full, and the people are never adequately realized." J. T. Flanagan

Book Week p6 Mr 10 '46 290w

New Yorker 22:102 Mr 9 '46 80w

"'Anna Luhanna' is written with economy and sincerity. One hopes it will be followed by other works of fiction in which the same attributes are manifest in an environment not quite so grim." George Conrad

Weekly Book Review p24 Mr 10 '46 310w

CHASE, GILBERT, ed. Music in radio broadcasting; contributors: Samuel Chotzinoff [and others]. (NC-Columbia univ. broadcasting ser) 152p $1.75 (9s) McGraw

780.13 Radio and music 46-6785

Ten American musicians, experienced in radio work explain the various aspects of music in radio. They cover building and producing a musical program, composing, conducting, and arranging for radio, the music library, and opera in television. For students interested in radio broadcasting. Index.

Booklist 43 97 D 1 '46

Reviewed by Leonard Burkat

Library J 71:917 Je 15 '46 100w

CHASE, ILKA. I love Miss Tilli Bean. 400p $2.50 Doubleday

46-2118

When gay, lusty Giovanni Rechetti, a traveling salesman for Italian pasta and olive oil, visited the quiet village of Lanesboro, Pennsylvania, he changed the whole course of the lives of Miss Tilli Bean (eight years old) and her Quaker-bred mother. Tilli grew up in Italy, became a beauty and a celebrity in the world of fashion but finally returned to America to find her true happiness.

Reviewed by Susan Randolph

Book Week p8 F 24 '46 230w

Kirkus 14:19 Ja 15 '46 150w

"There used to be a legend about the dreamy, romantic girls who stayed at home and wrote impossible romances about the great world outside, of which they naturally knew nothing. (Sometimes, with genius, these girls succeeded, as in the case of the Brontës.) Here is the opposite: a novel by a polished, worldly wise lady, which fails to show any trace of what the ordinary adult recognizes as life. Margaret Kennedy might have made us believe it; Miss Chase doesn't." Robert Molloy

— N Y Times p10 F 24 '46 550w

"The author writes with an engaging cheerfulness that could probably pass for wit, and her behind-the-scenes pictures of a great Paris dressmaking house in those faraway days are interesting and unquestionably authentic."

New Yorker 22:87 F 23 '46 130w

"Much of the book is dull. Most of it is silly. And the publishers, having blurb'd it 'a Quaker Constant Nymph,' hope that most readers will swarm to it like crabs to gamy bait."

— Time 47:93 Mr 18 '46 400w

"Frankly, this triple spectacle of Venus triumphant is quite a lot of fun. Conceivably it may have been written tongue in cheek; but it is just enough of an exaggeration, just enough a satire, to surmount its almost total lack of humor, its load of throbs, its reckless abundance and vulgarity. Tillie Bean belongs to a monstrous regiment of man-eating women, but it is considerably entertaining to follow her conquering footsteps and most instructive, if a trifle alarming, to learn so much about the tricks of the female dressmaking and general allure trade." Iris Barry

Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 3 '46 650w

CHASE, ILKA. A lady's pleasure See Lady's pleasure

CHASE, STUART. For this we fought; guide lines to America's future as reported to the Twentieth century fund. (When the war ends) 123p $1 Twentieth century fund

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Reconstruction (1939-)—U.S. 46-25284

"Sixth and final report on postwar questions. Survey of many polls indicates veterans and civilians alike seek full employment and security at home and peace abroad. Former can be achieved by a middle-of-the-road controlled capitalism designed to make possible a high-wage, low-profit, mass-consumption economy; the latter by adoption of Lilenthal Committee's recommendations on international control of atomic energy." Library J

Reviewed by A. H. Hobbs

Ann Am Acad 248:289 N '46 400w

"This is a book for the general reader, not for the student. It is written in Chase's athletic and attractive style and is worthy of attention." P. H. Douglas

Book Week p3 D 8 '46 350w

Booklist 43:49 O 15 '46

Reviewed by E. A. Beder

— Canadian Forum 26:236 Ja '47 310w

"The volume is clearly written, and contains facts and figures the total conclusions of which can hardly be refuted. It deserves the attention of those who are already aware of the 'now or never' crisis of our civilization and intend to do something about it. In fact, it should be read by everyone who considers himself a citizen, for it contains elements to inspire more recruits for today's grand crusade to save mankind from itself." D. O. Myatt

+ Chem & Eng N 25 51 Ja 6 '47 450w

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 21 '46 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '46

Current Hist 12:59 Ja '47 70w

"Rather inadequate, but suitable for discussion groups." R. W. Henderson

Library J 71:1327 O 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by H. D. Davis

Nation 163 625 N 30 '46 450w

"Stuart Chase has written an annoying book. He will not be applauded by economists because he has dared to state his convictions and present his facts in simple, readable English. He will be condemned by the orthodox of both political extremes because he happens to think that neither Adam Smith nor Karl Marx has anything particularly significant to say about our contemporary problems. Mr. Chase has charted a lonely course; in these days of fanatic extremists he will find it difficult to convince anyone of this thesis, except, possibly, the people of the United States." Merle Miller

Sat R of Lit 29:19 O 5 '46 900w

Wis Lib Bul 42:146 N '46

CHASE, STUART. Tomorrow's trade; problems of our foreign commerce; guide lines to America's future as reported to the Twentieth century fund. 156p $1 Twentieth century fund

382 U.S.—Commercial policy 45-10372

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"This book explains international trade in such terms that all should be able to understand it." J. B. McConaughy

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:396 Ap '46 240w

"This book should be welcomed by every citizen who is looking for a simple and straightforward story of the mechanism of foreign trade and of the relationship between the domestic prosperity and the export and import trade of the United States. The author has written a layman's guide to a set of interrelated postwar problems which we must approach with clear head and unbiased understanding if we are to avoid the mistakes of the Nineteen Twenties." A. E. Taylor

+ Ann Am Acad 244:221 Mr '46 600w

"Chase's book is a quick gallop around the course of international trade but it cannot be said that Mr. Chase takes the hurdles in fine style; rather he seems to run out at the jumps. . . . Despite all his years of research and study and the innumerable pamphlets, articles and books he has produced, Mr. Chase has not yet learned that a highly developed capitalist nation, like the United States, cannot exist in a condition of balanced trade relationship with other countries." E. A. Beder

— Canadian Forum 25:291 Mr '46 280w

"It is clear, informative, succinct and good reading—in fact everything that a popularization ought to be."

+ Commonweal 43 461 F 15 '46 140w

Current Hist 10:156 F '46 90w

Foreign Affairs 24:556 Ap '46 20w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:345 Mr 1 '46 30w

Reviewed by A. D. Gayer

N Y Times p26 My 5 '46 700w

"Here is a book which will bring teachers and students quickly abreast of the problems of the hour in international trade and which will supply the raw materials for important discussions. The best high school seniors might rise to its challenge, and in colleges it might well serve as an auxiliary textbook." E. L. B. Curtis

+ Social Educ 10:184 Ap '46 850w

Reviewed by Ordway Tead

Survey G 35:131 Ap '46 500w

"The argument presented in this volume is not new, but the problem will bear re-examination and repetition because of the position the United States has come to occupy in world economy. In the limited space at his disposal, Mr. Chase has had to disregard a number of corollary problems, some of them of importance. The oversimplification and loss of exactitude contribute, however, to clarifying the central issue of foreign trade and foreign trade policies."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:32 Mr '46 200w

Wis Lib Bul 42:17 Ja '46

CHASE, THOMAS G. Story of Lithuania; with a foreword by William Henry Chamberlin. 192p maps $3.50 Stratford house, inc, 52 Vanderbilt av, N.Y. 17

947.4 Lithuania—History

46-6730

A history of this small Baltic country from earliest times (before the eleventh century) down to the present postwar period and renewed domination by Russia. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is more a compilation than a narrative and is written without much heat or bitterness. It shows no way out of the present catastrophe. But it shows that conscientious democrats, respecting themselves and loving freedom, cannot be satisfied with a world order that makes Lithuanian men and women the helpless pawns of empires." R. H. M.

Christian Science Monitor p18 S 12 '46

480w

"This little volume is the best Lithuanian history available in English, although it has some glaring weaknesses." J. S. Roucek

+ — Commonweal 44:534 S 13 '46 200w

CHAVEZ, ANGELICO. Eleven Lady-lyrics, and other poems. 96p $1.25 St Anthony guild

811

46-435

A volume of verse by a young Franciscan poet of the American Southwest.

CHAVEZ, ANGELICO—Continued

"Eleven Lady Lyrics is a tribute to the three loves of a real poet, love of God and Our Lady, of men, and of the beauty that can be wrought in language. It is difficult to recall any book of lyric poems published in recent years which contains as much present fulfillment and future promise as does this volume of Father Chavez." F. X. Connolly

+ Cath World 163:90 Ap '46 270w
Commonweal 43:657 Ap 12 '46 20w

CHEN, STEPHEN, and PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Sun Yat-sen, a portrait. (Asia press bk) 242p il $4 Day

B or 92 Sun Yat-sen 46-25215

A biography of the "father of the Chinese Republic." In the preface the authors explain that during the war certain documents indispensable to a fully documented "life" were lost but that the help of members of the family and the government of China made this "portrait" possible. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Book Week p3 J1 28 '46 500w

Booklist 42:364 J1 15 '46

Bookmark 7.13 N '46

Canadian Forum 26:186 N '46 230w

"There is somewhat more in this book about the man himself than in former books on Sun Yat-sen; and what little fresh information the authors are able to give is so well presented in Robert Payne's eloquent English prose that there are at least some glimpses of the living human being behind the legendary figure. The historical background, too, is vividly drawn, at least until the early 1920's." Guenther Stein

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 J1 11 '46 450w

Current Hist 11:327 O '46 30w

"Friendly, well-informed and quite readable"

+ Foreign Affairs 25:172 O '46 20w

Kirkus 14 214 My 1 '46 190w

Reviewed by A. R. Eaton

+ Library J 71:917 Je 15 '46 70w

"That a well-written biography of Sun Yat-sen, the great Chinese revolutionary democrat, which shows him as the Chinese millions see him, is essential reading for Americans, goes without saying. But every informed person will be justly skeptical of any book 'written with the help of Kuomintang Party members'. With some exceptions, this book is nevertheless an excellent chronology of historical events through which the tenacious, self-erasing, and tragic figure of Sun Yat-sen moved" Agnes Smedley

+ Nation 163:187 Ag 17 '46 1000w

"Robert Payne, best known for his 'Forever China,' is Professor of English in Lienta University in Kunming. Of Stephen Chen, even the publisher professes to know nothing. But the two authors see so closely eye to eye and their collaboration is so harmonious that it would take a very good style and thought detective indeed to determine who first conceived which thought or sentence. They call their biography a 'portrait,' an apt term which gives the key both to its virtues and its defects." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p7 J1 14 '46 1300w

"I should like Messrs. Chen and Payne to forget about the Japanese bomb that fell on the documents of Dr. Sun Yat Sen and look upon the present work as an exploration of their subject and a test of their qualifications, and then, if they still feel disposed, to endeavor to get hold of the personality behind the photomontage. They themselves admit that the chances of a biography are likely to diminish with the lapse of time; surely something ought to be done about it while the people who have known Sun Yat Sen are still alive. It would be regrettable if so prominent an Asiatic as he were to pass into limbo with nothing more satisfactory to his name than a legend. A speculative but definitive interpretation of his life would most certainly be better than no interpretation at all. The authors have the sincerity and ability for such an undertaking." J. G. Hitrec

Sat R of Lit 29:16 J1 27 '46 1000w

"This is neither a definitive nor a satisfyingly complete study of its subject, but it is a valuable, timely and readable contribution to the understanding of a matter vital to Americans, the revolutionary course of modern China." Richard Watts

+ Weekly Book Review p5 J1 14 '46 1650w
Wis Lib Bul 42:150 N '46

CHENAULT, RICHARD S. Advertising layout; the projection of an idea. 96p il $5 Heck-Cattell pub co, inc, 33 W 42d st, N.Y. 18

659.1323 Advertising. Art, Commercial 46-3184

"A comprehensive manual written primarily for the student of advertising layout. Widely experienced as an art director and instructor in advertising, Chenault looks upon layout as a 'truly creative art'. His simply written text is well-illustrated with original rough layouts and finished advertisements, many of them from famous advertising campaigns." Book Week

Book Week p12 Ap 21 '46 50w

"The advertising profession will welcome this modern point of view and comprehensive treatment. . . Its easy-to-read style will appeal to beginners and students and its coverage [will be] appreciated by professionals. Generous amount of illustrations for poster and billboard to magazine, newspaper and direct mail." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:345 Mr 1 '46 70w

CHEVALLEY, CLAUDE. Theory of Lie groups. 1. 221p $3 Princeton univ. press [20s Oxford]

510 Groups, Continuous (A46-2152)

"The Lie groups are named by Sophus Lie, 1842-1899, famous Norwegian mathematician, who invented the concept of continuous groups. The present work is designed to state and prove the main basic principles of Lie groups. In the present volume, the treatment is developed under the following chapter titles: The classical linear groups; Topological groups; Manifolds; Analytic groups-Lie groups; The differential calculus of Cartan; Compact Lie groups and their representations. The second volume of the work will deal with semisimple Lie groups. The work is of interest to graduate students of mathematics and to mathematicians." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 31 26 Ap '46

"It gives a thorough and rigorous treatment of abstract continuous groups (so-called Lie groups) in the large. . . The style is technical, the book is intended primarily for advanced graduate students and research workers."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2 344 D '46 140w

CHEVIGNY, HECTOR. My eyes have a cold nose. 273p $3 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Blind A46-32

In middle life the author, a writer of radio scripts living in Los Angeles, was unexpectedly stricken with blindness. This autobiographical volume relates how he met his trial and sets forth his philosophy. The final chapters tell how he acquired his Seeing Eye dog and what Wiz means to him.

"For many readers the book will explode myths and dispel prejudices. To all readers it should remove the basis for regarding any blind persons known to them as tragic figures upon whom to heap wasted gobs of pity and senseless overdoses of unscientific generosity. Banishing sentimentality both as to the human and the guide dog, Chevigny makes an honest effort to tell his public what he experienced when he went blind and how the Seeing Eye, Inc., of Morristown, N.J., served him well in perfecting the adjustment indispensable to the resumption of his creative writing." H. F. Geisler

+ Book Week p4 N 17 '46 450w

Booklist 43:100 D 1 '46

Cath World 164:286 D '46 200w

Christian Century 63:1345 N 6 '46 140w

"The material about the Seeing Eye, the doctrine of independence and the rejection of tragedy, the training of man and dog, is unfailingly fascinating. An aware, astringent account, which stomachs neither sentiment nor evasion, and should serve immeasurably for the blinded of the war, and those in contact with them."

+ Kirkus 14:408 Ag 15 '46 210w

Reviewed by R E Kingery

+ Library J 71:1461 O 15 '46 140w

"Mr Chevigny would deny that in 'My Eyes Have a Cold Nose' he has written an 'inspirational' book. But in the truest sense of that much-abused word, he has. The majority of the many readers who will go through its swift-paced pages cannot fail to gain courage and, yes, 'inspiration' from the example of this man—who refused to let his handicap become a stumbling block, but turned it, instead, into a stepping-stone." P F Bond

+ N Y Times p10 O 27 '46 1100w

"Because Chevigny is a trained writer his book is first-rate reading just as a narrative. At the same time it will awake many a reader to new ideas having to do with all handicapped people." J H Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 14 '46 900w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p18 N 24 '46 800w

CHEYNEY, PETER. Dark hero 216p $2 Dodd [8s 6d Collins]

46-7097

Spy story of World war II in which an ex-Chicago gunman turned Allied intelligence agent, uses his old tactics on the Nazis.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

— Book Week p8 O 13 '46 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p40 O 13 '46 200w

New Yorker 22 103 S 28 '46 80w

Sat R of Lit 29:35 S 28 '46 50w

"'Dark Hero' is full of action, but that doesn't prevent Rene from philosophizing quite a bit; he keeps saying that life is funny, which it probably is. He's better at shooting people and knocking out teeth. The story has body and weight, whether or not you care for the awful inhabitants." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p31 O 6 '46 150w

CHEYNEY, PETER. I'll say she does' 225p $2 Dodd [8s 6d Collins]

46-1882

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p11 Ap 28 '46 90w

Sat R of Lit 29:40 Mr 2 '46 40w

"The plot is managed with the author's usual skill, so that puzzlers can carry on, grammar or no grammar. . . In the cause of right, justice and fair play, this department swears that it took an aspirin and plowed right through the whole thing, and we weren't nearly as bored as we had expected to be. Could have been the medicine." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 Mr 24 '46 270w

CHIANG, KAI-SHEK. Collected wartime messages, 1937-1945; comp by Chinese ministry of information [ed. by George Kao]. 2v $7.50 Day 951.0425 China—History. World war, 1939-1945—China 46-7008

Collection of the speeches made during the eight years that China was at war. Contains a chronology, a glossary of terms, and indexes.

Booklist 43:115 D 15 '46

Foreign Affairs 25:348 Ja '47 20w

"Throughout, these two volumes show Chiang Kai-shek's efforts to strengthen the spirit of his people in their unequal fight. Though they represent selection both of the speeches to be translated for the English-reading public and of passages to be translated, they form an important historical record of their period. They are likely to be read, however, more by future students of China's history than by contemporary readers."

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 20 '46 200w

Reviewed by Owen Lattimore

Weekly Book Review p5 O 20 '46 1350w

CHICAGO DAILY NEWS. My greatest day in baseball. See Carmichael, J. P.

CHICAGO HISTORICAL SOCIETY. Great Chicago fire See Angle, P. M., ed.

CHICAGO. UNIVERSITY. Graduate library school. Library institute. Personnel administration in libraries; ed and with an introd. by Lowell Martin (Chicago. Univ. Studies in lib. science) 168p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

023 04 Library administration. Employment management A46-4879

Papers presented before the Library institute at the University of Chicago, August 27 to September 1, 1945. They discuss such problems as the selection and classification of library employees, staff morale, staff organization, civil service, and necessary training for library personnel in different types of libraries. Index.

Booklist 43:29 O 1 '46

"As a whole, the book presents much of the knowledge required for sound modern personnel administration. It is an important contribution to the library literature." R. R. Shaw

+ Library J 71 1458 O 15 '46 950w

School & Society 64:175 S 7 '46 40w

CHIDESTER, ANN. The long year. 360p $2.75 Scribner

46-3407

A small Minnesota town during the depression year of 1933 is the scene. A wealthy, thrice married, world traveled woman returns to her early home to take over the management of the family factory. The ensuing difficulties are due to her ruthless misunderstanding of other people's point of view.

"Once in a while Miss Chidester lets her earthy style get out of hand but for the most part she writes with enthusiasm, authority and a simplicity that is only occasionally self-conscious." A. J. Hiken

+ Book Week p3 Mr 24 '46 230w

"Miss Chidester writes about a commonplace American town notably well. . . Particularly, the author excels in reproducing the ambitions and confusions of young people, their thoughts and their speech. She succeeds, because she likes young people and is honest about them. She is zestful, humorous at times, and she is fundamentally hopeful. The Kay Hasswells do not reign forever." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 9 '46 450w

Kirkus 14:45 F 1 '46 180w

"Ann Chidester has a pulsing, fierce and fine understanding of the particular depression problems of youngsters of high-school age—and a flair for reproducing their talk—tender or tough—and for showing their vague aspirations and uncertainties. She has a tender and restrained hand in dealing with their young loves. With less emphasis, but still effectively, she pictures the older people and the disintegrating effect on them of the factory's closing. . . The book makes vivid, fresh reading, with a far surer touch than Miss Chidester's first novel." Barbara Bond

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 24 '46 290w

"The plot is not important; it is the author's compassionate understanding of her characters and her ability to make their dilemmas real and urgent that give her work distinction. An unusually mature novel by one of our most gifted young writers."

CHIDESTER, ANN—Continued

+ New Yorker 22:94 Mr 23 '46 80w

"A warm, clear-sighted, and sensitive novel." Nancy Groberg

+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 Mr 30 '46 900w

"The Long Year" presents a significant segment of pre-war American life. As she has already demonstrated in earlier novels, Ann Chidester is no mere reporter. She lets her imagination play over her material, illuminating and interpreting it. Telling here the event-packed tale of what happened in one small town in the course of a year, she has filled her story with drama, tragedy and, above all, the aspirations, dreams and faiths of youth everywhere. If she has not plowed new ground she has plowed deeply and with a human touch." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 24 '46 750w

CHIDSEY, DONALD BARR. Panama passage. 558p $3 Doubleday

46-1870

Adventure story with the building of the Panama canal as backdrop. Altho Colonel Gorgas and other historical characters appear, a young sanitation engineer, his wife, and the woman he really loves are the chief actors.

"An historical novel with an unusual setting—and a good story as well."

+ Kirkus 13:546 D 15 '45 270w

Reviewed by William Kehoe

N Y Times p26 F 24 '46 340w

"The author of 'Panama Passage' evidently has done considerable research, and he marshals an impressive array of facts. But it requires a skillful hand to combine history and fiction without weakening either, and in presenting the bulk of his background material imperfectly disguised as dialogue he bogs down his story and at the same time spreads his factual barrage too thinly. . . In the process of tricking out his product Mr. Chidsey has hidden the garments so to speak, under the embroidery. There is too much of almost everything—of period detail, of local color, of extraneous conversation, of incidental characters and episodes—of everything, in short, except clear-cut story line, of which there is a deficiency. Mr. Chidsey persistently tells all, leaving nothing for the reader's imagination to contribute." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p26 Mr 10 '46 550w

CHILD, PHILIP. Day of wrath. 274p $3.75 Humphries [15s Faber]

"Nazi Germany at the height of Hitler's power when the Germans were winning the war. Simon and Anna, simple, honest, and in love, represent thousands of Jews who never had a chance against the Gestapo persecutions. A grim novel with a limited appeal." Booklist

Booklist 42:226 Mr 15 '46

"The story is simply told and is grim from beginning to end. . . This sombre book is a serious and careful piece of work which holds the attention if it does not reach the heights or depths of a great human story. It suffers, perhaps, from competition with the spoken word, the reports in the daily press, but it may survive when more brilliant and dramatic tales of the war have been lost."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p113 Mr 9 '46 360w

CHISHOLM, ROBERT F. Your own store and how to run it; il. by Bernard Owen. 89p pa $1 Crowell

658.87 Retail trade

46-2450

"The book tells how, with limited capital, any man can realize his dream of owning his own retail business, being his own boss. The author discusses the various types of retailing which offer the best opportunity, bookkeeping, percentages of profit, window and floor displays, how to borrow money, how to attract customers, etc. in a definite and common-sense manner which offers real information. Included also is an appendix on available benefits for veterans, with a list of U.S. Civil Service offices, Social Security Boards, and U.S. Employment Service offices." Book Week

"Returning servicemen and 'displaced' war workers should welcome this practical guide on merchandising."

+ Book Week p8 F 10 '46 100w

"This book has a lot of commonsense suggestions to make and techniques to teach, and there is no doubt that anyone going into the retail business would be well advised to study its contents. It won't solve all the difficulties but it can help." E. A. B.

+ Canadian Forum 25:294 Mr '46 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '46

Kirkus 13:330 Ag 1 '45 110w

Spring'd Republican p4 Ja 12 '46 360w

CHORLEY, EDWARD CLOWES. Men and movements in the American Episcopal church. 501p $4 Scribner

283.73 Protestant Episcopal church in the U.S.A. 46-3383

"Dr. Chorley has provided a fully documented and absorbing account of the personalities who have been leaders of various movements within the Protestant Episcopal Church from the beginning of the nineteenth century until about 1875. . . Dr. Chorley has limited himself to discussing the personalities and movements within the Protestant Episcopal Church, and therefore there is nothing about the relation of this church to other denominations except where it has been controversial. . . There are an extensive bibliography (33 pages) and a full index." Christian Century

Reviewed by N. W. Rightmyer

Am Hist R 52:192 O '46 260w

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Book Week p12 My 12 '46 250w

"The gap between 1875 and today is not filled, and it leaves the reader yearning for this link in the story. Another 100 pages would have been justified." R. C. Miller

+ Christian Century 63:561 My 1 '46 1300w

"This volume will no doubt fill an important place in the sections of libraries dealing with American church history. It is not likely, however, to find its way to the library shelves of many laymen even those of the Episcopalian communion."

+ Kirkus 14:101 F 15 '46 190w

"A highly readable source history of the church." G. R. Stephenson

+ N Y Times p33 Jl 14 '46 300w

"The book is accurate, well planned, and well written; the last chapter, dealing with the present situation and the probable future is, of course, speculative."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:284 D '46 220w

CHRIST-JANER, ALBERT WILLIAM. Boardman Robinson; with chapters by Arnold Blanch and Adolf Dehn. 132p 126pl $15 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Robinson, Boardman A46-5906

The artist-subject of this biography, a native of Nova Scotia, was not an American citizen until he was grown. The book is illustrated with more than a hundred reproductions of his work. No index.

Book Week p3 N 3 '46 230w

Booklist 43:101 D 1 '46

"Mr. Christ-Janer's narrative is at once dignified and sympathetic and he has blended successfully the scholarly and the anecdotal methods in setting before the reader a lively character of a lay figure. Robinson's acquaintance has been as wide as his sympathies, and the author has taken full advantage of the criss-crossing of events and personalities to build up an illuminating picture of the art world in America during the last forty years as a background for his colorful subject." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p9 D 29 '46 650w

"With the best intentions in the world, the authors nearly smother their subject with praise. But if the text is almost embarrassingly adulatory, the pictures preserve a proper balance. Robinson is a fine draftsman and a conscientious observer, and the more than a hundred illustrations (a dozen of them in color) provide an admirable survey of his accomplishment."

New Yorker 22:118 O 26 '46 80w

"Physically the book is worthy of the subject, beautifully designed and printed, with superb illustrations in color and in black and white, a catalogue of the artist's work, and tributes by two of his old pupils, Arnold Blanch and Adolf Dehn. I have only one complaint to register: there are no reproductions of Robinson's drawings for 'The Morning Telegraph' or the old 'Masses.'" Thomas Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p4 D 1 '46 1450w

CHRISTENSEN, ASHER NORMAN, and KIRKPATRICK, EVRON MAURICE, eds. Running the country. 1001p $4.75 Holt

342.73 U.S.—Politics and government
46-7280

"A new edition of the book formerly called 'The People, Politics, and the Politician.' It is 'an anthology of American politics in action,' compiled from the work of many writers on all phases of the multitudinous subject." (Weekly Book Review) Biographical notes. No index.

"Contributions to this mighty 1,000-page volume are astutely selected and organized into chapter headings on all possible phases of the operation of government. . . The central theme, which firmly threads its way through various contributions and gives it purpose, is criticism of our democracy in action. The authors chorus the refrain that there is room for much improvement and are critical of the gushing view that ours is the best of all possible worlds." David Karno

+ Book Week p6 N 3 '46 550w

"This does not claim to be a source book, yet it contains an infinite number of arresting contributions by leading authorities which, brought together in one place, are of source value. If carefully studied, it would be, of itself, almost the equivalent of a thorough course in political history and political action in America."

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 23 '46 180w

"An excellent anthology of American politics."

+ Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '46

Current Hist 11:402 N '46 60w

Foreign Affairs 25:341 Ja '47 20w

"It is, frankly, a cumbersome tool to handle. To the specialist it will be elementary, while the average citizen it could well confound by its vast scope and wealth of details. Although it is not a dry-as-dust treatise of politics—one of its sections is written in the vernacular—neither is it a book that can be tossed off in a night's reading. It was designed for study, and study is what it needs." R. D. Dinsmore

+ N Y Times p28 D 8 '46 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p36 D 1 '46 170w

Weekly Book Review p20 S 22 '46 50w

Wis Lib Bul 42:162 D '46

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). Come, tell me how you live. 225p $3 Dodd

915.69 Syria—Social life and customs. Excavations (archeology) 46-11957

Memories of the author's experiences on various expeditions to Syria, where she went with her archeologist husband, in the years just before the war. Christie fans will discover here some clues to the origin of matters in the author's mystery stories.

Booklist 43:85 N 15 '46

"[This] is the lightest and gayest account imaginable, and yet at the same time it presents the life and the people with the greatest clarity. We chuckle incessantly at the diverting characters. Who can possibly forget the postman whose superlative courtesy led him to press other people's letters on the Mallows! But each is richly and unmistakably alive; and, when we close the book, we have laughed our way to an understanding of the East that is quite beyond what is to be gained from the ordinary travel book. . . Mrs. Mallowan accepted the discomforts with a rueful but tolerant grimace, laughed at herself and everyone else, and enjoyed herself hugely. So do we, of course—and we learn much, too, about the job of an archaeologist." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 29 '46 450w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 22 '46 240w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 22 '46 130w

+ Time 48:113 O 28 '46 280w

"The book is reminiscent of the 'letters from dear Uncle William' type of literature—excellent for reading aloud by those, and to those, who know Uncle William, but a shade tedious to persons outside the family circle."

Times [London] Lit Sup p644 D 28 '46 230w

"A witty, chuckling book. . . Mrs. Mallowan (the name seems like an alias for Agatha Christie) has a knack of sharp and vivid etching. Only a person with irrepressible bounce could have stood it all and turned up with such an entertaining book." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p34 N 17 '46 600w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). The Hollow. 279p $2.50 Dodd

46-7098

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p8 O 13 '46 110w

Booklist 43 71 N 1 '46

"Hercule Poirot returns in fine form in Agatha Christie's The Hollow."

+ New Repub 115:566 O 28 '46 50w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 32:468 D 21 '46 260w

"This is Agatha Christie at her best." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p28 S 29 '46 170w

"Admirers of Mrs. Christie's mysteries ought to like this one because it is more fairly plotted than most."

+ New Yorker 22 127 O 5 '46 100w

"A Grade-A plot combined with a much solidier novel than usual makes this the best Christie in years." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 6 '46 70w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:37 O 5 '46 40w

"There's no possible doubt whatever that 'The Hollow' is a splendid mystery bet for fans of almost any grade, including those of loftiest brow." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p28 S 29 '46 230w

CHUDSON, WALTER ALEXANDER. Pattern of corporate financial structure; a cross-section view of manufacturing, mining, trade, and construction, 1937. (Financial research program Studies in business financing) 148p $2 Nat. bur. of economic research

658.14 Corporations—Finance 45-7055

"The study is almost entirely of 1937 data, although occasional reference is made to other years, chiefly 1931. The figures are for 'industrial' corporations as reported to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, which the Bureau uses in its Statistics of Income, but are from detailed unpublished tabulations. . . These 'industrials' include manufacturing, mining, trade, and construction, and exclude the service, utility and finance industries. By 'pattern of corporate financial structure,' Chudson means the ratios of the various major asset and liability items to total assets and to sales. Some other ratios, such as the current ratio, the interrelation of certain working capital items, and the ratio of invested capital to capital assets, are also included." Am Econ R

CHUDSON, W. A.—Continued

Reviewed by H. G. Guthmann
Am Econ R 36:173 Mr '46 850w

"Throughout the work Chudson is careful to assert his findings in terms of a static analysis. What might be true for the 1937 array of ratios might be quite different from what existed the year before or from what may be exhibited in the succeeding year. Furthermore, he realizes that there are certain defects in his material, such as unconsolidated balance sheets and the changing value of the dollar. The frank recognition of these limitations enhances the scientific status of the study, and all credit men as well as devotees of 'rule-of-thumb' methods of judgment in corporate financial matters, of whom there are far too many, would profit by a careful and searching analysis of the contents of this book." F. W. Mueller
+ J. Pol Econ 54:373 Ag '46 900w

CHURCH, RICHARD. A squirrel called Rufus; ill. by John Skeaping. 196p $2 Winston [7s 6d Dent]

Squirrels—Legends and stories 46-17064

A tale of a fierce war waged between the native red squirrels of England and the invading hordes of grey squirrels. The hero is a young squirrel called Rufus who, after many adventures, meets and kills Grey Glean, and thereby becomes the acknowledged leader of the red squirrels.

"The characters are well drawn, the story has real suspense and the spirit of the English forest breathes over all." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 22:269 Jl '46 90w

"Here's a book for the whole family—in the same sense as is Wind in the Willows." + Kirkus 14:253 Je 1 '46 150w

"It is hard to give the flavor of this book about the courageous war of the out-numbered red squirrels of the English forests against the hated grey squirrels who for years have been overflowing into their domain. Allegory and adventure are mixed with shrewd observations on conduct, character and ideals. Writing is good and make-up excellent. . . Recommended for ages 10-12." Gertrude Andrus
+ Library J 71:982 Jl '46 70w

"There are dignity and fineness in the writing, which suggest Bambi." The likeness to a war just past is a little too obvious at times, and often, probably, meanings are read into it that are not intended. Nature lovers will find beauty in it, and children loving action will be absorbed in the struggle." P. F.
+ N Y Times p28 Jl 14 '46 180w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 10 '46 100w

"It is a book for boys and girls who are old enough to understand war and its implications. The background is excellent and there is good characterization. The illustrations would be more effective if the flat red color had been omitted."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:62 N 9 '46 100w

"A story hard to classify because it is good in more than one field. Taken as the story of young Rufus, his friend Red Warden and the army gathered around them against Grey Glean and his invaders, it is fantasy in that the animals are not animals only. The squirrels, Murry the Mouse, who is neutral . . . Russet the Fox, whose side is his own side; all the creatures, indeed, talk like us and rather better than most of us. But in matters of pure nature the book is sound; the animals are in their general conduct true to life, and the forest is absolutely convincing." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Je 2 '46 320w

CHURCHILL, FRANK EDWIN. Children's music box: lyrics by Paul Francis Webster; music by Frank E. Churchill; ill. by Wolo. 40p $2.50 Morrow

784 Children's songs 46-14784

Twenty new songs for children, with music. The writer of the lyrics is also the author of the popular songs from two Disney pictures: Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf, and Heigh-ho, Heigh-ho. Illustrated in color.

"The songs are far more melodious than most and have the sort of lilt that keeps you humming long after you've heard them. Paul Webster's lyrics have a wit and informality that make them fun to sing." F. A. Whitney
+ Book Week p12 Ja 13 '46 140w

"The man who composed the music for many of the Disney pictures has written more liting tunes for fast, sometimes sugary verses, and gay pictures in a charming gut music book with that Hollywood touch."
+ Kirkus 13:470 O 15 '45 150w

"Simple tunes, lively and pleasing. . . Brief lyrics by Paul Webster are light, amusing and definitely modern. Typical droll illustrations in Wolo's gay manner. Inconsequential for public library music collections." E. M. Gordon
Library J 71 122 Ja 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 7 '46 270w

CHURCHILL, WINSTON LEONARD SPENCER. Secret session speeches: comp and with intro notes by Charles Eade. 114p $2 Simon & Schuster [6s Cassell]

940 5312 World war, 1939-1945—Great Britain 46-6015

The typescript notes of one and the text of four speeches made by Winston Churchill in the early years of the war at secret sessions of the House of Commons.

"A valuable contribution to history, the speeches make exciting reading—even for a people like ourselves who do not want to hear about the war any more." D. L. Cohn
+ Atlantic 178 172 N '46 180w

Booklist 43 67 N 1 '46

Current Hist 11 400 N '46 40w

Kirkus 14:219 My 1 '46 160w

Reviewed by Albert Guetard
Nation 163.623 N 30 '46 550w

Reviewed by Raymond Daniell
N Y Times p26 Ag 25 '46 330w

"They are full of fine Churchillian shots of humor and invective and are indispensable for a full understanding of England's part in the war"

+ New Yorker 22:100 S 7 '46 120w

"That Winston Churchill could reveal his secret and innermost thoughts, aspirations and plans to his Parliament during England's most difficult hour is a tribute to the greatness of the man . . . It is refreshing to read these speeches and vicariously feel the courage and faith in the right that is so much a part of him." E. A. Holthausen

+ Spring'd Republican p6 S 6 '46 360w
Times [London] Lit Sup p459 S 28 '46 1100w

"There is not much that is new in these speeches, nor are they characterized by the eloquence and rhetoric we commonly associate with Mr. Churchill's public addresses. Yet, it is well to have them and to ponder them. They serve to remind us of what many of us are already forgetting—the immeasurable debt we owe to Britain and to that indomitable leader who brought them, in the phrase he himself quoted, 'thro' the jaws of Death, back from the mouth of Hell, while all the world wonder'd.'" H. S. Commager

Weekly Book Review p5 S 1 '46 1200w

Reviewed by Charles Poore
Yale R n s 36:360 winter '47 650w

CHURCHILL, WINSTON LEONARD SPENCER. Victory; war speeches; comp. by Charles Eade. 307p $3 50 Little [12s 6d Cassell]

940 5342 World war, 1939-1945—Great Britain 46-5285

This sixth volume of Mr Churchill's speeches covers his public utterances from January, 1945, thru the review of the war delivered on August 16, 1945, the day after Japan's surrender. The editor introduces many of the speeches with chronologies of events leading up to them.

Book Week p5 Ag 18 '46 50w

Booklist 43.67 N 1 '46

Current Hist 11:328 O '46 50w

Kirkus 14 270 Je 1 '46 180w

Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 5 '46 80w

"It is not encouraging for the future to have presented to us out of context the portrait of a world statesman turned local politician. That, unfortunately, is the effect created by 'Victory,' a collection of speeches, statements, messages to friends and supporters in the hour of triumph for the cause he led so nobly when it was all but lost. It is somewhat disheartening to be reminded by the record that the Prime Minister, who exhorted his people to face their trial so that in a thousand years history would say 'this was their finest hour,' had to apologize to them in the end for his compromises with principle and had to exhort them to re-elect him and his party lest the freedom they had fought to defend vanish from their island home." Raymond Daniel

N Y Times p3 Ag 25 '46 1200w

"It includes his major speeches of 1945—the long 'Review of the War' is one, and the fine address to Commons after President Roosevelt's death is another—which added to Mr. Churchill's stature as a man and statesman; also included are electioneering talks and a speech delivered in Athens which did not add to his stature a bit"

+ New Yorker 22 100 S 7 '46 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 18 '46 160w

"The speeches in this collection were made as the certainty of early Axis defeat grew stronger. They are nevertheless orations that have few peers in any age. They merely lack some of the dramatic intensity of the 1940 and 1941 addresses, but they are masterpieces of deft expression and brilliant narrative." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 29:8 S 21 '46 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p352 Jl 27 '46 750w

"Mr. Charles Eade has done the same competent job of arrangement, interspersing the speeches and messages with a chronology, that he did in the other volumes, making the whole set one of the great historical documents of our time. . . With all his greatness, Winston Churchill is a little weak on the esthetic side. The event proved that his latest campaign was bad politics, but it was more than that—it was an anti-climax and an anti-climax is always bad art. When the coalition broke up and a general election became inevitable, Churchill should have become a duke and retired to the House of Lords. Then the collection of his addresses would not have been marred by a series of weak campaign speeches." G. W. Johnson

Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 11 '46 1200w

CHUTE, GEORGE M. Electronics in industry. 461p il $5 McGraw

621.38 Electronics. Electric switchgear 46-4777

"Describes and explains a wide variety of electronic equipment used in industry, for the man with little technical training. Explains vacuum tubes, complete tubes working in proven circuits, and, revealing the 'magic' of electronics, shows how each part of the circuit acts during the split second. Circuits are traced in terms of electron flow instead of the conventional current flow, and new standardized symbols are followed. With dozens of examples of increasing complexity the book shows how tubes and tube-operated circuits work in many kinds of industry and shows circuit fundamentals in action." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 43:8 S '46

Library J 71:182 F 1 '46 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 31.24 Ap '46

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p38 O 27 '46 70w

CHUTE, MARCHETTE GAYLORD. Geoffrey Chaucer of England; decorated by [the author]. 346p $3 75 Dutton

B or 92 Chaucer, Geoffrey 46-1426

Biography of Chaucer, incorporating all the known facts of his life. It also probes into the reasons why he wrote in English, altho he was attached to the court, and French was the language of the court. Includes critical analysis of his writings. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Bergen Evans

Book Week p10 Mr 24 '46 650w

Booklist 42 225 Mr 15 '46

Bookmark 7 13 My '46

"To Chaucer and his England, Miss Chute's book is a most readable introduction. Miss Chute writes with authority and interest of the social and political history of the time, but she never loses sight of the man in his background. . . Miss Chute has done a good job. She is so in love with Chaucer's responsiveness to the various joys of life that she tells us far too many times that Chaucer loved life and was interested in men and women. And she sometimes says something pretty obvious with the same air she says something pretty good. But she knows her man and his period, and she writes of both simply and directly. Here, certainly, is a most readable introduction to one of the world's great storytellers." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 23 '46 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

"The book is sheer joy to read."

+ Kirkus 14.86 F 15 '46 240w

"Miss Chute has analyzed Chaucer's writings with understanding. Small libraries will find this book valuable for both scholar and general reader. Obviously, it belongs in large collections. Drawings by the author lend the 'affable imbecility' of 14th century decoration and charm to the book." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 71:343 Mr 1 '46 140w

"This book is neither a typical popular biography nor an addition to Chaucerian scholarship. Miss Chute has written instead an informal, witty survey of Chaucer for literate adults who do not happen to be Chaucerians. She is at her best in the chapters where she is not discussing the literature. The facts about Chaucer are pleasantly presented against a series of well painted fourteenth-century backdrops. No sober medievalist, she does not walk in Chaucer's England as on hallowed ground." W. W. Watt

+ New Repub 114:810 Je 3 '46 480w

"Marchette Chute has written a highly readable book about Chaucer. Though by no means without learning, it is not addressed to the learned; nor is it more than incidentally concerned with giving pleasure or instruction to those who already share the author's opinion that 'there are few writers so well worth knowing' as Chaucer. It is a book for the uninitiated and so declares itself in the Foreword." R. D. French

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 28 '46 500w

"This book, which is popular writing at its best, is a fine introduction to the man and his time. The analyses of his major works, particularly of 'The Canterbury Tales,' are a pleasure in themselves."

+ New Yorker 22:98 Mr 23 '46 120w

"The first chapters are particularly good reading, really first-rate biography of the new kind, made possible by a full half-century of research in the archives, and fully digested so as to be genuinely interesting even to the general reader. Miss Chute is perhaps more conservative than I like in rejecting the suggestion of Margaret Galway that Joan of Kent was Chaucer's chief patron in the art of court poetry, the Alceste of his dream. She is also too sceptical, I think, of some of Manly's identifications. . . . But the book is valuable not so much for its literary judgments, or its summation of the poems—though these are in the main adequate, they have been better done—but as a most pleasant and thoroughly readable 'companion' to Chaucer's own text." H. N. MacCracken

CHUTE, M. G.—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 Ap 13 '46 700w

"As satisfying a biography as this reviewer has had the pleasure of reading. From rather meager facts known of the poet, Miss Chute has, with the aid of an excellent picture of 14th century England, been able to make the reader see Chaucer going about his daily affairs at court or on the wool wharf." C. K. Basman

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 14 '46 600w

"For those who know their Chaucer this book will recall many a passage of witty observation or sly humor or profound insight into the depths and vagaries of our human nature. For those who do not know him—and to such readers the book appears to be directed—Miss Chute will serve as an initiator and guide. This is well worth while, for as she says, 'there are few writers who are so well worth knowing.'" S. C. Chew

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 21 '46 700w

Wis Lib Bul 42:59 Ap '46

"Lively, pleasant account of Chaucer, the London and England he knew, his public career, his associates, and his literary achievement. . . . The poetry of Chaucer is the ultimate reason for this book, and over half its pages are devoted to his reading and writing. Miss Chute's unpretentious passages of paraphrase, interpretation, and criticism, interspersed throughout the biographical narrative are usually stimulating, even when readers may differ in opinion. . . . Despite difficulties with certain obstacles, the writer has run her course well, for one who works only with secondary materials, the book is a remarkable achievement. Most important of all, its readers will be eager to read Chaucer." R. A. Pratt

+ Yale R n s 35:763 summer '46 800w

CHUTE, MARCHETTE GAYLORD. Rhymes about the city; il. by [the author]. 57p $1.25 Macmillan

46-5741

Brief rhymes about things familiar to most city children, altho the city in this book is New York. Illustrated with silhouettes. For the very young.

"It is a volume to set beside Stevenson and Milne and it's a good thing it is well bound because it is certainly going to become well worn." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p7 Ag 4 '46 120w

Booklist 43:38 O 1 '46

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p8 Ja 14 '47 150w

"The rhymes are lively and childlike and will please children in other cities than New York which makes the background of the verses."

+ Horn Bk 22:348 S '46 60w

Kirkus 14:345 Ag 1 '46 40w

"A charming collection of verse for very small children, illustrated by the author in perky and amusing silhouettes." G. M. Williams

+ Library J 71:1208 S 15 '46 70w

"Miss Chute has caught children's matter-of-fact way of thinking and speaking so exactly that they will be pleased that she has put their ideas into a book for them. Silhouettes picture the thought or action of each poem. These are done in the same simple, uncluttered manner as the rhymes and will be quickly appreciated by boys and girls of 5 to 9." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 18 '46 140w

Sat R of Lit 29:64 N 9 '46 30w

"These pointed poemlets about New York as it impresses a little child are worth keeping; many have tried to get this complete naturalness but few have been chosen to attain it. . . . You will enjoy this book if you find little children interesting and little children will not need to have a single syllable explained to them. The pictures are lively silhouettes with an unusually decorative effect." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p10 D 8 '46 320w

Wis Lib Bul 42:153 N '46

CHUTE, VERNE. Flight of an angel. 246p $2 Morrow

46-1253

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p17 F 24 '46 140w

Kirkus 13:549 D 15 '46 90w

"Exciting but unreal." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '46 130w

"Tough, fast, and also fairly silly."

New Yorker 22:108 Mr 9 '46 80w

"Quite a dish."

Sat R of Lit 29:40 Mr 2 '46 40w

"This depicts the seamier side of California life and may have a bearing on modern youth problems. But, Mr. Chute, such language!" Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p24 Mr 17 '46 120w

CIANO, GALEAZZO, conte. Ciano diaries, 1939-1943 [his] complete, unabridged diaries; ed. by Hugh Gibson; introd. by Sumner Welles. 584p $4 Doubleday

940.5345 World war, 1939-1945—Italy. Italy—Foreign relations 46-328

"The author, being Mussolini's son-in-law and Foreign Minister, saw most of the main bouts in Italy's diplomatic career from 1939 to 1943, and he faithfully recorded his impressions in his diary, herewith presented 'complete, unabridged,' and 584 pages long." (New Yorker) Maps on end papers, a chronology of events as they appear in the diaries, and an alphabetical list of persons mentioned in the diaries.

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Ja 13 '46 900w

Booklist 42:183 F 1 '46

Bookmark 7:10 My '46

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 162:565 Mr '46 1100w

"Perhaps the most valuable contribution of the book is the evidence it gives that the Italian people never wanted war, were strongly and irrevocably anti-German and had grown heartily weary of Fascism. In making this clear, Ciano has perhaps done for Italy what he was never able to do as Foreign Minister." J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 18 '46 600w

"The reader will ask 'Are we then to suspect that this diary is a forgery?' Certainly the entire work could not be a forgery, for there are too many details on which a fabricator would be sure to trip up. However, but for the assurance given us in the introduction by Mr. Sumner Welles, who presumably has had the opportunity to examine the photographs of the original, that 'there is no question of its authenticity,' it seems to me one would have good grounds to suspect that this version of the diary, although undoubtedly based on the original, rather than the 'complete and un-abridged' version as advertised on the jacket, is an incomplete and 'doctored' one." J. M. Byrne

Commonweal 43:527 Mr 8 '46 2650w
Current Hist 10:255 Mr '46 100w
Foreign Affairs 24:751 J1 '46 260w

"A book that informed readers will find absorbingly interesting, but that the general public will find difficult to read without fuller annotations."

Kirkus 13:485 N 1 '45 170w

Reviewed by Paolo Milano
New Repub 114:162 F 4 '46 1150w

"The 'Ciano Diaries' are many things, including 'one of the most valuable historical documents of our times,' as Sumner Welles calls them in a brilliant introduction. But they are also an indictment of Benito Mussolini as damning as anything that history is going to record. . . The self-righteousness of Ciano is a little hard to take. Knowing as we do the nefarious roles he played in the intervention in Spain, the seizure of Albania, the outrageous and catastrophic invasion of Greece and the creation of a puppet Croatian kingdom with the help of the regicide Pavelitch, it is quite impossible to accept the diarist at his own evaluation. This is a document with a special purpose or series of purposes, we must remember. And one of them is to present Il Duce as a stupid and contemptible creature—which he certainly was, among other things." H. L. Matthews

N Y Times p1 Ja 13 '46 1900w

"The Count was such an unimaginative reporter that his journal will probably not fascinate the casual reader, however valuable it may be to historians, but those with patience will find rewards—a dossier of the painful insults Mussolini took from his Nazi collaborators, many instances of the vast contempt in which Il Duce held his people, and flashes of pleasurable dramatic irony (since you know how things are going to turn out, you can't help enjoying the pictures of the confused Mussolini piling one stubborn blunder on top of another)."

New Yorker 21:79 Ja 19 '46 160w

"The document reaches us now in a translation which appears to have been the work of Mr. Al Capone's secretaries, abounding in expressions like 'pass the buck' and 'big shot' and 'kick in the pants,' but perhaps, when all is said, this is the nearest equivalent to be found in our language for the idiom of the Palazzo Chigi and the Palazzo Venezia, those dream-palaces in which the Roman gangsters strutted their brief hour. The story is wondrous and terrible, with a Sophoclean foreboding to warn us, from the very start, that it will end in disaster. The most remarkable thing of all is that this tragedy is not marred by the triviality of its protagonist. Ciano was born, lived, and died a pipsqueak, and if he had not kept this diary he would have remained a pipsqueak in the historic drama to the end of time. But somehow the magnitude of the events that are here recorded, their shape in destiny, their echo down the caverns of the future, confer a part of their own significance upon the wretched little man who wrote them down." Vincent Sheean

— + Sat R of Lit 29:5 Ja 12 '46 3600w

"In a fitting foreword, Mr. Sumner Welles describes these diaries as 'one of the most valuable historical documents of our times.' He might have added that they are also one of the most incisive, indiscreet, and revealing commentaries ever left by the foreign minister of a great power. When the archives are opened biographers may be able to clarify Ciano's character and motives, but that day is still in the future. Present critics must hazard their own guesses why he compiled this indictment of the Duce and the Nazi leaders, an indictment so savage in some passages that it might have been prepared for the Nürnberg trials. Skeptics, aware how completely Mussolini dominated his ministers, may doubt that Ciano would have dared to keep such a record, but its authenticity is attested in advance." Geoffrey Bruun

Weekly Book Review p1 Ja 13 '46 2000w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Yale R n s 35:542 spring '46 900w

CLAPPER, OLIVE (EWING) (MRS RAYMOND CLAPPER). Washington tapestry. (Whittlesey house publication) 303p $2.75 McGraw

975 3 Washington, D.C.—Social life and customs. U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 46-453

The widow of Raymond Clapper, newspaperman and radio commentator who was killed in a plane crash in the Marshall Islands, has based her book on personal recollections and notes kept by her husband. It is a description of events in Washington, covering a period of some twenty-five years, during the presidencies of Wilson, Hoover, Coolidge, and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"'Washington Tapestry,' a delightfully told story of the political scene of the last two decades, provides not only a wealth of information but many a chuckle at the expense of the 'greats' and 'near greats,' as well." M. P. Akers
+ Book Week p2 F 3 '46 300w

Booklist 42:210 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7.10 My '46

"The book is best when Mrs. Clapper lets herself go, and describes social or journalistic incidents. It is least interesting when she analyzes public affairs and repeats familiar events." E. D. C.

Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 5 '46 180w

Foreign Affairs 24 750 J1 '46 20w

"Olive Clapper's advantageous position as wife of an important newspaperman afforded her the opportunity to observe closely events and to meet socially many important politicians and diplomats. Human interest enlivens the book and increases its appeal. Recommended for high school and adult readers." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 71:120 Ja 15 '46 140w

"Mrs. Clapper races through the important episodes of the Thirties and early Forties with breath-taking speed. She manages, however, to say something intimate and interesting about a lot of people who strode across the Washington stage in those years. . . A reviewer for another publication has beaten me to the point that the book is best when gossipy and feminine. Mrs. Clapper's occasional excursions into political philosophy are valuable principally in that they enable her better to fit the other material together. She resorts to no keyhole peeping. Bravo, Olive! Furthermore, the volume is strikingly lacking in cynicism." Turner Catledge

+ N Y Times p4 F 10 '46 900w

"Mrs. Clapper hasn't, of course, the technical skill of her husband, but she has turned out an interesting, if somewhat distracted, account of life in Washington, full of gossip and of anecdotes about the more luminous personalities."

+ — New Yorker 21:98 F 9 '46 120w

Reviewed by E. K. P. Stokes

Sat R of Lit 29.11 Mr 2 '46 1050w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Spring'd Republican p4d F 10 '46 360w

"There is in this book, as there must be in every conscientious account of that period, behind the pettifoggery politics, behind the frivolous social life, behind the spite and malice, a sense of vast and majestic movement. It was an era of gigantic things. . . For this reason Mrs. Clapper's book assumes a stature that perhaps the author herself did not realize. It is not the whole tapestry of Washington; it is only a minute corner of it. Nevertheless, it has its place in the pattern, and the pattern itself is one so immense and so intricate that generations of historians may have to labor at it throughout their lives before the world can perceive its true significance or, possibly, its real magnificence." G. W. Johnson

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ja 27 '46 1450w

Wis Lib Bul 42:72 My '46

CLARK, DALE, pseud. See Kayser, R.

CLARK, ELEANOR. Bitter box. 280p $2.50
Doubleday

46-5407

A mild little bank teller, overcome with spring fever, walked out of his bank cage one day, and into what for him was adventure. He became a member of a political group where he was used as a stooge, falsified accounts at the bank to help his party, and came in the end to disillusion and disgrace.

"There is good satire in 'The Bitter Box.' Mr. Temple, in his hunt for the true life, gets into trouble in a certain political party. His eyes could hardly be opened more painfully. Many will like this phase of the book the best of all. And there may be some gnashing of teeth. Gnash away, gentlemen, a very fine new writer has taken her firm place in our literary scene and nothing that you howl will stop her. Usher, put another chair on the platform there beside Eudora Welty, Carson McCullers and Jean Stafford. The name is Eleanor Clark." James Laughlin

+ Book Week p16 Ap 14 '46 500w

"If Eleanor Clark were not known for her short fiction published in the more advanced American magazines, the opening chapters of her first novel, The Bitter Box, would tempt readers to believe that this is an English novel, by an English writer, so much does it have of the characteristic understatement, the emphasis on fine detail, and the subdued comedy which some English writers employ for the portrayal of serious, even portentous situations. . . . Miss Clark's novel is not for everybody. Some will find its significance difficult to get at, in spite of the clarity of each phrase, and some conceivably will not approve of its significance. Those who enjoy it will have some justification for regarding that fact as a feather in their caps." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 24 '46 550w

"'The Bitter Box' is a very talented first novel, as you might expect it to be from Miss Clark's short stories. She has a gift of sophistication and gaiety. Landscapes, dialogue and characters are at her finger tips and she has little difficulty in moving them to her purposes. . . . 'The Bitter Box,' with all its effectiveness, is still as detached as its method. You become too conscious of tricks and whimsicalities. You begin to think the author is being at once ironical and indulgent toward her characters, and leaving them to prove their own purposes. The book has the petals of a flower without its corolla, the rays of a light without its center. The failure is a failure of identity, which goes deeper perhaps than the problem of whether Mr. Temple exists and whom he symbolizes." John Hay

+ Commonweal 44:99 My 10 '46 550w

"A story, thin spun, of an offensive conservative translated into questing radical; better as an idea than as an accomplished fact. The writing is frequently superior to the subject matter. And the humor . . . seems to us wholly incidental and in no sense a dominant factor or even a noticeable factor in the book."

+ Kirkus 14:108 Mr 1 '46 230w

"'The Bitter Box' is a serious, funny, and truthful picture of Communist doings in this country, and therefore a work of courage, but one could wish that it had carried its daring to the point of actually naming its parties, newspapers, and magazines, instead of clouding them in anonymity or pseudonymity. Miss Clark's novel is also—I should say at once—a work of unquestionable moral-political taste." Diana Trilling

Nation 162:514 Ap 27 '46 1600w

"What makes Miss Clark's book outstanding are her X-ray descriptions of the implements of modern civilization, of escalators, undressed manikins, subways, skyscrapers, and party offices. She relentlessly pursues these institutions, and after she has dissected them, they seem to reassemble themselves and reappear, like surrealist settings for a ballet whose deeper significance can only vaguely be grasped. The dancers in this ballet of life are being moved by invisible, menacing strings and the symbolism of their costumes can be variously interpreted. I wonder how many readers will find the key to The Bitter Box." Richard Plant

+ New Repub 115:51 Jl 15 '46 270w

"Miss Clark tells this story with considerable artistry. Her novel has definite form; its language is rich and varied, without being florid. The simple narrative is often impeded by too much description and too little dialogue, and her characters' emotions seldom break out of the cage of her style. But 'The Bitter Box' is, for all that, a very competent beginning." William Kehoe

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 28 '46 180w

"Miss Clark is a skillful and ironic writer, but parts of her story seem too deliberately willful, and occasionally even tedious. To misinterpret the novel's symbolism would be perilously easy; perhaps you had better figure it out for yourself."

New Yorker 22:89 Ap 27 '46 80w

"There is small doubt that Eleanor Clark, author of The Bitter Box, will be hailed as a 'find' in the literary world. Her writing has an almost polished beauty, a poetic absorption with the inner meaning of the outward symbol. There are passages in this novel which are gems of description and characterization. And yet, the book, as a whole, leaves one strangely restless and baffled. . . . This is not a book for a person who reads for story alone. But for those who take pleasure in good writing, it will be the introduction to a highly sensitive and original talent." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 14 '46 800w

CLARK, GLENN. The way, the truth and the life. 178p $1.50 Harper

248 Jesus Christ—Teachings 46-2459

Devotional reading made up of the author's interpretations of the Sermon on the Mount, the parables, and aspects of the life of Jesus.

Christian Century 63:627 My 15 '46 40w

"It may be suspected that the reviewer is doubtful about there being any real value in this book. If one desires confirmation of such a suspicion, let it be found in the frank statement that The Way, The Truth and The Life is a dangerous menace to sane and sensible prayer. Its exegesis is wholly unsound, its characterization of the New Testament and Jesus is the most insidious temptation to return to the outmoded allegory and cryptography of earlier days, and as for being a help to our praying, that is admissible only if one wishes to reduce prayer to the use of a talismanic formula and to the doubtful practice of enjoying a personal secret that has waited all these centuries before being revealed to simple souls. The author has become fascinated by his own cleverness and, thereby, verily he has his reward." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 23:293 Jl '46 1000w

"There are some who do not like Glenn Clark's approach to the religious life. There are others who may be made uncomfortable by his directness. But many more would find their spiritual life quickened by exposure to his unusual personality."

Kirkus 14:97 F 15 '46 170

Wis Lib Bul 42:70 My '46

CLARK, SYDNEY AYLMEY. All the best in Central America. 288p 11 maps $3 Dodd

917.28 Central America—Description and travel 46-1800

Popular guidebook for a two-weeks' plane trip thru Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, and Panama. Information is given on what to see, some historical background about Mayan civilization, and costs. No index.

"This book is for the actual rover, not the armchair variety. It is amazing what complete information Clark can pack between the end papers of a book." R. T. Campbell

+ Book Week p15 Ap 28 '46 400w

Booklist 42:264 Ap 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '46

"Reader misses small incident and brief notes which have heretofore given his books so much warmth . . . Recommended for libraries which may have patrons contemplating trips to the sections described, or which have an already lively interest in Central America." Julia Sabine

+ Library J 71:280 F 15 '46 140w

"All of which, no doubt, is as it should be in a popular travel book by one who is determined to get you on the plane, help you settle into your seat and then tell you what to look for and how to see. 'All the Best in Central America' is not recommended to those who have already made up their minds to spend the summer in Connecticut or the winter in Florida. Mr. Clark may upset their plans." B. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 21 '46 450w

Wis Lib Bul 42:73 My '46

CLARK, SYDNEY AYLMEY. All the best in Cuba 235p il $3 Dodd

917 291 Cuba—Description and travel 46-11942

Handbook for tourists which includes up-to-date information on night spots, amusements, and natural beauties. Maps on end papers. Index.

Booklist 43:99 D 1 '46

"This volume is informal, informative and good for an armchair change of scene, in case no other transportation is within your reach"

+ Weekly Book Review p14 N 24 '46 130w

CLARK, THOMAS CURTIS, comp. 300 favorite poems. 124p $1 Willett

821 08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections 45-11214

"This compilation is designed to supply poetry in small, easy-to-take doses for persons who approach poetry not in the mood of the literary critic but with the plain man's appetite for cheering, uplifting, guiding or amusing ideas in lyric form. In these indulgent pages Shakespeare and Shelley stand shoulder to shoulder with minor poets and contemporary bards whose verse has found previous publication only in the Chicago Tribune's Line o' Type column, to which Mr. Clark is himself a chronic contributor." Christian Century

"Such an anthology supports the plea that poetry should be not the exclusive possession of an esthetic cult but the daily food of ordinary folks."

Christian Century 62:1416 D 19 '45 160w

"This volume is 'a baker's dozen' of good things which should be savored at leisure, not taken in large doses." C. M. Sauer

+ Springfield Republican p6 My 6 '46 250w

CLARK, WILLIAM HORACE. Farms and farmers, the story of American agriculture. (American cavalcade ser) 346p il $3.75 Page 630.973 Agriculture—U.S. Agr46-168

"What has happened to the farms and the farmers of America during the past three hundred years" is related in this one-volume history. Composed "both of human drama and economic development," the chronicle describes the English background and ultimate prospering of colonial agriculture, the westward migration and expansion of the frontier, government response to the farmer's discontent and eclipse, the future of farming and the need for science in multiplying effort and increasing efficiency. Photographs in sepia, including reproductions of old prints. An agricultural chronology in appendix, bibliography, index. (Adapted from Bookmark)

Am Soc R 11 376 Je '46 130w

Booklist 42:294 My 15 '46

Bookmark 7:6 Mr '46

Library J 71:182 F 1 '46 100w

"This is a book that should be judged more from the point of view of the purpose of the author than from its contribution to knowledge. The subtitle is suited to the contents. It is a story—not a history—and 'a story' would suit better than 'the story'. As such it surely will supersede Sanford's Story of Agriculture in the United States, in whose category it falls, if for no other reason because it is a generation more up to date. The scholar or the serious student of agricultural history will find little use for it." F. A. Shannon

New Eng Q 19:264 Je '46 700w

Wis Lib Bul 42:57 Ap '46

CLARK, WILLIAM SMITH, ed. Chief patterns of world drama. 1152p $5.50 Eoughton

808.82 Dramas—Collections 46-3705

Anthology of some of the world's greatest dramas, from the Prometheus Bound, of Aeschylus, to Mary of Scotland, by Maxwell Anderson. Each play is prefaced by a historical study. Index.

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 71:1208 S 15 '46 140w

Theatre Arts 30:495 Ag '46 80w

CLARKE, ISABEL CONSTANCE. Subject to authority. 287p $2.50 Longmans [10s 6d Hutchinsons]

46-3592

Story of an English Catholic family and their relations with a neighboring family who are not Catholics altho one of the sons becomes a convert.

Reviewed by R. J. Hurley

Library J 71:484 Ap 1 '46 120w

"It is impossible to question Miss Clarke's sincerity, but she has allowed her attitude to obliterate her imagination, limiting herself to the use of blacks and whites, pros and cons, and therefore (though she intended a novel) to the making of a parable." Paul Griffith

— + N Y Times p14 My 19 '46 180w

Weekly Book Review p26 My 5 '46 140w

CLARKE, ROSAN. Wings for Ruth. 183p il $1.75 Wilde

46-3131

"Woven around the close friendship of two handicapped children in a New England village, this gentle story tells how the opportunities which came to Ruth through Perkins Institution for the Blind gave her mind a chance to travel far beyond her eyesight. The companionship of school life in the country and in the Institution brings interest to this story of girls of ten years old." Horn BK

Churchman 160:3 N 15 '46 30w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK 22:133 Mr '46 60w

CLAUDEL, PAUL. Three plays: The hostage, Crusts, The humiliation of the father; tr. by John Heard. 223p $5 Luce, J.W. 842 45-11125

Translations of three French plays which cover the period between the French revolution and the Franco-Prussian war. They present a chronicle of France and also picture the Roman Catholic faith in France during those years.

"The plots of the plays seem to this reader lacking in plausibility, but it is evident that they were designed by the mystic, Claudel, to bring out his central theme, the profoundly Christian one of sacrifice and expiation. . . . Some of the artistic values in the French are inevitably lost in translation. The English texts worked out by the translator of this edition are remarkably faithful to the original, however, and much of its poetic beauty has been retained. One is therefore surprised to find an occasional rendering which strikes a false note." M. M. Fay

+ — Cath World 162:92 Ap '46 500w

CLAUDEL, PAUL—Continued

"The plots are somewhat conventional, at times even banal, but this is not the primary concern of Claudel. He is driven by a desire to make Catholicism the mother of man's richest life. Not that he argues this point, mysticism either assumes or ignores dogma. Rather he writes dramas of character and ideas, discussing at length the subtle shades of experience, and keeps always to the purpose of making real the strength that is in the gentle, but inexorable, power of spiritual truth. Thus, the apparent victory of the expedient and the temporal is seen to be a hollow conquest; God, the church, and truth are ultimately supreme and invincible. Each play promotes one great truth, a truth revealed not by the light of reason, but by the incomprehensible response of one's being. If this truth becomes identified with Catholicism, it is because Claudel both believes and feels it to be so." R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 23:205 Ap '46 400w

"Recommended for drama collections in large libraries." George Freedley
+ Library J 71:122 Ja 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Paul d'Estournelles
Theatre Arts 30:301 My '46 2800w

CLAWSON, JOSEPH. Psychology in action. 289p il $4 Macmillan

150.13 Psychology, Applied 46-7533

"Some genuine advances have been made through the amassing of detailed observations of behavior, but no coordinating principles similar to those of physics, chemistry, or the other advanced departments of science have as yet emerged. The present book attempts to provide these principles and link together the known facts in an understandable whole. It has four principal distinguishing features: First, the book consists primarily of thumb-nail case studies embodying what is known about and what has been done with human psychology so far. . . . Second, the cases and successful appeals are arranged according to the principles they have in common, and these common elements are unified in a new theory of psychology—the theory of 'value-situations.' Third, it is pointed out how to recombine the elements and apply them to daily problems which arise in the contacts of individuals and groups. Fourth, an elastic, practical formula unites these principles of behavior in a complete, interlocking system of psychology. The formula embraces all the phenomena and brushes aside none." (Pref) Index.

"Not on either a scientific or a strictly lay level, it's hard to tab a market for this." Kirkus 14:91 F 15 '46 150w

"Book contains many naive statements as well as doubtful assumptions. Not recommended." A. I. Bryan

— Library J 71:1461 O 15 '46 140w

"If you've already heard this 'how to influence people' line perhaps you had best pass by this book. Better pass it by anyway."

— San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 8 '46 100w

CLEETON, GLEN URIEL, and MASON, CHARLES WILKINS. Executive ability; its discovery and development. new ed 540p $4.50 Antioch press

658 3124 Executive ability 47-233

"Analysis of executive functions. Extensive presentation of methods used to test for executive qualities and for predicting executive success, with some talk of the need of executives in society." (Am J Soc) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1935.

Am J Soc 52:379 Ja '47 30w

Reviewed by H. J. Owens

Book Week p4 N 3 '46 210w

CLELAND, MABEL ROSS (MRS K. DE W. WIDDEMER). See Widdemer, M. C.CLELAND, ROBERT GLASS. California pageant; the story of four centuries; il by Raymond Lufkin. 267p $2.50 Knopf

979.4 California—History 46-224

Presents four centuries of California history, from the days of the explorers to the present. The author is a historian and has written other books on California. Chronology of important dates. Index. For senior and junior high schools.

Booklist 42:215 Mr 1 '46

"A list of important dates and an index make this an excellent book for reading or for reference, one with authority behind it." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:208 My '46 90w

"The book is remarkable for the richness and variety of its content and the clarity of its statement. Firsthand sources have been used with skill and a sense of drama in connection with persons and places." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 22:214 My '46 120w

"A compact, attractive book, written in direct, economical style."

+ Kirkus 14:37 Ja 15 '46 110w

"Recommended for junior and senior high school age." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 71:488 Ap 1 '46 110w

"The illustrations lead me to phrase a question which has often bothered me. Why does a publisher, having used a good historian to write a book, thereupon intrust its illustrations to someone who works upon decorative, not historical principles? Mr. Lufkin's drawings seem to me to have rather little relation to what the State actually looks like, and his map on Page 234 mislocates towns and sends railroads running around where they simply don't run. The book is written in straightforward and simple English, which should give no trouble to younger readers. It should serve as a good introduction to the history of a highly colorful State." G. R. Stewart

+ — N Y Times p14 Mr 24 '46 500w

"Here is an excellent presentation of the colorful, tumultuous, romantic history of California." R. A. Hill

+ Sat R of Lit 29:56 Ap 20 '46 450w

"The skill with which significant events have been sifted out and related to each other, the adherence to source material, the use made of diaries and contemporary accounts from the early days, the swift moving narrative writing all show the mark of a gifted historian who is writing con amore of a region he knows as his own. But in addition there is an inclusive awareness of the forces that influence events: climate, geography, changing economic pressures, as well as the influence of personalities upon their time." F. C. Sayers

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 24 '46 400w

CLEMENS, CYRIL. Man from Limehouse: Clement Richard Attlee; foreword [by] Lord Strabolgi; introd. by Ellen Wilkinson. 159p il $3 Int. Mark Twain soc; for sale by Didier

B or 92 Attlee, Clement Richard 46-6573

A biography of Great Britain's Labour prime minister, written by the author of The Man from Missouri; Harry S. Truman; The Literary Education of F. D. Roosevelt, etc.

Christian Science Monitor p17 D 7 '46 120w

— Foreign Affairs 25:345 Ja '47 10w

"Superficial, very much 'strung together,' disappointing, poorly written, even errors in spelling. Not recommended." A. B. Lindsay

— Library J 71:1128 S 1 '46 70w

School and Society 64:103 Ag 10 '46 90w

CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE (MARK TWAIN, pseud). Letters of Quintus Curtius Snodgrass [by] Mark Twain; ed. by Ernest E. Leisy. 76p $2 Univ. press in Dallas

817

"Almost 20 years ago the Mark Twain canon was extended by the discovery and publication of three letters by 'Thomas Jefferson

'Snodgrass,' which had appeared in the Keokuk Saturday Post in 1856 and 1857. Since that time other 'Snodgrass' letters have turned up; four of them in the New Orleans Daily Crescent for 1861, discovered in 1934. Since then Mr. Thomas Dabney and Mr. Ernest E. Lelsy have found six more in the Crescent which they believe to be the work of Mark Twain. These, with the four found in 1934, are signed 'Quintus Curtius Snodgrass,' and all 10 are now published in [this] small book." San Francisco Chronicle

"Even without the Mark Twain authorship these New Orleans letters would repay reading. Most of them deal with the local Confederate militia for which Snodgrass, the High Old Private of the Louisiana Guard, supplies elaborate but burlesque instructions for drilling, choosing equipment, securing provender and judiciously avoiding injury in battle. . . . In their broad satire, their sly classical allusions, their hyperbole and their candor the letters have more than a little in common with such better known works as the jumping frog story and the blue jay yarn." J. T. Flanagan

+ Book Week p18 N 24 '46 330w

"Finding the new 'Snodgrass' letters was a good job. Publishing them, with the four earlier discoveries, is worth while—at any rate for the Twain enthusiast. It is unfortunate that the 'Notes' had to be written by someone who thinks it necessary to explain to his readers that 'mounseers' is to be understood as signifying 'French gentleman.'" J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 13 '46 700w

CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE (MARK TWAIN, pseud). Mark Twain, business man; ed. by Samuel Charles Webster. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 409p il $4 Little

B or 92 Webster, Charles L. 46-585

"The son of Mark Twain's partner in the publishing house of Charles L. Webster & Co. sets out to refute some of the accusations which Mark Twain, in his garrulous and debt-ridden old age, made against Mr. Webster, Sr., and which appeared in Bernard De Voto's 'Mark Twain in Eruption.' The defense of the elder Webster's business behavior, documented largely by Mark Twain's own letters, is well presented and convincing, and is done with good humor. It furnishes, by the way, some valuable additions to the Mark Twain story." New Yorker

Reviewed by F. J. Meine

Book Week p1 F 3 '46 1500w

Booklist 42:212 Mr 1 '46

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 2 '46 550w

Kirkus 13:539 D 1 '45 120w

"The editor has withheld little—if anything—so the collection is a definite help in interpreting Mark Twain's amazing personality. Aside from its special interest Mark Twain, Business Man will appeal to all who enjoy humorous family history. It may be generally purchased." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 71:181 F 1 '46 110w

"For most readers, of course, the book will be interesting not for what it can tell of Charles L. Webster but for what it can tell of Mark Twain. It tells much that is of high interest. It would have been a better book had Mr. Webster not undertaken to write in the vein of his uncle's humor, directing his sallies (which honestly, and doggedly, try to be good-natured) against the uncle himself. Then, although we cannot but be grateful for the new material about Mark Twain and the Clemens family that Mr. Webster takes this occasion to print, the book would have been more shapely without it, and would not have had, what it now does have, the appearance of a scrappy, untidy biography of Mark Twain in which the climax of that eventful life was the relationship with Charles L. Webster. Yet these faults do not diminish the intrinsic interest of the book." Lionel Trilling

+ N Y Times p1 F 3 '46 2000w

+ New Yorker 21:99 F 9 '46 100w

Reviewed by J. P. Wood

Sat R of Lit 29:16 Mr 2 '46 1750w

Time 47:100 F 11 '46 1100w

"At his first glance the general reader will feel that the book has the dullness of many compilations of business letters, but before long he will probably be caught up by Twain's energy and tragedy, and the fantastic situations. The literary student interested in biography will find much about Twain that is entirely new, and drawn from one of the few relatively untapped sources of Twain materials."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:195 S '46 350w

"The book is a valuable addition to Mark Twain literature, vastly amusing to the general reader and indispensable to students." Bernard De Voto

+ Weekly Book Review p3 F 10 '46 2000w

Wis Lib Bul 42:45 Mr '46

"In spite of its casual, even irritating methods of presenting its material, this volume of letters, with its obligato of commentary by the grandson of Mark Twain's sister Pamela, is likely to become at once a source-book for our study of the great humorist; it will enter the useful category of books about him by his family and intimates." S. T. Williams

+ Yale R n s 35:758 summer '46 420w

CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE (MARK TWAIN, pseud). Portable Mark Twain; ed. by Bernard DeVoto. 786p $2 Viking

817

46-6686

Collection from the works of Mark Twain which includes selections from: A tramp abroad; Old times on the Mississippi; A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's court; Pudd'nhead Wilson; Following the equator; Mark Twain in eruption; Europe and elsewhere; Mark Twain's autobiography. Also included are: Notorious jumping frog of Calaveras county; Private history of a campaign that failed; Adventures of Huckleberry Finn; Fenimore Cooper's literary offenses; The mysterious stranger, and twenty-eight letters.

Booklist 43:54 O 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '46

"Here is a handsome return on a two dollar investment. Mr. De Voto's introduction is searching, intelligent and remarkable for freedom from flub-dub. It is honest in praise and gives as well a candid appraisal of Mark Twain's faults and failures. Several of the letters included in the present selection are printed for the first time. All the letters are amusing and by their suggestion of a vivid, untamed personality make admirable contrast with the stories and sketches written for the public." J. G. E. Hopkins

+ Commonweal 44:484 Ag 30 '46 330w

Kirkus 14:230 My 15 '46 170w

"The introduction to this volume in the admirable Viking Portable Library [is] a rounded and balanced estimate of Mark Twain, his America and his work. The selections, including Huckleberry Finn and the Mysterious Stranger complete, and generous passages from his other writings, provide the reader with a large part of the Mark Twain that is still worth reading."

+ New Repub 115:301 S 9 '46 100w

Reviewed by Lionel Trilling

N Y Times p4 Jl 28 '46 1400w

"Excellent, and a pleasant surprise. The name of Mark Twain, in the past, has always, for Mr. De Voto, been a stimulus to hair-tearing polemics, with an emphasis that, in my opinion, has falsified the picture of Mark Twain a great deal more than it had ever been distorted by the writings of Van Wyck Brooks and others, whom Mr. De Voto has been so frantic to correct. But in his selection from Mark Twain for this 'portable,' he has exhibited, it seems to me, a really impeccable discrimination." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22:65 Jl 27 '46 400w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 11 '46 250w

CLEMENS, S. L.—Continued
Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 18 '46
480w

"I do not know how anybody could have got more of the truest and best Mark Twain into 786 pages. There is a solid introduction by Mr. De Voto and erudite, unobtrusive notes."

+ Weekly Book Review p13 Jl 28 '46
180w

CLEVELAND, REGINALD MCINTOSH, and LATHAM, FRANK B. Jobs ahead! in collaboration with Vocational guidance research. 259p $2.50 Appleton-Century
371.425 Occupations. Vocational guidance
46-1906

"A general discussion of employment opportunity in industrial fields such as electronics, especially radio and television, the automobile industry, building and allied trades, distribution and transportation. Educational and physical requirements, hours of work, and starting salaries are given. More for reading than for ready reference." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

"'Jobs Ahead' proceeds on the assumption that the nation will solve its economic problems and move on to full employment. It takes for granted, for example, that soil erosion will be checked, because it is right that it should be. Objection may also be made that the book overlooks the future profession of politics on which it might be conceded that quite a bit hinges. There are other omissions also, but within its scope 'Jobs Ahead' is an important postwar guide to postwar jobs." Ruth Moore

+ Book Week p3 Ap 7 '46 320w

Booklist 42:276 My 1 '46

"Adequate."

Kirkus 14:146 Mr 15 '46 90w

CLEVELAND, ROBERT (CAPPY DICK, pseud.). Pastime book for boys and girls. 211p il $2 Greenberg

680 Handicraft. Games 46-4396

Ideas for things to make, games, hobbies, jokes and riddles, similar to the author's Fun For Boys and Girls (Book Review Digest 1942). For grades four to eight.

"Cappy Dick is here again and I am sure the children will be out in full force to welcome his new book. As in 'Fun for Boys and Girls' and the 'Stay-at-Home Book,' this volume is crammed with wonderful things to make, to do, to play."

+ Book Week p22 Je 2 '46 140w

Booklist 42:369 Jl 15 '46

"The author has succeeded in his aim to propose articles that are interesting to make without being too difficult, so that the young workmen can feel the satisfaction of accomplishment. A book that offers a wealth of fun and entertainment for homes, schools, play centers, camps and clubs. Illustrated by many small but clear diagrams." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 15 '46
160w

"A home book, also useful in many library collections." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 71:919 Je 15 '46 70w

"Has little to recommend it. It haphazardly includes suggestions for youngsters from 6 to 14, with no regard for age level or comparative difficulty." Nina Schneider

— N Y Times p20 Je 9 '46 90w

CLEWES, HOWARD. Dead ground. 211p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Lane]

46-6548

Story of an English ship rotting in an English harbor while she waits for a possible German invasion. In that case she was to be sunk across the mouth of the harbor to obstruct entrance. But in the meantime her captain divides his time between the village tavern and his ship; the army officer in charge fumes and the natives go on fishing in their restricted waters. And then one night the ship weighed anchor and quietly went out to sea.

"A short but competent novel. . . No pretense, no shoddy cleverness, no pandering, but a well-rounded story, expertly handled in every phase." Louis Zara

+ Book Week p5 O 20 '46 600w

"There is moralization here, and allegory, with perhaps the characters sacrificed to the lesson taught. Its harsh integrity limits its popular market, gives its appeal for the mature, perceptive reader."

+ Kirkus 14:359 Ag 1 '46 120w

"Mr. Clewes has a real talent. It is startling, therefore, that he has failed in precision and care for his book. His vivid, atmospheric language, utilizing many details, is quite frequently unpunctuated. His lack of care for the shape of his novel, where people and events jostle each other, losing the proper effect of their brilliance through careless timing, clouds the sharpness of his characterization. . . With more time and thought, Mr. Clewes might have written not only an unusual and delightful tale; he also might have employed his strange, bright imagination carefully and expertly, which Stevenson, for instance, was begrudgingly willing to do." Paul Griffith

N Y Times p22 N 3 '46 600w

"A promising novel by a young English war veteran. . . 'Dead Ground' at times becomes an hilarious story. There is something Jovian about Captain Thwaite as he stands alone on the deck of his ship, now anchored fifty yards or so out in the harbor, hurling empty bottles and insults at his impotent enemy land-bound on the wharf. . . But the book is much more than this. Mr. Clewes combines with a gift of keen observation the ability to interpret imaginatively the things he observes. There is compassion here, indignation and loaded irony, plus a narrative of events that never loses its tension from the opening to the closing page." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p4 O 13 '46 650w

CLEWES, WINSTON. Sweet river in the morning. 227p $2.50 Appleton-Century

46-6431

An English boy with a bad record takes to burglary rather than defend his country. On the night of an air raid the boy breaks into an apparently deserted house, and there relives the life of the old mansion. A direct hit on the house may be the cause of the boy's regeneration.

"To tell this story Clewes employs the swift, short strokes of the dramatist. His setting is a small community in war-torn England, but his people and his appeal are universal. Some of his postulates may be debatable, but never boring. It is a short book, but not one to be skimmed through carelessly. There's hardly a single paragraph in it which is not essential to the whole. Of such is good writing." William Lipscomb

+ Book Week p12 S 15 '46 350w

Booklist 43:53 O 15 '46

Reviewed by John Broderick

Commonweal 45:76 N 1 '46 330w

"The writing is ardent and word-wise, but without the concentration of story interest and with an almost unduly depressing character portrayal which will limit its popularity."

Kirkus 14:328 Jl 15 '46 160w

"Deeply sensitive portrayal of a young criminal." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 71:1126 S 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p3 O 11 '46 240w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall

New Statesman & Nation 32:289 O 19 '46 120w

"With a vivid and unsentimental pen, the author dissects the elements that have made a criminal out of a miserable boy. . . Within the boundaries of this particular novel form, 'Sweet River in the Morning' is as illuminating a glance into the causes of juvenile delinquency as can be expected. The author's use of fantasy, however, seems especially out of place and weakens the effectiveness of his story. In his effort to utilize this panoramic technique, his story development is made so erratic that he is compelled to preface his book with a chronological table of events, intended to guide the reader through the novel's maze of incidents." Edwin Fadiman

+ N Y Times p12 S 22 '46 450w

"A special kind of ghost story, sensitively conceived and effectively told."

+ New Yorker 22:108 S 14 '46 60w

"The novel is dramatic and essentially humane, but the sweet river that might have represented Charlie in his earliest days is never presented to the reader." Harrison Smith

Sat R of Lit 29:30 S 28 '46 850w

"This is an ingenious way of making a novel. The criticism is that it is too ingenious, for what the author gains in ingenuity he loses in authenticity. Charlie's story as remembered by himself is excellent. It is markedly in the style of Liza of Lambeth, but it has a strength of its own. The second story, though equally well told, is unacceptable in comparison with the first. The fantasy fights with the realism, and the reader resents the spooks cutting across a story which was already good without them. Besides they tempt Mr. Clewes to sin against logic. How could Charlie come to know scenes that happened long ago outside the house, away down by the river?" V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

+ Spec 177:348 O 4 '46 450w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 15 '46 500w

"How a lad so illiterate could understand the speech much less the lives of the Gladstones is left unexplained; and the end of the tale, dramatic as it is, is completely arbitrary. But the novel is interesting and evocative, and one is left in no possible doubt of the author's powers of mind and style. He is among the most promising of our young novelists."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p477 O 5 '46 600w

"I found myself at first pleasantly confused, then enchanted, by the novel method Mr. Clewes employs in telling the story of Charlie. The clarity of his style and the brilliance and warm sympathy with which he limns the various swiftly shifting scenes produce an effect both exquisite and exotic. And underneath the delicate pattern of his work runs steadily and sweetly a joy in life—in the life of even so bewildered and badgered and culturally undernourished a youth as his Charlie—that is both refreshing and compelling" F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p5 S 15 '46 900w

CLIFFORD, WILLIAM KINGDON. Common sense of the exact sciences; ed. and with a pref. by Karl Pearson; newly ed. and with an introd. by James R. Newman; pref. by Bertrand Russell. 249p $4 Knopf

510.1 Mathematics—Philosophy 46-4306

A revision of a book first published in 1885. The author was an English mathematician who died in 1879, at the age of thirty-five. The book is an attempt to explain modern scientific and mathematical thought to the layman, and has become a classic. The present edition contains a long biographical and critical preface, and a bibliography of Clifford's writings.

"Ranking with some of the great books of the Adler, Hutchins, and Barr school, Clifford's work shows a remarkable clarity and depth of thought. . . Edited and footnoted by Newman, this new printing of 'The Common Sense of the Exact Sciences' is worthy of a good reception by the enlightened public." Rufus Oldenburger

+ Book Week p8 My 26 '46 430w

Kirkus 14:188 Ap 15 '46 150w

Reviewed by L. A. Fales

Library J 71:980 Jl '46 70w

"A warmly appreciative preface by Bertrand Russell and an excellent account of Clifford's general philosophy, together with some notes on the text, by James R. Newman, the editor of the present reissue, add further value to a valuable book." Ernest Nagel

+ Nation 163:19 Jl 6 '46 1350w

N Y New Tech Bks 31.43 Jl '46

"The first two chapters of this book, the work of one of the great Victorians, should be required reading for algebra and geometry classes. Any student or ex-student who is capable of hoping that there might be truth in Clavius's statement that algebra is 'easy withal, and full of delight' should find here all the evidence he needs to convince him that there is. . . The two prefaces and the introduction are an extra treat. Seldom does one have a chance to read such sincere and disinterested panegyric." E. S. A.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 11 '46 150w

CLOSE, PAUL DUNHAM. Building insulation; a treatise on the principles and application of heat and sound insulation for buildings 3d ed 372p il $4.50 Am. tech. soc.

691.9 Insulation (heat). Soundproofing 46-4553

"This comprehensive text is of practical value not only to the architect, engineer, and insulation salesman, but also to the prospective home owner who wants to know what kind of insulation is best adapted to his requirements. The book treats of the various types of commercial insulating materials now in use, gives trade names, descriptive data, and names of manufacturers; and discusses the methods of application, the theory of heat insulation and calculation of heat losses; fuel saving, pipe and duct insulations and the prevention of condensation. Other topics are the relationship of heat insulation to human comfort, and sound insulation. Compared with the previous edition (1945), this one has an additional chapter on insulating farm structures, and there are additional minor revisions. The author is Technical Secretary of the Insulation Board Institute." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 43:54 O 15 '46

N Y New Tech Bks 31.25 Ap '46

CLOUGH, SHEPARD BANCROFT. Century of American life insurance 402p il $4.50 Columbia univ. press [30s Oxford]

368.3 Mutual life insurance company of New York A46-2039

"A history of the Mutual life insurance company of New York, 1843-1943." (Subtitle) Index.

"Without doubt, the book is to be highly recommended to both the insured and the insurance officials. It delineates in an excellent way the important role life insurance plays in our Nation more than anywhere else in the world. Let us hope that scholars, also, will not fail to study this work. Then, perhaps, it will help to overcome the traditional mistreatment of insurance by many of our economists who often regard it as being only business." Alfred Manes

+ Ann Am Acad 248:291 N '46 420w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p14 Ja 4 '47 480w

"This scholarly history makes many limited but important contributions to the understanding of American enterprise. The text is clear, and there are excellent tables and charts; one does not need to know insurance in order to understand the analysis."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:198 S '46 240w

COATES, ROBERT MYRON. Bitter season. 180p $2.50 Harcourt

46-6957

A novel which traces the emotional life of an ordinary American during the darkest hours of World War II, an American who is not in the fighting.

COATES, R. M.—Continued

Reviewed by William Lipscomb

Book Week p22 N 24 '46 450w

"Mr. Coates is at his best when he is describing the spirit of wartime New York. In a manner not unlike that of Thomas Wolfe, he creates a number of memorable and realistic vignettes. One remembers, after he has laid down the book, his worried patrons at coffee-pot counters, the brooding taxi drivers, and the unhappy civilians standing shoulder to shoulder with men in uniform in crowded bar rooms. Many readers will probably find the author's fugitive characters and his descriptions of the New York scene more interesting than the lucubrations of his frustrated hero." M. J. Quinlan

+ Commonweal 45:77 N 1 '46 300w

"Introspective, intellectualizing, this by the New Yorker short story writer and critic contains some effective writing—but is above a general audience."

+ Kirkus 14:504 O 1 '46 100w

"The failure of 'The Bitter Season' to be equal to its intention is chiefly due, I think, to the confusion of its method; and this in turn seems to me to be due to Mr. Coates's lack of confidence in the power of a fictional incident to communicate more than it may superficially appear to. Thus Mr. Coates's personal narrative not only follows no time sequence but is constantly interrupted for philosophical asides and for quick sketches of war-time habits and manners. And even these contemporary social observations are so crowded and handled so fancily that their import is lost." Diana Trilling

Nation 163:702 D 14 '46 490w

"It is a book imperfect surely—a little lean, a little inconclusive, but it is also work lofty in conception, expert in design and altogether worthy of profound respect." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p14 N 10 '46 750w

New Yorker 22:113 O 12 '46 60w

Reviewed by Donald Hough

— Sat R of Lit 29:36 N 2 '46 1050w

"A fine and sensitive novel. . . Other parts of Mr. Coates's novel may not be perfectly executed, but New York after dark is his natural milieu, and the midnight city stamps an unforgettable impress on 'The Bitter Season.' Mr. Coates knows the streets of night better than any man since Thomas Wolfe." Richard Match

+ Weekly Book Review p4 O 6 '46 750w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). The kitten stand; il. by Katherine Keeler. [28p] 50c Grosset

46-2193

Story for girls from seven to ten. It began when somebody gave Kate a cat named Jumpy. Jumpy was guaranteed to be masculine, but the guarantee was all wrong, and when there were six kittens, something had to be done about it. Kate had an original way of solving the difficulty.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:130 Mr '46 50w

"There's nice balance of character and plot, and illustrations in pastel colors by Katherine Keeler make it an attractive and appealing book."

+ Kirkus 14:87 F 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by M. F. Cox

Library J 71:408 Mr 15 '46 70w

+ N Y Times p30 F 17 '46 70w

"Slight as this story is, it has humor and character. The illustrations are pleasing, and the book is attractive in size, type, and binding." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:43 Mr 9 '46 220w

"I'd like to see Trudy when she grows up. I bet she'll be something pretty special. The illustrations are just right." Phyllis Fenner

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 10 '46 90w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). The wonderful day; pictures by Helen Sewell. 126p $2.25 Macmillan

46-3639

Another story about Sally, the author's well-loved heroine of stories of life in America in early post-Revolution days. In this story Sally and Andy help to save Five Bushel Farm, meet again Piere, the French refugee lad, and at the end of 'the wonderful day' have an intimation of future happiness.

Book Week p18 Je 2 '46 230w

Booklist 42:319 Je 1 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:206 My '46 120w

"Another in the series of 'Sally' books, and to adults it seems that this excellent writer could turn to other characters for these seem fairly wrung dry."

Kirkus 14:126 Mr 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by F. W. Butler

Library J 71:489 Ap 1 '46 120w

"Clarity of writing and a poet's delight in the New England countryside give charm to Elizabeth Coatsworth's tale—though it must be added that the book, despite its feel for local color, is without body and sometimes weak in characterization." H. M.

+ N Y Times p31 My 26 '46 150w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:142 D 7 '46 60w

"Those of us who look for the poems between the chapters of Miss Coatsworth's stories find here some of the most satisfying. There is one about a little red hen in a storm that would make an enchanting text for a picture book. . . Obviously great care has been given to the making of this book. Miss Sewell's New England end-papers are printed in emerald green and the cloth binding is the clear yellow of a ripe lemon. One cannot say that this is the best of the books about Sally. It is a completely satisfying link in her story. It needs no further comparison." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:31 Ag 10 '46 360w

"This is a poet's book deserving the poetic quality of Helen Sewell's decorations and the serenity of these broad-margined pages. Though the tale is complete in itself, ten-year-olds who meet Sally here for the first time will look up her previous appearances." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 My 5 '46 320w

Wis Lib Bul 42:76 My '46

COBB, MABEL. Old Phoebe; the story of an elephant; il. by Claude Allen Lewis. 128p $2.50 Beechhurst press, inc, 116 E 19th st, N.Y. 3

46-18490

Old Phoebe is a beloved circus elephant. In this story for children the old elephant recalls the events of her life in the jungles of India, her training, tiger-hunting with a rajah, state processions, and then her circus career.

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 10 '46 60w

Spring'd Republican p4d Jl 28 '46 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 S 22 '46 100w

COBLENTZ, CATHERINE (CATE) (MRS W. W. COBLENTZ). Scatter, the chipmunk; il. by Berta Schwartz. [25p] $1 Childrens press

Chipmunks—Legends and stories 46-3913

Picture story book about a little chipmunk and a thoughtful little girl who befriended him and protected him from a grey cat.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p7 Jl 7 '46 150w

Kirkus 14:251 Je 1 '46 90w

"Charmingly illustrated by Berta Schwartz with lifelike pictures. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 71:1054 Ag '46 70w

COBLENTZ, CATHERINE (CATE) (MRS W. W. COBLENTZ). Sequoya; decorations by Ralph Ray, Jr. 199p $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 Guess, George (Sequoya) (Cherokee Indian)—Juvenile literature 46-11831

"The story of the lame Indian, half Indian, half white, who made the Cherokee alphabet and taught his people to write messages to one another at the time of the westward expansion of the white settlers." Sat R of Lit

"This is such a genuinely thrilling book that anything beyond holding your breath with excitement and handing it to your best friend to read seems anticlimatic."

+ Book Week p14 N 10 '46 270w

Booklist 43:119 D 15 '46

Christian Century 63:1440 N 27 '46 70w

"Excellent reference material."

+ Kirkus 14:391 Ag 15 '46 110w

"Author has used the most consistent of the folklore about Sequoya and definite information gathered by authorities on the Cherokees. Recommended for junior high school age." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 71:1810 D 15 '46 100w

"A good story well told." N. B. Brown

+ N Y Times p11 D 29 '46 140w

Sat R of Lit 29:69 N 9 '46 40w

School & Society 64:303 O 20 '46 20w

Social Studies 37:380 D '46 20w

+ Weekly Book Review p18 N 10 '46 380w

COBLENTZ, STANTON ARTHUR. comp. The music makers; an anthology of recent American poetry. 275p $3.75 Ackerman

811.08 American poetry—Collections 46-158

An anthology of contemporary American lyric poetry intended for the "average educated reader." No index, but the arrangement is alphabetically by author. Each poet has a very brief biographical note.

"Mr. Coblentz is a good poet, as readers of this paper should know; he is also a good judge of poetry. He has due regard for poets who have become famous, but evidently it is their quality rather than their reputations that moves him, for he is appreciative also of much poetry that has not (or not yet) brought its authors renown. This anthology, covering the last two decades, may be considered as, in a general way, bringing Untermyer down to date."

+ Christian Century 63:240 F 20 '46 140w

Reviewed by Macha Rosenthal

Poetry 68:112 My '46 480w

"An excellent anthology." C. M. Sauer

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ja 13 '46 420w

COCKRELL, MRS MARIAN (BROWN). Something between. 261p $2.50 Harper

46-4172

Small town life and its feuds and romances is the background for this novel. There was a twelve-foot-high hedge between the Towies' place and that of vindictive Mrs Moon. But when there was murder done it was not laid to any of the Towies, until late in the day. And by that time young Austin, aged fifteen, had set the trap which caught the murderer.

Reviewed by Edith Roberts

Book Week p6 My 12 '46 300w

Kirkus 14:80 F 15 '46 150w

"The breezy dialogue is more competent than the rare reflective passages. In her musings the author is too apt to translate emotion by dashes and to insist on needless repetition to make her obvious points; but she handles with skill the verbose Austin's mixture of eager slang and solemn rhetoric, the casual chatter of modern lovers and the everyday talk of the town folk. When the author comes to small-town manners she is on surer realistic ground." Aline Benjamin

N Y Times p18 My 19 '46 220w

"'Something Between' fails as straight fiction and fails as crime fiction. The first half of the book is a light, implausible novel and the last half is a slight crime-and-detection yarn. The fusion is inept." Betty Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 29:38 Je 22 '46 750w

"The best parts of this novel are the skirmishes in the early scenes, Mrs. Cockrell being not quite at ease with violence. To prolong the suspense, she points a finger of suspicion at several characters whose innocence you don't for a moment doubt. But the boy's blundering detectivism is highly entertaining, and he has every reason to be gratified with its often unexpected fruitfulness. As for your sympathies, they are naturally and rightfully always on one side of the herbaceous border of hate." George Conrad

+ Weekly Book Review p8 My 26 '46 370w

COE, DOUGLAS, pseud. See Epstein, S., and Williams, B.

COE, LLOYD. Charcoal; il. by [the author]. [32]p $1.50 Crowell

46-3214

Picture story book about a little black sheep who lived up to his name, but was sorry about it. He took measures, but still he was a black sheep. And then the tide turned, when he did a good deed, and he was no longer an outcast.

"I wish all books for younger children were as wise and as entertaining as this one."

+ Book Week p14 Je 2 '46 320w

Booklist 42:284 My 1 '46

"The illustrations are not, and are not meant to be, wholly realistic, but they have a fresh springlike quality." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:203 My '46 40w

"Ages four to eight will enjoy this book." V. W. Schott

+ Library J 71:763 My 15 '46 70w

"Story and drawings are simple and expressive." L. M. P.

N Y Times p36 Ap 14 '46 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 28 '46 140w

COFFIN, HENRY SLOANE. Public worship of God; a source book. 208p $2 Presbyterian bd. 264 Public worship

46-5948

"This book has been prepared for the guidance and aid of ministers, choirmasters, students of divinity and of sacred music, office-bearers in the Church, and others to whom is entrusted the high and arduous task of leading in common worship. It has been written particularly for those in the tradition of the Reformed Churches. That tradition is both Catholic and Evangelical. It embraces the worship of the Early Church, East and West, and that of the Medieval Church to the Reformation, when the effort was made to cleanse it from corruptions by submitting it to the Word of God." (Foreword) Partial contents: What is Christian worship; Theological bases of worship; The art of public worship—ritual; The art of public worship—ceremonial; The composition of public prayers; Worship through the sacraments; Children and public worship; Public worship and church union. Selected bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Coffin's book is strong in its sense of historical background and also in its carefully maintained sensitivity to the needs of the contemporary congregation. As over against Lutheran and Episcopal liturgical tradition and practice, it exemplifies what is best in our Puritan ideals of worship. It is not just a Presbyterian book but is equally applicable to Baptist, Congregational and Disciple churches, and even to Methodists, for are we not all spiritual heirs of Puritanism?" A. W. Palmer

+ Christian Century 64:17 Ja 1 '47 500w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie

Churchman 160:17 N 15 '46 90w

COFFIN, JOSEPH. Coins of the popes. 169p pl $3.50 Coward-McCann

737.47 Coins, Papal 46-3783

A guide to Papal coins from earliest Christian times to the present. It includes a general survey of papal coinage, with notes on mints and engravers, an alphabetical list of inscriptions appearing on coins, and an index to the plates.

"This book, the first of its type in English, is written chiefly for collectors. But it is of interest also to students of history for whom there can be no more pleasant and profitable occupation than to contemplate the ancient monuments. . . . A number of misprints and errata have escaped the proofreader's eye."

+ — Cath World 164:93 O '46 200w

"The seventeen plates which accompany the text are well chosen and indexed, while the appendix adds a practical touch in showing current prices for the coins. Unfortunately, Mr. Coffin's list of popes is not at all definitive; it contains 267 names (of which one is a reduplication and six are those of antipopes) and assigns regnal years that can frequently be questioned." H. G. J. Beck

+ — Commonweal 44:195 Je 7 '46 80w

COFFIN, ROBERT PETER TRISTRAM. People behave like ballads. 100p $2.25 Macmillan

811 46-7320

A new collection of poems about the people and folklore of New England, by this New England poet who is now a professor of English at Bowdoin college.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p20 D 8 '46 140w

Kirkus 14 415 Ag 15 '46 130w

"Mr. Coffin is successful when he reins in his fantasy and writes of the real New Englanders he knows—and they, too, are most convincing when they behave like people and not like ballads." M. C.

N Y Times p46 D 1 '46 500w

"Everything in this new book is as neat and spry as you please, but Mr. Coffin at times falls into an unconscious kind of self-parody that is bothersome."

New Yorker 22:119 O 26 '46 70w

"Maine's most popular poet since Longfellow has turned out a fresh batch of those crispy, crunchy ballads of his, complete with salt-water tang and well starched local color. They are, as a group, lively, swinging pieces—always vivid and simple, often happily phrased, and never by any chance imbued with the gloom of lonely days and spoiled lives that Robert Frost has sometimes read into similar material. Yet, despite occasional coyness and garrulity . . . their humor is shrewd and vigorous, their serious notes effective and unpretentious." M. L. Rosenthal

+ — Weekly Book Review p30 N 17 '46 400w

COFFMAN, RAMON PEYTON, and GOOD-MAN, NATHAN GERSON. Famous pioneers for young people. 129p il $2.50 Barnes, A.S. 920 Pioneers 46-25015

Short biographical sketches of famous American pioneers, written for upper grade and high school age. Those included are: Daniel Boone, Simon Kenton, Davy Crockett, Sam Houston, John Marsh, Brigham Young, Marcus Whitman, John Augustus Sutter, James Bridger, James Capen Adams, Kit Carson, Charles Edward Pancoast, Isaac Jones Wistar, James Butler, William Frederick Cody, Wyatt Earp. Index.

Booklist 42:201 F 15 '46

"Unfortunately, presented in a manner just a little livelier than McGuffey's Readers (but not much), these frontiersmen dwindle to something less than life-size."

N Y Times p30 F 17 '46 90w

Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 18 '46 120w

COHEN, JULIUS HENRY. They builded better than they knew. 376p $3.75 Messner

B or 92 Lawyers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 46-8251

"Reminiscences of a New York lawyer covering the last half century, with special emphasis on municipal reforms, legal ethics, industrial arbitration in the needle trades, and the work of the Port of New York Authority of which he was chief counsel for twenty five years. Pen sketches of lawyer contemporaries and of Felix Adler, Al Smith, Frank Damrosch, Theodore Roosevelt, Morris Hillquit, Belle Moskowitz, and Alexander J. Shamburger. Discussion of new applications and expansion of legal precedents to meet changing conditions in business and industry." (Library J) Index.

Kirkus 14:320 Jl 1 '46 120w

"Legal, biographical, New York city and state interest. Intimate but undistinguished literary style." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 71:125 S 1 '46 140w

"If Mr. Cohen's book should be of special interest to lawyers, it should be of equal interest to those concerned with labor settlements, for it was he who, representing the original 'Big Four' manufacturers in the cloak and suit industry in conjunction with the union's lawyer, Meyer London, worked out the famous protocol which ended the bitter strike of 1910. . . . Julius Cohen has had a lot of fun in his useful life, and he writes an eminently readable book. It is full of nice pictures of the New York of the '80s and '90s. Its author emerges as a kindly, tolerant, thoroughly likable human being." Frances Witherspoon

+ Weekly Book Review p50 D 1 '46 800w

COHEN, MORRIS RAPHAEL. Faith of a liberal. 497p $3.75 Holt

191.9 Liberalism 46-1222

Selections from the writings of an American liberal philosopher, who for more than a quarter of a century was professor of philosophy at the College of the City of New York. The papers include essays, reviews, polemical articles, addresses to fellow philosophers, and chapters from other works. Some date back to 1915; some are very recent. Index.

Reviewed by J. R. Pennock

Ann Am Acad 246:169 Jl '46 450w

"Prof. Cohen amply demonstrates his right to the title of liberal. He has that combination of learning and ethical earnestness and sweetness of temper that Matthew Arnold called 'urbanity.' His essays are the product of a thoroughly civilized and informed intelligence." S. I. Hayakawa

+ Book Week p7 Mr 17 '46 650w

Reviewed by Walter Johnson

Book Week p6 My 12 '46 70w

Booklist 42:241 Ap 1 '46

Foreign Affairs 24:745 Jl '46 30w

"In a series of papers that are made up of short notes, reviews, and lengthy articles, Cohen displays the acumen and polemical verve for which he is well remembered as both teacher and writer." M. K. Munitz

+ Nation 163:163 Ag 10 '46 500w

Reviewed by Heinz Eulau

New Repub 114:584 Ap 22 '46 340w

"Students left his classroom irritated, bewildered or exhilarated according to the degree of progress they had made along this uncarpeted and unroyal road to learning. Now they can renew their contact with this evocative and provocative mind at its ripeest, while those who missed the bitter-sweet pleasure of being jolted out of complacency and cocksureness, beaten out of the bushes of confusion and harried into joining and enjoying the intellectual chase, can get all that his students got plus what was denied to them. . . . The least systematic and most eminently readable of Professor Cohen's books, it is not for that any less unified and consistent in its essential approach and underlying thought." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p6 F 24 '46 1650w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

Sat R of Lit 29:31 Mr 30 '46 750w

"Here in this book there is a lot of 'human reason' still alive and full of vigor. It is a book to help liberals grow strong." H. A. Overstreet

+ Survey G 35:169 My '46 800w

"There is a sweet reasonableness about everything Professor Cohen says; extremism, whether religious, political, or literary is rebuked"

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:88 Je '46 120w

Reviewed by Irwin Edman

Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 14 '46
1500w

Wis Lib Bul 42:70 My '46

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. Dangerous lady. 239p
$2.50 Macmillan

Detective story.

Kirkus 14:332 Jl 15 '46 40w

"Up to the concluding chapter the plot of the story is so incredibly complicated that it is difficult to believe that there can be a logical solution. There is one, however, and Henderson is the man who finds it." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 N 24 '46 140w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 1 '46
50w

"Trivial."

Sat R of Lit 29:80 D 7 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p48 N 24 '46 110w

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. Love has no alibi. 209p $2 Macmillan

Detective story.

"Synthetic but smart."

Kirkus 13:534 D 1 '45 60w

"Told in Mr. Cohen's customary breezy style, the story has more mystery and excitement than plausibility." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 F 24 '46 180w

"Diverting."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:56 F 16 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 F 17 '46 180w

COHN, ALFRED EINSTEIN. Minerva's progress; tradition and dissent in American culture. 101p $2 Harcourt 378.73 Colleges and universities—U.S.

U.S.—Intellectual life 46-2307

"A provocative book (at least, it should provoke a lot of people in important places) of dissenting opinions on American culture, paying special attention to the state of higher education in the United States." New Yorker

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p14 Ap 7 '46 270w

"[This book] is written in a terse, pungent, often epigrammatic style. Moreover, its urbane, balanced, and objective approach reflects the culture and wide reading of its author. And yet, Dr. Cohn poses rather than solves problems, and shows so great a misunderstanding in his few references to things Catholic that the conclusion is inescapable that we have here but one more expression of the fundamental confusion of the liberal mind." Walter Gouch

— + Cath World 164:86 O '46 400w

Christian Century 63:498 Ap 17 '46
110w

"In his tract Dr. Cohn observes America with hopes, doubts and fears. He writes easily in a distinguished style. He challenges complaisant thought in quotable sentences; yet he will jolt or exhilarate his reader only in so far as that worthy accepts tradition and resents dissent or worships dissent and detests tradition. Every reader must be his own reviewer, ready to agree or dispute, but at least to think." R. J. Purcell

Commonweal 44:74 My 3 '46 750w

Kirkus 14:123 Mr 1 '46 160w

"This is a very enjoyable chat, on learned but vital subjects, with a very wise man, and, although he pulls no punches, a very kindly man. Old port and this little book: a sure recipe for a luxurious evening. But will the Doctor approve of port?" Albert Guerard

Nation 162:666 Je 1 '46 360w

Reviewed by H. J. Laski

New Repub 115:145 Ag 5 '46 1500w

"His book contains a maximum of thoughtful and judicious analysis and appraisal, and a minimum of prescription. It is simply and effectively written, with a genuine sense of style. . . . To Dr. Cohn's book can be applied the remark he makes on an address of Max Radin: It can be commended to those who delight in skillful argument and the play of a well-stocked mind." J. H. Randall

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 10 '46 2250w

"Dr. Cohn, a physician and a member emeritus of Rockefeller Institute, has a most civilized style, and what he has written is a useful contribution to that body of American literature which could, and perhaps should, be made into a symposium on what would constitute the ideal university."

+ New Yorker 22:99 Mr 23 '46 100w

"Long resigned to wordy debates done in the turgid Pedagogy from which the reticular dialectics of Mr. Hutchins and the companions of his cult give the surcease only of counter-irritants, I find in Dr. Cohn's little book both easement and strengthening. I find myself wishing that I could write like that, on this theme. Not because I entirely agree with Dr. Cohn, though he elicits a very large measure of assent; but because his 101 brief pages impress me as an eloquent, clear, simple, charming and often epigrammatic configuration of a great mass of reading checked by observation and shaped to insight and beauty by reflection." H. M. Kallen

+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 S 14 '46 2350w

School & Society 63:431 Je 15 '46 20w

"Perhaps it will render Dr. Cohn extremely indignant to have any sort of philosophical label attached to his deceptively slender book—it weighs, by actual test, just eight and one-quarter ounces, avoidupois, but try to carry it all in your head and you will find it heavier than Astur's sword, 'the brand that none but he could wield.' Nevertheless, outrageous or not, here goes: it is a pleasure to announce to the nobility and gentry the first genuine Erasmusian we have produced in this country in a long time." G. W. Johnson

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ap 28 '46
600w

COKER, WILLIAM CHAMBERS, ed. Studies in science. 375p il $3 Univ. of N.C. press
504 Science 46-27191

"It was in 1883 that the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society was organized in North Carolina, and since then its annual journal has been a valuable record of the scientific work done in that and neighboring states. As part of the sesquicentennial observance of the University of North Carolina a special volume was issued containing papers representative of the work of the various scientific departments of the institution. This is now reprinted as a separate book, 'Studies in Science,' which forms part of the Sesquicentennial Publications of the university." Weekly Book Review

School & Society 63:381 My 25 '46 40w

"Each paper, of course, is a technical one, addressed to other workers in the same field but with such variety there is certain to be something of interest to any scientist. The entire publication is enlightening in showing what an important research center Chapel Hill really is." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p21 Ag 25 '46
180w

COLBERT, EDWIN HARRIS. Dinosaur book; the ruling reptiles and their relatives; il. by John C. Germann, with additional il. previously pub. by Charles R. Knight and others. (Man and nature publications) 156p $2.50 Am. museum of natural hist, Columbus Av & 77th St, N.Y. 24

568.19 Dinosauria. Reptiles, Fossil 46-1284

"Written especially for the interested layman, this popular guidebook with its many fine photographs and drawings is an excellent introduction to the ruling reptiles of the past and many of their relatives. The charts showing evolutionary progress and the synoptic tables will also prove of real value to the more serious student of paleontology. In addition, the book contains much interesting information about the fossil-hunters who have unearthed the secrets of geologic life developments, and how they have gone about their task." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Combined index, glossary, and guide to pronunciation.

Bookmark 7:5 N '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

N Y New Tech Bks 31:23 Ap '46

"The ancient reptiles and amphibians are vividly portrayed by the restorations of their inferred appearance, drawn by Charles R. Knight and John C. Germann. The accompanying text by Mr. Colbert is adroitly designed to convey much technical knowledge in an attractive and palatable manner. The book will answer most of the questions which naturally arise in the mind of the average visitor to any of the great museums where the fossil bones of the strange creatures of the past are on display."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:66 Mr '46 240w

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley

Weekly Book Review p29 My 26 '46
450w

COLBY, STODDARD BENHAM. Scholar and the sprout; il. by Dorothy McKay. (Whittlesey house publication) 195p $2.50 McGraw 46-4510

"Uncle Roger's story, and that of his partner Aunt Effie, is told by the son of the late Frank Moore Colby, who intimates that Uncle Roger is a composite photograph of his father, himself, his wife and his wife's mother. You may make room somewhere in the picture for the 'absent-minded professor' with whose vagaries our national humor has been well provided. But Uncle Roger is real and, because he is exhibited by the small boy who went round with him as Chela, keeper and shock-absorber, his outlines are softened by the tenderness, admiration and instinctive understanding with which the boy regarded him." Weekly Book Review

"This slight and amusing tale is told in the first person by a young 'sprout' who inadvertently becomes the guardian of an uncle whose brilliance as an encyclopedist is matched by a complete unawareness of the practical problems of everyday living."

+ Book Week p2 Ag 18 '46 90w

+ Kirkus 14:269 Je 1 '46 190w

"One in the line of books consisting of the embalming of an eccentric relative—and it just doesn't come off. Not recommended." J. E. Cross

— Library J 71:1046 Ag '46 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 20 '46
70w

"If you pick up the book at intervals closely spaced, and let the family meet you afresh each time, life with them will have a wild charm that soothes and stimulates. It is well young Ranny the Sprout did not keep all this to himself." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 8 '46 500w

COLE, LUELLA WINIFRED (MRS R. H. LOWIE). Elementary school subjects. 455p $3.25 Rinehart

372 Education of children 46-2062

"A textbook for students of elementary education, which supersedes the author's Psychology of Elementary School Subjects. Its three sections deal respectively with reading, writing, and arithmetic, and include motivation methods of teaching materials, pupil readiness, and remedial work. Case studies are used to illustrate the principles discussed. An appendix presents a brief explanation of educational tests and their uses." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:6 S '46

"There are still many teachers who cannot turn to experts for the solution of their daily problems in teaching the three R's. Many school districts fail to provide curriculum, psychological, and medical assistance to aid the teacher in identifying and treating pupils' abnormalities. The author's detailed descriptions and analyses of the processes involved and of the difficulties that are likely to be encountered will prove especially helpful to teachers who must rely on their own resources for the solution of the intricate task of instruction. This is a book by a teacher, for the teacher." E. B. McCue

+ El School J 47:53 S '46 700w

School & Society 63:198 Mr 16 '46 50w

"The author has given teachers a splendid book on the elementary school subjects. Her presentation of the many problems involved in teaching reading, writing, and arithmetic is comprehensive and adequate. No attempt has been made to set forth a definite pattern of teaching in these three areas. Rather, she has brought together the best thinking and writing on these tool subjects. She has given us a practical, readable volume for college students, busy teachers, and school administrators." J. M. Lacey

+ Social Educ 10:379 D '46 500w

COLE, MARGARET ISABEL (POSTGATE) (MRS GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD COLE). Beatrice Webb. 229p il $3 Harcourt [10s 6d Longmans]

B or 92 Webb, Beatrice (Potter) (Mrs Sidney Webb) 46-3961

Biography of the English economist, written by a close friend and fellow-Fabian. It gives a brief sketch of her background, then describes her youth, her marriage, her strenuous middle years, and those years when she and her husband became known as leaders of British non-revolutionary socialism. Index.

"Mrs. Cole's tribute to one of the greatest women of our generation, remarkable for her practical as well as for her intellectual courage, indirectly stresses the vital need for the dedication of both British and American social scientists to the search for truth, and it supplies insight into the demands placed upon the researcher of time, energy and money—demands which are only partly met by endowments and grants in the two countries. The recital of Beatrice Webb's personal triumphs in her study of abstruse materials to the end of improving man's way of life remains an inspiration for all individuals who advance and clarify the tenets of Social science." M. E. Murphy

+ Am Econ R 36:155 Mr '46 850w

"Mrs. Cole's book leaves many questions unanswered, chief among them how the Webbs could have accepted the Soviet system so wholeheartedly. Moreover, it is not long enough to reveal the full significance of Beatrice Webb's life, which can really be understood only against the background of the social, economic, and political history of England during her lifetime. Americans, lacking adequate knowledge of that background, will regret the enforced brevity of this biography." Elizabeth Brandeis

Am Pol Sci R 40:822 Ag '46 380w

"The volume at hand, while not providing a definitive study of the unique partnership which greatly influenced social and political thought and action of two generations of English life, does offer an intimate record of Sidney and Beatrice Webb. It reveals, perhaps more clearly than any other book, how Mrs. Webb's effect on a steadily growing intellectual circle has borne fruit in our times in a variety of state and private papers, including the Beveridge Report and the Keynes Monetary Scheme." M. E. Murphy

Ann Am Acad 247:198 S '46 700w

Reviewed by Sterling North
 Book Week p2 My 19 '46 700w
 Booklist 42:315 Je 1 '46
 Bookmark 7:13 N '46

"There are occasional bits of gossip that somewhat enliven this biography but one gets the impression that long association with these social statisticians was not conducive to a sprightly literary style. Beatrice's own thoughts and experiences, as related in her Autobiography, have undoubtedly influenced scores of serious-minded social workers. The influences of her less personal writings were strong upon her contemporaries and will continue for awhile, but it is very questionable that she will later be called 'one of the greatest women of our generation,' as the author thinks, or that this biography will tend to make people consider her so." J. H. Fichter
 + Cath World 163:474 Ag '46 500w

"Margaret Cole's biography is not a great book, but it is a good book about a great woman." G. G. Higgins
 + Commonweal 44:195 Je 7 '46 490w
 Kirkus 14:209 My 1 '46 210w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
 Library J 71:755 My 15 '46 120w

"Mrs. Cole has been able to enrich this book with a wealth of personal knowledge. Written with affection, respect, but not, thank heaven, undue reverence, it is a modest but worthy tribute to a notable woman and a still more notable marriage." Keith Hutchison
 + Nation 163:74 Jl 20 '46 1550w

Reviewed by Eric Bentley
 New Repub 114:736 My 20 '46 1250w

"Mrs. Cole writes admirably of her late colleague, but with honesty and an understanding of her friend's shortcomings and limitations, of which she apparently had a full share."
 + New Yorker 22:110 My 18 '46 120w

"This widely noticed biography of Beatrice Webb—claimed by George Bernard Shaw to be 'the most interesting and important English life story of the year'—now appears in the United States where the Fabians, Beatrice and Sidney Webb, were not as well known as their Irish colleague. Margaret Cole has given us something better than a definitive, documented, bulky volume in this very human portrait sketch of one great woman by a pupil who ran her intellectual errands for many years." Mark Starr
 + Sat R of Lit 29:11 My 18 '46 1050w

"This is a small book but it is an important one. Any person interested in social history and in current social legislation will enjoy it. But there are certain people who should be urged to read it—for example, the intellectual liberals who have some contempt for the 'practical politician,' some scorn for anyone who will accept a social gain short of the ideal goal, who regard such partial legislative victories not as steps in a social evolutionary process but as 'compromise,' or 'surrender to the interests.' I hope, too, it may be read by the more leftist liberals who insist upon Marx, who see no other form of collectivism or socialism." C. G. Woodhouse
 + Survey G 35:410 N '46 850w

"This is not a definitive biography of a remarkable woman, but it is the best, so far. It has much of the relish of the great family novels. . . The book is exciting. Do not say that the passion for work does not yield as many climaxes and tragedies, and farces as ever sex furnished to literature." Ernestine Evans
 + Weekly Book Review p3 My 19 '46 1450w

Wis Lib Bul 42:114 Jl '46

Reviewed by Wallace Notestein
 Yale R n s 36:350 winter '47 750w

COLEMAN, MRS SATIS NARRONA (BAR-TON). Volcanoes, new and old. 222p il maps
 $3.75 Day

551.21 Volcanoes 46-3335

"The widespread publicity accorded the birth and subsequent behavior of the Mexican volcano, El Parícutin, during the last three years, has stimulated much interest in volcanoes in general. Inspired by her visit to Parícutin, the author of this lavishly illustrated book has assembled a vast amount of interesting material concerning some four-score volcanic eruptions of the last few thousand years. . . The central theme of the book is descriptive and historical, but three of its chapters are analytical—one dealing with the causes of volcanic activity, another with volcanic materials, and the third with the geographic distribution of volcanoes. The descriptions of historical eruptions are appropriately grouped on a geographic basis." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

"I will venture a prediction that people who may be laboring under the impression that volcanology is dull stuff will be pleasantly surprised with 'Volcanoes New and Old.'" David Karno

+ Book Week p8 Ap 28 '46 250w
 Booklist 42:294 My 15 '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
 Christian Science Monitor p14 O 17 '46 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
 Horn Bk 22:210 My '46 80w

"A very special subject, interestingly presented."

+ Kirkus 14:62 F 1 '46 160w

"The style is narrative and extremely readable. Fills an important gap in the files of scientific books for the layman. One of the most interesting features is a report on what modern engineering can do to control these greatest of natural destructive forces. Recommended." Barbara Overton

+ Library J 71:482 Ap 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:31 Ap '46

"Mrs. Coleman has an exciting story to tell and her book may well 'stimulate some reader to explore . . . more deeply into scientific matters.' The reader will be further stimulated by the large number of striking photographs which accompany the text." Ernst Behrendt
 + Sat R of Lit 29:42 Je 1 '46 1100w

"The result is an informative and intriguing text and a collection of beautiful and awe-inspiring photographs that together will appeal to a high percentage of the reading public."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:3 My '46 240w

"There is nothing in geologic processes more dramatic than the volcano. With a fine enthusiasm Mrs. Coleman has collected their stories. The book has ninety-seven well selected photographs. It does not claim to be a geology but a storybook, and is indeed an interesting one." Roderick Peattie
 + Weekly Book Review p18 Je 23 '46 550w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE
 FRANCES OKE MANNING, and CYRIL HENRY COLES. Fifth man. 256p $2 Doubleday

46-805

A British counter-espionage agent, with Tommy Hambledon, intelligence chief, together lead a German espionage gang to their ruin.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
 Book Week p15 Ja 13 '46 90w

Booklist 42:214 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7:16 Mr '46

Kirkus 13:499 N 15 '45 80w

"Not a bad show, but slightly redolent of moth balls."

New Repub 114:294 F 25 '46 120w

"This is a top-notch spy story—just what we have learned to expect from Manning Coles." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 F 3 '46 180w

"Somewhat dated by this time, but probably fine for Hambledon fans, who apparently consider secret-service work a sort of large-scale rugger match."

New Yorker 21:80 Ja 19 '46 60w

"A-1 Spy thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:39 Ja 19 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p22 Ja 13 '46 150w

COLLINGWOOD, ROBIN GEORGE. The idea of history; ed. by T. M. Knox. 339p $6 (20s) Oxford

901 History—Philosophy. History—Historiography [47-113]

"Professor Collingwood traces the 'idea of history' from the time of Herodotus to the present day. His treatment is elaborate and severely technical but his conclusion may, perhaps, be shortly summarized. History for him is not the past at all; it is the past as reborn in the consciousness of the historian. 'For history is not contained in books and documents; it lives only as a present interest and pursuit, in the mind of the historian when he criticizes and interprets those documents, and by so doing relieves for himself the states of mind into which he inquires.'" Times [London] Lit Sup

"A significant contribution to historiography."

R. B. Nye

+ Book Week p12 D 1 '46 509w

Reviewed by C. C. J. Webb

Hibbert J 45:83 O '46 3000w

"With the death of R. G. Collingwood in 1943 British philosophy lost one of its most distinguished minds. . . His most original work grew out of his reflections on the special characteristics of historical thinking. The Idea of History, edited by his literary executor Professor T. M. Knox, is all we shall now have of the great book he might have written on the philosophy of history. . . It can be read with profit, and gratitude to Professor Knox, by philosophers and historians alike." D. M. E.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 7 '46 160w

"The book is full of controversial points. Its style is not altogether pleasing. Collingwood wrote clearly and with force, but he did not possess that persuasive, overpowering quality of a really great writer. This does not prevent The Idea of History from being a work of unusual distinction." Anthony Powell

+ Spec 177:172 Ag 16 '46 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p385 Ag 17 '46 1200w

COLLINS, JEREMY FELIX BAGSTER. See Bagster-Collins, J. F.

COLMAN, ELIZABETH. Chinatown, U.S.A.; photographs by [the author]. 31,88p $3.50 Day

325.251073 Chinese in the U.S. 46-5345

"A century of life among the Chinese in the United States is viewed through this informative text and the many excellent photographs of Chinatowns in several large American cities. After a brief historical background—the story of discrimination—the author describes these crowded districts and the thousands of fine Chinese-Americans who live there." Library J

Booklist 43:29 O 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '46

"This is primarily a photographic book, but, for me at least, the excellent foreword, with its analysis of the Chinese in this country, gives it more significance than it would have if only the very appealing pictures were concerned."

+ Kirkus 14:264 Je 1 '46 130w

"Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 71:822 Je 1 '46 100w

"To cope succinctly with her ambitious project the author has perforce glossed over the colorful and characteristic details of the lives of these 80,000 Chinese and Chinese-Americans. The average policeman working in the Chinatowns of San Francisco and New York could supply, for example, many instances of the diligence and honesty of these self-effacing people. . . However, Miss Colman has stressed, and properly, the ease with which American-born Chinese adapt themselves to American ways. . . The photographs, however, show little that is not visible to the casual Chinatown tourist and many of the pictures are obviously posed." Murray Schumach

N Y Times p6 S 1 '46 650w

"Most of the pictures are good, though some are pretty ordinary, especially when Miss Colman is eager to prove a point. . . By and large, however, the pictures and text are informative and nicely enough strung together. Certainly the author's intent is laudable, and her moral is sufficiently simple for, say, a 10-year-old to understand. It would have been a better book, though, if someone with more intensive training in documentary presentation had done the job. Entirely aside from technical excellence in the photographs, the Ansel Adams presentation of the story of the Nisei Japanese in relocation centers (to select a sample of what I mean), was so much better done." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 6 '46 600w

Weekly Book Review p12 O 20 '46 230w

COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM. Radio alphabet [a glossary of radio terms; ed. by Paul Kesten and others]. 85p il $1.50 Hastings house

621.384193 Radio—Dictionaries. Radio broadcasting. English language—Slang 46-5508

This compilation of radio terms and phrases covers more or less fully the fields of production, research, "commercials," engineering, television, electrical transcriptions, and organization. "This collection doesn't pretend to include everything, nor intend to haggle. Complex definitions have been left to the textbooks where they belong. Terms popular in radio's infancy which have since withered will not be defined here. Two such are crystal set and cat's whisker. . . The terms are listed alphabetically. At the end of each definition a letter inside () is a clue to the sense and the branch of broadcasting in which the term is usually used." (Intro) A final section contains red and black drawings depicting the "sign language" used in radio.

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 7 '46 50w

"It is a highly useful and entertaining little volume designed and printed in spritely, modern format and illustrated with cartoons that are perhaps more amusing than necessary, though one feels the pages would be much less appealing indeed if the gay little sketches were missing." F. P.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 6 '46 160w

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY. Committee on plans. A college program in action, a review of working principles at Columbia college [ed. by Harry James Carman]. 175p $2 Columbia univ. press

378 Columbia university. Columbia college A46-2947

"The following pages describe the actual functioning of a modern college long since dedicated to general education. This account is presented in the form of detailed self-criticism, the occasion for which was the common one of readjustment after wartime dislocation. Accordingly, here will be found discussed, in addition to curriculum, every sort of collegiate question from admissions policy to the degree with honors, and from faculty promotions to student extracurricular activities." Pref

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Jl 28 '46 450w

Reviewed by Benjamin Fine

N Y Times p26 Je 16 '46 410w

Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz

Sat R of Lit 29:12 S 14 '46 2200w

School & Society 63:381 My 25 '46 50w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:209 S '46 260w

"Members of many other college faculties will, I imagine, regard the Columbia report as presenting an altogether exceptional picture of the degree to which professors can be induced to work together as a team. It speaks well for the intellectual leadership of the place that able young men have been willing to hazard their chances of professional advancement in order to engage in academic experiments and to combine with others in trying out unrecognized methods." G. F. Whicher

+ Weekly Book Review p14 J1 14 '46
860w

COMFORT, MILDRED HOUGHTON. Search through Pirate's alley; ill. by Anne Fleur. 200p $2 Morrow

45-9809

Mystery story for young readers.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p15 Ap 21 '46 180w
Booklist 42:185 F 1 '46
Bookmark 7:9 Ag '46

"The plot, though entertaining, furnishes only a small part of the pleasure one receives from reading the book. There is the flavor of [New Orleans] with its French quarter, its association with Gulf pirates, its distinctive observances of Christmas and Mardi Gras. There is the fascination of a Pastry Shop, with descriptions of delectable things to eat, the prominence of a Praline Man, which makes one's mouth water. And the excellent depiction of unusual characters makes the circle surrounding Pierre and Colette, vivid and captivating." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:42 Ja '46 120w
Kirkus 13:473 O 15 '45 130w

"New Orleans in 1900 is a colorful background for an exciting mystery story. Well written, with an interesting setting. For boys and girls nine to twelve. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 71:123 Ja 15 '46 60w

"Boys and girls will probably like this because it has a mystery in it and there is a good deal of action." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:46 Ja 19 '46 400w
Wis Lib Bul 42:61 Ap '46

COMMISSION ON FREEDOM OF THE PRESS. Peoples speaking to peoples. See White, L., and Leigh, R. D.

COMMITTEE FOR ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT. Jobs and markets; how to prevent inflation and depression in the transition, by Melvin G. de Chazeau [and others]. 143p $1.60 McGraw

338.973 Reconstruction (1939-). Inflation (finance). U.S.—Economic policy 46-2730

"The CED, organized in 1942 for the purpose of planning postwar economy, has made a unique contribution to American business. Its field development division, operating through local autonomous committees, provides expert advice to small employers in their peacetime production and employment problems. It conducted a two-year study of the estimated postwar demand, publishing its market analysis, 'American Industry Looks Ahead,' in August, 1945. To develop and define national economic policies, the CED research division has published monographs on the special areas of our transitional economy. 'Jobs and Markets' is the 11th of these research reports. The program advanced to achieve the goals of high employment, stable prices and free markets is three-fold: (1) the limited extension of price control; (2) the postponement of further tax reductions; (3) the use of fiscal and monetary powers by the government to regulate demand. The authors recognize a major difficulty in executing this program." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

Reviewed by J. V. Burkhead
Ann Am Acad 246:158 J1 '46 1000w
Library J 71:1052 Ag '46 70w

"This is a source which cannot be charged either with official propaganda or with a desire to wreck our economy."

New Repub 114:845 Je 10 '46 130w

Reviewed by Harry Daum
Springf'd Republican p4d My 26 '46
600w

"The study is important to all concerned with fighting inflation and depression. The facts presented, their analysis, and recommendations made, are worthy of serious consideration."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:200 S '46 260w

COMMITTEE ON POSTWAR TAX POLICY. Tax program for a solvent America, by Fred R. Fairchild [and others] Harley L. Lutz, director of research. 278p $3 Ronald

336.2 Taxation—U.S. [46-227]

"Report of a group of leading economists. Outline of tax policies on structure of a tax system and suggested revenue proposals for the postwar fiscal needs of our government. Among the topics are a balanced budget, sound tax program, consistent plans for payment of the national debt, encouraged investment, simplified individual and business tax forms and a return of estates, gifts and gasoline taxes to the states." (Library J) Index.

"The report is well written and ably reasoned. On the assumptions that the economic problems we now face are substantially the same as those confronting us after World War I, and that nothing new of consequence has been added during the thirties, the major tenets of the report would be acceptable as sound advice. These are, however, large assumptions—assumptions which the reviewer is unable to accept." H. M. Groves

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:140 F '46 600w

"The chief value of this study is in the most precise, clear, and convincing exposition of all the pro and con arguments concerning the various tax measures, their economic consequences and fiscal results. Nevertheless, some of the proposed tax measures may be questioned. . . . The fundamental principles of the post-war tax policy recommended by this committee are presented in such a way that this book should be considered as a 'must reading' for all connected with tax problems, whether experts or laymen." Paul Haensel

+ Ann Am Acad 244:219 Mr '46 650w

"Taxation is an exceedingly controversial matter and therefore opinions will differ as to the soundness of the various proposals, but certainly many of them are eminently to be desired. However, the value of the study does not lie so much in the validity of the particular proposals, as in their presentation as parts of a general integrated program. The reader's attention is thus focused upon some of the great choices of policy which must be made in the critical times ahead. The book is well written with a simplicity which is difficult to attain in such an intricate field." P. W. Bruton

+ Columbia Law R 46:330 Mr '46 750w
Reviewed by P. D. Bradley
Harvard Law R 59:142 N '45 1600w

"The report is solid enough in most of its parts to make it required reading for the public finance specialist but too narrow in its viewpoint and too deficient in economic analysis to be of more than very limited aid in shaping public policy." Carl Shoup

J Pol Econ 54:459 O '46 600w
Library J 71:182 F 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by D. B. Marsh
Pol Sci Q 60:614 D '45 1500w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:33 Mr '46 440w

CONFERENCE ON SCIENCE, PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION IN THEIR RELATION TO THE DEMOCRATIC WAY OF LIFE. 5th, NEW YORK, 1945. Approaches to national unity; fifth symposium; ed. by Lyman Bryson [and others]. 1037p $5 Harper

301.152 Groups (sociology). Toleration. Nationalism and nationality. Education
For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"No intellectual synthesis of the varied contributions of the sixty-four participants represented is possible. Many have helped to make of the volume a considerable storehouse of information, no less so than its predecessor of the year before. Some of the papers cover practical, or in a narrowed sense scientific,

CONFERENCE ON SCIENCE [etc]—Cont. rather than philosophical, ground. Some proceed upon a high level of insight and conviction, while elsewhere one meets with extended emissions of the author's well-known views—or in some cases not well known—in either event with no close relevance to the principal quest. One or two members of the Conference itself have suggested, in the opinion of the reviewer wisely, that it might be better to include fewer topics and, presumably, a more highly selected personnel—though many of the contributors are of first rank." Walter Sandelius

+ — Am Pol Sci R 39:1205 D '45 1000w

"If, as Lessing said, 'a big book is a big evil,' this is one of the most vicious books of the season from the standpoint of the reviewer's art; for its sixty-two chapters by two hundred and eleven authors and discussants spread over a thousand pages defy either summarization or characterization. But if one is looking for a comprehensive treatment of the tragic loss of the sense of community resulting from modern science and technology, and for a treatment of the resulting group tensions on the national and international scale, this is one of the most rewarding books of the season for reading, rereading, and reflection." H. E. Jensen

+ Ann Am Acad 243:153 Ja '46 650w

Bookmark 7:5 Mr '46

"Though highly stimulating, this discussion cannot be said to have led to any universally accepted conclusions."

Foreign Affairs 24:353 Ja '46 50w

"There is a kind of unity achieved by bringing men together at a meeting and printing their papers in one volume. Beyond that, this volume fails to achieve unity of theme or purpose. Most of the papers are worth reading for their own sakes, and the general level is equal to that of any similar academic conclave."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 2:18 Mr '46 320w

CONFERENCE ON THE SCIENTIFIC SPIRIT AND THE DEMOCRATIC FAITH. 3d, NEW YORK, 1946. Science for democracy; ed. with an introd. by Jerome Nathanson. 170p $2.50 King's crown press
500 Science

Papers presented at the third annual Conference on the problem of harnessing science to democracy. Partial contents: Science and human welfare, by P. B. Sears; The gentlemen talk of science, by R. S. Lynd; Freedom and abundance, by K. F. Mather; Psychiatry comes of age, by J. A. P. Millet; Does private industry threaten freedom of scientific research?

"The arguments reported in 'Science for Democracy' are immensely stimulating and suggestive even if inconclusive." J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Ag 4 '46 360w

Booklist 42:343 Jl 1 '46

Reviewed by William Agar

Commonweal 44:335 Jl 19 '46 1200w

"There has been too much talk of late to the effect that scientists ought to be in control of things. Actually, no course of action can be wholly scientific. The function of deciding policy is an executive function, performed under democratic safeguards. The indispensable role of the scientist, as this brief but rich volume suggests, should be limited to helping the executive in the process of narrowing down the range of choice." H. M. Johnson
Nation 162:788 Je 29 '46 600w

"To talk about the 'dignity of man,' without telling us how that dignity is to be preserved; to dwell on the beauties of psychoanalysis and psychiatry (as Jerome Frank and John A. P. Millet do); to defend the patent system no matter how it may be abused by monopolies; to flounder in a fog of metaphysics and talk of 'indicative and normal uses of intelligence' (as the philosophers do)—this leads us nowhere. A new world and a new culture are in the making, and we need the guidance of the best minds to understand what is happening.

But this volume is no guide." Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p25 Je 30 '46 750w

"The third publication of the Conference on the Scientific Spirit and Democratic Faith is both stimulating and disappointing. Like college bull-sessions on such topics, it presents the conflicting ideas of men of good will and good minds. But, like them, it suffers from the failure, recognized by the chairman, to define the underlying principles of the argument, and from the tendency to leave the main track of a discussion for the sake of a minor point on which several of the participants hold strong opinions. In spite of this, it is powerfully conducive to thought on the various controversial issues involved in the relations of science, industry and politics." E. S. A.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 18 '46 120w

School & Society 63:381 My 25 '46 90w

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:4 Jl '46 420w

Social Studies 37:286 O '46 40w

CONGDON, HERBERT WHEATON. The covered bridge; an old American landmark whose romance, stability, and craftsmanship are typified by the structures remaining in Vermont; il. by Edmund Homer Royce. 151p $3.75 Knopf

624.62 Bridges—Vermont

New issue of a book first published in 1941 [Book Review Digest 1941]. Gives an account of the building construction, history, and use of covered bridges in the state of Vermont. Contains many new photographs, which are listed in the front of the book by county. Index.

Booklist 42:312 Je 1 '46

"Here are history, lore, construction details, with no sentiment that isn't larded, New England style, with hard-headed facts about costs, advantages and relative importance to those new-fangled steel things. Reissued after five years, with new photographs added, to an excellent gallery, this is a covered investment as sound as seasoned spruce." Austin Stevens

+ N Y Times p12 Je 9 '46 360w

CONGDON, HERBERT WHEATON. Old Vermont houses; il. by the author, sel. from the Wilbur lib. collection. new ed rev & enl 192p $5 Knopf

720.9743 Architecture—Vermont. Vermont—Historic houses, etc. 46-6203

A revised edition of a book first published in 1940 (Book Review Digest, 1940). In it a Vermont architect discusses and illustrates old Vermont houses and churches, and their decorative details. List of definitions of some architectural terms. Index.

Booklist 43:55 O 15 '46

"As delightful as ever and still more useful. Mr. Congdon, who is both architect and photographer, began his present study under the sponsorship of the University of Vermont, surveying the whole state with systematic attention to 'buildings erected before 1850 that had not been noticeably altered.' . . . His book is rich in historical detail and local legend, expertly arranged and narrated."

+ Weekly Book Review p20 S 22 '46 140w

CONGER, ELIZABETH MALLETT. Ships of the fleet. 178p il $2 Holt

623.825 U.S. Navy. Ships 46-704

"Picture of our Navy includes descriptions of all types of ships from battlewagons to PT boats, with an account of how their crews live and work, and especially how they fought in World War II. There are chapters also on the Marines, the Coast Guard, the Seabees and the Navy Air Force." N Y Times

Booklist 42:201 F 15 '46

"Ships of the Fleet presents an interesting study of how a layman attempts to handle an intricate professional subject. In a few instances, the results border on the ludicrous, but in most cases the subject matter is excellently treated. Mrs. Conger sets herself the task of presenting the text in language suitable for both young and adult readers, with the result that there are occasional lapses into over-simplification. . . . There is an excellent résumé of the method followed in naming United States men-of-war, supplemented by an explanation of the seldom described and somewhat cabalistic system of letters and numbers used to designate American naval vessels. . . . The book is profusely illustrated by well-selected photographs, many of which depict various types of ships in action." F. L. O.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 14 '46 550w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn BK 22:136 Mr '46 80w

"Simple factual material for boys who like ships—presented in such a way that it should appeal to some boys who are not particularly concerned."

+ Kirkus 14:37 Ja 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by E. D. Briggs
Library J 71:186 F 1 '46 100w

"Highly readable." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p22 Ja 20 '46 60w

"It will be found to serve its purpose reasonably well. Yet one is inclined to question whether the author would not have been wiser to recognize that the younger generation is today more mechanically minded—this of necessity in a mechanical age—than any generation before it and that in consequence a more detailed account of the fascinating machinery of many kinds on which a modern fleet depends would have been worth while because, if properly presented, it would have been well understood and appreciated." R. H.

+ Springfield Republican p4d Je 16 '46 100w

"The book is simply and entertainingly written and is beautifully illustrated. While it is intended for younger readers I suspect that fathers will try to grab it first." M. L. Becker
+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 28 '46 150w

CONKLIN, GROFF, ed. Best of science fiction; pref. by John W. Campbell, jr. 816p $3 Crown

Short stories—Collections 46-551

"The anthology consists of 40 stories grouped under six headings. First, of course, is 'the atom' and first under that heading is Anson MacDonald's story of the 'death dust' produced by nuclear fission, a story that was widely read and earnestly discussed by many of the workers involved in the Manhattan Project. Then follow stories dealing with 'the wonders of the earth' and 'the superscience of man.' In the latter group one finds the names of Edgar Allan Poe, Arthur Conan Doyle, H. G. Wells, and Julian Huxley among the authors. Subsequent groupings are described as 'dangerous inventions,' 'adventures in dimension' and 'from outer space.'" Scientific Bk Club R

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
Book Week p6 F 17 '46 650w
Booklist 42:226 Mr 15 '46

"Considering the extent to which writers in this field are entitled to indulge in fantasy, they remained well on the conservative side. The chief function of the stories is entertainment, and in seeking this goal they have attained a high order of efficiency. Their literary quality is much higher than the new reader in this field would expect, and introduction and preface are as interesting as the stories." J. J. O'Neill

+ Chem & Eng N 24:1974 Jl 25 '46 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '46

"Here is a collection of what is undoubtedly the best science fiction of the last hundred years, most of it written within the last two decades. Its stories should not be rejected as pseudo-science, but should be read as fiction, pure and simple. 'Science fiction is no more pseudo-science than fiction is pseudo-truth.' But 'a reasonably quick-minded reader of science fiction can readily pick up an astonishing fund of scientific fact from reading the stories,' just as an intelligent reader may learn a lot about human nature from reading a modern novel."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:3 F '46 550w

CONKLING, WALLACE EDMONDS, bp.
Priesthood in action. 196p $2.50 Morehouse
250 Pastoral work 45-22091
"The Episcopal Bishop of Chicago gives expert instruction and advice upon the parish ministry, including the administration of the sacraments, the conduct of worship and the pastoral and administrative duties of the clergyman." Christian Century

"Since it is clearly indicated by the bishop that the book is to be considered a professional manual it would not be fair to attempt an evaluation of this work in terms of universal social vision. Yet within its specialized realm the book still contains several violent jolts for the average unsuspecting layman of any or no creed. . . . A chapter on the burial of the dead will shock some laymen particularly when the bishop objects to mourners leaving the side of a grave before the casket is lowered. . . . These objections are, of course, minor and only from the standpoint of a layman. To the clergyman of the Episcopal or similar liturgical faiths Bishop Conkling's book should have inestimable value." J. O. Supple

+ Book Week p7 D 16 '45 320w

Christian Century 63:82 Ja 16 '46 40w

"With apparently no cognizance of what modern religious education really means the author finds the answer to the Church School in the weekly Holy Eucharist. Sacramental confession, holy unction, the reserved sacrament—all these items and many more of the sacerdotal Roman variety are here for those to read who approve of this sort of thing in a world eager for real spirituality. It is, to this reviewer, an embarrassing volume; in the words of the old lady, 'A label on our sect.'" J. H. Titus

— Churchman 160:15 F 15 '46 300w

CONNOLLY, CYRIL. The condemned playground; essays; 1927-1944. 287p $2.75 Macmillan [10s 6d Routledge]

820.4 English literature—History and criticism. Books—Reviews 46-5046

A volume of essays, book reviews, parodies and travel sketches, by an English literary critic. Partial contents: The position of Joyce; New Swift letters; A. E. Housman: a controversy; Thomas Mann; French and English cultural relations; Ninety years of novel-reviewing; Reviewers; Told in Gath; England not my England; The fate of an Elizabethan; Writers and society, 1940-3.

Reviewed by Kenneth Rockwell
Book Week p5 Jl 14 '46 550w
Booklist 43:11 S '46

"[Mr Connolly] has that rather smart brittleness which often marks the modern Englishman and which was lacking in the old masters of English prose. A little of it goes a long way, like Tabasco sauce. But for all the 'old school tie' cultural cut-ups in which Mr. Connolly indulges he remains a fine critic and provokes interest and thought whatever his subject. . . . He is very good on Thomas Mann, Lord Chesterfield, Gide, Modern Novels, Maugham and Forster; excellent on the literary figures of 1843; not so successful in one or two attempts at political irony and rather a bore when, infrequently, he becomes really stilted. . . . Mr. Connolly has read extensively, traveled widely, looked on life and literature with a fresh and inquiring eye and developed an alert critical sense. As with so many moderns his tactics on the field of criticism are much superior to his strategy because of lack of basic principle." B. M. O'Reilly

+ Cath World 163:569 S '46 400w

CONNOLLY, CYRIL—Continued

Current Hist 11:328 O '46 40w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 19 '45 180w

"In this collection the early criticisms of Joyce and Gide, and even those of Rimbaud and Mann written in the 'decadent' thirties, are talented; the parodies on the novel are ebullient; and in the controversy over Housman's poetry Connolly comes off very well indeed. His taste for the French and Romans always sets him a cosmopolitan standard. But even under a concession of frivolity he did not need to exume mannerisms like his journal for 1927, when he was 'just twenty-four and dangerously happy' and 'had a perfect moment as the boat moved out' for Dunkirk." Wylie Sypher

+ — Nation 163:130 Ag 3 '46 1500w

"Mr. Connolly's position among critics is comparable to Mr. Forster's among novelists—gracefully diffident, self-consciously civilized and disappointingly slight. Perhaps it is appropriate that a civilization traditionally addicted to understatement, in a time of more than usual hesitation, should have such plain-tive and peripheral spokesmen. Mr. Connolly seems well fitted, by precept and example, to preside as arbiter elegantiarum over the cultural disintegration of the Empire. His work serves more or less authoritative notice that England, long declining into a second-class power, has begun her decline into a second-class culture." Harry Levin

New Repub 115:49 J1 15 '46 2050w

Reviewed by Brian Howard

New Statesman & Nation 30:443 D 29 '45 650w

"This book pays off amply as social history, as esthetic autobiography, and as adult, penetrating literary criticism. It shows again that the English, even when they are Irish, do not lose their heads in war; and that between the wars they do not lose their heads irretrievably. And if for no other reason, it is worth its salt for its defense of the artist's way of life—the path of what James called 'the lonely old artist man,' who is so easily destroyed and so quite irreplaceable." D. A. Stauffer

+ N Y Times p6 J1 28 '46 1750w

"In matters of literature, Mr. Connolly is not precisely a first-rate critic . . . but he is in certain ways more to the point than many heavier writers on such subjects, who try to explore them sociologically, aesthetically, or philosophically. He has a genuine classical taste, he is not often influenced by fads, and he reads, and writes about what he reads, because he honestly enjoys doing so. Literature is for him not a pretext for an impressive article but a strong taste which he cannot help indulging and likes to talk about." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22 81 J1 13 '46 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 4 '46 450w

"There is no space to do more than praise the brilliance, the wit, and the frequent insight of many of these essays and parodies. Only two general observations on Mr. Connolly as a critic must be made. He is not a Matthew Arnold—he is at once too gullible and too impulsive; but he continues Arnold's tradition by his enthusiasm for France and French art. That he is sometimes a little over enthusiastic, and unfair to British artists, is of small importance." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 29:7 J1 13 '46 1650w

"However morosely these essays may be judged by the invited references to the standards of Saint-Beuve, they will give pleasure in many different ways; at the very least they are brilliant journalism, and they survive reprinting. They defend intellectual pleasures against the steady siege of the puritan, the philistine and the hack, and the defence proceeds by sortle in satire and derision. Outstanding are the appreciations of Gide and Forster, a recapitulation of the achievements of 1843, and an imaginative and not easily forgotten essay, 'The Ant-Lion.'" Stuart Hampshire

+ Spec 175:572 D 14 '45 1000w

"The straightforward reviews are apt to be most interesting, for even though the books reviewed are not of current interest, the causes of excellence are still measuring devices for all books and there is a real clarity in

Mr Connolly's explanation of exactly why a book is good or bad. . . Mr Connolly is no novice to the literary scene but he has retained his incisiveness and enthusiasm, and thereby is eminently readable even when one disagrees with his final estimates." H. L. Varley

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 18 '46 700w

Time 48:95 J1 29 '46 600w

"Mr. Connolly writes interestingly about books and authors, less interestingly about Art and Literature. He has a narrowly fashionable range of appreciation, but within that range he is lively, alert, refined in sensation and pleasantly free from the ordinary romantic usages of criticism."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p573 D 1 '45 450w

"It is one of the peculiarities of that part of the literary world which is conscious of being the literary world that it must have at every moment some one who is regarded as the acceptable spokesman for that moment and there are signs that Mr. Connolly, if not quite elected to the post, is at least a very promising candidate. This fact alone would be sufficient, even if he were not, as he obviously is, a writer of considerable gifts, to make one curious to know just what kind of man he is and just what attitudes he takes. A collection like the present gives a good deal of help in the attempt to answer the question and part of the answer seems to be one which ought to prove reassuring to those who, since the early '20s, have regarded every new literary tendency with alarm." J. W. Krutch

Weekly Book Review p1 J1 14 '46 1350w

CONNOLLY, CYRIL, comp. Horizon stories. See Horizon (periodical).

CONSTANTINO, SAMUEL AUGUST. Tale of the twain. 295p $2.50 Harper

46-7368

Story of the war with Japan. The heroine is a beautiful Eurasian girl, Tana-ko, who received part of her education in California, part in Japan. The hero is Stuart Crane, an American photographer, who went to California to get pictures for a magazine story on the Nisel problem, and there met Tana-ko. Later when Crane was a prisoner in Japan he again met Tana-ko, but by then her love was for Japan.

Reviewed by Kay Harper

Book Week p29 N 10 '46 230w

Booklist 43:117 D 15 '46

Reviewed by R. B. Farley

Cath World 164:187 N '46 350w

Reviewed by F. X. Connolly

Commonweal 44 602 O 4 '46 550w

"The viewpoints of several groups on both sides of the conflict are presented dispassionately but with insight and seeming authenticity. However, the apparent use of the tale as a background for a plan of Japanese re-education muddies fire and the ending seems inconclusive. Characterizations are realistic. Recommended for large libraries." G. H. Thompson

+ — Library J 71:1050 Ag '46 100w

"A sincere and earnest appeal for tolerance and good-will between nations and races. [The author] is an industrious and persistent pleader, but not a very moving one." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p18 S 15 '46 360w

"Every now and then, in this business, you come across a book you'd really like to like—a book whose sentiments you approve, a book you wish you could recommend wholeheartedly but can't quite. Such a book is Tale of the Twain. . . But Mr. Constantino just hasn't made his story into a good enough novel. His contrasts are so emphasized, his message (which in itself is admirable), is so badly put forward, his whole picture is so oversimplified that most readers will feel they are being lectured, preached at, and on the kindergarten level at that." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 4 '46 550w

COOK, MRS FANNIE (FRANK). Mrs Palmer's Honey. 280p $2.50 Doubleday

46-25036

The evolution of a St Louis Negro girl from a faithful but inarticulate "perfect servant" into a class conscious leader among her people. Honey Hoop might have remained Mrs Palmer's Honey to the end of her days if it had not been for the war. When a handsome Negro lieutenant returned to St Louis to fight the battle for democracy with the labor unions, and when Honey's favorite brother became a CIO organizer, Honey joined the ranks.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p5 F 17 '46 550w

Booklist 42:213 Mr 1 '46

Bookmark 7:15 My '46

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 26 '46 550w

"I would have liked to give the first George Washington Carver Award a warmer welcome, but Miss Cook's propaganda is so enthusiastic that it stifles the story. It leaves me feeling that the whites who draw 'Big Mama' for a neighbor are not undeserving of sympathy." E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 44:21 Ap 19 '46 490w

+ Kirkus 13:545 D 15 '45 300w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 162:290 Mr 9 '46 600w

"This [is an] uneven, but engrossing novel. . . Some of Mrs. Cook's views will frighten the average white reader, but there is no denying the fact that she has chapter and verse for every point she makes." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p5 F 17 '46 600w

"Two-thirds of this warm, perceptive book is a quietly understanding study of a very lovable Negro girl. . . Then the author abruptly turns what has begun as a serious roman à thèse into a sort of labor tract with characters."

+ New Yorker 21:96 F 9 '46 80w

"The weakness of the book, it seems to me, is that the picture is too sharply black and white. Mrs. Cook has too obviously stacked the cards. Those white people who are not either CIO workers or labor organizers are stupid, unscrupulous 'nigger-haters.' . . Mrs. Cook falls short somewhere in her effort to make Honey a memorable character. It is because, I think, too many issues are brought in and the interweaving elements of the plot are sometimes difficult to follow. . . For all the essential poignance of Honey's own story, we lose sight of her as a person. The book remains primarily a propaganda document." S. H. Hay

Sat R of Lit 29:8 Mr 2 '46 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:88 Je '46 360w

"This book has won the first George Washington Carver novel award, and it is a worthy choice. Written by a white woman, the book has none of the unrelenting violence of many books written by both races on this subject. No lynchings, beatings or abject poverty are used to illustrate the gulf between Negro and White. Rather this is a mature story of the growth of human dignity within an individual. . . The writing is sharp and fresh and true, and from the first page the reader knows that what he has started to read is good. Nothing false or dull in the whole book mars that first impression." Barbara Klaw

+ Weekly Book Review p4 F 10 '46 700w

Wis Lib Bul 42.60 Ap '46

"Although Mrs. Cook knows a great deal about the Negro problem and cares passionately about it, she writes from the outside looking in. Her characters are only shadows representing various degrees of race prejudice and various reactions to it." Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 35:574 Spring '46 250w

COOK, MARION BELDEN, comp. Children of the U.S.A. 3v 284;287;319p 11 maps ea $1.40 Silver

46-812

A collection of stories for children representing every state in the union written by authors chosen because they are native to or closely associated with the states they write about. Contents: Book 1, Stories from the East and North; Book 2, Stories from the South; Book 3, Stories from the West.

"The stories are interesting, well told, and informative, and they should have a wide appeal. The value of the series, however, could have been greatly enhanced by the inclusion of writings which promote understanding of the various culture groups in the United States." Evangeline Colburn

+ El School J 46:530 My '46 650w

"Miss Cook's long-range undertaking . . . has been conducted with care and thoroughly good sense, and the result is one that calls for congratulation."

+ Weekly Book Review p18 My 19 '46 280w

Wis Lib Bul 42:22 Ja '46 (Review of v 1)

Wis Lib Bul 42:76 My '46

COOK, WILLIAM HENRY. Letters of a Ticonderoga farmer, ed. by F. G. Bascom. See Bascom, F. G.

COOKE, DAVID COXE, ed. Best detective stories of the year [1945]. 316p $2.50 Dutton

Short stories—Collections (46-5872)

Anthology of murder mysteries selected from magazines such as Cosmopolitan, Collier's, The Saturday Evening Post, etc. Contents: Married to murder, by G. T. Fleming-Roberts; Slick trick, by Royce Howes; Don't come back alive! by R. C. Dennis; White carnations, by Q. Patrick; Prelude to murder, by W. C. Brown; The man who lost his head, by Bruno Fischer; Body in the barn, by Margaret Manners; Press agent for murder, by A. B. Correll; The case of the sobbing girl, by Day Keene; Just a minute, Dr. Marlowe, by M. B. Ray; Carnie kill, by Julius Long; Wish you were dead, by C. W. Harrison; The booby trap, by Henry Norton; Slightly perfect, by N. A. Daniels.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p9 O 27 '46 140w

"The stories relying on shock, surprise techniques, do not meet stricter sleuthing qualifications, are readable rather than reliable, and what with the boom business this year in anthologies of this order—you can find better."

Kirkus 14 332 Jl 15 '46 120w

N Y Times p14 D 22 '46 110w

"Agreeable anthology."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 O 26 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p24 N 3 '46 230w

COOKE, DAVID COXE, ed. Guide to model aircraft. 287p 11 $3 McBride

629.13334 Airplane models 46-536

"This guide is intended for those who do model airplane building as a hobby. Information is nontechnical and in such form that the reader who models for the sport of it can easily understand its contents. Includes a chapter on 'Engine Theory and Construction.' (Library J) Glossary of miniature gas engine terms. No index.

Book Week p4 F 17 '46 140w

Booklist 42:215 Mr 1 '46

Kirkus 14:71 F 1 '46 90w

Library J 71:182 F 1 '46 50w

"Profusely illustrated with photographs and drawings. Author, editor of The Aircraft Annual, is known to be accurate and nontechnical. This book is both." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 71:281 F 15 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:27 Ap '46

"There are other model-building books, some of which cover a wider field in more detail, but what this book sets out to do it does very well, indeed." Frederick Graham

+ N Y Times p18 F 10 '46 90w

COOKE, NELSON MAGOR, and MARKUS, JOHN. Electronics dictionary. 433p $5 McGraw

621.3803 Electronics—Dictionaries 45-9692

"First comprehensive dictionary of the subject. Well-illustrated glossary of clear accurate definitions of 6500 terms in common use in radio, television, photoelectric control, medical electronics, electronic heating and welding, electronic motor control safety devices, and intrusion-detection devices of all types. Many abbreviations based on the A.S.A. policy and extended to cover others and a consistent policy of hyphenation of words." Library J

"It is primarily a glossary for radio, television, sound recording and other electronic engineers, but chemical engineers concerned with tubes and circuits, either by necessity or by avocation, will find it useful."

+ Chem & Met Eng 53:288 Ja '46 150w

Library J 70:686 Ag '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30.55 O '45

"The definitions are not encyclopedic, but are precise and contain adequate information for students and engineers seeking to identify terms, and for reference library use. Altogether the work is a highly useful addition to the literature of electronics, which up to now has lacked, a competently done, comprehensive dictionary."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:72 Mr '46 160w

COOKE, MRS SARAH HAMMOND (PALFREY). Winning tennis and how to play it; phot. by George Adams. 247p $3 Doubleday 796.34 Tennis 46-5983

The Women's national tennis champion describes the steps in the art of playing tennis. The book is illustrated with action photographs. Index.

Booklist 43:10 S '46

"A good job, with personal illustration to lighten the practical."

+ Kirkus 14:189 Ap 15 '46 100w

"Mrs Cooke's book is on the whole the best yet produced on the art of tennis, in the broadest sense, by a woman. That is in itself high praise for the literature of tennis, although not as extensive as that of golf, has grown to considerable proportions. One is strongly tempted to go even farther, for in some respects it is a clearer and better written tennis text-book than any other regardless of sex in authorship." R. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 4 '46 370w

COOLIDGE, JULIAN LOWELL. History of the conic sections and quadric surfaces. 214p $6 (21s) Oxford

513 Conic sections. Quadrics A46-4782

"This historical treatment of conic sections and quadric surfaces is developed in terms of the contributions of the mathematicians who studied the subject. . . The treatment is primarily for graduate mathematicians. There are an author index with bibliographical references and a subject index." N Y New Tech bks

N Y New Tech Bks 31:43 Jl '46

"The book, while hardly one for a person unfamiliar with mathematical expression, will offer a fascinating story to one who has that background." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p21 Ag 25 '46 140w

COOPER, CHARLES WILLIAM. Preface to poetry, by [the author], in consultation with John Holmes. 737p $3 Harcourt

808.1 Poetry—Collections 46-3563

"This discussion is designed to encourage the reading and enjoyment of poetry. Selections throughout the book illustrate the pleasures of poetry." Cleveland Open Shelf

"The 'Open Letter to the Instructor' makes it evident that this is primarily a textbook for classes studying poetry. It is also a good book for anyone who wants to read poetry intelligently or write it acceptably. Not that it professes to teach one how to write poetry. There is (wisely) no chapter on that subject. But in learning how to appreciate and to judge the poetry of others, one may learn something about judging one's own."

+ Christian Century 63:723 Je 5 '46 170w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

COOPER, DAN. Inside your home; il. with phot; drawings by Teresa Kilham. 127p $3.95 Farrar, Straus

717 House decoration 46-5913

"How to have the kind of home you want, regardless of your income. The author emphasizes suitability, cheerfulness and ease of cleaning." (Cleveland Open Shelf) No index.

Book Week p13 O 20 '46 40w

Booklist 43:10 S '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '46

"The illustrations show more what Dan Cooper has done—and what his ideas put into practice produce, than they offer the prospective home decorator practical advice. The time is ripe for any books on building and decorating, however, so this may sell."

Kirkus 14:235 My 15 '46 180w

COOPER, HERBERT JOHN, ed. Scientific instruments. 305p il $6 Chemical pub. co. [25s Hutchinson]

507.8 Scientific apparatus and instruments 46-6642

"Not an exhaustive treatise on design of scientific instruments but a contribution of 15 British specialists and others covering laboratory instruments and those used in the field, in industry and commerce. Descriptions aimed to give a working knowledge of these instruments, principles involved in manufacture, and methods of measurement. Classes discussed are optical, and measuring instruments, navigational and surveying instruments, viscosity measurements and others such as calculating machines, vacuum tubes, etc." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:47 Jl '46

COOPER, KENT. Anna Zenger: mother of freedom. 345p $3.75 Farrar, Straus

Zenger, Anna Catherine (Maulin)—Fiction. Zenger, John Peter—Fiction 46-7863

Fictionized biography of the wife of John Peter Zenger, whose battle for freedom of the press in colonial New York led to a jail sentence. It is the author's theme that the beautiful Anna Zenger was the real writer of the offending articles in The New York Weekly Journal, which led to her husband's imprisonment.

Reviewed by Herman Kogan

Book Week p3 D 29 '46 380w

Booklist 43:132 Ja 1 '47

"Biography and fiction can be joined successfully. . . But that has not been achieved here. Aimed at the 'serious' market, the historical facts seem too flimsily backed up."

—Kirkus 14:413 Ag 15 '46 170w

"Picture of New York under the British governors is well drawn. Has merit for all libraries" M. C. Manley

+ Library J 71:1542 N 1 '46 70w

"In 'Anna Zenger' Kent Cooper, executive director of The Associated Press, has opened a rich and neglected cache, although, to be sure, the contemporary data on his protagonist are slight. . . In terms of imaginative literature it can be subjected to a good deal of criticism. But its high point—the brilliant defense of Zenger by the colonists' great early lawyer, Andrew Hamilton—is an exciting one, and elsewhere the book contains much interesting data on a momentous phase in the history of unfettered journalism." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p5 N 17 '46 700w

"As a novel 'Anna Zenger' leaves a good deal to be desired; it is written in a clumsy, old-fashioned style, and with the exception of Anna, its characters are poorly realized. It is too bad that its author did not write a straightforward biography. For the material is absorbing, the subject matter of first importance, and Anna Zenger, whom Mr. Cooper calls the 'mother of freedom,' richly deserves a solid memorial." G. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 15 '46 550w

"The good points of the novel and the raison d'être of the form of the discussion are that it reaches out to gather in the general public, a public that may never have heard of Zenger and hardly knows the difference between a government-controlled and a privately owned press. The form also allows dramatic presentation of factual report, permitting motives and implications and accelerating the shifts in the equilibrium of social forces. Scenes in the novel disclose various aspects of the whole colonial story, the ways of voting and suppressing the results of a poll for instance. However, the interesting political types painted here are often lost in the effort also to tell a story of Harrison, a wolf in colonial times, and to me the account of an Anna who does so much thinking almost alone, and is in love with a pamphlet about the role of the printing press in leading the world out of medievalism, is not quite credible." Ernest Evans

Weekly Book Review p30 D 1 '46 800w

COOPER, PAGE, ed. Great horse stories; drawings by Paul Brown. 366p $3.50 Doubleday

Horses—Legends and stories. Short stories—Collections 46-4128

Collection consisting of twenty-one stories and four poems, all about horses. Some of the stories are true, as for instance The Begats, by Phil Stong, which is about the Morgan horse. All are by modern writers.

Booklist 42.348 J1 1 '46

"A varied selection, in sound taste, which will also attract a young audience."

+ Kirkus 14:132 Mr 15 '46 130w

"Though orthodox stories of man and horse are in the lot as well, and the Irish hunting field, Aintree, and the Kentucky Derby get into the picture, the 'tame' horses that most horsemen love are somewhat neglected. And that is bound to disappoint many readers. To put it plainly, this is not a gay book keyed to the mood of the rider in scarlet or rat-catcher. It is a dour book, and this reader, for one, found many of the stories much too long and some of them mighty heavy going. Fortunately, there are drawings by Paul Brown—eighty-two of them." H. I. Brock

N Y Times p10 Je 2 '46 360w

"Lovers of good horses will appreciate this collection more than lovers of good stories. The book-jacket to the contrary, these are not 'good tales well told.' Some of them are not stories at all but bits and pieces of writing about horseflesh, often of very little general interest. Only a very few of the selections will appeal to the average reader of short stories." M. S.

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 18 '46 100w

Wis Lib Bul 42:169 D '46

COOPER, PAGE. Navy nurse. (Whittlesey house publication) 226p il $2.50 McGraw

940.5475 U.S. Navy. Nurse corps. World war, 1939-1945—Medical and sanitary affairs 46-1210

An account of the life, training and achievements of Navy nurses in the varied theatres of war from the Aleutian Islands to New Guinea, from the Philippines to Ireland. The book is written in anecdotal, informal style in terms of the young women who actually experienced the adventures and the monotonous hardships.

Book Week p8 F 10 '46 50w

Booklist 42:211 Mr 1 '46 .

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46

"A good composite picture of this service."

+ Kirkus 13.551 D 15 '45 110w

"Heartily recommended for all libraries." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 71:120 Ja 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Lucy Greenbaum

N Y Times p10 Mr 17 '46 320w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

Weekly Book Review p18 F 17 '46 600w

COPELAND, LEWIS, ed. Handy encyclopedia of useful information; research eds, Robert Rahtz [and others]. (New home lib) 438p $1 Blakiston

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 46-25049

"For names and dates and geographical information, for lists of facts in literature and the sciences, for data about banking and first aid and calories, for almost anything you might think of that you can't remember off-hand, here is a handy volume for your home or office. It doesn't pretend to be technical or omniscient, but it is intelligently arranged, diversified and up to date." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 42:228 Mr 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p12 S 28 '46 90w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:825 Je 1 '46 30w

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Mr 10 '46 90w

COPLAND, DOUGLAS BERRY. Road to high employment; administrative controls in a free economy. 137p $1.75 Harvard univ. press [9s Oxford]

338 91 Economic policy. Unemployment 445-5006

Essays on the function of "administrative controls in a free economy" delivered at the 1944-1945 Godkin Lectures at Harvard. The author is Australia's leading economic administrator. Bibliographical footnotes.

Foreign Affairs 24:552 Ap '46 20w

"This is sound economic and political wisdom; but what a pity that, while our illustrious extremists, both on the left and right, are available on the railway bookstalls for shillings and sixpences, this voice of reason and common sense cannot be heard for less than half a sovereign!" J. R. Hicks

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 24 '46 370w

"It is rather a carefully considered argument for a full-employment policy, by a trained economist who writes against the background of experience in his own country, Australia. The author naturally lays special stress on the international implications of the subject." George Soule

New Repub 114:163 F 4 '46 90w

"The book is well written and will be useful as a further contribution to a still unsettled approach to economic policy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p292 Je 22 '46 270w

COPPARD, ALFRED EDGAR. Fearful pleasures. 301p $3 Arkham house 46-22778

Collection of short stories, many of them with a touch of the supernatural, from the published works of this English author. Partial contents: Adam and Eve and Pinch Me; The bogie man; Crotty Shinkwin; Ahoy, sailor boy!; The fair young willowy tree; Father Raven; The homeless one; The Klsstruck bogie; The gruesome fit.

COPPARD, A. E.—Continued

"A collection of the exceptionally perceptive, humorous and still virile stories of A. E. Coppard." James Sandoe

+ Book Week p7 D 29 '46 50w

"Mr. Coppard's collection is called 'Fearful Pleasures,' and not too aptly, either, for together they add up to something more airy-fairy than macabre. However, his great propensity for capturing with lucidity the folk speech of the British Isles permeates the book, and if there aren't the expected number of shivers, there is more than enough poetry in language. His is the rare, musical style which almost demands reading aloud." H. B. Parker

+ N Y Times p20 D 15 '46 230w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 8 '46 50w

CORBETT, ELIZABETH FRANCES. Lady with parasol. 279p $2.50 Doubleday

46-8002

Three old ladies, with the middle-aged spinster daughter of one of them, made up the Martin household. Everything ran smoothly and according to schedule until a beautiful young relative, fresh from her graduation at the University of Wisconsin, came to visit. The young woman, trying to help her middle-aged cousin, brought happiness to both of them.

"It would take a consummate artist to make a real character out of a Victorian spinster in a dull Midwestern town in the dull '30s, so Elizabeth Corbett must be one of these." O. C.

+ Book Week p18 D 1 '46 120w

Booklist 43:117 D 15 '46

Kirkus 14:464 S 15 '46 170w

Reviewed by Ruth Telser

N Y Times p12 D 15 '46 200w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p36 N 17 '46 140w

CORBETT, JAMES EDWARD. Man-eaters of Kumaon; with an introd. by Sir Maurice Hallett, and a pref. by Lord Linlithgow. 235p il $2 Oxford

799.27 Tigers

46-1731

Accounts of the author's adventures hunting man-killing tigers and leopards in India.

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Ap 7 '46 700w

Booklist 42:262 Ap 15 '46

Bookmark 7:8 My '46

"Strange to say, to one reviewer at least, this book is an enormous relief after a diet of modern novels. The tales unfold with a simplicity of treatment, with a freshness and novelty, with a true unselfishness of action. They come like a strong, clean wind blowing across high places." Margaret Williamson

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 4 '46 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Ji '46

"Good armchair adventure—not just for hunting enthusiasts, but for men and women—boys and girls—who like straight adventure, even though it's a bit gory at times."

+ Kirkus 14:54 F 1 '46 170w

"Jim Corbett's stories will appeal to all who loved Kipling's Jungle Stories, and young and old will read them for their picture of jungle ways and the literary quality that makes them distinctive." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 71:482 Ap 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 162:576 My 11 '46 350w

"Here, without question, is one book every American hunter and lover of adventure will enjoy, even though he may be resigned to the knowledge that all his own tiger-hunting will be confined to the pages of a book. Relentless as he is on the trail of a man-eater, Corbett describes the tiger as a 'gentleman,' and forcefully warns that, unless changes are made in the Indian game code, one of the finest game animals in the world is threatened with near extinction. Here is a book for sportsmen, by a sportsman." R. R. Camp

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 14 '46 1200w

New Yorker 22:107 Ap 20 '46 130w

"In every way it is an amazing and satisfying book, instructive as much as it is entertaining. In this changing world it is difficult to conceive that another like it can ever be written, for the old India foothill country will inevitably become more and more civilized, and I can imagine only one man of the extraordinary calibre of Jim Corbett." J. W. Lippincott

+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 Ap 6 '46 1100w

"Incidentally, one learns much of the hill tribes of India and of their relation to the government in Jim Corbett's story. These men who so trusted and admired him proved themselves excellent soldiers in two world wars. Reading this honest account of them, free as it is of any political implication, one wonders about the future. It is a revealing book and a very exciting one. It is well bound and printed with a stunning cover-jacket. The photographs are admirable." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 My 18 '46 550w

"The thrilling tales of action and adventure are told in a simple, straight-forward manner and have every earmark of truth. There is much in the book for the nature lover, but more for the sportsman in search of big and dangerous game. First published in India in 1944, this American edition, just off the press, will undoubtedly be widely acclaimed for its engrossing account of facts that are more blood-curdling than any fiction."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:4 Je '46 150w

"This book will appeal strongly to all lovers of nature, for he has not only an eye for the flora and fauna of the country he has hunted, but a real gift of concise and telling description." W. J. Turner

+ Spec 177:122 Ag 2 '46 750w

"It is inevitable that 'Man-Eaters of Kumaon' should be compared to Kipling's 'Jungle Book,' and it merits the distinction. Indeed it surpasses 'Jungle Book' in realism and excitement. Kipling was lyrical and his jungle tales were filled with an ecstasy which is out of this world, while Corbett is a practical man. If he were not practical he would not be here to tell it." G. W. Bragdon

+ Spring'd Republican p4d My 12 '46 550w

Time 47:104 Ap 8 '46 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p380 Ag 10 '46 850w

"It would be a fair guess that 'Man-Eaters of Kumaon' is the most beguiling book about big-game hunting ever written, if only because it reveals a hunter who combines the skill of a matador with the motives of a Galahad." James Hilton

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 7 '46 800w

CORBETT, PERCY ELLWOOD. Britain: partner for peace. (Yale univ. Inst. of int. studies. Publications) 177p $2 Harcourt

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign relations. World politics 46-2230

"Mr. Corbett presents the thesis that although the United States and Russia are the leading powers in the world today they still need the partnership of Great Britain in keeping the peace as they needed her help in winning the war. He gives Britain's relationship to the commonwealth as well as her relationship to the rest of the world. Writing in a scholarly style he backs up his arguments with logic." (Booklist) Index.

"It is open to grave doubt whether the study at hand offers convincing proof that Anglo-American partnership will lead to peace, whatever the implications of the title or the telling arguments advanced for United States self-interest in supporting Britain... There can be no quarrel with the wish to strengthen the more limited United States-British ties;

but Professor Corbett's guidance falls short, for he does not exhaust every possible step for reaching agreement between Russia and the Western powers. In this sense, his book does not sufficiently relate the facts about Anglo-American relations to the major problem of the day." G. S. McClellan
— Am Pol Sci R 40:806 Ag '46 800w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Ann Am Acad 246:144 J1 '46 550w

"This book is another of a series emanating from the Yale University Institute of International Studies and forms a nucleus for a study of international relations based on thorough research and scholarship. The simple and direct style makes the book pleasurable reading and should give added impetus to the development of international-mindedness in America." H. W. Malm
+ Book Week p4 Ap 21 '46 260w
Booklist 42:261 Ap 15 '46

Reviewed by Albert Vison
Christian Century 63:942 J1 31 '46 850w

"Here is a book as timely as Winston Churchill's recent speeches. Almost any English-speaking person who has been stimulated by Mr. Churchill into thinking more concretely about British-American relations can find food for further thought in Britain: Partner for Peace. . . Mr. Corbett is helpful and lucid in explaining why the wartime hopes of establishing effective world government have not been attained; and, by inference, he supports the strengthening of UNO, particularly for the policing of atomic weapons." D. M. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 22 '46 650w

"A realistic, temperate evaluation of the present position of Great Britain as a Great Power."
+ Foreign Affairs 25:170 O '46 50w

"An important, timely picture, which explains—but does not explain away."
+ Kirkus 14:172 Ap 1 '46 150w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Nation 162:696 Je 8 '46 120w

"A closely packed and highly competent little book." R. M. MacIver
+ N Y Times p7 My 5 '46 1100w

Reviewed by T. P. Peardon
Pol Sci Q 61:638 D '46 350w

"A very good and a very well timed book."
Norman Angell
+ Sat R of Lit 29:39 Ap 27 '46 1950w
Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 21 '46 240w

"Although the reader may occasionally feel that the author demands American support of Britain on the ground of admiration for what she has done in the past instead of on a calculation of the advantages the United States may get in the future, the greater part of this study is nevertheless objective as well as informative."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 2:227 S '46 270w

"The ground Mr. Corbett covers is much less carefully described, especially as to economic and political matters, than in recent books like those of Mr. George Soule and Mr. Keith Hutchison. Indeed, Mr. Corbett writes for the already informed an essay on the limitations and possibilities of Britain in international relations under U. N. It is a crisp and lively essay, and one that should stimulate profitable discussion." Crane Brinton
+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ap 21 '46 900w
Wis Lib Bul 42:83 Je '46

"If [the book] is not convincing at all points, the reason is that Mr. Corbett's purpose is too broad for the limits which he has set himself. . . Mr. Corbett, however, has a singular gift for terseness. He strikes to the core of a problem in less time than most authors would need to introduce it; the highlights of the book are points made in a page or two apiece. The Indian question, to cite one of many examples, is treated in a few paragraphs, yet so deftly that its importance to the United States is brought home with full force. This is critical analysis at its best and most succinct." W. B. Willcox
+ — Yale R n s 36:174 autumn '46 750w

CORES, LUCY MICHAELLA. Let's kill George. 251p $2.50 Duell

46-4720

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Book Week p13 O 20 '46 100w

"Clever."
+ Kirkus 14:232 My 15 '46 90w
New Repub 115:86 J1 22 '46 70w

"Lucy Cores has done an excellent job of character drawing and mystification." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p26 Je 2 '46 200w

"Nicely planned, and just right if you like your mysteries sharp and acid."
+ New Yorker 22:112 My 18 '46 100w

"Admirable."
+ Sat R of Lit 29:38 My 18 '46 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p46 My 19 '46 270w

COREY, PAUL. Acres of Antaeus. 388p $2.75 Holt

46-6849

"Iowa, during the depression years, is the setting for this story of the hatred and despair that grew up among small farmers as mortgages were foreclosed and big business seized the land for an agricultural empire." Library J

Booklist 43:86 N 15 '46

"No basic problem was solved and the whole narrative seems tame and pale. As a story of men and women, the novel is not very gripping and, as an exposition of a social problem, it is inadequate. Jim is wishy-washy, Emily is futile, the big company remains, the farmers continue to be poor, and the reader feels he's found neither edification nor amusement in sufficient amounts. The author attempts to spice up his story with a bit of 'realism' here and there, without very good results." R. H. M.
— Christian Science Monitor p20 S 19 '46 430w

"It seems a bit of bad luck that so important and, on the whole, so wellhandled a theme has to be marred with occasional vulgarities which add nothing except limitation to the size of the audience for which the novel can be recommended. In addition Mr. Corey has a very difficult time with his principal characters. . . One good spanking anywhere along the line would have helped a lot. And it isn't because Mr. Corey cannot develop people to fit the theme. Most of the minor characters are solid and true. Wise-cracking young Charley with his bold front of optimism toward a barren future is a memorable figure, depicted with understanding. All in all Mr. Corey is an artist at conveying the excitement, humor, depth and tragedy of farm life. Just excuse me from Jim and Emily." Emerson Hynes
+ — Commonweal 45:171 N 29 '46 500w

"Fairly flat farming fiction, though valid in thesis."
Kirkus 14:305 J1 1 '46 110w

"All the elements of popularity are here—fast-moving plot, believable characterizations, and interesting subject matter, with a tinge of sex, vulgarity and social significance. Although this is no classic, it is highly readable fiction. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 71:127 S 1 '46 70w

"An honest and solid work of story-telling. . . Mr. Corey was born in the State and his understanding and feeling for the land and the people go deep." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p16 S 15 '46 550w

"Perhaps a novelist with broader talent and an equally good heart may one day write the fine novel on this theme that it could well justify. But 'Acres of Antaeus' isn't that novel." J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 18 '46 600w

"If the reader will do his share as he proceeds and make some effort to read between and behind the lines, he will be rewarded. Both of the leading characters are good people, confused by the limitations of their past experience, and more so by the confusion about them. Within the corporation is a picture of intrigue and counterplot that is realistic, if not edifying." P. B. Sears

COREY, PAUL—Continued

 + Sat R of Lit 29:34 S 21 '46 550w

"The whole novel, 'Acres of Antaeus,' adds up to a forthright and interesting report of some things that happened—or might have happened—out on the Iowa farmlands, not so long ago." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p12 S 8 '46 900w
 Wis Lib Bul 42:151 N '46

COREY, PAUL. Build a home; il. with line drawings. 234p $2.50 Dial press

690 Building. Dwellings 46-4776

Discusses the possibility of owning your own home, even on a moderate salary, provided you do your own building. The author, who actually did build his own home, shows how it can be done. Includes diagrams, some cost estimates, and an index.

"He has several good chapters on how to design your home and eliminate many costly features which he says are merely habits of building due to a lack of imagination on the part of architects and builders. . . . The author, who built his present home in Putnam County, New York, explains many of the mechanical processes of building in words of one syllable accompanied by drawings that rid construction of much of the mystery it holds for the uninitiated. He is frank, too, about the mistakes he made in building his own stone house. . . . The tough belligerence of Corey's writing style is certain to irk some of his readers, but he mixes quite a bit of sound information and advice with his sermon."

+ Book Week p14 My 12 '46 330w

"There's lots of sound information here—and the style is colloquial, almost slangy, fresh, but will appeal to the unbook-minded public."

+ Kirkus 14:237 My 15 '46 170w

"Mr. Corey has written this breezy book about his experiences and his labors ostensibly as a guide for those pioneering families which may decide to embark on the same sort of venture. But in his overzealous effort to convert others to the idea of doing their own building work, he has left one reader a little cool and unconvinced." L. E. Cooper

— N Y Times p20 S 22 '46 500w

New Yorker 22:111 My 13 '46 120w

"Anyone who wants to build his house by himself, and can stand the brash, smart-guy talk of Paul Corey, is likely to get some good ideas and inspiration from Corey's latest book. . . . A beginner will have some trouble understanding a few of his technical terms, and may be confused by his devil-may-care attitude toward fundamentals."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 11 '46 150w

"A gusty book, infectious and full of wisdom." Richardson Wright

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Je 30 '46 50w

COREY, PAUL. Five Acre hill; il. by James MacDonald. 273p $2.50 Morrow

46-18718

A city family of four clear a small place in the country, build a house, and plant their own vegetable garden. Each step in the development of the building of their home is taken into account in the story. For older boys and girls.

"A good story—sound values."

+ Kirkus 14:276 Je 15 '46 90w

"A wholesome story although obviously written to stress pulling together, neighborliness and elimination of class and racial prejudice. In no way controversial. Style is mediocre, but the simple, everyday events will hold the interest of girls over twelve." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 71:1056 Ag '46 120w

"For a story that makes you want to go out and create something through the work of your head and hands, this is hard to surpass."

Marian King

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 O 19 '46 290w

"The best part of the book, not only from the viewpoint of enlightenment but because it keeps the interest keen, is the constant interference of nature and other obstacles with their plans, let alone their time-tables. Another life-like feature is the vital necessity for keeping within a small steady income and of keeping the job on which that income depends." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 18 '46 360w
 Wis Lib Bul 42:154 N '46

COREY, PAUL. Little jeep; il. by Jack Zander. 51p 50c World pub.

46-22073

"The little jeep comes back from the war to find that there is no place for him in the post-war world. After many adventures he finds a farmer who is glad to use him to draw his plow." Sat R of Lit

Kirkus 14:524 O 15 '46 120w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin

Library J 71:1629 N 15 '46 70w

"This is a very satisfactory story, well-illustrated, for the child who is interested in machinery." D. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 10 '46 60w

"Spirited, amusing drawings by a war veteran."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:52 N 9 '46 50w

CORLE, EDWIN. Listen, Bright Angel. 312p $3.75 Duell

979.1 Grand canyon, Colorado river

46-6417

A combination of guidebook, history, and geology of the Grand Canyon. It includes fact and legend, some new material, some old. Includes a partial translation of Father Escalante's diary, written in 1777, when this Spanish priest was part of the de Miera expedition. Index.

Reviewed by E. S. Watson

Book Week p5 S 15 '46 450w

Booklist 43:14 S '46

"It will be many years before a more attractive book about the Grand Canyon will be offered to the so-called general reader." J. C. Altrocchi

+ Cath World 164:186 N '46 400w

"Edwin Corle might have talked down to his readers, but he couldn't have told the geological, biological, historical, living tale of Grand Canyon more fascinatingly for average readers than he has and still kept faith with natural scientists who insist upon strict reportorial accuracy. There's no doubt from the very first page that he knows desert country, the mile-deep Grand Canyon particularly, and loves it all." H. B. N.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 14 '46 600w

"A vigorous, highly interpretative report."

+ Kirkus 14:266 Je 1 '46 170w

"Fine descriptions of unrivaled scenic region without attempts at painting word pictures. Mr. Corle, writer of books on western deserts, loves this country and with profound knowledge and charming humor inspires readers' enthusiasm. Recommended." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 71:975 Jl '46 120w

"A dramatic narrative in a book that also is a thoroughly practical guide for anyone contemplating a trip there." J. K. Howard

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 4 '46 1100w

"As he has shown before ('Burro Alley,' 'Desert Country'), Mr. Corle is one of the brighter spirits of the Southwest—a man whose books give some meaning to that vaguely irritating phrase 'regional writing.' . . . [This book] is written lightly, but after you have finished it, you find that you know a lot about one of the most fascinating parts of the country."

+ New Yorker 22:91 Ag 17 '46 80w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 8 '46 430w

"This book deserves a more understandable title, for it is a superior book and should go far and long endure. Mr. Corle has studied his sources well, chosen his material with discrimination and originality; he has traveled many of the trails he describes and has known the living authorities he quotes. Better than most writers he presents historical characters in a way to put life even into a sixteenth-century soldier, an eighteenth-century monk and nineteenth-century mountain men seeking furs." Erna Fergusson

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 18 '46 850w

Wis Lib Bul 42:129 O '46

CORMACK, MARIBELLE, and BYTOVETZ-SKI, PAVEL L. Underground retreat; il. by Margaret Ayer. 214p $2.50 Reynal

46-6546

A story of the Chinese struggle against Japanese aggression in 1937. An American girl, whose father is on a political mission, stays with Chinese friends in Nanking. During her stay she experiences all the terrors of the invasion, and learns the secrets of the resistance movement. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 43:57 O 15 '46

"Though a great deal of recent history and many conflicting ideas are crowded into the small space of this novel, it will give young people substance for a thoughtful consideration of some modern problems."

+ Horn BK 22:356 S '46 150w

"Excellent background of wartime China, good story and straight thinking—a combination with rewards for the readers."

+ Kirkus 14:128 Mr 1 '46 170w

"The book is a praiseworthy attempt to make the confused Chinese political scene comprehensible to American minds. If it falls pretty short of its goal, the same may be said for plenty of far more pretentious works." N. B. Baker

N Y Times p18 Ag 18 '46 120w

"While the characterization lacks subtlety and the early chapters show the strain of trying to picture the background through the words of the characters themselves, once the action gets under way it moves swiftly and with never a dull moment. There is every device for suspense, including secret doors and hidden vaults. The historical background is accurate and is dramatic enough to carry the plot." R. A. H.

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:54 N 9 '46 180w

Weekly Book Review p30 N 10 '46 360w

COTE, PHYLLIS N. People upstairs; il. by the author. 214p $2 Doubleday

46-6848

The MacDonalds lived in the downstairs apartment of their grandfather's two family house. It was Judy's idea that the nicest people for the upstairs apartment were the Ashleys, but it took some management to get the rest of her family to agree. This gay story of present-day family life is for ages nine to twelve.

Booklist 43:105 D 1 '46

"Girls from eight to twelve will enjoy the pleasant, everyday doings of a happy-go-lucky family in a small town in 'The People Upstairs.'" F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 10 '46 110w

"This everyday story for the middle-age group has a pleasant homelike quality and a number of well-drawn characters." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn BK 22:465 N '46 80w

"Pleasant family story. . . The author has a nice feeling for the happy intensity of her small heroine."

+ Kirkus 14:422 S 1 '46 110w

"One of the best stories, of family life today, that has been printed in a long time. The children are real and so are the adults in this happy-go-lucky family. . . Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 71:1545 N 1 '46 70w

"Natural, friendly story."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:56 N 9 '46 70w

Wis Lib Bul 42:153 N '46

COTHREN, MRS MARION (BENEDICT). This is the moon; il. by Kurt Wiese. 85p $2 Coward-McCann

523.3 Moon—Juvenile literature 46-8169

Legends, facts and possibilities about the moon and a projected trip to the moon by rocket ship, written for grades six and higher.

Reviewed by Martha King

Book Week p26 N 24 '46 90w

"Suitable for children from 6th grade up." Nelle McCalla

+ Library J 71:1719 D 1 '46 70w

"About as soon as a child can listen to reading he is likely to listen with special eagerness to this entertaining work, which will last through the earlier years of his own reading. There are many brisk drawings." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p9 D 29 '46 190w

COTT, TED. How to audition for radio; a handbook for actors, a workbook for students [foreword by Arch Oboler]. 142p $2.50 Greenberg

792 Radio broadcasting 46-25155

Brief discussion of the qualifications for radio acting, how to get an audition, and how to prepare for it. Contains a dictionary of radio terms and description of signals used during a broadcast. Includes some actual broadcasts for the amateur to practice on.

Book Week p14 My 19 '46 70w

Booklist 42:312 Je 1 '46

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 7 '46 50w

COUPLAND, SIR REGINALD. India: a restatement. 311p $4.50 (12s 6d) Oxford

954 India—Politics and government. British in India

"The author explains in his preface that this book is an attempt to restate the main facts of India's connection with Britain. It reproduces in a summary form the Report which he submitted to the Nuffield College in 1942-3. Here the growth of Indian self-government is again the dominant theme, but the historical background is sketched in, and more attention is paid to other than constitutional questions. The narrative is brought down to September, 1945." Spec

"This book is adequately documented, firm and straightforward in temper, broadly informative. With India's problems in the headlines daily, this book has immediate and positive significance." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Jl 7 '46 120w

Reviewed by John Bicknell

N Y Times p32 O 20 '46 360w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 20 '46 100w

"Would be hard to find a more reliable guide for the ordinary reader through the tortuous maze of Indian politics." H. G. Rawlinson

+ Spec 176:304 Mr 22 '46 750w

"The differences in the audiences, to which Professor Coupland's three-volume report and his present book are respectively addressed, no doubt serve to account for certain differences of balance which will be observed by the attentive reader. It is perhaps permissible to say that the book at present under examination is slightly less detached and designedly more constructive than its predecessor. For while Professor Coupland continues to exhibit the understanding friendship for the Indian-people which was a notable characteristic of his Nuffield report, the interval between the two works appears to have assisted him to express this friendship in conclusions of the highest political value."

COUPLAND, SIR REGINALD—Continued

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p123 Mr 16 '46 1000w

"Books about India—whether well written or not—usually have one fault in common: they appeal to our emotions rather than to our intelligence. In fact, some of the authors seem to assume that we lack even the most simple form of common sense. Hence, it is pleasant to find in Professor Coupland an author who believes that we are quite capable of thinking for ourselves if we possess enough facts and who presents them to us in a simple straightforward manner with enough background information to bring out their significance." H. M. Spitzer

+ Weekly Book Review p28 O 6 '46 800w

COUSINS, NORMAN. Modern man is obsolete. 59p $1 Viking

172.4 Atomic power. Peace. International cooperation. Civilization 45-9803

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by J. A. Perkins
Am Pol Sci R 40:174 F '46 400w
Bookmark 7:3 My '46

"This book gives very impressive arguments why world government is a necessity in the atomic age. It gives strong arguments against the 'easy way out' of the 'conservatives', such as the suggestion to keep the atomic bomb a secret, the contention that to every weapon there is a counter weapon, the plan to put our cities under ground, and the hope that wars will cease just because they are too horrible. Cousins demonstrates that effective supernational control is the only solution and that there is 'no control without power, no power without law, no law without government.' In all these opinions, the author is in agreement with the overwhelming majority of the scientists." H. A. Bethe

+ Chem & Eng N 24:849 Mr 25 '46 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '46
Foreign Affairs 24:143 J1 '46 20w

"The urgency of the international situation and the impelling need for a practical forceful solution of the present deadlock of international aspirations entangled with national ambitions, requires that we examine every reasonable statement in the field and salvage every possible crumb of constructive thinking. Modern Man is Obsolete offers several not insignificant crumbs." D. W. Robinson

Social Studies 37:91 F '46 650w
Wis Lib Bul 42:16 Ja '46

COVARRUBIAS, MIGUEL. Mexico south; the isthmus of Tehuantepec; paintings and drawings by the author; phot. by Rose Covarrubias, the author, and others. 427p $7.50 Knopf 917.27 Tehuantepec, Isthmus of 46-8111

History and exposition of the life in the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, the narrow strip of land separating Mexico's four lower provinces from the rest of the country. The author describes the people, their religion, government, art, folklore and traditional culture. Copiously illustrated with reproductions of paintings and with photographs. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:99 D 1 '46

"The least the work will achieve is recognition as the standard reference on the art forms of its chosen area. A study of its illustrations would repay any lay reader. It is improbable, however, that it is organized with enough general appeal to satisfy most of the reading public. The book is what could be expected of an artist with a social conscience. He well used his advantages of Mexican birth and of finance by a Guggenheim fund. Had he organized the book as an epic treatment, he would have had a best-seller, for he has included all the necessary ingredients save coordination." R. K. S.

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 14 '46 420w

Current Hist 11:510 D '46 70w

"The story has often been told, and Covarrubias contributes little that is tangibly new, but because of his own Mexican roots, he has been able to link all phases of Mexican civilization into a cohesive whole. . . . There is a charm and beauty in his book that will delight those who love Mexico."

+ Kirkus 14:509 O 1 '46 240w

"A sound scientific work of anthropological value written with sympathetic understanding—a real contribution to knowledge of this region. Beautifully illustrated with the author's paintings, drawings and photographs which include several by Rose Covarrubias. Hand-anne to look at and fascinating to read." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 71:1461 O 15 '46 140w

"A fascinating, illuminating, and, above all, a beautiful book. . . . The politics and history make up only a small part of an otherwise uniformly excellent work. For those who are interested in Mexican art and archaeology, folkways and ethnology, Covarrubias has produced a book that is at once beautiful, comprehensive and trustworthy." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p7 O 27 '46 1250w

"Mr. Covarrubias has done a magnificent job. . . . A good-looking book, full of maps, paintings in color, drawings, and photographs."

+ New Yorker 22:125 N 2 '46 120w

"This [is a] magnificent volume." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 3 '46 1100w

Reviewed by Duncan Aikman
Sat R of Lit 30:9 Ja 18 '47 1200w

Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs
Theatre Arts 30:738 D '46 1000w

"Here is a book of sheer delight, filled and overflowing with drawings in black and white, paintings in fine color. . . . If any reader is tempted to quarrel with the House of Knopf for putting a price of $7.50 on the book, he will wind up with abject apologies and wonder that so much could be given for so little. Altogether it is the sort of book which should leave the author, the publisher and the fortunate buyer happy indeed." Hubert Herring

+ Weekly Book Review p5 N 3 '46 1400w

COX, JAMES MIDDLETON. Journey through my years. 463p $4.50 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 47-58

"A distinguished American's minutely detailed autobiographical reminiscences of national and international personalities of importance. Reared on a farm, Cox became a printer, country school teacher, news reporter, editor and newspaper owner. He was three times governor of Ohio and twice congressional member. In 1920 Harding defeated him for the presidency when Cox carried the stricken Wilson's banner." (Library J) Index.

"Neither informative nor entertaining, it is written in a dull, bromidic style as uninspired as are his memories. Early in the book, he says that he owes much to McGuffey's readers, and it is easy to credit this statement. . . . When he does mention familiar names, such as Champ Clark, Joe Cannon, and down through Franklin Roosevelt, it is to add nothing new or interesting. I can't imagine anyone wanting to read the book, with the possible exception of Mr. Cox's relatives and a few old political cronies, and even they will be neither angered nor delighted, so mediocre is the whole tone and content."

— Kirkus 14:379 Ag 1 '46 170w

"Disappointingly pedestrian in style and needing better editing, the book nevertheless records events during those highly significant years from which evolve our present-day American world. Lacks reader interest, but will be useful for supplementary reference." H. S. Taylor

Library J 71:1712 D 1 '46 140w

"A pleasantly old-fashioned volume of political reminiscence." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.
Nation 163:763 D 28 '46 350w

"Cox's book is written in a discursive, anecdotal, businessman's style. He makes little effort to recapture, in the mellow afterglow of the septuagenarian, the mood of the mighty drama of the past, save in eloquent contemporary inserts. He ends in a chatty grab bag of incidents and personalities. But much of the material is historically exciting and through it all runs the shrewd, fair-minded estimate of incidents and people, of the breach between Wilson and Colonel House, of the Farley-Roosevelt relationship, and the like." R. L. Strout

+ New Repub 115:883 D 23 '46 850w

"An interesting and, in many respects, historically important book. . . The most interesting part of this book, of course, is Mr. Cox's account of 1920, which is fresh, lively and historically important." Karl Schriftgiesser

+ N Y Times p1 D 8 '46 2000w

"Mr. Cox is that very unusual combination, a distinguished public servant who is also an astute observer and a skillful reporter of what he has observed. . . In this full volume he gives us something far superior to the ordinary casual book of political recollections. It is a carefully planned review of fifty years of American history, full of shrewd insights and ripe wisdom. . . Mr. Cox has given us one of the best books of political reminiscences in many years; a book valuable for its inside story of important transactions, its many anecdotes and sketches of people, and its personal record—but most of all, valuable for its animating spirit." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 Ja 4 '47 1100w

"James M. Cox had the opportunity in his autobiography to write a detailed and important account of the struggle for internationalism and progressivism in this country, the two major movements with which he was closely associated during his distinguished public career. Instead he has written a book which contains much valuable material, many sidelights on movements and men, but which is marred by a lack of organization, by too many irrelevant anecdotes and by a drab and undistinguished style. Despite these defects the book is valuable for students and has an interest for those who wish to trace the blunders we made in world affairs and the accomplishments we attained in domestic affairs before the New Deal." M. R. Werner

+ Weekly Book Review p7 D 22 '46 1200w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Dangerous legacy.
231p $2 Knopf

Detective story. 46-6141

Booklist 43:71 N 1 '46

"Good."

+ Kirkus 14:331 Jl 15 '46 40w

"An exciting story in the true Coxe manner." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Ag 25 '46 180w

"A good background but fairly routine plotting."

+ New Yorker 22:72 Ag 24 '46 80w

"Strong melodrama; Philippine color and good characterizations make one of Coxe's best." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 1 '46 50w

"Grade A—of its kind."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:41 S 21 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p12 S 1 '46 140w

COXE, KATHLEEN BUDDINGTON. Murder most foul. 256p $2 Phoenix

47-15518

Detective story.

"Lightweight readability might be agreeable (if coyly cloying) if the characters weren't such stock cardboard, from the spinster gossip to the blackface comics." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 10 '46 50w

"Blithe little opus about campus scandals, gossip gals, long-delayed romance etc. Sleuthing is adequate but of semi-pro. stature." Sat R of Lit 29:36 N 16 '46 40w

COXERE, EDWARD. Adventures by sea; a relation of [his] several adventures by sea; foreword by H. M. Tomlinson; ed. by E. H. W. Meyerstein. 190p $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford
910.4 Adventure and adventurers 47-167

"A seventeenth-century merchant sailor's account of his life at sea, printed for the first time. It is an absorbing tale of press gangs, piracy, service under three flags, and enslavement by the Turks, told in unromantic fashion, since Coxere became a sailor only to make a living and the things that happened to him in his thirty-seven years of knocking about were all in a hard day's work." New Yorker

"The editor has mercifully fixed up Coxere's untutored, archaic prose, but he has preserved his humor and his unusual turns of phrase. Several drawings that the author made at sea are reproduced from his manuscript."

New Yorker 22:96 D 21 '46 120w

"Adventures by Sea is more curio than classic, but it has the natural charm of a genuine, if unimportant, antique."

+ Time 48:86 D 30 '46 550w

COXHEAD, MRS. NONA. The heart has reasons. 287p $2.75 Scribner

46-5904

Novel about divorce. A young New York city newspaper woman goes to Nevada to get a divorce, quietly. Instead she falls in love with another man, and when the situation becomes too tense, departs for New York and her first husband, again.

"Feminine fiction which is direct, discerning, and in better taste."

+ Kirkus 14:153 Ap 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by E. S. Holsaert

N Y Times p14 Je 30 '46 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 14 '46 80w

"Many of the psychological problems are real and treated with insight; so are the pictures of Golden City and of some of its repulsive 'six-weekers.' But too often the chief characters and their behavior toward one another strain both patience and credulity, too often the supernumeraries represent, not, persons, but abstract arguments for divorce." Grace Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 29:27 Ag 17 '46 180w

"The author's use of English idiom would be blue penciled in a freshman course. The major fault of the book, however, is its failure ever to come to grips with the problem it sets itself: the causes and effects of divorce. Though Miss Coxhead repeatedly summons up a didactic manner, the characters, being lifeless, do not suggest their motives by their motions."

— Weekly Book Review p12 Je 30 '46 140w

COYNE ELECTRICAL SCHOOL, CHICAGO. Coyne radioman's handbook. 355p $3.25 The school

621.384 Radio—Handbooks, manuals, etc.

"Handy pocket manual, compiled and prepared by the technical staff of the Coyne Electrical School for radio workers, contains practical information, formulas, methods, charts, tables, rules, diagrams, circuits, laws, specifications, tests, emergency repair data, definitions and design and other radio and electrical facts for the radio repair man." Library J

Booklist 43:96 D 1 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1626 N 15 '46 70w

CRABB, ALFRED LELAND. Lodging at the Saint Cloud; a tale of occupied Nashville. 255p $2.50 Bobbs

46-2717

Continues the saga of Nashville in the Civil war period, of which the earlier volumes were Dinner at Belmont, Supper at the Maxwell House, and Breakfast at the Hermitage (Book Review Digest, 1942, 1943, and 1945). This novel is concerned with the penetration of Confederate spies, and the threat of Bedford Forrest's support to the Confederates. Mrs. Polk, widow of President Polk, is among the characters.

Booklist 42:317 Je 1 '46

Kirkus 14:49 F 1 '46 160w

"Among historical novels, these Nashville stories of Dr. Crabb are pleasant but minor accomplishments. In the realm of costume-fiction they are also something of a novelty these days, with all their heroes acting like gentlemen, and all their heroines young ladies. There's no lechery in Nashville with Dr. Crabb in control." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 21 '46 440w

Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 28 '46 240w

"Mr. Crabb's adventure story moves with a lively pace and makes pleasant reading; it is more exciting than his last book, 'Breakfast at the Hermitage', and somewhat less beguiling than the earlier 'Dinner at Belmont', and 'Supper at the Maxwell House'." Lorine Pruette

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ap 21 '46 700w

CRAIG, SAMUEL G. Christianity rightly so called. 270p $2 Presbyterian & Reformed Pub.

261 Christianity

46-5056

"The aim of this book is to distinguish between Christianity and its counterfeits in a manner understandable by the man in the pew as well as the man in the pulpit. Its purpose is exposition, not defense, and exposition only in as far as needed to make clear what Christianity rightly so called is in distinction from what is wrongly so called." (Foreword) No index.

Reviewed by J. H. Titus

Churchman 160:16 S 1 '46 190w

"For the student of theology the book will be of value chiefly as a disclosure of how a mind enamored with what was for centuries the sole world view of Christians functions in the modern world." G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 23:390 O '46 500w

CRAMPTON, GERTRUDE. Tootle; il. by Tibor Gergely. unp 25c Simon & Schuster

"Six and 7 year olds will enjoy the flighty young locomotive—which couldn't resist leaving the tracks during his practice sessions and romping through the meadows in spite of his thorough lessons on what a young train ought to know at the Lower Trainswitch School for Engineers." N Y Times

"Now here is sound value—sure merchandise and lively illustrations for a spirited text of the little locomotive that had such difficulty learning to stay on the tracks."

+ Kirkus 13:469 O 15 '46 40w

Reviewed by Marian Webb

Library J 70:1092 N 15 '46 60w

"A lively inventiveness of detail in text and pictures gives a special zest to this amusing fable." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p23 N 18 '46 90w

CRANE, CLARKSON. Mother and son. 244p $2.50 Harcourt

46-1551

Character study of young widow, left with an only son. She has three chances to marry and lead a normal life, but decides to give them up and devote her life to her son. The results are a wrecked life for the son and an unhappy existence for the mother.

Reviewed by R. J. Bender

Book Week p4 Mr 3 '46 650w

Kirkus 14:2 Ja '46 150w

"Filled with atmosphere of 1912. Not an essential book." E. F. Kelly

Library J 71:121 Ja 15 '46 70w

"It seems to me that Mr. Crane has not escaped the difficulties which face any modern novelist who has read his handbook of psychology. In his dry, lucid study of a woman's neurotic love for her son he has created characters and situations that are intensely credible and interesting. But he has written in such a way that the reader merely understands without real seeing, feeling or participation. . . . This story of how a middle-aged widow, turns down a banker, a professor and an artist for the sake of her son is excellently told. But it is violently distressing." Paul Griffith

N Y Times p5 F 3 '46 350w

"A meticulous study of the upper-middle class, but not especially penetrating."

New Yorker 21:84 Ja 26 '46 100w

"As a study of the fears and ecstasies, the revulsions and jealousies of a conventional woman entangled in an illicit love affair, the book has its compelling moments. . . . But for some reason the author wanted to connect this central theme with another, namely the conception of maternal love as a possessive and destructive force, capable of undermining a son's stamina, capable also of pervading even the relation between a mistress and her lover. This second theme, awkwardly adumbrated here and there in the tale . . . emerges openly only in the prologue-epilogue. However, it actually belongs in another novel, and the effort to bring it into this one is a failure. Indeed the whole story lacks focus and integration." Grace Frank

— Sat R of Lit 29:36 F 16 '46 400w

"With no gift for story-telling, no ability to create scenes or character, no psychological insight, no feeling for human speech, Mr. Crane has managed to produce a stale book that constantly approaches parody." William Maxwell

— Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 27 '46 400w

CRANE, MRS FRANCES (KIRKWOOD). Cinnamon murder. 244p $2 Random house

46-6328

Detective story.

Booklist 43:71 N 1 '46

Kirkus 14:263 Je 1 '46 80w

New Repub 115:302 S 9 '46 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 S 8 '46 200w

"A great improvement, technically speaking, over the earlier mysteries in this series, and additionally entertaining for its to-hell-with-the-expense atmosphere."

+ New Yorker 22:103 S 7 '46 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 1 '46 50w

Sat R of Lit 29:40 N 30 '46 50w

Spring'd Republican p4d S 1 '46 240w

"A splendid offering that you mustn't miss. Miss Crane is a wonder at stepping up the pressure without endangering the grace of her smooth-as-silk narrative." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p19 Ag 25 '46 200w

CRANE, MRS FRANCES (KIRKWOOD). Shocking pink hat. 251p $2 Random house

46-1074

Detective story.

Booklist 42:227 Mr 15 '46

Bookmark 7:16 My '46

Kirkus 13:499 N 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 F 10 '46 140w

"Fine for those who don't mind a narrative choked up with rhetorical questions, and probably also for lovers of San Francisco's spectacular scenery."

New Yorker 22:99 F 16 '46 120w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:56 F 16 '46 40w

"You get plenty of love, connubial and otherwise, surprises distributed with skill, a few nice scares and more fog than usual—it's always splendid for murder. This adds up to another Grade-A Crane opus. Three down, not counting the slayer." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p21 F 3 '46 270w

CRANSTON, ALAN MACGREGOR. Killing of the peace. 304p $2.50 Viking

973.913 League of Nations. U.S.—Foreign relations. Versailles, Treaty of, 1919

45-7480

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by L. M. Goodrich

Am Hist R 51:288 Ja '46 650w

"Mr. Cranston can hardly be called dispassionate; yet the record he has here pieced together provides a powerful answer to recent attempts to whitewash Lodge by detracting from the reputation of Woodrow Wilson."

Foreign Affairs 24:555 Ap '46 60w

"This volume was judged by the book review editor of the New York Times to be one of the five best non-fiction titles of 1945. The author, who is himself a journalist without the conventional historical training, has been widely praised by fellow untrained journalists as having produced an historical treatise to end historical treatises on the American fiasco of 1919. Beyond a doubt he has written a breathlessly readable book, with all the drama and suspense of a 'whodunit.'" T. A. Bailey

— Pol Sci Q 61:136 Mr '46 1000w

"The story emphasizes the difficulty of finding political leaders equally adept in policy making and political strategy. For specialized students the book may present few facts that are new, but for scholar and layman alike there will be interest in a pattern ingeniously woven out of both the new and the familiar."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:42 Mr '46 200w

CRANSTON, MRS RUTH. Story of Woodrow Wilson. 478p il $3.50 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow 45-10064

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by C. M. Thompson

Am Hist R 51:736 Jl '46 360w

"A highly controversial figure in his lifetime, a rejected prophet now coming into his own, Woodrow Wilson will certainly be the subject of many future biographies. Some of them will be critical, scholarly appraisals of a challenging figure in American politics, of a world statesman. Others will be efforts to understand and assay the personality and character of the man, and to make that understanding available to all. In either case, the authors will need to consider Mrs. Cranston's very real contribution to both an understanding of the man and an appraisal of his place in history." R. A. Brown

+ Ann Am Acad 245:209 My '46 500w

Booklist 42:212 Mr 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p1 Ja '46

"The story of Woodrow Wilson by Ruth Cranston is an interesting and in some respects an important addition to the list of biographies which have been published about him." S. N. Warren

+ Commonweal 43:604 Mr 29 '46 360w

"Despite its oft-discussed subject, it makes an interesting running story, with emphasis on the personal side, too often one-sided. She is eulogistic of Wilson, but critical of other figures; she presents Colonel House as a suave, self-confident but ignorant adviser. The book suffers from inclusion of trivialities of the Wilson household."

+ — Current Hist 10:256 Mr '46 100w

Foreign Affairs 24:748 Jl '46 110w

"While Mrs. Cranston is frequently persuasive, she is too much the champion. Her book is such a passionate paean of praise of Wilson, the warm-hearted man, the constant liberal, the great war President, the world statesman, that it has the effect of rendering its subject a disservice." Henry David

— Nation 162:293 Mr 9 '46 360w

"This keen and careful woman wins a place for herself as a historian by putting into a single interesting book a story that is direct, human, and complete. She has given any Wilson collection a book that cannot be spared." Edgar Sisson

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 Mr 16 '46 2500w

"This book is one of the finest biographies of Woodrow Wilson that will be written. It may not be the 'definitive' one. There may be later some heavier volume which will fix details of Wilson's life and work which are not revealed in this book. Yet the imperishable story is here." D. F. Fleming

+ Social Educ 10:332 N '46 500w

CREAMER, JOSEPH, and HOFFMAN, WILLIAM B. Radio sound effects. 61p il $1.50 Ziff-Davis

621.384193 Radio broadcasting—Sound effects 45-10509

"A manual for broadcasting stations, sound effects technicians, students and all others who use, or are interested in, modern sound effects technique. Features 'assignment questions' at the end of each chapter." Theatre Arts

Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 30w

Theatre Arts 30:432 Jl '46 40w

CREBLE, ELLIS. Johnny and his mule; phot. by Charles Townsend. [44p] $1.50 Oxford

46-7072

Story laid in the Smoky mountains about Johnny who bought a balky mule for five cents and then did not know what to do about it. When he finally got him home, instead of the expected whipping Johnny's father was delighted. He knew how to cure a balky mule. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 43:58 O 15 '46

Kirkus 14:420 S 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 71:1334 O 1 '46 70w

Sat R of Lit 29:52 N 9 '45 40w

Wis Lib Bul 42:135 O '46

CREEKMORE, HUBERT. Fingers of night. 208p $2.75 Appleton-Century

46-3767

The story of "an unknowing, inexperienced Mississippi farm girl whose father's fear of God is so intense that he looks upon the Almighty as being something like a rattlesnake. It is one of his tenets that sexual intercourse, even the wedded kind, is the deadliest of all sins and that children, the offspring of this sin, are even more evil. He has two daughters, Bett and Tessie, who constantly remind him of his own traffic with the Devil, and in a savage desire to save them from a similarly terrible fate, he ruins their lives. Bett's is ruined rather quietly; her father remakes her in his own image. Tessie doesn't come off so lightly." (New Yorker)

Reviewed by George Dillon

Book Week p13 My 19 '46 320w

Kirkus 14:180 Ap 15 '46 170w

"Well-written first novel. Recommended."

D. R. Homer

Library J 71:758 My 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by Richard Plant

New Repub 115:51 Jl 15 '46 170w

CREEKMORE, HUBERT—Continued

"Mr. Creekmore deserves to have his first novel judged solely on merit rather than potentiality. His story of northern Mississippi, where he grew up, has no haunting generations, nor are characters and environment twisted into one horror of abnormality, guilt and fear. . . Even during lulls of his deceptively simple story, he builds toward crises. By establishing the interplay of motivation and symbolism, a compression impossible to straight naturalism is secured." W. B. C. Watkins

N Y Times p5 My 19 '46 650w

"This plot, I suspect, is one that Mr. Caldwell would have been very happy to think of. Judging by his more recent performances, however, especially his newest book, the chances are that he would have made a mess of it. . . Although Mr. Creekmore doesn't go in for this sort of thing, he doesn't blink at any of the ugly places, and the impression we get from his book is one of complete honesty and sincerity. What makes it more than ordinarily worth while is that he sees his characters not as monsters, degenerates, or sex-maddened savages but as human beings." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 22:93 My 11 '46 500w

Reviewed by Jonathan Daniels

Sat R of Lit 29:22 Ag 10 '46 360w

Reviewed by W. M. Kunstler

Weekly Book Review p13 Jl 14 '46 650w

CREEKMORE, RAYMOND. Lokoshi learns to hunt seals; il. by [the author]. [48p] $1.75 Macmillan

46-8620

Illustrated story about the first hunting trip of a young Eskimo boy. Shows how igloos are built, and how seals are killed.

Booklist 43:157 Ja 15 '47

"It is a very simple story of dog teams, of building an ice house, of a seal hunt and seeing the aurora borealis. The type is good and the appearance attractive."

+ Horn Bk 22:348 S '46 60w

Kirkus 14:383 Ag 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by N. L. Rathbun

Library J 71:1719 D 1 '46 60w

"The artless story is told in the first person as flatly as a child might write a composition called 'A Winter Experience,' but this is a picture book, and a small child will follow the story through the fine lithographs which illustrate it. Lokoshi and his family and friends have a simple, amiable and authentic look to them, and the snowscapes are particularly successful, with a fine use of white space to suggest the white reaches of the Far North." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p31 Ja 19 '47 180w

"Beautiful lithographs made on stone illustrate fully an interesting story about Lokoshi's people."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:58 N 9 '46 50w

"The lithographs of Mr. Creekmore accompany his story so successfully that one scarcely realizes which is leading its action. This makes the book ideal for children interested in child life in far countries but as yet unable to read about it; the full-page lithographs in action chain his attention while some one reads the accompanying text. . . I have seldom seen a picture book that brings the Arctic and its people so near to us." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 D 15 '46 180w

CRESPI, PACHITA. Gift of the earth. [32p] il $1.25 Scribner

46-6398

Story of three little Costa Rican girls whose father dug up a red clay doll which the children immediately adopted. When the doll was found to be very valuable, it was sent to the United States as a museum exhibit and three modern dolls dispatched from the States came to Claudia, Mária, and Teresa.

"Costa Rican customs and antiquities are revealed in both illustrations and text of this friendly story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:459 N '46 100w

Kirkus 14:421 S 1 '46 50w

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald

Library J 71:1334 O 1 '46 70w

Sat R of Lit 29:30 D 14 '46 150w

"First Christmas story for the year, this brilliantly colored little book is a year-round affair. . . The pictures are droll and bright and the little book is pretty as a picture." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 O 27 '46 180w

CRESSON, WILLIAM PENN. James Monroe. 577p il $5 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Monroe, James

This biography of "the last of the Virginians," was left incomplete at the time of its author's death in 1932, and has passed thru several hands in its various stages of preparation for publishing. The full course of Monroe's life is traced, including his poverty-stricken years in New York, where he died in 1831. Bibliography. Index.

"This study by the late Prof. Cresson constitutes a rediscovery that needed to be done, a revaluation of a significant personage in our past. It is thorough, scholarly, readable though huge, and clearly the definitive biography of Monroe to date." R. B. Nye

+ Book Week p5 N 24 '46 550w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews

Commonweal 45:282 D 27 '46 140w

"The style is clear and unaffected, making instructive reading."

+ Current Hist 11:509 D '46 100w

"A sympathetic, well-balanced and interesting study, which is also a valuable account of the stirring years of American history in which President Monroe participated. . . Recommended for American history collections and for general reading." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 71:1623 N 15 '46 140w

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger

New Repub 115:928 D 30 '46 400w

"Cresson is ample but along thoroughly old-fashioned lines. The result is a long, plodding biography, sincere and competent, but without much spark or insight. It does not add a great deal to Morgan's earlier biography, and, for all its generally laudatory tone, it is not likely to cause any upward revision in the current estimate of Monroe's place in American history." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

Sat R of Lit 29:17 N 23 '46 500w

Reviewed by Dumas Malone

Weekly Book Review p2 Ja 19 '47 1750w

CRESTON, DORMER, pseud. See Baynes, D. J.

CRIPPS, SIR STAFFORD. Towards Christian democracy. 101p $2 Philosophical lib. [5s Allen, G]

261 Sociology, Christian, Christianity

47-170

"Sir Stafford Cripps, Great Britain's President of the Board of Trade, and one of the outstanding liberal statesmen of our time, sums up in this small volume, what he considers the only straight path left to an atom-endangered world. In Sir Stafford's opinion, this war has revealed the heights of nobility which men and women can achieve, their will to combine in a common ideal in order to fight against evil reactionary forces. Sir Stafford contends that we may well bring this spirit into our peace-time life; instead of returning to our pre-war scramble and enmity, let us strengthen ourselves with the same common object, the same common ideal of Christian democracy." Publisher's note

- Reviewed by J. O. Supple
Book Week p8 N 3 '46 360w
- Reviewed by Carlyle King
Canadian Forum 26:190 N '46 140w
- "The volume stands about where the social gospel in America did twenty years ago, enunciating general principles but giving little help for their implementation." E. E. Aubrey
Crozer Q 24:90 Ja '47 110w
- Foreign Affairs 25:338 Ja '47 20w
- Manchester Guardian p3 D 5 '45 250w
- Reviewed by Sidney Dark
New Statesman & Nation 31:31 Ja 12 '46 300w
- San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 1 '46 170w
- "There are not so many books on personal religion by Cabinet Ministers that we can afford to disregard one when it comes. For it is personal religion pure and simple that is the central theme of this arresting little volume." H. W. H.
- + Spec 175.414 N 2 '45 550w
- "Sir Stafford is not to be blamed for asserting truths which, however old, are still important, yet his great intellectual qualities might have been more profitably applied to elucidating the fundamentals of Christian social teaching rather than to summarizing its content. A more serious defect is that the particular virtues which Sir Stafford commends are not those of which his readers are likely to be most in need."
- Times [London] Lit Sup p584 D 8 '45 550w
- "This book, by a prominent member of Great Britain's Labor Cabinet, is a very ordinary piece of work. One seeks in vain for a new idea, or a fresh statement of an old one. The book is repetitious. It is awkwardly put together and it is badly written. Yet it is strangely impressive." J. H. Holmes
- + Weekly Book Review p50 D 1 '46 360w

CRISPIN, EDMUND, pseud. See Montgomery, R. B.

CROCKER, JOAN. Singing cart; ill. by [the author]. 86p $2 Morrow

45-10471

Story about two Sicilian children, Angela and her brother Nicolo, who acquired a little painted cart and a most individual little donkey to draw it. When the question of the donkey's maintenance loomed large the children went on a tour, with the owner of a marionette show, and everyone was happy. For ages nine to eleven.

Booklist 42:185 F 1 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn BK 22:133 Mr '46 80w

"Though occasionally sentimental it is in general a successful story, interesting background."

+ Kirkus 13:472 O 15 '45 80w

"Background is not very realistic and characters are wooden. Colorful and appropriate illustrations by the author." J. E. Lynch
Library J 71:123 Ja 15 '46 70w

N Y Times p16 F 10 '46 140w

"A charming story. . . The author-artist shows in both text and pictures her humor and her appreciation of Taormina and its background. Her quaint characters and the local color will appeal to adults as well as to children." M. C. Dodd

+ Sat R of Lit 29:45 Ja 19 '46 300w
Wis Lib Bul 42:61 Ap '46

CROCKETT, JAMES. Lullaby with lugs. 250p $2 Crown

46-8531

Mystery story.

"Its materials have been gathered and eclectically but its assortment of violence is a little fresher than run-of-the-slaughterhouse thrillers." James Sandoe

Book Week p4 D 22 '46 40w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 8 '46 30w

Sat R of Lit 29:28 D 21 '46 50w

"A good-natured item, ribald in spots." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Ja 26 '47 120w

CROFT, TERRELL WILLIAMS, ed. Steam power plant auxiliaries and accessories; rev. by D. J. Duffin. 2d ed 583p il $5 (25s) McGraw

621.197 Steam plants 46-5732

"Compared with the first edition [Book Review Digest, 1922], the text has been extensively enlarged and revised to conform with current practice, particularly on pumping machinery, boiler feeding apparatus, economizers, feed-water heaters, steam traps, and steam power plant piping. New material treats of such topics as evaporators, deaerators, air preheaters, piping maintenance, and cavitation. An appendix of tables and data has been added, including a table of motor applications for boiler-feed pumps. Each of the twelve sections of the text is followed by questions and problems, with detailed solutions of the latter given at the end of the book." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 43:55 O 15 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:128 S 1 '46 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:45 Jl '46

CRONIN, JOHN FRANCIS. Economic analysis and problems. 623p $3.75 Am. bk.

330 Economics 45-9978

"[This volume] is designed to give the student a comprehensive introduction to modern economic life. It not only tells how the economic system works; it explains why it behaves in a given manner. Extensive reading lists follow each chapter, and in the Appendix suggestions are given as to further source material." Special Libraries

"Undergraduate students will find this textbook for the introductory economics course interesting and thought-provoking because it does not confront them with mere arid economic theory. The author, professor of economics at St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore, has fused theory with description most effectively. . . The treatment of communism and fascism shows a regrettable lack of the objectivity and balance which are present in the remainder of the book." J. P. Goldberg

+ Ann Am Acad 244:223 Mr '46 600w

"Father Cronin on more than one occasion points out in discussing current economic problems that what is socially desirable must be limited by that which is socially feasible. It would, however, have added to the comprehensiveness of the text if he had indicated to a larger degree in how far these programs, in his estimation, might be both desirable and feasible today. The natural expectation of the reader is not met. He is left largely to draw his own conclusions. To have called attention to those features of the work which seem capable of improvement should not detract from its genuine merits. Father Cronin brings into constant play his wide knowledge of economics and its related fields. He presents in a spirit of detachment and caution the divergent points of view on principles, problems, and policies. He provides an abundant bibliography to guide further study. He presents his message in attractive literary form." J. B. Kenkel

+ Cath World 163:185 My '46 550w

"The instructor and the student will find this book teachable and readable, interpretive of the main body of American economic thought, but not especially profound nor provocative." E. Z. Palmer

+ Social Studies 37:186 Ap '46 480w
Special Libraries 34:53 F '46

CROOK, GEORGE. General George Crook; his autobiography; edited and annotated by Martin F. Schmitt. 326p il maps $3 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Indians of North America—Wars 46-2005

"The Crook autobiography, which was written between 1885 and 1890, covers the period from 1852, when George Crook graduated from West Point, to June 18, 1876, the day after the Battle of the Rosebud. Here the story breaks off abruptly; the sudden death of the General in 1890 prevented completion. This 'rugged biography' is here presented as General Crook wrote it. The flavor of the West is strong in it; certain words and expressions characterize the writer more than long descriptions. Changes in grammar or corrections of phrase would have damaged one of the greatest assets of the original. They have, therefore, not been made. Even the names of individual Indians have been preserved as Crook wrote them." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"The autobiography is well edited, and the account of the remainder of his life is written better than Crook wrote his autobiography. The autobiography, unknown to historians until rediscovered by the editor in the library of the Army War College in Washington in 1942, adds relatively little to the history of our Indian wars. It certainly does not add to the renown of the United States Army. Only infrequently is there praise of any man or any thing. Crook found fault with most frontier civilians, with his troops, with his fellow officers, and with his superiors. He did occasionally put in a kind word for the Indians and often worked fearlessly in their behalf. Indian agents he held in contempt and charged that they, together with Indian traders, provoked nearly all Indian wars. The book contains four good maps and sixteen interesting illustrations." R. N. Richardson

+ — Am Hist R 52:146 O '46 400w

"No great shakes as an intellectual, Crook has left no especially interesting comments on the strenuous scenes he saw. To him the enemy was merely the enemy, be he red savage or Virginia cavalier. . . Crook's narrative of the Indian Wars is far more important to history than his words on the Civil War." Lloyd Lewis

Book Week p12 Mr 31 '46 270w

"It has taken more than half a century for the autobiography of Gen. George Crook to come to light, but now that it is here no student of the Civil War or of the West can afford to ignore it." Freeman Cleaves

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 31 '46 1200w

"Although this book contains passages that make good reading, its chief value remains its presentation of source material hitherto not readily available. No clear picture of Crook or his career emerges. Being an autobiography, it is only partly revelatory; as Clarence Day said, most men wear masks. Sergeant Schmitt's footnotes, illuminating though they often are, and his additions and appendices fail to redeem a blurred impression." Fairfax Downey

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:41 Je 8 '46 750w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman

Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 28 '46 800w

"Thorough annotation reveals surprisingly few errors in recollection. The book, therefore, has much of the freshness and reliability of a journal rather than the dubious and musty special pleading of the average memoir. It is indispensable to the student of the Indian wars of the West and of the 'old army,' useful on the Civil War in the Appalachian section, and provides an enjoyable evening or two for the general reader."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:188 S '46 350w

"The autobiography is meticulously edited. Careful research has rounded it out where more information is needed. The maps are adequate and the whole work is presented in such a way as to make it a valuable item in one phase of Western history." Avery Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p38 Ap 14 '46 900w

CROSBY, ELISHA OSCAR. Memoirs; reminiscences of California and Guatemala from 1849 to 1864; ed. by C. A. Barker. 119p il $2.75 Huntington lib.

979.4 California—Description and travel. California—History. Guatemala. 45-8788

"Elisha Crosby, a New Yorker in early California, was an important figure in mining, law, and the creation of the first state constitution. His Memoirs, here published for the first time, illuminate the issues of that day, especially those connected with the Monterey Convention of 1849, and the admission of California into the Union. . . After twelve years in northern California, Crosby returned east to attend the inauguration of Lincoln, and to see the excitement attending the secession. Since he maintained his New York law connections, some of which were on behalf of firms doing business with Central America, he was appointed by Lincoln as Minister to Guatemala in 1861." U S Quarterly Bkl

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:22 Mr '46 280w

"The memoirs were written after old age and failing eyesight had slowed down Crosby's active and varied career. They suffer from the defects usual in such retrospective narratives: bad proportion and misplaced emphasis, occasional inaccuracies due to faulty memory or a failure to check with known authorities, chiefly to a deplorable lack of completeness and continuity. Most of the narrative's gaps, however, the editor has bridged in his admirable introduction, and as it stands the little book is a welcome addition to Californiana, often salty and amusing, always readable." Oscar Lewis

+ — Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 13 '46 750w

CROSBY, KATHARINE. Blue-water men and other Cape Codders. 288p il $3.50 Macmillan

974.49 Cape Cod 46-5174

Articles about Cape Cod, its old roads and houses, and the people who make it a place apart. The author, a descendant of the early Cape Codders, has spent much time wandering about the Cape, and some of her material first appeared in the Cape Cod magazine and the Boston Transcript. Illustrated with photographs. Map on end papers.

"'Blue-Water Men and other Cape Codders' will make diverting stay-at-home summertime reading—or, if you're traveling to Cape Cod this season, it will serve you as an invaluable guide-book." F. H. Bullock

+ Book Week p3 Jl 21 '46 500w

Booklist 43:12 S '46

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 26 '46 500w

Current Hist 11:328 O '46 30w

"Not a guide book but atmosphere provoking, curiosity rousing. At times the enthusiasm becomes a bit over lyrical, the general effect is that of holiday-sharing."

Kirkus 14:266 Je 1 '46 110w

"Her discerning sense has resulted in a collection of stories that have the special range and flavor of that satisfying land." M. C. Manley

+ Library J 71:975 Jl '46 140w

Reviewed by Jane Volles

San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 15 '46 350w

Spring'd Republican p4d Jl 21 '46 480w

"An excellent and charming addition to the long list of books about Cape Cod. The author has the 'feeling' of the Cape very strongly and this gives her work added authenticity." Lincoln Colcord

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ag 4 '46 1400w

CROSS, JOHN KEIR. The angry planet. 239p $2 Coward-McCann [8s 6d Lunn]

46-7564

A fantastic adventure story described in the subtitle as: "An authentic first-hand account of a journey to Mars in the space-ship Albatross, compiled from notes and records by various members of the expedition."

"The Angry Planet . . . really had us going. We were spellbound. . . . What happened on the peculiar planet . . . has us convinced that either Mr. Cross has one of the most inventive minds of this generation, or else he has been there himself. Read it and see; you can give it to the children afterward." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:166 D '46 90w

Book Week p3 N 10 '46 220w

Booklist 43:172 F 1 '47

"A fascinating but nightmarish pseudo-scientific adventure that might keep young children awake but will thrill the junior and senior high school readers for whom it is meant. Clever illustrations in black and white by Robin Jacques supplement the text." A. M. Wetherell

Library J 71:1546 N 1 '46 70w

"Mr. Cross succeeds wonderfully in making everything sound not only possible, but absolutely true. He never descends to the statistic-and-formulae talk of the popularized science magazines; he simply states flatly that Dr. McGillivray has a fuel which will take his rocket to Mars, and that is that." Creighton Peet

+ N Y Times p2 N 10 '46 230w

"Inevitably, this book will be compared to Jules Verne. It is more convincing because we live today in a different world. The method of revealing the details is clever and curiously interesting. This reviewer could not put the book down until the record was finished. Illustrations as strange and unfamiliar as the Martian record add to the book's effectiveness." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:64 N 9 '46 320w

Weekly Book Review p36 N 10 '46 550w

CROSS, JOHN KEIR. The other passenger. 320p $2.75 Lippincott [12s 6d Westhouse]

46-5287

Collection of eighteen horror or terror stories by a Scottish writer. The stories are divided into so-called portraits and mysteries.

"Here are 18 tales of the grotesque and terrible (with a ghost or two) by a Scottish writer whose capacity to conceive a shocking situation is generally a good deal greater than his capacity to realize it. Sometimes as in his title story, the conception itself is misty, and this fragmentary account of a double man is more irritating than frightening. . . . Cross often builds slowly to a conclusion the reader can foresee. And as his tales, in spite of some pungent and touching incidental observation, are nearly all pieces which lean upon a surprise at the close, this vitiates their effectiveness even on a first reader." James Sandoe

+ Book Week p7 J1 28 '46 230w

Kirkus 14:257 Je 1 '46 130w

"This collection of tales is written by a master of characterization, an author who selects with unerring discrimination the emotions, incidents and inevitabilities calculated to produce enjoyment for his readers—of whom there will be many. Recommended for general purchase." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 71:977 J1 '46 140w

"[This] is an aggravating book: Mr. Cross has so much ability it's hard to understand why so many of these tales miss fire. However, 'Couleur de Rose' is a knockout." E. H.

+ New Repub 115:302 S 9 '46 40w

"The ghost stories, quiet and remote, give the effect of frustration. The horror tales generally end in violence, leaving small choice between murder and suicide. At his best ghosting, as in a story like 'Esmeralda,' the author mixes understandable frustration with bloody horror, creates a ghostish character who is ephemeral enough, together with being convincingly evil, to provoke the disastrous collapse of the sinning mortal of the story." B. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p16 J1 28 '46 500w

"Many of the plots are worthy of John Collier; and if Keir Cross' style is a bit wordy and explicit for full ironic impact, he can still be welcomed gladly to the macabre field in which he has so lamentably few competitors." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 22 '46

60w

"We may put this book down as a collection of stabs at one of the most elusive targets in literature: the easy suspension of disbelief; and I think the reader will find the swordsmanship everywhere interesting, even when the touch is not palpably made." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:22 Ag 10 '46 550w

"The author occasionally wanders off his literary track. 'Absence of Mind' and 'Cyclamen Brown' are two stories in which the elements of horror and of the uncanny are lacking. These pieces seem to be strangely out of place in a collection of Gothic writing. . . . Most of the stories leave you strangely disturbed, slightly at odds with normality. Like the hero of 'The Other Passenger,' one of the most effective pieces in the book, you suddenly feel beyond the yellow circle of your reading lamp there's something waiting, waiting to pounce. The bristles on the back of your neck rise up, a shiver runs down your spine and the author has achieved his purpose." Edwin Fadiman, Jr.

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 18 '46 450w

CROUCH, WINSTON WINFORD, and MC-HENRY, DEAN EUGENE. California government; politics and administration. 344p $3 Univ. of Calif.

353.9794 California—Politics and government
A45-4531

"The book was prepared as a text or manual of government and administration. As such, it carries the conventional chapters on the state constitution, elections, the three departments of government, forms of local government, finance, personnel administration, and seven chapters describing administrative services and functions in the state. Included in these chapters, together with the details of organization and operation, are some references to the historical development of principles and slight comparisons with practices in other states. . . . Chapter IV, 'Politics: California Model,' is interestingly written and carries local color. On the other hand, the chapter, 'The Initiative, Referendum, Recall,' is a factual and detailed account of attempts at popular control. The problem of legislative apportionment, the split-session, the selection of judicial officers, the administrative functions of the judicial council, etc.—features of the government which are generally regarded by outsiders as no less typically Californian than the Redwoods or Death Valley—are quietly but adequately presented." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

"A splendid contribution to the newer stock of studies in state and local government. . . . The reader who anticipates more than a clear, complete, and instructive description of government and politics will be disappointed. The book is not, nor was it intended to be, an analytical or critical study of institutions and practices. The out-of-state student who has been told of the distinctive features of California government will likewise be disappointed. . . . All in all, the book is a well-organized, well-balanced, and substantial text." H. M. Dorr

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:160 F '46 380w

"[The book] should accomplish quite satisfactorily its avowed objective of serving both college students and citizens. . . . Should attract both professional and casual readers who are not Californians." J. M. Pfiffner

+ Ann Am Acad 244:201 Mr '46 310w

"[This book is] a skeleton of facts about the nature and workings of one state's government, the unfinished raw material for a book of wider application and value which would criticize and evaluate the functioning of various features of that government in terms applicable to studies of state government in general. Even its usefulness as a source of factual material is lessened by spotty documentation and by chapter bibliographies which contain a large percentage of unpublished papers not readily accessible. On the whole, however, the publisher's recommendation of the book as a textbook, reference manual, or citizen's handbook is amply justified; and books of this type concerning the governments of individual states are needed before comprehensive works dealing with state government throughout the nation are feasible. The book is valuable in its present form, but it is to be regretted that its potentialities were not more nearly realized."

CROUCH, W. W.—Continued

+ — Harvard Law R 59:1022 J1 '46 550w

"Although this work was completed in 1945, the Preface informs the reader that it was 'planned and most of it written' before the war, and was brought to date and published when the authors were separated; the result is that statistics (including those basically unaffected by war) are not current and that text illustrations after 1941 are few. It is somewhat disappointing that the authors apparently felt that a short conclusion regarding trends, evaluations, comparisons with other states was unessential. Nevertheless as the first work of its kind in and on California it is highly commendable both as a textbook and as a reference item. The style is clear and readable, the book is instructive, and the major contributions of the state to politics and administration are ably presented. Of special value are the well-chosen 'Select Bibliographies' at the end of each chapter, secondary entries of which are largely from the University of California's Bureau of Public Administration (Berkeley) and Bureau of Governmental Research (Los Angeles) and from unpublished masters' and doctors' theses from both." R. W. Binkley

+ — Pol Sci Q 61:479 S '46 650w

"California has had an interesting and sometimes spectacular political development. Its people have tried many governmental and administrative experiments. The authors do full justice to these experiments, and present a picture of a virile community that has endeavored in unorthodox ways to improve democracy and make it work."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:50 Mr '46 240w

CROUSE, WILLIAM HARRY. Everyday automobile repairs. 296p il $3 McGraw

629.287 Automobiles—Repairing 46-6241

"This book is divided into two parts. The first part describes the manner in which the various components of the automobile operate. The second part outlines in detail the various troubles that may occur and how these troubles may be diagnosed to locate their causes. The second part also explains how to correct troubles and describes the servicing procedures required on the various components of the automobile. Many of these servicing procedures can be carried out by any intelligent person equipped with a few ordinary tools." Index.

Book Week p2 Ag 18 '46 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 J1 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1135 D 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:36 J1 '46

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

+ Weekly Book Review p9 S 1 '46 120w

CROW, JOHN ARMSTRONG. Epic of Latin America. 756p maps $5 Doubleday

980 Latin America—History. Latin America—Civilization 46-4591

"Dr. Crow has set out to explain what makes life, politics, economics, the social institutions and customs, and the psychological outlooks of the 135,000,000 people below the Rio Grande what they are today—and, incidentally, why they differ so from their 'opposite numbers' in the British-tinctured civilization of the United States." (Sat R of Lit) He has given in the process a history of the origin and progress of Latin American civilization from the time of the Mayas, Incas and Aztecs, to the present day. Bibliography of references. Index.

Reviewed by J. M. Klotzsche

Book Week p2 Ag 4 '46 900w

Booklist 43:12 S '46

"Whether dealing with the Mayas, Incas, Aztecs, or conquistadores, the author is under an obvious strain in trying to make the story-telling motif predominate. Adopting the technique of some modern novelists, John A. Crow, who is on the staff of the University of California at Los Angeles, injects fairly liberal doses of sex, whenever the going is rough. No doubt Mr. Crow believes he has humanized and romanticized the story of our Good Neighbors, although he has managed, in accord with his own predilections, to glorify the pagan elements, pre-Christian and anti-Christian, in his compilation. . . The Epic of Latin America, top-heavy and one-sided, is a blow at the Good Neighbor policy." J. F. Thorning

— Cath World 164:87 O '46 500w

"The book reflects the mountain of research which went into it. But it is stamped a reference book by the author's quotation of descriptions of available ruins and contemporary literature. Personal knowledge ought to be indispensable for the record of such a continuing epic. In many cases the quotations are offered uncritically. In addition to the undoubtedly competent research, which borders on good scholarship, there is good organization of the material by chapters. Certainly everything in the volume is valuable for an understanding of the subject. Further, the author's comments on the Mexican revolution and Peru's Aprista movement are more progressive than most newspapers would use." R. K. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 J1 29 '46 250w

Foreign Affairs 25:349 Ja '47 20w

"A rich canvas, enlivened with vigorous narrative, revealing biography, objective weighing of the factors that have made for trouble in inter-American relations, emphasis on our mutual contributions, combine to make this an important book—today and tomorrow."

+ Kirkus 14:235 My 15 '46 260w

"Readers of a book like this ought to be encouraged by a well-arranged bibliography to follow through what it offers; for the same reason there ought to be more maps, and more detailed maps. On the other hand, the book is easy to read, and broad in its conception of the subject matter of history. If the author is weakest in cultural matters, where his dependence on published opinion leaves him occasionally ambiguous and arbitrary, he is strong in his sympathy. Furthermore, the general attitude toward the differences and the parallels between our history and theirs is usually just, and it is particularly on this score that one recommends the book to the common reader." Elizabeth Wilder

+ — Nation 163:530 N 9 '46 700w

"Mr. Crow . . . fails to give any satisfactory sense of the shapes and meanings of the modern Latin-American states. However, his book should help many a reader to understand the historical and emotional background of the twenty Latin-American republics." Hubert Herring

N Y Times p3 Ag 11 '46 1850w

"A brilliant and broad-scale ethnic, cultural, economic, and political history of the countries to the south. Unlike so many North Americans writing about South America, Mr. Crow is not trying to prove any pet propositions. He gives you a good idea of why 'Colossus of the North' is not a term of endearment when used by Latin Americans, and he thinks that much of their dislike is caused by our arrogance about and ignorance of Latin-American problems. Books like this, given a big enough public, might help remedy that situation."

+ New Yorker 22:68 Ag 10 '46 120w

"[Mr Crow's] book is an achievement in both narrative and organization. . . Particularly admirable is his approach, which takes care of dates, names and events but is much more concerned with broad growth, economic, political, social and cultural development. . . Mr Crow has an active mind, a notable talent for making the past come alive, and exceptional ability to write. This book of his is not a 'popular' book and is not intended to be. But it is one of the clearest and most readable solid histories I've come across in a long time."

J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 12 '46 600w

"It would be hard to think of any book which even in 755 pages offers so much soundly organized and vividly interpreted information about the civilization of the peoples who share the American continents with us. . . It calls, to be sure, for patient, even studious, reading. . . But the net result of this proper respect for inherent complexities is that a pageant of men, of customs and times and races, of stirring events and of the exotic arts and the piquancies of a strange and fascinating culture passes before us" Duncan Aikman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:23 JI 27 '46 1000w

"The history of the origin and development of Latin American civilization from the time of the Mayas, the Incas, and the Aztecs up to recent times is presented and interpreted in this book in great detail in a well-organized, original, and readable manner. . . Although Latin America's epic is still going on, the author portrays present-day Latin America only in very general terms."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:313 D '46 160w

"The book is uneven and sketchy in spots as so large an undertaking in a single volume is bound to be, but the story as a whole is well told, uniformly interesting to read and sufficiently representative in its selection of high points to make it a first rate introduction to what Mr. Crow has not improperly termed 'The Epic of Latin America.'" B. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p5 S 22 '46 750w
Wis Lib Bul 42:129 O '46

CROW, LESTER DONALD, and CROW, ALICE (VON BAUER). Our teen-age boys and girls; suggestions for parents, teachers, and other youth leaders. 366p $3 McGraw 136.7354 Adolescence. Juvenile delinquency 45-9975

The authors present a functional treatment of the problems and influences affecting the growing-up process, and apply mental hygiene principles in the form of suggestions. The causes and cures of delinquency are considered and supported by statements of eminent authorities.

Booklist 42:220 Mr 15 '46

School & Society 62:327 N 17 '45 20w

"This book will be helpful to all members of the teaching staff and may be regarded as essential reading for those who are especially responsible for the counseling of youth regarding their educational and personal problems."

D. M. Hilliard

+ School R 54:119 F '46 700w

CROWELL, PERS. Beau Dare, American saddle colt [il. by the author]. (Whittlesey house publication) 57p $4 McGraw

636.13 Horses—Juvenile literature Agr46-205

Illustrated story showing the early training of a beautiful American saddle horse.

"Excellent drawings in color make the book a suitable gift for anyone interested in horses."

+ Book Week p12 My 12 '46 50w

Booklist 43:30 O 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

"Though not designed for a juvenile audience, this is an outstanding book for any child over ten who owns or rides a horse. Informative, unsentimental, and enthusiastic." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:143 D 7 '46 70w

"The most outstanding illustrated and factual horse book yet to appear this season is this beautifully made book of Pers Crowell. Full page color and spot illustrations make this a handsome book, one to delight horse lovers old and young." Dorothy Hamilton

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 10 '46 90w

"It is hard to say whether this handsome book belongs in the adult or juvenile department: either side will dispute its possession, and it may as well go on record as belonging on both at once. The pictures are of great beauty." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 My 26 '46 300w

CRUICKSHANK, C. G. Elizabeth's army. 156p $2 75 (10s) Oxford

355 Great Britain. Army—History

"A study of the military forces raised between 1585 and 1603 for expeditions abroad and the suppression of revolt in Ireland. . . The subject of this work is organization and administration; the chapters are concerned with the levy, the journey to the theatre of war, rations, equipment, pay, discipline and the like." Times (London) Lit Sup

"This book touches on almost all features of the English military establishment of its period and in most matters is reasonably adequate. The chapter on arms, however, ignores the longbow, a standard weapon until almost the end of Elizabeth's reign and not wholly obsolete until years later. Some discussion of Sir John Smythe's eloquent and almost convincing argument in its favor seems called for. Moreover, there is no mention of drill or tactics. . . The text shows every sign of careful research and its literary style allows it to be read with pleasure as well as profit." T. M. Spaulding

+ Am Hist R 52:170 O '46 240w

"Mr. Cruickshank has covered a considerable amount of new ground in his study. . . The style and arrangement are both those of the doctoral thesis. If that sounds ungracious, it may be added that the information here collected and sorted is likely to prove of value to all future students of the age." Times [London] Lit Sup p250 My 25 '46 900w

"Though not aiming to be picturesque or merely entertaining, Mr. Cruickshank provides much interesting antiquarian information." S. C. Chew

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Je 9 '46 650w

CULBERTSON, ELY. Must we fight Russia? 62p pa $1 Winston

341.1 World politics. United nations 46-3671

"Mr. Culbertson says that we are drifting into a war with Russia that will black out the world and that our leaders, mumbling about charters and vetoes, are doing nothing to stop the drift. He recommends. . . an international organization, modelled on the one he proposed in 'Total Peace,' which would control the atomic bomb. It would be a global authority, ruled by majority vote and having at its command a strong, impartial police force to enforce its decisions. Mr. Culbertson believes that this could be achieved by amending the U.N. charter, and tells how." New Yorker

Reviewed by David Karno

Book Week p6 Ap 28 '46 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46

Reviewed by Edward Skillin

Commonweal 44:171 My 31 '46 650w

Foreign Affairs 25:164 O '46 50w

Kirkus 14:220 My 1 '46 120w

"In fifteen pages of the first four chapters of the book Mr. Culbertson gives us a clearer picture of the present situation and of the reasons why we are afraid of Russia, and why Russia is afraid of us, than many more elaborate discussions provide. He has the gift of seeing dispassionately what is happening and of expressing cogently, clearly, the American attitude in face of recent events. His book is addressed to the average reader, and to local leaders of public opinion. To this reviewer, his practical suggestions present some of the wisest amendments so far suggested to make the United Nations strong and efficient enough to maintain order in the world. The wide circulation of this book should render a distinct service in the cause of peace." Hans Kohn

CULBERTSON, ELY—Continued

+ N Y Times p25 S 8 '46 550w

New Yorker 22:91 Ap 27 '46 120w

"The title of this book is misleading. It is not an analysis of our relations with Russia; it is a violent attack on the political organization of the world, followed by detailed suggestions for a new international order. . . The value of this book is in the early violent pages where Mr. Culbertson states his hatred for the idiosyncrasy of a world of international anarchy and for the wars which nation-state politics will inevitably produce." Thomas Finletter

Sat R of Lit 29:9 My 4 '46 1300w

CUMBERLAND, MARTEN. Dilemma for Dax.

280p $2 Doubleday

46-6298

Detective story.

Booklist 43:103 D 1 '46

Kirkus 14:311 J1 1 '46 60w

"It requires all the patience and ingenuity at Dax's command to piece the clues together so that they make sense. The two or three stories in which Saturnin Dax has appeared establish him definitely as a detective to be reckoned with." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p13 S 1 '46 180w

"The crime is fairly improbable in both motive and means, but the mystery is interesting for its detailed picture of Parisian police methods."

+ New Yorker 22:103 S 7 '46 120w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 8 '46 40w

"Background, 'atmosphere,' detecting and people are well done. But it drags so terribly."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:41 S 21 '46 40w

"Commissaire Saturnin Dax [is] a whiz at police work and his new adventure abounds in readable surprises." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p12 S 1 '46 90w

CUMMINGS, EDWARD ESTLIN. Santa Claus; a morality.

18p $1.50; ltd autog ed $5 Holt

812 Miracle, morality and mystery plays 47-850

A morality play in which Death and Santa Claus exchange masks. Santa Claus as Science gets into trouble with the Mob, and is saved by a Child and a Woman from disgrace and annihilation.

"Contains some moving passages but seems on the whole one of the author's less happy efforts." Rolfe Humphries

Nation 164:78 Ja 18 '47 90w

New Yorker 22:87 Ja 11 '47 40w

"As a morality play it is in the pure, traditional form, and as the work of E. E. Cummings it is clear, lyric and colloquial. It has also the anger and comprehension which he brought in freshness to his earlier writing, and which he has never allowed to work for anyone but himself. At eight and one-third cents a page, the book is a seductive, unbelievable bargain, a bargain of which, I bitterly predict, a very large number of people will not avail themselves." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 Ja 4 '47 550w

Time 48:91 D 23 '46 220w

CUMMINS, CEDRIC CLISTEN. Indiana public opinion and the World war, 1914-1917.

292p $2 Historical bureau of the library & historical department of the state of Indiana, 408 State lib. & hist. bldg, Indianapolis 4

301.154 Public opinion—Indiana. European war, 1914-1918—Indiana 46-27016

"Several characteristics of the middle westerners were clearly revealed under the strain of the years 1914-1917. Their love of peace and their nationalism, which have generally been recognized, were again made clear. Their unpreparedness to think about international events, the extent to which their racial, religious, economic, and political connections determined their thinking, and the wide influence which prosperity rather unconsciously had upon their decisions, have not been so readily noted. These, as well as the failure of German propaganda, the small effect of the Bryce report about Belgium, and the clerical justification of war, are some of the points brought out in this study." Am Hist R

"This small volume is the initial work of a young scholar. Its virtues are many, its faults few. Among the latter are the failures to point out its relation to other works in the field and the differences between the picture here presented and that already advanced in other studies. The author is well informed about the people of Indiana and the events of the period. He writes well, thoughtfully, even philosophically." J. D. Barnhart

+ Am Hist R 51:562 Ap '46 250w

"Interesting and well documented study."

+ Christian Century 62:1386 D 12 '45 10w

Foreign Affairs 24:748 J1 '46 10w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN. Death rides a sorrel horse.

46-1785

Detective story.

"Painstaking."

Kirkus 14:82 F 15 '46 80w

"It does not take Roden long to determine that Camille's death was not an accident, but it takes a bit longer to discover how and by whom she was murdered. The Sheriff has lost none of his skill in reading signs that might mean nothing to a city detective." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p40 Ap 14 '46 100w

"Roden follows up all the clues in his easy-going way and comes to conclusions which are sound, if unexciting. That backwoods atmosphere of Cunningham's is still excellent, however."

+ New Yorker 22:112 Ap 6 '46 80w

"Pretty well up to high Roden standard."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 Ap 6 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p28 Ap 14 '46 270w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN. One man must die.

223p $2.50 Dutton

46-7069

Detective story.

"Sheriff Roden, away from his dogs and the woods and fretful about his income tax has lost all of the quality that made him refreshing." James Sandoe

Book Week p25 N 24 '46 200w

Kirkus 14:468 S 15 '46 80w

"As a conventional detective Jess Roden has lost something of the picturesque individuality that gave the earlier stories about him a charm of their own." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p28 D 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 24 '46 60w

"Plentiful local color, diverting characters and timely central problem make up for whatever small detective failings it may have."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 N 9 '46 50w

"Professor Cunningham makes out well enough with his plot and generally delivers the picturesque article for which he is famous, even if the finish does seem a little too easy. He keeps one guessing about plenty of minor problems and reasonably agog over his humble characters. As for Sheriff Jess, he's a man most mysteryites wouldn't want to miss." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Week p24 N 3 '46 210w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN (GARTH HALE, pseud). Strait is the gate. 316p $2.50 46-785

Triangle story, the scene of which is a small farm in the hill country of the South. Curt Moden spends some time away from home, working at his carpenter's trade. His small son realizes there is something wrong because a neighbor visits his beautiful mother when his father is away. The situation becomes dangerous, but does not end until tragedy closes one chapter of the Modens' life.

Reviewed by R. J. Bender

Book Week p14 F 17 '46 400w

Booklist 42:200 F 15 '46

"A simple dignity and well-developed characterization add much to this story of Kentucky hill people."

+ Kirkus 14:2 Ja '46 170w

"Far from being the usual triangle novel, this is a book you will find hard to forget, thanks to the fine way Garth Hale has depicted his three central characters. . . And while Lute Hay, the third side of the triangle, is seldom seen, he too is a very real person. Even the minor actors in the story are full of vitality." M. W. Gibbons

+ N Y Times p38 F 24 '46 310w

"The atmosphere in this sombre narrative of a struggling family in the impoverished South is so thick and so unrelieved that it often obscures the human figures in the story. . . The climax is no more real than nightmare, and the gleam of hope on the final page comes too late for the reader to accept it, or even welcome it." George Conrad

Weekly Book Review p6 F 17 '46 310w

CUPPY, WILLIAM JACOB, ed. Murder without tears; an anthology of crime. 561p $3 Sheridan

364 Murder. Short stories—Collections

46-4901

An anthology of crime which consists of reports of ten modern murders; some twenty-eight cases from the Newgate calendar; and fourteen fiction selections. The stories are: De mortuis, by John Collier; The sailor-boy's tale, by Isak Dinesen; An introduction to Eric, by Ellis St Joseph; The turn of the tide, by C. S. Forester; An attempt at murder, by Karel Capek; The sins of Prince Saradine, by G. K. Chesterton; The Gioconda smile, by Aldous Huxley; A jury of her peers, by Susan Glaspell; Accident, by Agatha Christie; In the teeth of the evidence, by D. L. Sayers; Green ice, by Stuart Palmer; The curate of Churnside, by Grant Allen; They can only hang you once, by Dashiell Hammett; Maddened by mystery, or the defective detective, by Stephen Leacock.

"This is a very special collection you should on no account miss." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p5 Ji 21 '46 230w

+ Kirkus 14:232 My 15 '46 80w

"Many of the stories will be unfamiliar to all but the most diligent readers of short detective fiction. Those that are not are still worth rereading." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 Ji 14 '46 230w

"The only thing that keeps me from an unqualified rave is Uncle Will's coy introduction, which set my teeth so firmly on edge that I didn't recover until Grant Allen's superbly subacid 'Curate of Churnside' on p. 505." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ji 21 '46 100w

"Proves that mirth and murder can mix."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:38 Ji 27 '46 90w

"Mr Cuppy has . . . done the murder addict a superior service in offering 38 'murders with morals' from the Newgate Calendar of the early 1700s. For true crime he turns perforce to Pearson, Roughhead and Holbrook, happily includes a selection from 'Famous New England Murders' by Richard Dempewolf, and presents James Thurber's account of the Hall-Mills case of 1922, possibly that famous writer's one excursion into grim humor. The fiction selections are somewhat less happy, although Dorothy Sayers, John Collier, Agatha Christie, Isak Dinesen, Stuart Palmer and Dashiell Hammett are included. Unfortunately for the avid collector, many of the cadavers Mr Cuppy thinks were described with rare charm already have won wide acclaim, but the bonanza of 28 old English slaughterings more than makes up for any home library duplications." R. F. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ji 14 '46 360w

CURRAN, CHARLES HOWARD. Insects of the Pacific world. (Pacific world ser) 317p il $3.75 Macmillan

595.7 Insects

45-10465

"This book is one of a series describing the natural history and peoples of the Pacific Ocean and of its innumerable islands, large and small. . . More than 120,000 different known species of insects and their relatives live within the Pacific area and, as is the case in most other parts of the earth, many new species await discovery and identification. . . [That] the author [has decided] to focus his descriptions on those orders of insects which either have an importance to human welfare or popularity with the general public is indeed a happy and satisfactory solution to the problem with which he was confronted." (Foreword) Index.

Booklist 42:142 Ja 1 '46

Bookmark 7:7 My '46

Kirkus 13:451 O 1 '45 150w

Scientific Bk Club R 16:4 D '45 300w

CURRAN, FRANCIS X. Major trends in American church history. 198p $2.50 Am. press, 70 E. 45th st, N.Y. 17

277.3 U.S.—Church history

46-3025

This treatise deals with both Protestant and Catholic church history in the United States, from a Roman Catholic point of view. Contents: Origin and types of Protestantism; The colonial background; Freedom and organization; The frontier; No popery; The problem of the Negro; The increase of unbelief; The transition to the 20th century; The end of Protestant creeds; The Catholic church in 20th century America. List of books cited. Index.

"This brief history of American religion, the first from the pen of a Catholic scholar, is a sound and stimulating work." R. A. Billington

+ Am Hist R 52:190 O '46 240w

"A vast number of useful facts and valuable references will be found between the covers of this book."

+ Cath World 163:476 Ag '46 200w.

Christian Century 63:991 Ag 14 '46 70w

Reviewed by R. J. Purcell

Commonweal 44:242 Je 21 '46 550w

CURTI, MERLE EUGENE. Roots of American loyalty. 267p $3 Columbia univ. press [20s Oxford]

973 Patriotism. U.S.—History

A46-2131

"An examination of the forces, personalities, symbols and events which have formed the many historic expressions of American patriotism. The author's wide acquaintance with the lesser-known literature of American social history supplies him liberally with material for documenting this history, but its underorganization may discourage the common reader. Since the material reflects every facet of political, economic and religious opinion, American patriotism emerges as an individualistic and self-contradictory expression of loyalty." (Library J) Index.

"Professor Curti's book, the first systematic study of the development of American patriotism, is a valuable contribution to the still young but rapidly growing body of historical literature concerned with understanding the social patterns of ideas and emotions. . . Avoiding the temptation to facile generalization, Mr. Curti has approached this theme with painstaking scholarship. Though placing principal emphasis upon the formative period—the first hundred years of American nationality—and presenting the more recent history in much less detail, he has utilized a vast body of primary sources, of which those chiefly used, the Fourth of July sermon, the academic address, and the occasional sermon, have been hitherto neglected. The copiously cited materials have an intrinsic interest, dramatic, picturesque, and at times humorous." A. K. Weinberg

CURTI, M. E.—Continued

+ Am Hist R 52:138 O '46 950w

Reviewed by H. A. Bloch

Am J Soc 52:157 S '46 650w

"The organization of the book, though it stays within a rough chronological framework, keeps the structure and tone of a series of experimental essays along topical lines. The Roots of American Loyalty is by far the most freely speculative of any of Mr. Curti's major writings, and readers will be delighted by the supple wisdom he lavishes on patriots whether they are Jefferson or jingoes." E. F. Goldman

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:793 Ag '46 750w

"Prof. Curti has written a pioneering work. Filling in the gaps becomes much easier when one has produced the general frame, and for that general frame, and for the years of considered work that has gone into it, Prof. Curti deserves the highest praise. His book is a fine and readable one, and a rewarding experience."

Howard Fast

+ Book Week p1 My 12 '46 1350w

Booklist 42:296 My 15 '46

Bookmark 7:8 N '46

Christian Century 63:782 Je 19 '46 60w

"This book is proof that competent historians do not need to sacrifice accuracy in order to write well, and that interest can be built on a firmer foundation than an elaboration of the trivial." R. A. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 10 '46 300w

"Professor Curti is well qualified to discuss the subject. His The Growth of American Thought won the Pulitzer Award in 1943, and his present volume is in the same clear-thinking and equally lucid style." Roy Hillbrook

+ Current Hist 10:535 Je '46 900w

Foreign Affairs 25:341 Ja '47 20w

"Recommended for all larger libraries." Scott Adams

+ Library J 71:666 My 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by Richard Hofstadter

New Repub 114:779 My 27 '46 850w

Reviewed by John Morton

New Statesman & Nation 32:488 D 28 '46 150w

Reviewed by J. H. Hexter

N Y Times p16 Je 23 '46 1150w

"Serious but not very incisive inquiry into the sources of our own concept of ourselves. This country's regional prejudices and shifting of sentiment during periods of crisis have given American nationalism a complexity that Professor Curti has not simplified by his choice of an ambling, discursive method."

New Yorker 22:111 My 18 '46 120w

Reviewed by Louis Filler

Pol Sci Q 61:620 D '46 1250w

"Certainly the subject of this new book is timely and important, but one feels that too little attention is given to what is obviously the pressing question now concerning national loyalty. What is to be its future when world events and interest, world necessity even, make many consider internationalism perhaps the most highly developed form of patriotism? Professor Curti indicates full awareness of this tension and leaves no doubt as to where his sympathies lie, but discusses the situation meagerly and ends only by posing the already apparent problem. . . The reader finishes 'The Roots of American Loyalty' with a sense of frustration and the belief, possibly unjustified in view of the book's title, that any such thorough study of the subject should have gone somewhat farther, should have more that is immediately pertinent to offer." J. F. Wood

— Sat R of Lit 29:11 Jl 6 '46 1000w

"Professor Curti's book affords us an excellent opportunity to scan the past for bearings on the future." R. A. Brown

+ School & Society 64:405 D 7 '46 1250w

"Some years ago Professor Curti called for an historical study of American patriotism. Fortunately, in the course of events he answered his own call. Only one so well versed in the cross currents of American intellectual history, so well aware of the tangles in the web of social ideas, could sensibly undertake the project. This is not Curti's best book, but the fact that he had written a greater one qualified him to make this good. The author applies a rigid self-discipline to pursue an objective course through materials of supercharged emotional content. The work is history, not pamphleteering." R. W. Cray

+ Social Educ 10:329 N '46 800w

"This book, because of the mass of material which is crowded into its 250-odd pages, does not show the author's style to best advantage. But the information contained in it is of considerable interest, although it really neither adds to nor detracts from our understanding of American history. As a source-book of what patriots, genuine and less than genuine, have said and felt, the work is highly valuable. It could, and no doubt will, supply the texts for countless other declamations and utterances of the type Mr. Curti has found so common in the country's past." Donald Derby

+ — Spring'd Republican p4d Je 23 '46 800w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 35:228 Je '46 1550w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:213 S '46 280w

"[Curti] has repeated himself a little too often for best effect and has piled up so many details that sometimes his narrative runs a bit sluggish. He has made a good case, but sometimes he seems to do too well. . . The main weakness in Curti's book is the oversimplification and the over-ordering of a highly complex and confused set of emotional patterns." Avery Craven

Weekly Book Review p4 Jl 7 '46 1400w

"Professor Curti traces the various types of patriotic sentiments from the first glimmerings in colonial days down to the First World War. Scholarly and thorough, his recital is based on extensive source material and crammed with examples from newspapers, speeches and fugitive writings. No aspect is ignored; all the multitudinous roots of loyalty to America are laid bare. But such thorough classification and documentation carries with it inevitable weaknesses for so short a book as this. Occasionally, the author seems to be merely listing the varied forms of patriotic sentiment, and to be treating all as of equal significance. Seldom does he take time to analyze the more important, or to draw out the implications." John Lydenberg

Yale R n s 36:177 autumn '46 600w

CURTIS, MRS EDITH ROELKER. Lady Sarah Lennox; an irrepressible Stuart, 1745-1826. 346p $3 Putnam

B or 92 Napier, Lady Sarah (Lennox) Bunbury 46-1475

Biography of a noted English beauty, Lady Sarah Lennox, the great-granddaughter of Charles II and his French mistress, Louise de Querouaille, who was made Duchess of Portsmouth. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. J. Hiken

Book Week p3 Mr 3 '46 270w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 30 '46 400w

Reviewed by Richard Match

N Y Times p12 My 19 '46 300w

"If you're interested in stale scandals and long-forgotten love affairs, this is your book. The author feels that, in spite of their questionable conduct, aristocrats like Lady Sarah were an asset to society, but she doesn't make a strong case. The book is written in the vein of well-bred irony so fashionable with contemporary historians."

New Yorker 22:86 Mr 2 '46 120w

"Mrs. Curtis's book is rather a drab account of so vivid and spirited a creature, but it is carefully written and well documented." R. E. Roberts

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:79 Ap 13 '46 850w

"The author has succeeded in presenting a very readable story of one of the lesser-known Stuarts of English history." H. L. Mitchell
+ Springfield Republican p6 Ap 18 '46 270w

"'Lady Sarah Lennox' is a fascinating biography with many kinds of excellence besides its excellence 'de scandale.' It is social and human comedy of a high order. Dealing primarily with the personal relations of its heroine, it presents a host of subsidiary personalities effectively portrayed with humor and perceptive humanity. . . Historic events are treated with great skill in so far as they affect the life of the main character. . . These rich and diverse elements are moulded with authority and wit into the warm human chronicle of a fascinating woman's strangely patterned life. The result is an outstanding biography of distinction and absorbing interest." C. G. Stillman
+ Weekly Book Review p4 Mr 10 '46 1300w

CUSSET, FRANCIS. English-French and French-English technical dictionary; metallurgy, mining, electricity, chemistry, mechanics, sciences. 591 $5 Chemical pub. co. 603 Technology—Dictionaries 46-5564

"Dictionary compiled to help the technical man in reading French technical texts. Gives expressions in metallurgy, mining, electricity, chemistry, mechanics and science in English-French and French-English." Library J

Reviewed by M. G. Callahan
Chem Eng 53:297 O '46 150w

"This handy little dictionary will be of great help to engineers who wish to keep in touch with developments in France through the medium of French technical journals and books but who find most non-technical dictionaries deficient in engineering terms."
+ Eng N 137:128 D 12 '46 80w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 40w

"Although a fairly large number of words and terms is translated in this dictionary, it falls far short of completeness. . . The book is of handy size; and beyond a doubt it will be useful, but it supplements rather than supersedes previously published dictionaries."
N Y New Tech Bks 31:38 JI '46

CUTHRELL, FAITH (BALDWIN). See Baldwin, F.

D

D., H. See Doolittle, H.

DACHE, LILLY (MRS JEAN DESPRES). Talking through my hats; ed. by Dorothy Roe Lewis. 265p $2.75 Coward-McCann
B or 92 46-25178

The life story of the famous French milliner, Lilly Daché. She describes in her own idiom how she left her home in France and came to America, to make a success in this glamorous country. At first the dreamed-of glamor was not apparent, but Lilly persisted, and her persistence spelled a definite success.

Reviewed by Sylvia Crosby
Book Week p10 JI 14 '46 320w
Booklist 42:327 Je 15 '46

"Will appeal to both adult and high school readers and will be a worthwhile addition to the collections of large and small libraries."
H. F. Bolman
+ Library J 71:755 My 15 '46 130w

"It is all meant to be gay and frivolous and exciting. The hats may be; but hats have a certain solidity. The words are flat, naive, and sometimes a little suffocating." Barbara Herman

N Y Times p18 Je 23 '46 410w

"This story of Mme. Daché . . . is all very glamorous and breathlessly mad, but it doesn't quite explain that big building on Fifty-sixth Street or the x-million-dollar corporation that is the House of Daché. The book might have been of more interest if it had not been written in a way that simply invites parody."

New Yorker 22:94 My 25 '46 90w

Reviewed by H. D. Smythe
Sat R of Lit 29:36 Je 29 '46 1450w

"Not pretending in any sense to be an important book, indeed it is quite an insubstantial and sometimes repetitive one, this autobiographical account of the hat-queen's rise to fame has charm." Iris Barry

+ Weekly Book Review p20 My 26 '46 600w

DAHL, FRANCIS WELLINGTON. Dahl's Boston; cartoons; text by Charles W. Morton. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 157p $2.50 Little 741.5 Caricatures and cartoons. Boston—

Social life and customs 46-7967

Collection of cartoons reprinted from the Boston Herald, portraying the humorous side of life in Boston—including life with the squirrels and pigeons on the Common.

Reviewed by Paul Speegle
San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 1 '46 40w

"Dahl's comedy is unforced and full of character. It springs naturally from a people who cling to old habits and institutions and who—unlike so much of the country—ape neither New York nor Hollywood. Their individuality has been skilfully itemized by Charles W. Morton (once of Omaha and now like myself a foreigner on Arlington Street) in a running comment which is the perfect complement to Dahl's cartoons." Edward Weeks

+ Sat R of Lit 29:32 D 7 '46 750w

"Mr. Morton does not try to explain Dahl but tries his hand at some of the durable mysteries and paradoxes of Boston and makes very amusing work of it. . . He tells some stories that you won't believe but I assure you they are everyday stuff here, even that one about the horse, even that one about the Watch and Ward. He is superb about the twigs and the hat and the summer place. In fact, let's just say he tells you about Boston." Bernard De Voto

+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 24 '46 800w
Wis Lib Bul 42:163 D '46

DAHL, ROALD. Over to you; 10 stories of flyers and flying. 182p $2.50 Reynal 46-894

Ten short stories all concerned in some way with flying during the war.

"One of the stories is called, 'Death of an Old Old Man.' . . In this striking vignette the author has briefly mastered his material, no mean feat when the subject is that of flight in general, aerial combat in particular. . . In the other stories the author has not equaled his material. He just goes along with events, recording them in his facile, ironic way, which almost always makes for pleasant reading, so that even without being definitive in a larger sense, the stories are worthy contributions to the literature of flight." Martin Savelle

+ — Book Week p3 F 3 '46 550w

Booklist 42:247 Ap 1 '46

"Some very swell stuff for straight reading pleasure, where popular appeal and careful writing combine for enjoyment."

+ Kirkus 13:405 S 15 '45 150w

"Mr. Dahl occasionally overworks his endings in an effort to make his point felt, but aside from this technical weakness, one senses the touch of the craftsman who weighs the effects of his words and his phrasing. He has, what is essential, an acute awareness of the narrow margin separating shadow and substance. He has not been afraid to venture into the realm of vision, where not only gremlins are born, but the very stuff of literature."

DAHL, ROALD—Continued
Nona Balakian
+ — N Y Times p6 F 10 '46 700w

"An original turn of mind and considerable perceptiveness help Mr. Dahl. . . . He would, though, perhaps be pained to hear that the most successful stories of the collection are not those in which he has essayed an especially literary prose but two that are salted with some good low comedy."
New Yorker 21:77 F 2 '46 100w

"Sometimes he comes perilously close to exchanging content for dramatic effect; yet Dahl is an author of great promise and he has written a fine and memorable book in 'Over to You.'"
Michael Straight
+ Sat R of Lit 29:13 Mr 9 '46 800w

"The stories are, in one way or another, about flyers, but such is their universality that most of them might just as well have dealt with foot soldiers or sailors or any of the other men who wage war. . . . The striking thing about these stories—aside from the obvious fact that they are written with fine craftsmanship—is their ability to reduce war's heroism and terror to personal equations." Herbert Kupferberg

+ Weekly Book Review p3 F 10 '46 550w

"Mr. Dahl's stories are simple, lucid, and unpretentious. But they are wonderfully adept in capturing atmosphere, often in beautiful prose. War experience has not often been transformed so well into superior fiction."
Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 35:575 spring '46 180w

DAKERS, ELAINE (KIDNER) (MRS ANDREW DAKERS) (JANE LANE, pseud.) Madame Geneva [Eng title: Gin and bitters]. 376p $3 Rinehart [10s 6d Dakers]

46-6299

London in the early eighteenth century is the locale of this novel about Michael Montague, a Jacobite of good Kentish family. Under an assumed name Michael worked for a London master brewer, but worked in secret, when possible, for the Stuart restoration. The bursting of the South Sea bubble brought all Michael's plans to ruin, and he went to his death. Along with his story is that of the cheap on the poor of the importation of the cheap poisonous gin, called Madame Geneva.

Reviewed by Arthur Meeker

Book Week p5 O 27 '46 320w

"The story almost obliterated by monumental historical research, this is stolid in pace and progress."

Kirkus 14:358 Ag 1 '46 170w

"An interesting picture of a time seldom treated in historical novels." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 71:1330 O 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p3 S 7 '45 120w

"Hogarth and English history have drawn the pictures around which Jane Lane builds her new novel. Hogarth's baleful 'Gin Lane' broods over the book like a debauched ancestral portrait. . . . Miss Lane states her case forcefully, but she sacrifices her human material in the process. These poor folk, the quantity of whose misfortunes so far outweighs the quality of their characterization, can survive only as types." Isabelle Mallet

+ — N Y Times p5 O 13 '46 750w

"Miss Lane has turned her period with care; she paints a vivid picture of the City and the citizens of London; and her bankers, brewers and apprentices, her ladies of easy virtue and the poor gin-sodden victims of a widespread and criminal cupidity, are all of them lively and well drawn. Only the two principal characters, Michael himself and the duty-ridden daughter of his kindly host, have a strange stiffness, almost as if their author had decided to sacrifice their personalities to the theme that she develops with such passionate sincerity and to a background that is drawn so skilfully and with such care."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p413 S 1 '45 300w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p16 N 17 '46 380w

DALE, VIRGINIA. Honeyfogling time. 262p $2.50 Harper

46-2497

An old-fashioned story of a young girl growing up in a midwestern town in the eighteenth-eighties. Rose was in love with "that wild Vine boy," and because he once kept her out until nine o'clock, Rose was supposed to be compromised. But Rose and her Pierre bided their time, and presently the town understood.

Reviewed by Edith Roberts

Book Week p4 Mr 17 '46 500w

Bookmark 7:15 My '46

Kirkus 14:6 Ja '46 180w

"Most of the characters of this conflict between age and youth are as dated as the furniture, but once in a while there is a glimpse of genuine individuality, apart from all the paraphernalia of the too obvious period piece. Miss Dale has been careful in ascertaining exactly what her period was like—perhaps she has been too careful and has, therefore, missed the deeper implications of an imaginative art. None the less, one may find here the most amusing information as to life in general at that period." Marguerite Young

+ — N Y Times p36 Mr 24 '46 550w

New Yorker 22:100 Mr 16 '46 80w

"The story is fabricated of homely stuff, honestly woven. Like the period and community it chronicles, it achieves no bold or glamorous pattern. The novel consists for the most part of well-realized details and small happenings which seem more likely to interest feminine than masculine readers." Grace Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 29:39 Ap 13 '46 410w

"What gives the story its special charm is the manner of its telling. Miss Dale knows her period and setting intimately, and stipples her canvas with a wealth of evocative detail. Her humor, often penetrating, is never malicious, and her characters come alive under the warmth of her touch. 'Honeyfogling Time' recreates 'the good old days,' and no middle-aged person who grew up in a family, especially in a small town, will be able to read it without living over again in some measure his own youth." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 17 '46 650w

Wis Lib Bul 42:60 Ap '46

D'ALELIO, GAETANO FRANCIS. Experimental plastics and synthetic resins. 185p $3 Wiley

668.4 Plastics. Gums and resins, Synthetic 46-6475

"This book provides directions for a series of laboratory experiments that demonstrate the chemical reactions used in the preparation of plastic materials. The book is an expansion of the author's Laboratory Manual of Plastics and Synthetic Resins, published in 1943. Although it was designed for a college laboratory course, it has had a good deal of use in industry. Nine additional experiments are given in this revision, and in some cases new alternate methods of preparation are included." N Y New Tech Bks

"This book is a praiseworthy piece of work that achieves the author's purpose and is highly recommended." A. R. Kemp

+ Chem & Eng N 22:3102 N 25 '46 500w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:980 Jl '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:45 Jl '46

DALGLIESH, ALICE. Along Janet's road; decorations by Katherine Milhous. 208p $2.50 Scribner

46-3956

Continues the story of Janet Laidlaw begun in The Silver Pencil [Book Review Digest, 1944). "It takes Janet from her teaching at Columbia university to her new occupation in a publishing house as editor of children's books. Her labors in her new position are interesting, but more absorbing is the domestic life of the three girls, Janet, Cherry and Margaret, who keep house together." (Spring'd Republican)

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 Je 2 '46 180w
Booklist 42:333 Je 15 '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
+ Christian Science Monitor p15 D 19 '46 160w

"These later adventures of Janet provide a sequel that falls a little flat after so fine a book as The Silver Pencil and hurts rather than helps the earlier book." A. M. Jordan
Horn BK 22:269 Jl '46 80w

"As a story of budding maturity, it hasn't quite the note of authenticity that The Silver Pencil had—or perhaps it just isn't quite as fresh and novel a story. But the publishing background has much to offer the many young people whose private star is set in that particular sky. A good addition to career bookshelves."

+ Kirkus 14:242 My 15 '46 170w

"Character of Janet is not as pulsating as it was in the earlier book, but the story will appeal to older boys and girls." E. A. Groves
+ Library J 71:920 Je 15 '46 100w

"There is a satisfying quality about this sequel to 'The Silver Pencil.' It can be read for itself alone, but it has greater value as a record of Janet Laidlaw's development—as a writer and editor and as a woman." M. G. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 29:43 Je 15 '46 500w

"It is a little too full of young girls' talk for the mature reader, but the three girls are real people, each with a decided personality of her own. Two young children, David and Patsy, furnish some tender and sometimes enlivening moments for the girls. It is not a story with a climax and a denouement, but is filled with incidents, with lively comments, with everyday living. Some readers will find it a delightful narrative." M. M. Dickey
+ Spring'd Republican p4d My 19 '46 150w

"The author's racial reticence—not for nothing does Miss Dalgliesh have a Scottish name—talent for friendship and respect for the work of others have kept a book which centers in her own work from being self-centered, and the easily recognizable facts it involves gave it authority beyond that of most career fiction."

+ Weekly Book Review p16 My 19 '46 360w

DALGLIESH, ALICE. Reuben and his red wheelbarrow; with pictures by Ilse Bischoff. [28p] 50c Grosset

46-2192

Picture-story book about Reuben and his family on Reuben's fourth birthday, sometime in the '60s or '70s. The little red wheelbarrow which his father gave him figured prominently in the celebration.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 O 15 '46 140w

"This pleasantly told Mid-Victorian story is just long enough for reading aloud to the picture-book age who will love it and the pictures." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn BK 22:130 Mr '46 90w

"The general impression the book leaves is of a rather trivial story presented in attractive but mannered style."

+ Kirkus 14:66 F 1 '46 90w

"Recommended as good, inexpensive material for the third and fourth grader." Olive Brain
+ Library J 71:408 Mr 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p30 F 17 '46 90w

"This is a Story Parade book illustrated in color, very well reproduced, with a wide page, clear type, and nice end-papers... Ilse Bischoff's drawings are charming. They look like the ladies and children of Godey's Lady's Book." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:43 Mr 9 '46 220w

"A good buy for your money... The pictures are superb." Phyllis Fenner
+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 10 '46 140w

DALY, ELIZABETH. Somewhere in the house. (Murray hill mystery) 213p $2 Rinehart

46-1249

Detective story.

"The tale is in Miss Daly's deft and gracious manner, but it employs a pattern with which she has already made us familiar. Although characteristically preoccupying, her story is less satisfying than some of her earlier chronicles of Mr. Gamadge." J. S.

+ Book Week p8 Mr 3 '46 180w

Booklist 42:266 Ap 15 '46

Bookmark 7:16 My '46

"A pleasing performance, in modest, modulated manner."

+ Kirkus 13:549 D 15 '45 90w

New Repub 114:358 Mr 11 '46 70w

"Expertly plotted story, written with the skill for which Elizabeth Daly is so well known." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p30 Mr 10 '46 180w

"Sleek, nicely plotted, and occasionally quite funny."

+ New Yorker 22:108 Mr 9 '46 120w

"Admirable."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 Mr 2 '46 40w

"Gamadge behaves with his usual skill in this smooth whodunit, and has the happiness of finding an important clew in an old book in the form of a solander, if you know what that is. 'Somewhere in the House' is the tenth mystery in which he has appeared and his future looks rosy. In a brief biography of Gamadge got up by Miss Daly, she says his hobbies are bridge, golf, music and the conservation of the transitive verb. He's a bit bookish, but always a pleasure to meet." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p30 Mr 10 '46 300w

DALY, ELIZABETH. Wrong way down. 211p $2.50 Rinehart

46-6839

Detective story.

"Elizabeth Daly's latest chronicle of Mr. Henry Gamadge... is possessed of the graces one expects from her and the welcome if less characteristic quality of active pursuit and escape. Mr. Gamadge's solution is a staggerer but so beautifully supported that it wins belief roundly." James Sandoe

+ Book Week p18 D 8 '46 130w

Booklist 43:103 D 1 '46

Bookmark 7:15 N '46

Kirkus 14:361 Ag 1 '46 80w

"Another of Miss Daly's skillful and exciting jobs, topped off by a typically tricky solution."

+ New Repub 115:566 O 28 '46 60w

"The case proves to be a real puzzler, and much patient sleuthing has to be done before Gamadge comes up with the correct solution. The story has far more thrills than the comparatively mild beginning would lead one to suspect." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p36 O 27 '46 160w

"Gamadge's urbane methods will probably come as a pleasant change from those of his hard-bitten colleagues, but his solution, as usual, may put considerable strain on your credulity."

New Yorker 22:116 O 12 '46 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 3 '46 40w

"Pleasant."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 N 30 '46 50w

"Miss Daly scores her mystery points quietly and impressively, wins you completely with her polite moods and finally springs one of those knockout surprises, the kind you can believe." Will Cuppy

DALY, ELIZABETH—Continued

+ Weekly Book Review p23 O 13 '46 180w

DALY, SHEILA JOHN. Personality plus! ll. by Gertrude Howe. 139p $2 Dodd

395 Personality. Conduct of life 46-6459

"Informal advice in the current vernacular on behavior for high school boys and girls, with gentle kidding which will be more effective than most books on conduct. Author is college girl, age seventeen, sister of Maureen Daly and editor of column 'On the Solid Side' in Chicago Tribune." Library J

Booklist 43:57 O 15 '46

Cath World 164:189 N '46 110w

"Disarmingly casual and confidence-inspiring. Recommended for all collections." Maude Adams

+ Library J 71:1211 S 15 '46 120w

"Done in young people's own lingo, about their own most immediate problems, by an author who is herself just out of high school, these articles from Sheila John Daly's newspaper column may lack the objectivity and perspective of an older mind, but they have the zest of youth telling youth how to be a good date and a good friend. Aimed at high school students in general, but a life-line really for boys and girls facing the first social plunge." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p14 S 29 '46 140w

Reviewed by Marjorie Ford

San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 10 '46 150w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 25 '46 350w

DALY, THOMAS AUGUSTINE. Late lark singing. 61p $2 Harcourt

811

46-25097

Collection of short poems by the author of The McAroni Ballads (Book Review Digest, 1919). A few of these poems are intended for children.

"Chipper doggerel bound to please his many admirers. . . Best of the book are nine new 'Little Polly's Pomes' which can be read to children, much to their delight and edification." L. K.

+ Book Week p5 Ap 7 '46 180w

Booklist 42:278 My 1 '46

Cath World 163:478 Ag '46 100w

Christian Century 63:593 My 8 '46 40w

"Late Lark Singing," characteristic, witty, mostly light, is welcome, though it makes me melancholy. The title (a line from W. E. Henley's poem about death) and the Proem, in which he says that the subtitle might be 'Last Lay of the Minstrel,' do not accord with the cheerful spirit of the contents. Yet one knows that the poet himself is neither downcast nor sentimental when he proclaims this as his valedictory volume. For his is not only an old-fashioned Muse, but an old-fashioned Faith. He is not one to shed tears over the prospect of retiring from his labors." Ted Robinson

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 N 23 '46 360w

"Hemingway enthusiasts will resent innuendoes in the 'Fifth Column' selection, and admirers of realistic, virile literature will regard the Guestion verse as banal, trite, smug and reactionary. This is journalistic verse but definitely not poetry." William Manchester

Spring'd Republican p6 Ap 16 '46 240w

Wis Lib Bul 42:72 My '46

DANA, HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW, ed. Seven Soviet plays, by Vladimir Solovoyov [and others] with introductions. 520p $4 Macmillan

891.7208 Russian drama—Collections 45-11218

"The seven plays in the present collection are Leonov's 'Orchards of Polovchansk' (1938), portraying a rural Soviet family reunion; Solovoyov's 'Field Marshall Kutuzov' (1939), glorifying the 'hero of retreat' in the Napoleonic invasion; Afanogenov's 'On the Eve' (1941), picturing a family on the eve of war and then engaged in war; 'Smoke of the Fatherland' (1942), by the Tur brothers in collaboration with Sheinin, dealing with guerrilla fighters and fifth columnists in an invaded village; Rokk's 'Engineer Sergeyev' (1941), in which the engineer hero has to outwit collaborationists in order to blow up the great hydroelectric dam; Simonov's 'The Russian People' (1942), again guerrillas and collaborationists in an invaded town; and Korneichuk's 'The Front' (1942), a critical attack upon the 'old guard' of Soviet officers." N Y Times

"Excepting 'The Orchards of Polovchansk' and, in lesser degree, 'The Front' (where the criticism of ignorant but assured authority is as persistently valid as it is in, say, C. S. Forester's novel, 'The General'), the plays themselves are negligible. And only from these two are we likely to learn anything of weight about the Russian people or the promise of the Russian theater." James Sandoe

Book Week p6 Ja 13 '46 500w

Booklist 42:210 Mr 1 '46

"Because of the great number of plays continually appearing on the Russian stage, the choice is difficult among them; no wonder that the volume presented by Professor Dana fails to give us a complete picture of Soviet dramatic production. However, this collection does give well chosen 'samples' of different types of plays which attained exceptional success on the USSR stage. . . However interesting the 'samples' are, the collection has appeared in English at a time when the moods and aspirations expressed in them have faded away, for they deal with the years which in Russia were marked either by expectation of war and preparation for it or by war itself. Today, these dramatic productions can have only a retrospective value, while the Soviet Union has moved on to post-war problems." Helen Iswolsky

Commonweal 44:483 Ag 30 '46 900w

Kirkus 13:536 D 1 '45 150w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 71:407 Mr 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by E. J. Simmons

New Repub 114:625 Ap 29 '46 1750w

"Of the seven, only 'Orchards of Polovchansk' has no relation to war, although Professor Dana, who edits the volume, seeks to tie it up with the theme of the other plays by calling it 'an optimistic picture of a whole Russian family before the war.' It is hard to understand why it was included in a series dealing with Russian defense, especially when its inclusion has meant the omission of what is probably the greatest of the war plays, 'Invasion,' by the same author. . . But we cannot be ungrateful to Professor Dana, for war or no war the 'Orchards of Polovchansk' is the one first-rate drama in the book and stands out as one of the most poetic, profound and satisfying plays that the post-revolutionary theatre has produced." B. D. Wolfe

N Y Times p10 Ja 27 '46 850w

New Yorker 21:92 Ja 12 '46 120w

Reviewed by C. K. Bausman

Spring'd Republican p4d F 10 '46 650w

Theatre Arts 30:369 Je '46 900w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Weekly Book Review p16 Mr 10 '46 270w

Wis Lib Bul 42:84 Je '46

DANIEL, HOWARD, and BELLE, MINNIE. Australia, the new customer; a commercial and economic guide for American business men; with a foreword by A. C. Moore. 368p maps $4.50 Ronald

338 Australia—Commerce. Australia—Industries and resources 46-2571

An analysis of Australia as a potential market for American goods. The book contains information about foreign trade, Australian industries, utilities, communications, market data of principal cities, physical factors, climate, transportation, and government policies. Bibliographical note. Index.

Book Week p18 Mr 31 '46 90w

Foreign Affairs 24:754 J1 '46 20w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:345 Mr 1 '46 70w

"The two authors represent a very good combination. The one, an Australian with world-wide experiences, the other an American with special knowledge of international economic relations, both former members of the staff of the Commonwealth of Australia War Supplies Procurement in Washington for three years. The book should be read not only by American business men, to whom it is addressed especially. Even many a scholar will be glad to discover facts and problems not too familiar to him from an objective viewpoint." Alfred Manes

+ Social Forces 25:226 D '46 650w

"The large number of statistics makes this volume valuable as a reference or source book. Among educators, it is the teacher of economic geography who is most likely to find this book of value in his classroom teaching." Leo Litzky

+ Social Studies 37:332 N '46 320w

DANIELS, JONATHAN. Frontier on the Potomac. 262p $2.75 Macmillan

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Washington, D.C. 46-11943

Sketches of the Washington scene during World war II years. The author, son of Josephus Daniels, Wilson's Navy Secretary in World war I, became a member of the Roosevelt administration in 1942, serving in various capacities but principally as the President's press secretary.

Reviewed by Wilbur Schramm

Book Week p1 O 27 '46 1150w

Booklist 43:82 N 15 '46

"Few chroniclers have Jonathan Daniel's entree. Few have his sharp eyes. Few have his detachment along with his romantic emotion. And so it will be a long time before as good a book as this is written about a contemporary period in American history." E. D. Canham

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 31 '46 650w

Reviewed by J. M. Hayes

Commonweal 45:204 D 6 '46 550w

Current Hist 12:61 Ja '47 60w

"Many small touches, a view of the significance of the healthy heresies he has found, this series of 'profiles' of governmental functioning is knowing, intimate, and interesting in its personal appraisal."

+ Kirkus 14:339 J1 15 '46 120w

"Although no political scientist, Mr. Daniels discusses amiably and sometimes ably, political procedures and personalities of current and future importance. His perspicacity derives from a varied Washington background, including that of press secretary to President Roosevelt, which lent special insight into government affairs. Recommended for purchase." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 71:1461 O 15 '46 140w

"Some chapters show a slight tendency to padding and fine writing. But I know of no better explanation of the ideological differences between Justices Black and Frankfurter (with fairness to both), or of the place of lobbyists in the Washington scene, with accent on accordion-playing Tommy Corcoran, always 'insistently young beyond forty,' or of the institution of the presidency, where some delegated powers stay delegated, but others 'come roaring back through the anteroom to the President's desk.' Daniels, like Adams, has a gift for the phrase. . . It is a vivid piece of subjective literary photography with occasional anecdotes of great interest." R. L. Strout

+ New Repub 115:698 N 25 '46 480w

"Frontier on the Potomac' is a book for Washington aficionados, for those who can forgive Washington its climate, its rootlessness and its institutionalized pomposity and love it for its beauty, its human diversity and its never-failing challenge to the mind and the imagination. For it is here, in the seat of Government, that America's frontier now lies. Whoever would know that frontier, in its human rather than its academic form, will have to read this book." Cabell Phillips

+ N Y Times p3 O 27 '46 950w

"A sometimes diverting and not always lucid essay on the capital."

New Yorker 22:125 N 2 '46 120w

"Mr. Daniels has previously and with skill discovered the South and New England for his readers. This time he writes of the wild frontier of Washington, mainly in wartime, but it cannot be said that, for all his fluency and all his rich opportunities to explore White House and Congress, courts and armed services, departments and bureaus and Fourth Estate, he really discovers this time a great deal that is surprising to the well-informed reader. . . There are a good many times when the wincing reader will find the subject matter to be surprisingly trivial, by comparison with the importance of the period of which Mr. Daniels is writing and the immensity of the tasks allotted to the public figures with whom he deals." M. S. Watson

Sat R of Lit 29:11 O 26 '46 1150w

Reviewed by G. W. Johnson

Weekly Book Review p5 O 27 '46 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 42:165 D '46

DANIELS, JOSEPHUS. Wilson era, years of war and after, 1917-1923. 654p il $4 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Wilson, Woodrow. European war, 1914-1918—U.S. League of nations 46-26158

The fourth volume of the memoirs of Josephus Daniels, covering his years as Secretary of the navy under Woodrow Wilson. The book is filled with anecdotes about his friends and the times, especially about the Peace conference. For the third installment: The Wilson Era, Years of Peace, 1910-1917, see Book Review Digest, 1944, 1945. Index.

"Lansing, House, Page, Sims, McAdoo are all bitterly assailed. But if Mr. Daniels hates the enemies he makes, he loves his friends. He is the soul of loyalty, and his devotion to the great memory of Woodrow Wilson is magnificent. . . Mr. Daniels's book is a substantial contribution to history. It is ill-constructed and written in the tradition of the reporter of a local newspaper. . . But The Wilson Era remains an interesting and important book. Amusingly childish when he recalls the simple dignity of a God-fearing American walking with kings on no unequal terms, Mr. Daniels saw a vast deal of history and in his shrewd up-country way has set down a history which cannot be neglected. To say that every deserving Democrat should read it is not enough. Many who disagree should ponder it and reflect, with greater candor than before, that to every question there are two sides." Ellery Sedgwick

+ Atlantic 178:160 O '46 600w

Reviewed by Walter Johnson

Book Week p5 My 26 '46 550w

Booklist 42:315 Je 1 '46

Reviewed by J. F. Cunningham

Cath World 164:278 D '46 600w

"This is essentially memoirs, rather than history. As such, it is an interesting and valuable contribution to knowledge of the period."

+ Christian Century 63:843 J1 3 '46 60w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 20 '46 420w

"This volume has all the virtues and all the faults of an old man's book. Mr. Daniels still has a reverence for Wilson that at times definitely interferes with calm appraisal. . . Apart from this irritating worship, the book has considerable merit."

+ Commonweal 44:240 Je 21 '46 330w

"This is the second volume of the former Navy Secretary's memoirs, and takes up the story where the first volume left off, after the Versailles pact. If anything, this is better than the first part, possibly because of the more exciting events. Daniels still lauds his personal heroes and spansk those he disliked—Hoover and House among them. His style is anything but literary; despite such handicaps his recollections are interesting, being the 'inside story,' and there is a permanent value in the record."

DANIELS, JOSEPHUS—Continued

+ — Current Hist 11:228 S '46 100w

"Unorganized, diffuse, disconnected and stylistically deficient, it may interest those libraries which have the earlier Daniels volumes, but its temperate judgments diminish its value as a historical source." Scott Adams

— Library J 71:755 My 15 '46 130w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Nation 163:78 J1 20 '46 700w

"To the story of the League of Nations fight Mr. Daniels contributes interesting sidelights and a highly quotable paraphrase of 'Who Killed Cock Robin?' In this matter and in all others of any importance he is wholehearted and unreservedly for Wilson. Whether or not he adds any cubits to the towering stature of the War President, he adds here some pleasing touches to the portrait of the man. In this connection he reports numerous sallies of wit and some of the best of his stories." Dumas Malone

N Y Times p7 Je 9 '46 1500w

New Yorker 22:94 My 25 '46 100w

Reviewed by Basil Rauch

Pol Sci Q 61:628 D '46 600w

"Out of the rich store of his memories, the Secretary of the Navy under Woodrow Wilson has produced another bulging volume of behind-the-scenes disclosures, anecdotes, and trivia. As before, Mr. Daniels is as charming as he is loquacious. He worships President Wilson, of course, and admits no possibility that his hero could be wrong in act or judgment. But Mr. Daniels never pretended to anything else. Historians of the Wilson years, knowing this, will walk carefully through his pages. . . Mr. Daniels' book is discursive, badly arranged, opinionated, without documentation—and thoroughly entertaining." H. F. Pringle

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:7 My 25 '46 1450w

Spring'd Republican p4d J1 28 '46 900w

"All told, the volumes make a wonderfully cranky, talky, valuable record, as honest as daylight. . . The latest installment is probably the crankiest and talkiest of the lot: a huge collection of clips, quotes, yarns, letters, anecdotes, poor jokes, explanations and refutations." Time 47:102 Je 3 '46 600w

"Except for excerpts from Mr. Daniels' diary and occasional quotations from papers of the period, the book appears to have been written from a rich store of memories. It makes good reading for the layman; and the historian, while he will wish to check the facts at many points, will do well not to neglect Mr. Daniels' sidelights upon the events in which he himself played a part."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:214 S '46 350w

"We must not look here for any critical evaluation of Wilson, of his friends or of his opponents. To those who stuck with Wilson, through thick and thin, Mr. Daniels accords virtue. To those who opposed Wilson he is inclined to ascribe not only short-sightedness but malice. Nor, quite aside from the question of personalities, is there much here that illuminates the politics of the period. Mr. Daniels kept a diary, but the quotations which he vouchsafes us from it are singularly unilluminating. . . Of all this we can say that it is entertaining but not important. There is reason to believe that the publication of Mr. Daniels's correspondence and Diary might be more valuable." H. S. Commager

Weekly Book Review p4 My 26 '46 1500w

DANK, MICHAEL CARLTON. Creative crafts in wood. 200p il $3 Manual arts

745.51 Woodwork. Handicraft 45-9360

Covers coping saw woodworking, wood-stipple craft, and wood-chipping craft. For each discusses materials, tools and techniques as well as designs and uses. Many illustrations include photographs, drawings and diagrams.

Booklist 42:223 Mr 15 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:56 Ja 1 '46 70w

Wis Lib Bul 42:58 Ap '46

DARWIN, CHARLES ROBERT. Charles Darwin and the voyage of the Beagle [unpublished letters and notebooks] ed. with an introd. by Nora Barlow. 279p il maps $3.75 Philosophical lib. [15s Pilot]

574 Beagle expedition, 1831-1836 46-5607

"The series of 36 letters written by Darwin to his family during the famous five-year voyage, are here published in their entirety for the first time. The small notebooks which he carried on his inland journeys have been examined closely for further significant material. . . [The editor] Lady Barlow is Charles Darwin's granddaughter and a notable Darwin scholar." Publisher's note

Reviewed by F. E. L. Priestley

Canadian Forum 26:237 Ja '47 460w

Reviewed by H. A. Wooster

Library J 71:1539 N 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by H. J. Fleure

Manchester Guardian p3 F 13 '46 420w

Reviewed by Arthur Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 8 '46 150w

"To most readers, the letters will make a greater appeal than the note-books. The first six cover the period of agonising uncertainty and hectic preparation before setting sail on December 27th, 1831. . . Thirty of the remaining letters were written on the voyage itself. It is not to be expected that these should throw any new light on the scientific results of the journey, especially as they were written to Darwin's family but as a record of his changing moods and reactions during the voyage they are fascinating. . . The note-books themselves are rich in good things for those with the patience and knowledge fully to appreciate them, but Darwin's vivid descriptive phrases scattered through his geological notes will make an immediate appeal to all." John Gilmour

+ Spec 176:276 Mr 15 '46 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p126 Mr 16 '46 2500w

D'AULAIRE, INGRI (MORTENSON). See Aulair, I. M. d'.

DAUMIER, HONORE VICTORIN. Honoré Daumier: 240 lithographs [selected by Wilhelm Wartmann; introd. by Bernard Lemann]. 240p $12.50 Reynal [42s Nicholson]

763 Lithographs. Caricatures and cartoons 47-193

"Collection of Daumier's lithographs. . . There are two hundred and forty full-page reproductions, covering the entire range of Daumier's work, and nearly all of them, with only a slight change in their captions, would be just as applicable to our own place and time as to the world of Louis Philippe and Louis Napoleon. Bernard Lemann has contributed an excellent introduction, and there are notes that place each drawing in its historical context." New Yorker

Booklist 43:136 Ja 1 '47

"Two hundred and forty of his finest lithographs, out of a possible total of nearly 4,000 have been selected for reproduction by Mr. Wartmann. . . the English translations are at times confused and uncertain; but the greatest care has been taken to preserve the quality of the original lithographs. . . In some respects, Daumier's lithographs provide the richest material in existence for a history of Paris in the nineteenth century." Benedict Nicolson

+ — New Statesman & Nation 32:487 D 28 '46 650w

"The plates were printed in Switzerland on a special cellulose paper, to bring out the original lovely soft grays. I have checked these with original pages from La Caricature and Charivari, and while they do not cover the variations of ink and paper texture, they are eminently satisfying. The accompanying text was printed in this country, with a long and discerning introduction by Bernard Lemann, who is an eminent Daumier student. Dr. Lemann and the publishers have produced one of those rarely satisfying books on art that have the quality of the original documents." W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p7 D 15 '46 1150w

"Those who feel, as I do, that the camera's eye is a rather limited instrument of vision, ought to have a wonderful time with the handsome collection of Daumier's lithographs." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 22:96 D 21 '46 120w

Reviewed by M. H. Middleton

+ Spec 177:684 D 20 '46 50w

Reviewed by Marvin Lowenthal

Weekly Book Review p3 D 15 '46 1400w

DAVENPORT, MRS GWEN (LEYS). Return engagement. 256p $2.50 Bobbs

46-5570

In her old age Sophie van Eyck, world famous actress, came back to the Maine coast town where she was born. She bought a fine old house and planned to spend some peaceful summers there. But her entourage was unconventional and unacceptable to the natives, and when Sophie's beloved granddaughter fell in love with the boy next door life was far from peaceful. In an inspired moment Sophie put on her final best act to salvage young love.

Reviewed by J. R. Cook

Book Week p4 Ag 18 '46 220w

Booklist 43:53 O 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"Courtly comedy which combines a certain charm with humor."

+ Kirkus 14:303 J1 1 '46 110w

"The author has given an amusing and knowledgeable picture of the bombasts and frailties of actors in general. The writing, however, and the tone are too homespun for an idea that, bordering always on the farcical, needs the brilliant touch and acid wit of a Noel Coward." Anne Richards

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 25 '46 280w

"Bright dialog and amusing situations."

+ Springfield Republican p4d Ag 11 '46 140w

"Return Engagement" is amusing in stage talk and staged comedy, but artifice steals most of the big scenes and reality has a minor role." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p18 S 15 '46 230w

DAVID, HANS THEODORE, and MENDEL, ARTHUR, eds. Bach reader; a life of Johann Sebastian Bach in letters and documents. 431p il $6 Norton

B or 92 Bach, Johann Sebastian 45-9905
For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Booklist 42:199 F 15 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Sloper

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 2 '46 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '46

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 20 '46 200w

"Among the important documents included in later sections of the book are Bach's own genealogy of his family, with additions by his son, Carl Philipp Emanuel, and others; the informative obituary by the same son and J. F. Agricola, and eighteenth-century appraisals of Bach's music, including the endless controversy initiated by Johann Adolph Scheibe in his periodical, Der Kritische Musikus. Where good contemporary translations of these documents exist they have been used with only slight corrections. Many of the documents have not been previously available in English. . . The weakest part of the book is the opening essay, 'J. S. Bach, a Portrait in Outline,' which attempts to coordinate the material of the other sections. . . Of especial usefulness to students is the careful bibliography of source materials in the original tongue and a substantial cross index." Edward Downes

+ N Y Times p30 F 3 '46 1100w

"By collecting and translating all the available Bach documents and letters, Hans David and Arthur Mendel, both of them able and devoted Bach scholars, have succeeded in clearing the air in the consideration of Bach, the historical figure. As the arrangers of the mid-nineteenth century were inclined to modify the music texts to conform to prevailing fashion, the writers of today, particularly those of the interpretive school, have been tempted to spin out biographical fancies that are highly subjective and often inaccurate. From now on the Bach lover will be amply protected. Here at his elbow in clear and convincing arrangement is the fruit of years of scholarly research." Douglas Moore

+ Sat R of Lit 29:26 Ja 26 '46 850w

"The book is admirably organized. From its historical pages the great composer stands forth as an intensely human person, quarrelsome at times, fighting against injustice, obsequious to the nobility, yet unswervingly pursuing the ideals of his art and his religion. Using such varied documents, the editors have not attempted to create a sustained narrative, but they have produced a portrait which for accuracy and historicity is well nigh unique."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:81 Je '46 190w

"Perhaps the reader who knows nothing about Bach might prefer the usual discursive biographical method which gives not the sources but the biographer's interpretation of them. But those who already have some acquaintance with the subject will surely thank Messrs. David and Mendel for bringing together, with only the minimum comment, all those passages with which any account of Bach must reckon and which are scattered through innumerable works. This book concentrates for our convenience the essence of a whole Bach library." John Erskine

+ Weekly Book Review p18 F 10 '46 600w

"The book is enriched by excellent plates, including fascinating seventeenth-century engravings of Eisenach, Arnstadt, Mühlhausen, and other places connected with Bach. Several portraits of Bach and of his sons are reproduced, with an interesting discussion of their authenticity. Throughout the entire volume the discriminating care of the editors is manifest. One has nothing but praise for their methods, but it might be remembered that their procedure might hardly be as successful with later composers, most of whom are less prolific than Bach, but more garrulous about their own achievements." Bruce Simonds

+ Yale R n s 35:731 summer '46 1200w

DAVIDOFF, HENRY, ed. World treasury of proverbs from twenty-five languages. 526p $3 Random house

398.9 Proverbs. Quotations 46-25214

A compilation of some 15,000 proverbs derived from twenty-five languages, arranged alphabetically by subject. Language or author sources are given for each proverb, except when they are taken from English and American folklore. Indexes of subjects and authors.

Booklist 42:360 J1 15 '46

Commonweal 44:315 J1 12 '46 20w

"This is rich harvest for the addict of such books as Bartlett's Familiar Quotations and Stevenson's Home Book of Quotations."

+ Kirkus 14:122 Mr 1 '46 130w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

N Y Times p32 Ag 11 '46 750w

DAVIDSON, DONALD. The Tennessee; v. 1. The old river, frontier to secession; il. by Theresa Sherrer Davidson. (Rivers of America) 342p $3 Rinehart

917.68 Tennessee river. Tennessee valley (46-11901)

This addition to the River of America series, divides the story of the Tennessee river into two parts and two volumes. In this first volume the author deals with what he calls the "old river" whose recorded history covers nearly four centuries, from 1541 to 1933. Volume two will tell the story of TVA, the "new Tennessee," offspring and conqueror of the "wild river" of earlier days.

"This is certainly one of the best of the Rivers of America books—in itself a high distinction—and in all the rich new literature of American social history, a work notably deserving of the attention of readers throughout the nation." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 O 20 '46 600w

Booklist 43:67 N 1 '46

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 20 '46 600w

"A tremendous quantity of material that is well organized and handled, and a narrative that continues the capable reportage of The Rivers of America Series."

+ Kirkus 14:412 Ag 15 '46 200w

"A scholarly book which lacks popular appeal, it is important for collections of American description, travel and regional history. Recommended." H. B. Bolman

+ Library J 71:1461 O 15 '46 140w

"One reads 'The Tennessee' with a nostalgic reluctance to reach the end. Donald Davidson has done a difficult thing well—to combine the exact researcher with the poet, and weave a spell with a simple, strong prose. The only disappointment is that one must wait until he writes a second volume, which will complete the story of the Tennessee. Illustrations in the manner of woodcuts by his wife make a notable contribution." H. H. Kroil

+ N Y Times p26 D 8 '46 900w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p8 D 1 '46 220w

"Not content to end his story with the river itself, Davidson adds a chapter on life in antebellum Tennessee that is something of a masterpiece. Nowhere else can one find a more keen and penetrating analysis of the basic features of Southern life than in this chapter. Rudely brushing aside old stereotypes, he reveals the people of all classes as they were—how they lived, what they valued, the folk songs they produced, the ways in which they amused themselves, and the assumptions on which they built their personal relationships. He ends his story with a promise that there will be a second volume dealing with that more docile river which men have tamed and placed above the old Tennessee." Avery Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p4 O 27 '46 1000w

DAVIES, ARTHUR POWELL. Faith of an unrepentant liberal. 122p $1.25 Beacon press

252 Sermons 46-4738

Ten sermons by a Washington (D.C.) Unitarian minister. Contents: The faith of an unrepentant liberal; Religion and nostalgia; What is a good character today?; A prayer for unforgiveness; 'Am I my brother's keeper?'; The gift of laughter; The stutter of Demosthenes; A sword and a pair of crutches; Of joy and sorrow; The soul in its loneliness.

"Brilliant, unconventional and ethically urgent sermons on aspects of liberal religion." + Christian Century 63:782 Je 19 '46 40w

Reviewed by K. M. Chworowsky

+ Churchman 160:17 S 1 '46 200w

Kirkus 14:494 O 1 '46 170w

"These sermons are remarkable for their clarity, their deep sincerity, their utter freedom, their sweep of thought on high levels and their occasional passionate eloquence." J. H. Holmes

+ Weekly Book Review p28 O 6 '46 150w

DAVIES, RAYMOND ARTHUR. Odyssey through hell. 235p $2.50 Fischer, L.B. 940.54056 World war, 1939-1945—Atrocities. World war, 1939-1945—Jews. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Canadian 46-6694

A Canadian-born world traveler and correspondent, who has spent the last two years covering Eastern Europe and Poland in particular, describes what happened to the Jews of Poland, Rumania, Yugoslavia, and the parts of Russia which the Germans overran. No index.

Book Week p2 S 29 '46 60w

"Mr. Davies has written his story well and convincingly. Too many readers are likely to be frightened away by his subject-matter and others may be antagonized by his enthusiasm for Russia and Russian policy toward the Jews." Daniel Schwarz

+ N Y Times p6 S 8 '46 400w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 10 '46 70w

"Apart from ideological questions, Mr. Davies's book will be marred for some readers by its emotional style, and by its implicit appeal for funds from America. Both qualities no doubt are justifiable, but sometimes the grim facts, presented cold, carry even greater punch." Marcus Duffield

Weekly Book Review p26 O 13 '46 500w

DAVIES, RHYS. Black Venus. 325p $2.75 Howell, Soskin [8s 6d Heinemann]

[A45-2741]

The Welsh village of Ayron was stirred by the trial of its most beautiful daughter, Olwen Powell, heiress of Ty Rhosyn. She had advanced ideas on the rights of women, altho it was early in the twentieth century, and she had over-indulged in the local custom of caru yn y gively, namely courting in bed. Olwen maintained there was no harm in the ancient custom; village mothers of marriageable daughters maintained there was. And so the trial and its aftermath form the core of this novel.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Book Week p3 Mr 3 '46 400w

"An amusing bit of folkways in action—original in matter and manner. But too odd to be surely popular."

+ Kirkus 14:20 Ja 15 '46 150w

"'The Black Venus' is an unusual and altogether delightful tour de force, drenched in the color of its background, ornamented with many a philosophical whirlygig—and written in a fine, poetic prose that reads, at times, like music in a minor key. . . [It is] a melody that, for all its rustic motif, is also urbane, gay, and even profound. A true exotic, this novel deserves to be read aloud, and savored to the end." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p3 F 24 '46 600w

New Yorker 22:102 Mr 9 '46 80w

"Rhys Davies has the gift of tongues—and along with it he has an appreciative insight into the particular genius of the Welsh people. More sociologist than antiquarian and more of a poet than either, Mr. Davies manages to indicate in his account of life in a retarded Welsh village in the early 1900s that in fundamentals a man's way with a woman is unchanging. . . Binding together his wisdom about the human race is his knowledge of the soil and of animals, which gives background to 'Black Venus', and makes of it a deep rooted, poetic whole." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p6 F 17 '46 800w

DAVIES, RHYS. Trip to London; short stories. 214p $2.50 Howell, Soskin [6s Heinemann] 46-7210

Contents: The benefit concert; A dangerous remedy; The last struggle; Price of a wedding ring; The trip to London; Gents only; The public-house; River, flow gently; Spectre de La Rose; Death of a canary; Orestes.

Reviewed by Jex Martin
Book Week p3 O 13 '46 230w

Reviewed by H. I. A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Porter
New Repub 115:699 N 25 '46 240w

"Mr. Rhys Davies is so completely a master of the short story that one has little to say of him, except to express wonder at his sustained vis comica, his superb gift of complete characterisation in the smallest conceivable space, and his consistently felicitous inventiveness." Henry Reed

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:160 Mr 2 '46 180w

"Mr. Davies is concerned with a single theme: the relation of the sexes. His women are one kind of woman, and his men are one kind of man. The relation is simply that of the predatory creature to its victim. . . Mr. Davies' prose is threadbare and inert. . . The stories, however, obtain a kind of force from their morbid insistence of theme. But Mr. Davies works against their direction by stressing the whimsical aspects of his characters, as though he were describing a crew of mere village eccentrics." John Farrelly

N Y Times p34 S 29 '46 470w

"Mr. Davies is convincing, thoughtful, and entertaining."

+ New Yorker 22:100 S 28 '46 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 24 '46 70w

"Mr. Davies is rather satisfying—a keen and compassionate observer, a poet and a lover. He will be snowed under, no doubt, by ponderous novels of Civil War families, by verbose and seductive histories of remarkable women, by slick self-satisfied reports of domestic upheaval and financial success, which will sell like mad. But somehow, under the pile of soft coal, his modest little gem ought to get a ray or two through to hungry, careful eyes." N. G. Chalkin

+ Sat R of Lit 29.66 D 7 '46 420w

"Accuracy, light-fingered and gentle, and drawing form and feeling together into a single, unaffected statement, is Mr. Rhys Davies's great gift, and he gets beautiful results from it here, in six or seven of these eleven new stories." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 176:228 Mr 1 '46 400w

"The humour, the liveliness, the truth to nature of Mr. Rhys Davies's short stories make him as pleasurable to read as any contemporary short-story writer. His touch is surest when he keeps to a native Welsh setting, for nothing of Welsh life and habit comes amiss to him. . . Of the eleven short stories in this new collection two or three are well below the level of the best he can do. In general, those which have nothing to do with Wales are most serious in purpose—and are least satisfying."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 23 '46 650w

"Using the singsong speech of the Welsh and his own delicately modulated rhythms, Mr. Davies has produced in 'The Trip to London' a quite unimportant, thoroughly delightful group of short stories that any one with an ear attuned to the fine art of speech and a sense of humor is bound to enjoy." F. H. Bullock

+ Weekly Book Review p16 O 6 '46 380w

DAVIS, BETTY ELISE. Scotchtown tale; il. by Margaret Ayer. 144p $2 Nelson

Madison, Dorothy (Payne) Todd—Juvenile literature 46-7093

Scotchtown was the beautiful Virginia plantation where lived Dorothea Payne, the little Quaker who became Dolly Madison. This story of her girlhood closes with her fourteenth year.

"Betty Elise Davis has done a difficult thing successfully, when she tells with charm and authentic detail the early life of Dolly Madison who has gone down in history as the most charming Mistress of the White House." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 26 '46 180w

"A very good segment of the young America, a vivid picture of eventful life on a plantation in those days, bits of side issues during the two wars, as the story ends with Dolly waiting in Washington to make sure a famous portrait of George Washington is in safe hands as the British approached the new capitol. True story—with an authentic feel."

+ Kirkus 14:457 S 15 '46 90w

"Author has based the story on authentic details thoughtfully selected." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 71:1466 O 15 '46 110w

"A good [story] for those boys and girls of 8 to 12 whose fairy-tale heroes are gradually being supplanted by characters from their history books. By a skillful blending of historical incidents and plausible invention the author gives a true picture of a Quaker household at the time of the Revolution. . . A smooth narrative style, a generous use of conversation and numerous black and white illustrations add to the book's appeal." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p26 N 17 '46 200w

DAVIS, CLYDE BRION. Stars incline. 280p $2.75 Rinehart

45-10692

Portrait of a newspaper man, who starts his career on a Denver paper; later works in New York; and goes from there to Spain, and to the Normandy invasion. An ambitious, worthless woman joins her life to his, and then when he needs her most, leaves him. As the book closes the man seems to be headed back to the west and a more worthwhile woman.

"It's stuff for an idle hour, and so skillful is this man Davis that he has you half believing such things could happen, but you know the book isn't much of anything special." Leo Kennedy

Book Week p8 Ja 27 '46 300w

Booklist 42:184 F 1 '46

Kirkus 13:497 N 15 '45 270w

"Well-written, introspective novel. . . Interesting sideline developed in regard to telepathy and, through careful assimilation of facts and reflection on them, to ability to forecast events." M. H. McElfresh

+ Library J 71:121 Ja 15 '46 110w

"If [the author] had not written better books than this, you would say that here was a writer fumbling with the basic elements of his craft, who had still to learn the difference between realistic effect and pedestrian photography. There are flashes of the earlier Davis—a sharp descriptive phrase, an incisive characterization—but they are only flashes; which is not enough to ask of a writer so experienced and so well established." James Fuller

+ N Y Times p20 F 3 '46 550w

"This [is a] listless, rather commonplace story. . . Several of the early chapters, which deal with the young man's beginnings as a reporter and rewrite man on the Denver Post, have considerable authenticity and charm, but the author, as he must be aware, has done all that more effectively before. A readable but generally perfunctory performance."

+ New Yorker 21:82 Ja 26 '46 100w

"Maybe the day will come when Clyde Brion Davis will run out of interesting things to say about newspapermen, but happily there is no evidence of its approach in 'The Stars Incline.' Here again he is writing of the profession with freshness and insight and, now and then, with something of the intuitive understanding that Barney Morgan, his hero, felt a good reporter ought to combine with his other qualifications." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 27 '46 800w

DAVIS, DEERING, and others. Alexandria houses, 1750-1830. 128p il maps $5 Architectural bk.

975.5296 Alexandria, Virginia—Historic houses, etc. Architecture, Domestic 46-3342

"The beauty, dignity and timeless serenity of Alexandrian architecture of the pre-Revolutionary and Early Republic periods passes before the eye in this handsome book through a series of large views, exterior and interior. . . There is a brief history of this near neighbor of the nation's capital, a survey of its architectural styles, a chapter on its old maps, and at the end a list of structures erected before 1830 and still extant. All the rest is given to full-page plates and descriptions of such landmarks as Gadsby's Tavern, the Dick and Fairchild houses in Prince Street, Mount Airy and Washington's town house, with a special section on near-by Mount Vernon." Weekly Book Review

Booklist 42:295 My 15 '46

+ Weekly Book Review p20 My 26 '46 200w

DAVIS, EDWIN ADAMS. Of the night wind's telling; legends from the valley of Mexico; with drawings by Dorothy Kirk. 276p $3 Univ. of Okla. press

398.2 Legends—Mexico 46-5901

A volume of legends of old Mexico, collected and retold by the author, who spent several months in Mexico City listening to the story tellers and checking the printed and manuscript sources in the libraries. Some of the legends deal with Indian mythology, and pre-Conquest times, others with Spanish colonial days, only one with modern times. Bibliography.

Booklist 43.95 D 1 '46

"Legends of Mexico are layered like the detritus around the pyramids of the sun and the moon. . . All these layers have yielded shards and artifacts to the earnest stick of E. Adams Davis, Professor of History at Louisiana State University. . . Professor Davis is no Washington Irving giving a conquered people new life, but neither does he load his work with the usual professorial straitjacket of footnotes and citations. He writes with the air of a professor on vacation, loving the tale for its own sake. And if at times he becomes a bit coy he can be forgiven, because he obviously loves Mexico as it is, with no desire for reform, and because his enthusiasm illumines his pages." Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 11 '46 500w

"What I liked best about the collection is Mr. Davis' balance. Some of his tales are of the supernatural, some are of ghosts and spec-ters, many are of death, which has never been regarded by the Mexican in quite the light we are accustomed to regard it. But there are also sly tales of simple folk-spinning, humorous tales, purely picturesque and beautiful ones. As a collection, the book has proportion, which is the difficult thing to attain in any anthology. Mr. Davis knows his subject and his talent for putting a book together is notable." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 29 '46 600w

Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 18 '46 360w

"Mr. Davis, a professional folklorist on a Mexican holiday, has gathered from oral tradition and from the published volumes of tale-tellers like Gonzalez Obregon a representative collection of stories old and new, and has told them with the zest, and occasionally something too much of the archness, of a folklorist on a busman's holiday. He is unduly proud of having resisted his publishers' request for a few notes on the sources of each tale, although the volume would have gained in usefulness and lost nothing in charm thereby. Nevertheless, he is so patently having a good time, so thoroughly enjoys the tales he relates and selects so well from the available excess of abundance that 'Of the Night Wind's Telling' is a very engaging and pleasant introduction to the shades that haunt the storied city's old streets and mountain rim. . . All in all, not a book to put into the hands of little children, but first rate for grownups who would understand the spirit of the people of the valley of Mexico as revealed in the gay and sometimes terrifying products of their romantic and sardonic fantasy." B. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 29 '46 850w

DAVIS, FREMONT, and VAN DE WATER, MARJORIE. Knots and rope [phototold in 195 pictures]. 92p $2 Infantry journal

677.7 Knots and splices

One hundred and ninety-five photographs showing the different types of knots and splices in the making and in use, with descriptive text.

Booklist 43:113 D 15 '46

"A special book, expensive, but useful for scout age as well as interested adults." G. L. Landon

Library J 71:1211 S 15 '46 80w

DAVIS, FREMONT, and VAN DE WATER, MARJORIE. Use of tools; phototold in 420 pictures. 238p $3.50 Infantry journal

621.9 Tools 47-239

Over four hundred photographs and diagrams showing various types of tools and how they are used. Brief explanatory text accompanies the photographs. The work was designed as a text for servicemen but is suitable also for the home craftsman.

"A useful book for a children's room, young people's department or high school library. . . Should be required reading for all manual training classes." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 71:1211 S 15 '46 60w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:49 Jl '46

"The photographs are excellent, the text simple and clear; both were done by staff members of Science Service." R. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 20 '46 140w

Weekly Book Review p30 S 29 '46 110w

DAVIS, JEROME. Behind Soviet power; Stalin and the Russians. 120p il $2.75; pa $1 Reader's press

947.084 Russia—Politics and government. Stalin, Iosif. Communism—Russia 46-6825

"A well informed observer, many times visitor to Russia, deprecates the view that Russia is a peril to the world's peace. He sees no spirit of aggression, believes that Stalin's dictatorship is waning, and thinks we can co-operate in friendly fashion." Christian Century

"[This] small book, a third of which is devoted to giving a picture of Stalin, cannot be said to add very much to the already available knowledge of Russia. What is of interest is not so much the subject matter, but the spirit in which the book is written. Dr. Davis expresses warm sympathy for the achievements of the Russian people during the grim quarter of a century devoted to 'building socialism in one country.' He is not altogether uncritical, but critics of Russia will consider some of his statements unduly mild; for example, speaking of the purges, he writes: 'Fanaticism, hysteria, and bureaucracy inevitably caused some injustice—but the guilty were tried.' In answering some of the questions most frequently asked about Russia, he is refreshingly forthright." V. M. Dean

Atlantic 178:180 D '46 420w

Christian Century 63:1249 O 16 '46 50w

"Any book that attempts to bridge the profound gulf between these two worlds, deserves a thoughtful and receptive hearing. Behind Soviet Power, for this reason, is an inviting book. The author's opportunities have been unusual. Ever since the last days of the czars, he has traveled and studied extensively in Russia and Siberia. He has interviewed many Communist leaders, including Stalin, and studied Soviet institutions. He is a former professor of sociology and social ethics at Yale University Divinity School. Because of his scholastic credentials and firsthand knowledge, his background for such a book seems impressive. It is disappointing, therefore, that certain fundamental weaknesses appear greatly to impair the value of his book. Literally from the first page, an unmistakable lack of objectivity becomes evident." D. H. John

— + Christian Science Monitor p14 S 30 '46 750w

Foreign Affairs 25:344 Ja '47 10w

"An interesting book that is frankly designed to counteract the flood of uninformed and often highly prejudiced comment on Russia, which today is rapidly falling into the pattern of the anti-Soviet propaganda of the Twenties. It would be a mistake to dismiss his book as an uncritical apologia of Russian policies by an acknowledged Soviet sympathizer. There are, it is true, many points at which Mr. Davis lays himself open to the charge of glossing over too casually the less pleasing aspects of the Russian scene. He may appear at times even naïve in his eagerness to give the Soviets the benefit of every doubt. Nonetheless, on a purely factual basis what he has to say is important for the American public." F. R. Dulles

+ — N Y Times p35 S 29 '46 700w

"It is distinctly a pro-Russian work, but nevertheless valuable as record and analysis by a competent and informed reporter."

Spring'd Republican p6 Ag 22 '46 350w

DAVIS, JOHN MERLE. New buildings on old foundations; a handbook on stabilizing the younger churches in their environment. 320p $1.75 Int. missionary council

266 Missions 46-3829

"For the writing of this book the author has had an extraordinary preparation in his years of missionary work in Japan, his sociological studies and surveys, his five years as general secretary of the Institute of Pacific Relations, and his travels and missionary researches in many parts of the world." Christian Century

"This work will be a foundation book in the study of the wider aspects of Christian reconstruction."

+ Christian Century 63:627 My 15 '46 70w

+ Manchester Guardian p3 J1 23 '46 200w

DAVIS, KENNETH SYDNEY. Soldier of democracy; a biography of Dwight Eisenhower. 566p maps $3.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Eisenhower, Dwight David 45-37893

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Bookmark 7:13 Mr '46

Cath World 162:477 F '46 200w

"The first good biography of General Eisenhower, by an admirer who has dug up a lot of interesting things about his early life."

+ Foreign Affairs 24:556 Ap '46 20w

"The author's admiration for his subject is tempered by judicious recognition of his shortcomings; there is no suggestion of uncritical hero-worship, no needless effort to dramatize the great events of which General Eisenhower was a prime mover. The style is everywhere masculine and gracious."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:22 Mr '46 280w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Barren heritage. 208p $2 Doubleday

46-2156

Mystery story.

Booklist 42:349 J1 1 '46

"Inoffensive and certainly innocuous."

Kirkus 13:549 D 15 '46 90w

"Besides being a better-than-average detective story this book might be described as a cogent argument for true democracy." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '46 180w

"A routine story with a good, grim background."

New Yorker 22:92 F 23 '46 80w

"Enjoyable."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 Mr 2 '46 40w

"You may giggle at the murder methods—but it worked, didn't it!" Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p30 Mr 10 '46 150w

DAVIS, MARY GOULD. Randolph Caldecott, 1846-1886; an appreciation. 47p il $1.75 Lippincott

B or 92 Caldecott, Randolph 46-11806

A brief sketch of the life of this famous English illustrator, with an appreciation of his seventeen picture books for children. The book is written in celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of his birth.

Booklist 43:105 D 1 '46

"Not very much is known about his youth, but Miss Davis has written a lively account of that little which will be of peculiar value to librarians and teachers who want some background for presenting his books to youngsters in story hours. The illustrations throughout the book are Caldecott's own pictures, and in discussing them and the books he illustrated, Miss Davis reviews some of the first—and often faltering—steps in the history of juvenile literature."

+ Kirkus 14:546 N 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Mary Strang

Library J 72:87 Ja 1 '47 90w

"Miss Davis writes of Caldecott's picture books as one who knows them well and has shared them with children, and black and white drawings from them are reproduced on every page." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p52 N 10 '46 150w

"Not making any pretense at wishing to be a definitive contribution on the man and his work, Miss Davis has given us the sort of appreciation one would expect from her. It is an appraisal of Caldecott's imagination and love of life, his never-ceasing good humor and his sense of detail in drawing." Karl Kup

+ Publisher's Weekly 150:3138 D 7 '46 180w

Reviewed by Hannah Hinsdale

San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 10 '46 70w

"Randolph Caldecott was one of the best and most important illustrators of children's books, and it was for him that our Caldecott Medal was named and is awarded each year for the best picture book. And so, it is fitting that in this centennial year of his birth a book should be written in appreciation of his work. And it is fitting, too, that it should be written by Miss Davis who has worked so long with children and who knows their appreciation of this great illustrator. . . . This book will be welcomed by librarians as an addition to their Caldecott collections." Phyllis Fenner

+ Weekly Book Review p16 N 10 '46 250w

DAVIS, MAXINE (MRS J. M. MCHUGH). Through the stratosphere; the human factor in aviation. 253p $2.75 Macmillan

629.13256 Aeronautics—Medical aspects 46-4776

"This book is the story of aviation medicine. Actually, the story is only incidentally a medical narrative, and therefore the label, 'aviation medicine' is a misnomer. It is a reporter's record of the evolution and use of a vast number of devices evolved by the air forces for keeping fliers healthy, happy, and in the air." Intro

Book Week p2 J1 28 '46 90w

Booklist 43:113 D 15 '46

Christian Century 63:1015 Ag 21 '46 60w

DAVIS, MAXINE—Continued

"The subject is of great interest and no doubt a good deal of time was spent in gathering material for the book. The main fault is that it is not too well-written. Large portions are choppy in style and occasionally the reader may be confused." W. A. Kalenich
Library J 71:917 Je 15 '46 140w

"Answers to . . . questions about human survival aloft are [given] clearly and competently." H. M. Davis
+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 11 '46 600w

Reviewed by Wolfgang Langewiesche
Weekly Book Review p34 O 27 '46 130w

DAVISON, ARCHIBALD THOMPSON, and APEL, WILLI. Historical anthology of music; oriental, medieval and renaissance music. 258p il $7.50 Harvard univ. press

780.9 Music—Collections. Music—History and criticism (A46-5323)

"Volume 1 (to 1600) of a planned two volume collection of music (to 1800) not published by the trade. Designed to accompany a projected history of music and collection of recorded works which parallel it. . . In modern notation—for the most part in close score with few leger lines—with a minimum of editorial emendations (e.g. musica ficta, indications of medium of performance, etc.) and highly readable. One hundred and eighty-one works, nondogmatic as to choice, representative of their periods and supplemented by text translations and notes on source and style." Library J

"The book shows remarkable judgment for the material selected and for a commonsense method of presentation. Besides that, it is both handsome and readable as press work. Efforts of the sort seldom come to daylight in so practicable a shape. Praiseworthy, the notation is modernized; and somehow the illusion of the past stays. . . The 'Anthology' is by no means a mere garden of posies. Rather, it is a mine to be worked." W. P. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p19 O 12 '46 410w

"Highly recommended." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 71:1204 S 15 '46 140w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2.271 D '46 280w

DAVISON, FRANK DALBY. Dusty. 211p $2.50 Coward-McCann

Dogs—Legends and stories 46-6300

The story of an Australian sheep dog, Dusty, born of a dingo mother, and an Australian sheep dog. Dusty was captured when a puppy and trained to be a sheep dog, and easily carried off prizes at field trials. Then the wild half of his heritage claimed him, and he killed a sheep. With his first taste of blood Dusty became an outlaw. The book pictures life on the Australian plains, as well as the life of Dusty.

"An enthralling and very fine story." Dorothy Sparks

+ Book Week p3 Ag 4 '46 270w
Booklist 43:16 S '46

"The story lends itself easily to symbolic interpretation, but it is doubtful that the author intended one. The tale's the thing; and it is a good one. The manners of the Australian countryside and the techniques of sheep raising need considerable explanation to people of the antipodes. The result is an occasional sluggishness in the narrative. But there is, for all that, enough vigor to hold interest up to the somewhat unfortunately contrived ending." D. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 J 22 '46 410w

"Authentic natural history, which retains story values without recourse to sentiment." + Kirkus 14:256 Je 1 '46 170w

"Mr. Davison's straightforward style and his ability to avoid the sentimental passages so often found in dog stories are something to be grateful for." Marian Gibbons
+ N Y Times p14 J 28 '46 270w

"Slow moving, the book is definitely not light reading, but the hero emerges from the descriptive detail of thoughts and setting with a distinct personality that makes him outstanding both in the service of man and in the wild life he makes his own."

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 18 '46 120w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 4 '46 500w

DAY, MRS LILLIAN (ABRAMS). Grieg; il. by Alida Vreeland. (Hyperion music ser) 40p $1.75 Duell

B or 92 Grieg, Edvard Hagerup—Juvenile literature 46-4938

Story of the Norwegian musician, written for ages eight to fourteen. The whole period of his life is covered in brief chapters, with illustrations in color.

"Pleasantly written biography." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 22:274 J 1 '46 80w

Kirkus 14:253 Je 1 '46 40w

"Written for younger children, this gaily illustrated brief biography of the Scandinavian composer is sketchy in its presentation but will be useful in arousing interest in reading about composers and music. No examples of Grieg's music are included. Recommended only for large collections." G. E. Jolne

Library J 71:1054 Ag '46 70w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer

N Y Times p14 J 7 '46 50w

Reviewed by Grace Stevens

San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 10 '46 120w

Weekly Book Review p8 Je 7 '46 60w

DAY, MRS LILLIAN (ABRAMS). Paganini; il. by Andre Dugo. (Hyperion music ser) 40p $1.75 Duell

B or 92 Paganini, Niccolò—Juvenile literature 46-4937

Brief story of the life of this Italian musician, who from poverty-stricken youth, rose to be a world-famous violinist. For ages eight to fourteen.

"A stimulating addition to the earlier books in the Music Series for young children." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:274 J 1 '46 80w

Kirkus 14:253 Je 1 '46 40w

"A pleasant introduction for girls and boys of nine years and up." Elizabeth Gordon

+ Library J 71:982 J 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer

N Y Times p14 J 7 '46 50w

"An excellent sketch of that controversial genius of the violin." Grace Stevens

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 10 '46 60w

Weekly Book Review p8 Je 2 '46 60w

DEAN, ABNER. It's a long way to heaven. 131p $3.50 Rinehart

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 46-201

Cartoons satirizing man and his attendant female—a kind of psychoanalysis of the human race in pictures.

Canadian Forum 26:190 N '46 100w

"The sixty-five drawings which Abner Dean gives us in 'It's a Long Way to Heaven' constitute a for-goodness-sake book. As such it is very good—excellent. A for-goodness-sake book? Well, it's the kind of book that you see in the house of a friend—in the guest room, usually, or carelessly displayed on an occasional table; you open it and exclaim mildly, 'For goodness' sake!' You may or may not thereafter go through the book, and if you do you may or may not like it. The for-goodness-sake reaction, however, is universal." Russell Maloney

N Y Times p4 Ja 6 '46 450w

"Humanity is very much like any other animal; it licks its wounds, hunts for salt, and digs for roots in the winter. . . Half-drunk on what it deems to be wisdom, it has staggered to the edge of an abyss and fallen flat on its face. At this point a young man named Abner Dean has come along and, for the good of history, sketched the somnambulist, putting in all the details. Guard his book well; regard it long; remember that it is a portrait of yourself." Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 F 2 '46 750w

DEAN, AMBER. Call me Pandora. 220p $2 Doubleday

46-1628

Detective story.

Kirkus 13:535 D 1 '45 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p30 Mr 10 '46 100w

"Another, and not unpleasing, variation on time-honored theme. Posh atmosphere, some gaiety, sufficient action and unobtrusive detective. Adequate."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:56 F 16 '46 40w

"Miss Dean is out to amuse rather than to horrify unduly. Abbie all but turns cartwheels to this end, her sister Maggie picks threads off people's clothing, and oldish Dr. Custom, a sort of double beau, is always holding his sides at this or that. Says Abbie, 'I hope he laughs himself to death some day.' We'd let him off with a warning." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p20 F 10 '46 180w

DEAN, AMBER. Wrap it up. 222p $2 Doubleday

46-20640

Detective story.

Kirkus 14:332 J1 15 '46 80w

"The summer resort background affords an incongruously pleasing setting for a story of sordid crime and clever detection." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p28 S 15 '46 140w

"Adequately worked out, and probably fine for those who like lemonade and gossip rather than rye and monosyllables with their murder."

+ New Yorker 22:119 S 21 '46 100w

"Miss Dean's books have their weaknesses, in this case including the year's most transparent plot; but they have also a fresh simple likability which is disarming." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 22 '46 60w

"Soft-bolled, good-natured, readable and harmless, what with the Johnsons and their four kiddies, Grampie, Sister Maggie and a villain who won't scare you too much." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p18 S 8 '46 140w

DEAN, JOHN PEEBLES, and BREINES, SIMON. Book of houses; 150 photographs, 100 plans. 143p $2 Crown

728.6 Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans 46-1332

A large part of this book is given over to the illustrations, floor plans and criticisms of one hundred houses costing from $5,000 to $10,000 (1941). In addition there are chapters on choosing a home site, financing a house building program, remodelling, etc.

"An excellent and authoritative book on housing."

+ Book Week p8 F 3 '46 180w

Booklist 42:223 Mr 15 '46

Bookmark 7:6 N '46

"Mr. Dean, a housing economist, and Mr. Breines, a New York architect, have joined hands to produce a well-ordered summary of helpful hints and warnings to home buyers and builders, designed primarily as a guide for those who must be satisfied with living quarters in the price range between $5,000 and $10,000." L. E. Cooper

+ N Y Times p14 J1 14 '46 450w

"It is a good, lively book and makes interesting reading." Sydney Maslen

+ Survey 82:337 D '46 550w

"Messrs. Dean and Breines not only use photographs throughout—there are also 100 plans—but widen the story to include the relation of the individual house to community planning, remodeling and helpful advice about buying houses. Two other important sections discuss and picture the basic house and the prefabricated. A sound book this. Where the design calls for criticism or invidious comparisons of styles the authors pull no punches." Richardson Wright

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Je 30 '46 90w

DEAN, LEON W. Guns over Champlain. 245p $2 Rinehart

46-2716

"A mysterious knocking awakened Asa Barnum in the middle of a cold, wet night in 1813. The succeeding months brought this teen-age Vermonter excitement, danger, suspense and action. Traitors and ruthless enemies were overcome. Enlisting in the Navy, under Lieutenant Macdonough, he was captured in his first engagement. With his friend, Carter Wayne, he escaped from a prison ship, spent long, eventful months in winter quarters and fought with distinction in the final American victory at Cumberland Head." N Y Times

"Good, swift-moving historical novel." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 16 '47 210w

"This is a good yarn."

+ Kirkus 14:36 Ja 15 '46 110w

"The background is solid, the plot and characterization convincing. Fathers, as well as their adolescent sons, will enjoy this novel of the War of 1812." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p30 My 5 '46 140w

"Asa Barnum's experience is probably nearer to what really happened at this time than that found in some boys' books about this period, and its excitements are not synthetic." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 28 '46 320w

DEAN, MRS VERA (MICHELES). Four cornerstones of peace. (Whittlesey house publication) 267p $2.50 McGraw

341.1 Washington, D. C. Conversations on international organization, 1944. Crimea conference, 1945. Inter-American conference on problems of war and peace, Mexico, 1945. United nations conference on international organization, San Francisco, 1945 46-229

A record and study of the "four cornerstones of peace," the United Nations conferences at Dumbarton Oaks, Yalta, Mexico City and San Francisco. The author is research director of the Foreign policy association. Index.

"The volume shows some evidences of having been put together in haste, but it is solid and reliable and thought-inspiring, as Mrs. Dean's work usually is. The most significant issues and characteristic features of the new system are presented, although it has proved a little confusing to students to list 'the ten' key points—no more and no less." Clyde Eagleton

Am Pol Sci R 40:828 Ag '46 230w

Reviewed by Willard Shelton

Book Week p6 F 24 '46 280w

Booklist 42:182 F 1 '46

Bookmark 7:10 Mr '46

Reviewed by F. J. Van Antwerpen

Chem & Eng N 24:1732 Je 25 '46 400w

"This book is no profound and exhaustive study of the problem of peace. It only touches briefly upon the ways in which the United Nations may be turned into an instrumentality capable of coping with atomic force. It doesn't compare with Emery Reeves's 'The Anatomy of Peace.' But it is a thoroughly sound and understandable summary of the present situation embodied in existing agreements. And, in general terms, it looks ahead."

DEAN, V. M.—Continued
E. D. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 25
46 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '46

Current Hist 10:349 Ap '46 50w

"A lucid and systematic analysis of the progress toward the organization of world peace."

+ Foreign Affairs 24:742 Jl '46 60w

"Almost required reading for every American voter." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 70:1086 N 15 '45 70w

"The Four Cornerstones of Peace" is not merely competent but distinguished in thought and style. This is an ideal compendium for the citizen—not necessarily a student of world politics—interested in security and justice."
Albert Guerard

+ Nation 162:267 Mr 2 '46 360w

New Repub 114:326 Mr 4 '46 120w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p1 Ja 27 '46 1500w

New Yorker 21:87 Ja 26 '46 90w

"We need this book badly. It does not try to answer all our questions or to lift the veil of the future. But it provides an objective interpretation of the international agreements upon which the feeble edifice of peace rests today. It asks the questions which loom so threateningly between the lines of the documents and it answers them with clarity, so far as the turmoil of our day permits final answers." H. W. Weigert

+ Sat R of Lit 29:38 F 16 '46 650w

"This is no dull and pedantic history. It is a lively, informative, and scholarly account of a most critical period in our civilization. The book should be read by everyone who desires to understand the problems and difficulties of building the better world that we all hope can arise from the ashes of the most devastating of all wars." C. B. Mahon

+ Survey G 35:170 My '46 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:126 Je '46 130w

"This is carefully pondered contemporary history without fanfare or froth. The outstanding merit of the study, more valuable even than its logic and lucidity, is the honesty of the judgments. From the realistic preface, 'A Job To Be Done,' to the closing quotation it presents the aims, the efforts and the odds that face humanity in its fight for security."
Geoffrey Bruun

+ Weekly Book Review p5 F 3 '46 700w

DE ANGELI, MRS MARGUERITE (LOFFT).
Bright April [il. by the author]. 86p $2.50
Doubleday

46-5341

Story of a bright little Negro girl, whose home life was so happy that her first knowledge of racial intolerance came on her tenth birthday, when a little white girl refused to sit beside her at a Brownie party. Her intelligent parents help her to make the needed adjustment.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 178:170 D '46 20w

Reviewed by Phyllis Whitney

Book Week p4 N 10 '46 270w

Booklist 43:19 S '46

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 10 '46
180w

"Amid the tumult and tensions of racial strain, Mrs. de Angeli's story of April stands out with refreshing serenity and wisdom. . .
Once again, in this story of Germantown, Mrs. de Angeli presents a special cultural group with sincerity and kindly appreciation and more of her colorful pictures." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:267 Jl '46 90w

"In a warm and friendly family story, against a Pennsylvania setting, she touches lightly, and with integrity, on the Negro problem as it affects little April."

+ Kirkus 14:222 My 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by E. E. Frank

Library J 71:1054 Ag '46 150w

"To point at a thing directly sometimes makes it seem less important. Marguerite de Angeli has aimed her finger straight, and said,
'Look!' The little black and white drawings in the book are lovely, but on the whole, the pictures like the story, lack reality and vitality." P. F.

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 11 '46 170w

"The lesson the story teaches is admirable, but it would be more effective—even for readers of from eight to ten—if there were less propaganda and less prettiness in both text and pictures." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:141 D 7 '46 70w

"April's activities are those of any normal child of her age. They are told with a simplicity and charm that make them absorbing reading for little girls. . . The illustrations have Marguerite de Angeli's usual charm." R.
A. Hill

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 Ag 10 '46 500w

"It is a study in citizenship and good neighborliness, carrying its message gently to little girls under ten. The lovely pictures in color show scenes in and around Germantown and groups of children at play and in Scout work, with the disarming tenderness always found in this artist's pictures."

+ Weekly Book Review p9 My 19 '46
410w

Wis Lib Bul 42:135 O '46

DE BOTH, JESSIE MARIE. Modern household encyclopedia. 347p il $3 J. G. Ferguson

640.3 Home economics 46-4111

Alphabetically arranged encyclopedia of household hints, from Absorbents to Zucchini, see squash. There are over 8000 hints, and 200 illustrations, making this a handy reference tool for the inexperienced housekeeper.

Book Week p13 My 19 '46 90w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer

N Y Times p30 Ag 11 '46 270w

Weekly Book Review p14 Je 23 '46 90w

DE CHAZEAU, MELVIN GARDNER. Jobs and markets. See Committee for economic development

DEDMON, EMMETT. Duty to live. 271p $2.50
Houghton

46-1514

A composite picture of the lives of a bomber's crew, ending with the last fatal run over the German target.

Reviewed by Martin Savala

Book Week p3 Mr 3 '46 230w

Kirkus 14:20 Ja 15 '46 120w

"If this novel had appeared toward the beginning instead of after the end of the war, it would probably have been well received, in the style of films like 'Air Force' and of many radio programs dealing with the armed services. Its writing is clear and concise. Its story of the crew of a Flying Fortress on a mission over Germany is neatly pointed, and the flashbacks into the lives of the men seem real. . .
But the time for neat, propagandist pointing is over." William Kehoe

N Y Times p10 Ap 21 '46 280w

+ New Yorker 22:104 Mr 9 '46 120w

"When the bomber goes down and all fates are closed together what has been achieved?
What is the point of integration? There does not seem to be any. The book is no more than a set of arresting character sketches of the kind of men who fought the war, and they have no common denominator except the fact that the war wrenched them away from something that they would prefer to be doing."
Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 29:17 Mr 16 '46 750w

"'Duty to Live' is a book written and rewritten five times in a German prison camp after its author, a Flying Fortress navigator, had parachuted into captivity from a blazing bomber over Hanover, Germany. Perhaps it was this captivity with its attendant retro-spection and the fact that the author confined himself to writing about entirely familiar topics and people that give 'Duty to Live' its depth and understanding." W. M. Kunstler

+ Weekly Book Review p18 Mr 3 '46 600w

DEEPING, WARWICK. Impudence of youth.
284p $2.50 Dial press [9s 6d Cassell]

46-7183

"Tells the story of John James Pope, of his struggles in the Victorian world of the Eighteen Nineties, of his love for a pretty shop assistant who adored him, his efforts to win a practice as a physician, and, finally, of the lucky turn which pushed him almost overnight into a position of enormous wealth as a patent medicine king." N Y Times

Reviewed by Kay Harper
Book Week p9 N 3 '46 230w

"The author characterizes Pope as a 'bit of genius' and a puckish fellow. For all that he isn't a sympathetic character. He's a self-centered individual who takes honors and good fortune as his due and hard luck as a personal affront. His worldly success is due far more to chance than to brilliance or hard work, and his use of his wealth is scarcely original or generous enough to bear the mark of genius." B. S.

N Y Times p16 S 22 '46 150w

"Warwick Deeping can be counted upon—sometimes as often as three times a year—to give his readers a nice story about interesting people topped off with proper sentiments and a happy ending, and this, his sixty-second volume, conforms to type." Grace Frank
Sat R of Lit 29:51 O 12 '46 400w

DEERING, FERDIE. USDA. manager of American agriculture. 213p il $2.50 Univ. of Okla. press

630.6173 U.S. Agriculture, Department of Agr45-370
For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"There can be no doubt that the Department of Agriculture, as well as some other departments of the federal government, has many deficiencies. . . . However, Mr. Deering's book adds but little to our ability to deal with these deficiencies. Instead of following through with an independent and thoughtful analysis of the large amount of material which he has so industriously gathered, he largely confines himself to repeating a lot of generalized criticisms, most of them of the familiar anti-bureaucratic variety. The whole book abounds in statements that one would like to rebut or at least tone down. . . . In attempting to understand and appraise operations of the Department of Agriculture, and to produce a brief and readable book, Mr. Deering undertook a most formidable and commendable task. It is regrettable that the readable book which he has written contributes so little toward either an understanding or a solution of the problems to which he addressed himself, particularly in view of the fact that he is in a position to reach and influence a large number of farm people who have a vital stake in the successful operation of the USDA." J. P. Cavin
— Am Econ R 36:450 Je '46 1050w

Reviewed by C. S. Ascher
Ann Am Acad 244:199 Mr '46 600w

"I hope that this book will focus national attention on the improvement of the organization and administration of USDA which is necessary if it is to meet the needs of American farmers in the years just ahead. At the same time it offers the general reader a highly interesting and informative account of an agency about which most of us know little and all need to know more." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 Ja 20 '46 450w

"It would be hard to find a more important matter for long-range political thought than agricultural conditions in the United States, and yet, to judge by the columns of the political weeklies, there is hardly a subject about which the average liberal or Socialist knows less. Particularly is he unaware of the enormous extent to which government is an actual partner in agriculture. For this reason I found 'USDA' a most useful book." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 162:293 Mr 9 '46 240w

Reviewed by S. H. Hobbs
Social Forces 24:473 My '46 800w

DE FOREST, JOHN WILLIAM. A volunteer's adventures; a Union captain's record of the Civil war; ed. with notes by James H. Croushore; with an introd. by Stanley T. Williams. 237p il $3 Yale univ. press

973.781 U.S.—History—Civil war—Personal narratives A46-3486

"The story begins with the expedition against New Orleans in March and April of 1862, and ends with the battle of Cedar Creek in the Shenandoah Valley on October 19, 1864. There is a gap in the action from January to June, 1864, six months during which De Forest's regiment returned to Connecticut on furlough. The six chapters of the book that deal chiefly with camp life are composed of letters De Forest wrote to his wife at the time. The narrative descriptions of battles and forced marches were written in the field immediately after the event or were prepared later from notes made then." (Editor's pref) Index.

Reviewed by O. J. Hale
Ann Am Acad 248:304 N '46 250w
Booklist 43:13 S '46

"This story, with reference to the Civil War, has not been better told. In many superficial respects, war is different now, but at bottom it is the same; it is a situation in which one set of men get shot at while shooting at another set of men. Weapons change, but the issue of life or death is unaltered. That fact gives such a book as this a contemporary as well as a historical quality."

+ Christian Century 63:1280 O 23 '46 280w

"Honestly and unemotionally the grim story of the war is recounted. William Dean Howells considered De Forest as one of the best writers of the post-war period; this clear and intelligible account of the campaigns witnessed by the latter tends to justify such an appraisal." Paul Kinski

+ Commonweal 44:342 Jl 19 '46 90w

Current Hist 11:331 O '46 30w

Kirkus 14:170 Ap 1 '46 170w

"Recommended for mature young adults of sixteen years and over, for thoughtful readers and those interested in history." G. E. Cartmell

+ Library J 71:1057 Ag '46 80w

"DeForest was neither a Butcher nor an Ingersoll, and his book deals but incidentally with the military personalities of the time and the over-all strategy of the campaigns; the historian looking for 'new information' will not find it here. What is most valuable is the book's honest, almost pedestrian, realism; it should dispel any lingering beliefs that the Civil War was more 'gallantly' fought than its successors." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 28 '46 1200w

"What is surprising is the fullness and precision with which De Forest is always able to write to his wife, in privation, disease, or disaster, about everything that is going on. He is as impassive in noting the phases of his own thoughts and sensations in battle as he is in his account of the punishments which, in the course of his court-martial duty, he is obliged to impose on soldiers who have violated discipline, and he sets down his personal impressions of General Butler, Sheridan, Grant, and the rest in the same imperturbable way. What dignifies and elevates his writing is his confidence in himself and his unostentatious pride in his principles, his abilities, and his stamina." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22:65 Ag 10 '46 1850w

DE FOREST, J. W.—Continued

Reviewed by Alfred Kay
San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 28 '46
 750w

Time 48:99 J1 22 '46 750w

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:189 S '46 280w

"DeForest rarely indulges in fine writing or in philosophising, but all his pages are alive with excitement." H. S. Commager

+ Weekly Book Review p1 J1 7 '46 1600w

"DeForest, already a skilled professional writer before he became a soldier, recorded his experiences with remarkable vigor, freshness, and sharpness of perception. His accounts of a forced march, of sensations in going under fire, and of the ways of soldiers, rank with the best participants' reporting in any war. It is questionable whether any soldier of the Civil War left a record quite equal in quality to this one which has lain forgotten for eighty years. Mr. Croushore had performed an important service in unearthing it." D. M. Potter

+ Yale R n s 35:735 summer '46 350w

DEGAS, HILAIRE GERMAIN EDGAR. Edgar Degas, by Camille Mauclair; adapted by Lillian Day. [48p] il $3 Duell

759.4 Paintings, French 45-10515

Selections of the work of the French artist, Edgar Degas. The volume contains sixteen reproductions in full color, and forty in black and white, with a brief account of the artist's life and accomplishments. The catalog notes give title of picture, its size, place, and usually its date. A large edition, issued in 1941, contained also "a brief history of Degas's critical reputation, a series of extracts from his letters and an index to the illustrations." (Weekly Book Review)

Reviewed by Dorothy Odenheimer

Book Week p16 F 24 '46 200w

Booklist 42:331 Je 15 '46

"Mr. Mauclair's text is pleasant and vivacious, but as in all such volumes what matters is the illustrative material, which is admirably reproduced, much of it in full color." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 43:293 D 28 '45 30w

Reviewed by Carter White

N Y Times p41 My 5 '46 40w

Theatre Arts 30:126 F '46 130w

Reviewed by Huntington Cairns

Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 6 '46 200w

DEGERING, EDWARD FRANKLIN, and others. Outline of organic nitrogen compounds. rev ed 752p il $7.50 Purdue univ.

547.8 Nitrogen compounds 46-136

"This book is the outgrowth of 14 years' experience teaching a graduate course at Purdue University in the chemistry of organic nitrogen compounds. Previous editions appeared in 1938, 1940, and 1942 [Book Review Digest 1942], but the present volume is essentially a new book with respect to content of material, organization, and workmanship. There are 45 chapters, a number of which appear for the first time, and most of those in the 1942 edition have been rewritten and enlarged." Chem & Eng N

"The 'Outline' will unquestionably be useful as a reference book; it contains a wealth of material which will be welcomed by the research chemist. We cannot agree with the author that it would be useful as a textbook; the bewildering mass of factual material and the lack of critical evaluation of the greater part of it will militate against the choice of the 'Outline' as a text." N. L. Drake

+ — Am Chem Soc J 68:727 Ap '46 400w

Reviewed by J. H. Yoe

Chem & Eng N 24:414 F 10 '46 500w

"In the field of the chemistry of organic nitrogen compounds, the need of an up-to-date comprehensive and readable treatise is great. The reviewers cannot and do not recommend this rather high-priced outline to those who desire more than a very general survey of the classes of compounds discussed." R. C. Krug and F. C. Nachod

Chem & Met Eng 53:299 My '46 500w

DE GROOT, JOHN HENRY. The Shakespeares and the old faith. 258p $3 King's Crown press [15s Oxford]

822.33 Shakespeare, John. Shakespeare, William—Religion and ethics A46-998

The author states that his "purpose in Part I is to review the various arguments presented by critics to prove that John Shakespeare was Puritan, Protestant, or Catholic and to show how these arguments counterbalance one another to leave the issue in a state of doubt. Part II discusses the Spiritual Last Will and Testament by reviewing the accounts of the discovery of the document, tracing the history of its reception among critics, presenting the facts which have newly come to light, and relating those facts to the authenticity and the evidential value of the document. Part III is devoted to an examination of the influences likely to have contributed to the religious training of William Shakespeare during his youth in Stratford. . . Part IV seeks to show how this lingering esteem manifested itself in the writings of the dramatist." (Intro) Index.

"This is a noteworthy and important contribution to the question of Shakespeare and Catholicism. It reflects a wide range of reading, an intimate familiarity with pertinent literature, and a considerable insight into the subject and its issues." W. J. Tucker

+ Cath World 163:378 J1 '46 550w

"There are no specific facts about William's religious education, and the excellent chapter on that subject has to be limited to an account of popular religion and the influences which must have played upon a youth in the period. Still more interesting is the exploration of the plays and sonnets for Catholic ideas and phraseology. Mr. de Groot succeeds in his argument because he does not try to prove too much."

+ Christian Century 63:563 My 1 '46 240w

"Mr. de Groot has sifted with such meticulous thoroughness all the known facts about Shakespeare's parents, schoolmasters and the traces of 'theological bias in his poetry that, until new evidence be unearthed, his study should be definitive." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ Commonweal 44:171 My 31 '46 490w

N Y Times p29 My 12 '46 300w

"The Shakespeares and The Old Faith' is a scholarly and detailed study, though how much the author accomplishes is not clear." C. M. Sauer

+ — Spring'd Republican p4d Je 2 '46 300w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

Weekly Book Review p26 My 19 '46 400w

DE GRUCHY, CLARE. Creative old age; foreword by Raymond G. Kuhlen. 143p il $2.75 Old age counselling center, Shreve bldg, San Francisco 8

612.67 Old age 46-20759

Brief sketches of the work of the Old Age counselling service, instituted by Dr Lillian J. Martin. In it are told the stories of a variety of old people who were helped to become adjusted to the difficulties of old age in a modern society.

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 S 7 '46 130w

School & Society 64:408 D 7 '46 20w

DE HUFF, MRS ELIZABETH (WILLIS). Little-Boy-Dance; pictures by Gisella Loeffler. 42p $1 Wilcox & Follett

46-5784

"A small boy from Taos dances so well that he earns the name of 'Little-Boy-Dance.' With sleigh bells on his shoulder, a war bonnet on his head, and hoops in his hand, he would stamp his feet in the dust and dance to his uncle's chanting. Then one day he took his bow and arrows and went far away from the pueblo, and the long story tells of his wanderings, his losing himself, and his joyful return home." Book Week

Book Week p22 N 10 '46 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 25 '46
140w

DE HUSZAR, GEORGE BERNARD. See Huszar, G. B. de

DE JONG, ADRIANUS MICHAEL. See Jong, A. M. de

DEJONG, DAVID CORNELL. Snow-on-the-mountain, and other stories. 217p $2.50 Reynal

46-7690

Eighteen short stories, selected from the author's output during the last twelve years. All of the stories have been previously published in magazines; several of them have appeared in anthologies. Contents: Snow-on-the-mountain; Seven boys take a hill; Sitting in the sun; Beneath a still sky; Home-coming; Doves on steeples; A trough of low pressure; So tall the corn; Wedding in Holland; Calves; Little old lady; When it thundered; Hanging on a nail; In a mirror; Calling in the night; Pretty as a gooseberry; The terrible secret; At the grave.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p22 D 1 '46 60w

"For the top drawer short story market." + Kirkus 14:393 Ag 15 '46 120w

"The collection is on the whole rather grim. After reading the book straight through one cannot help but observe that the author seems to feel that people get less lovable, generous and creative as they grow older, and that adolescence is man's most spiritual period. He has two brilliant stories about very old people who are saved from being carping and obsessive only because they are essentially satirical." M. S. Holsaert

+ N Y Times p35 O 27 '46 450w

"Some of the tales are written with a pleasing, grave simplicity, but the collection as a whole does not increase Mr. DeJong's literary stature much."

+ New Yorker 22:115 O 26 '46 60w

"Perhaps Mr. DeJong is at his best when he writes of the customs and habits of his native Netherlands. 'Wedding in Holland,' 'Terrible Secret,' and 'When It Thundered' reach almost a Van Paassen intensity as they describe the strangeness and the loneliness of the people of the dikes, a strangeness that succumbs to imagination and a loneliness that resolves itself in religion and God. Unfortunately, however, 'Snow-on-the-mountain' often has the reader wishing for more definite resolutions, it has him demanding a clearer statement of some of the plots, and it has him lost in his search for the motives for many of the more nebulous characters." A. C. Fields

+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 17 '46
350w

DE JONG, DOLA (MRS JAN HOOWIJ). Picture story of Holland; pictures by Gerard Hordyk. [34p] $2 Reynal

914.92 Netherlands—Juvenile literature

Both the author and illustrator of this story of Holland for children were born in Holland. It is the story of Holland's waterways, dikes, tulips, confections, fairs, buildings, and modern industrialism. Illustrated with gay pictures in color.

"This is a story to be read and loved. It is a story to stir hope and a desire to help keep the world bright and fresh."

+ Book Week p17 N 10 '46 90w

Booklist 43:157 Ja 15 '47

"To read Miss de Jong's brief, clear and charming text, with its accompaniment of lively drawings by Gerard Hordyk, is like sitting down beside a sympathetic friend who understands boys and girls, while she talks about her own country with the vividness and warmth of affectionate memories." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 17 '46
210w

"Gerard Hordyk's illustrations are charming and distinguished. A Hollander himself, his work is authentic and sound in detail and gay and spirited in color. An attractive book. Too bad the large format imposes a long line difficult to read."

+ Kirkus 14:388 Ag 15 '46 120w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr

Library J 71:1807 D 15 '46 80w

"The author is a native of the country and imparts her affection and sense of reality to the young readers. The illustrations by Gerard Hordyk, a prominent Dutch painter, are colorful, imaginative and tender. Though they are somewhat on the sophisticated side, the total effect is fanciful and gay." N. S.

+ N Y Times p48 N 10 '46 140w

"The facts given about Holland, whether historical or contemporary, are just the sort of ones a child of grade-school age wants to know." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:145 D 7 '46 50w

"There is a freshness of approach and deep feeling in this story of Holland and its people." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:58 N 9 '46 120w

DE JONG, DOLA (MRS JAN HOOWIJ). Sand for the sandmen; pictures by Natalie Norton. 87p $1.75 Scribner

46-4801

"The Sandmen—tiny chaps whose nightly duty is to scatter in little folks' eyes the dust that sends them off to dreams—are playing parlor games when their king sets them on their journey, each with his little bag of sand. It is a very little bag; the sandmen themselves are no taller than mice and use centipedes for horses. Hence with so many children to serve, the loss of a bag is important, and as one by one all are lost there is bustle about getting more sand. At last they discover the seashore and future supply is assured." Weekly Book Review

"A delightfully good-humored story which will appeal to imaginative children."

+ Kirkus 14:275 Je 15 '46 90w

"To a prosaic adult it seems on the whole rather dull and pointless in spite of occasional bits of humor. It might be fun to read aloud to an imaginative child, but limited library use is predicted." Miriam Snow

Library J 71:982 Jl '46 50w

"This book has the feel of childhood about it. The sandmen (who love ice cream and birthdays, play marbles, fight and read fairy tales) seem like children, not odd creatures. Perhaps, after all, they are." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p16 Je 30 '46 140w

"For this amusing tale there are equally amusing drawings in black and red." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:41 S 28 '46 270w

"The type of this uncommonly pretty book is easy on the eyes of older people who will read it to four, five or even six year olds, and that is a good thing, for they will quite likely have to read it more than once. . . The pictures are jolly and just fantastic enough."

M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 23 '46 230w

DE JONG, MEINDERT, Billy and the unhappy bull; ill. by Marc Simont. 206p $2 Harper

Bulls—Legends and stories 46-8064

Story of Billy, a little city boy and his mother, who were trapped in their country house during a blizzard. The boy's love of animals had made him a friend of a gentle old bull, and it is this friendship which saves the day when Billy's mother broke her ankle and had to get to a hospital.

DE JONG, MEINDERT--Continued

Booklist 43:157 Ja 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"There are excitement and humor and a truthful picture of family life in Marc Simont's illustrations as well as in the story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:465 N '46 80w

"Sustained story with exciting bits."

+ Kirkus 14:524 O 15 '46 120w

"Marc Simont's attractive full-page pictures reflect the drama of the narrative. Story is, perhaps, too long and closely knit for the average child interested in the adventures of a seven- or eight-year-old." Bertha Handlan
Library J 72:83 Ja 1 '47 90w

"Now that we are, and will be for some time, talking so much about food in America this story brings our children what may be for some of them their first actual sense of hunger, first in a patient, beloved animal, then in one's own person. It does not keep up long enough to be wearing to the reader, but it is so real it stimulates the vital imagination that makes us part of the world."

Weekly Book Review p42 N 10 '46 550w

DE KERILLIS, HENRI. See Kerillis, H. de.DEKOBRA, MAURICE. Shanghai honeymoon.
316p $3 Philosophical lib.

46-6886

"The French widow of an American business man in Saigon came to Shanghai and passed her daughter off as a baroness so she could land a rich husband. Mother was a shrewd woman and eighteen-year-old Claudette was as clever as she was beautiful. Two of the wealthiest men in this international paradise of scoundrels—a Russian and an Italian—fell out as crooked business partners in the scramble for Claudette, and their mistresses joined the fray. The battle might still be raging if the Japanese had stayed where they belonged."

Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by William Lipscomb

Book Week p26 D 1 '46 400w

"To this reviewer, it all adds up to an anemic zero, despite its purposeful praise of Venus." Florett Robinson

— N Y Times p16 O 20 '46 160w

"Maurice Dekobra knows all the Shanghai gestures, native and foreign, boudoir and brothel, cunning, cruel and sinister. This is a crowded, uninhibited and fantastically exaggerated story, but the racy material and racing speed create a certain spell. Mr. Dekobra's characters are seldom real, but they are never dull." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p30 O 6 '46 180w

DE LA BEDOYERE, MICHAEL, count. No dreamers weak. 180p $2 Bruce pub. [9s 6d Muller]

261 Christianity. War and religion

"The author [who is] a Catholic editor, subtitled his book, 'A Study of Christian Realism against Visionary Utopianism in avoiding another Great War and making a Real Peace.' He rejects the pacifist position that war is the worst of all possible evils, and holds that when war is inevitable Christians must participate. But his chief attention is given to the problem of making and preserving peace."

Christian Century

"I don't believe that De La Bedoyere, with all the merits of his book, has attained the proper balance in discussing organization and spiritual inspiration. Why disparage the former in the act of emphasizing the latter? Both are necessary. He is critical, mildly, at least, of those of his fellow Catholics who are supporters of organized reform. But one wonders if these latter are not more in keeping with the mind of their Church than those, like himself, who tend to advocate an exclusively spiritual approach. As a matter of fact, De la Bedoyere's book suffers by comparison with recent papal pronouncements." F. E. McMahon

+ — Book Week p62 D 2 '45 550w

"This unpretentious, honest, bold examination of the relationship between Christianity and our twentieth-century world is one of the most profound and enlightening discussions of the present peace-war problem thus far published. Already of high repute, the author, by virtue of this book, makes doubly secure his title to be regarded as one of the sanest and most constructive thinkers of the present generation."

+ Cath World 163:94 Ap '46 180w

"The thesis is that Christian principles are the only ones that make sense in the political and social field, even for those who have lost the Christian faith, and that the Christian approach is the practical way of solving the problem of war and peace. There is strong and sound argument to this effect. Unfortunately, this argument is so entangled with propaganda for the Roman Catholic Church that its persuasiveness for non-Catholics is greatly weakened. . . . Apart from this feature, the book contains much clear, cogent and constructive thinking."

+ — Christian Century 63:113 Ja 23 '46 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 My '46

Foreign Affairs 25:162 O '46 20w

Kirkus 13:508 N 15 '45 210w

Springfd Republican p4d F 3 '46 360w

DELACOUR, JEAN THEODORE, and MAYR, ERNST. Birds of the Philippines; with line drawings by Earl L. Poole and Alexander Seidel. (Pacific world ser) 309p $3.75 Macmillan

598.2 Birds—Philippine islands 46-6443

Handbook giving the characteristics, distribution, habitat, and behavior of 450 species of birds found in the Philippines. Contains a list of generic synonyms, a glossary, and an index.

Current Hist 11:402 N '46 40w

Kirkus 14:375 Ag 1 '46 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 1 '46 30w

"The book contains about seventy black and white illustrations, is well indexed, and should prove a useful guide to Philippine ornithology, especially to the man in the field."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:341 D '46 180w

"This book has vitality. Every word of the introductory chapters is worth reading and the descriptive material and keys throughout have been carefully considered. . . . A few color plates showing common, distinctly Philippine birds which any visitor might see during a brief sojourn in Manila would have helped this fine volume immensely. Good half-tones of important bird habitats would have helped too, not alone in making certain parts of the text clearer, but in giving the work as a whole more character."

G. M. Sutton

+ Weekly Book Review p16 O 13 '46 700w

DELAFIELD, MRS. CLELIA (BENJAMIN). Mrs Mallard's ducklings; pictures by Leonard Weisgard. [24p] $2 Lothrop

46-25264

Picture-story book for young readers, illustrated in color. It tells the story of a family of Mallard ducks from the building of the nest until the trip South in the fall.

Reviewed by Martha King

+ Book Week p11 O 13 '46 50w

Booklist 43:38 O 1 '46

"It is not a humorous book but one which tells realistically something about bird life. The brilliant plumage of these distinguished birds affords good opportunity for Leonard Weisgard's skilful hand and brush." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:461 N '46 80w

Kirkus 14:420 S 1 '46 80w

"Handsomely illustrated in color by Leonard Weisgard, this story about the growth of a family of wild mallard ducks will delight five- to nine-year-olds. The slight incident of Mr.

Mallard's concern about naming the fourteen ducklings seems rather dangling and out of place in an otherwise lovely nature picture book." Ruth Hadlow

+ Library J 71:1208 S 15 '46 70w

"Children will be touched by the story's lovely quality and with the fine pictures in color. They will at the same time learn a great deal." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p41 S 15 '46 150w

"The stunning pictures are enough to recommend this book. . . Leonard Weisgard is an illustrator for whom this reviewer has an enormous respect. His work is refreshing, original and beautiful and completely lacking in the monotony which frequently overtakes the work of such a prolific illustrator." Leone Garvey

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 10 '46 120w

"An excellent first nature story book for children, preschool through the fourth grade." E. H. Franzen

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 10 '46 50w

"A book not only for the children, but for the whole family." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 O 19 '46 150w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 S 22 '46 90w

DE LA MARE, WALTER JOHN, ed. Love. 822p $5 Morrow

808.8 Literature—Collections Love poetry 47-103

"An anthology of bits of prose and poetry, ancient and modern and all concerned with some aspect of love—love betrayed, love unrequited, love requited, erotic love, love of things and nature, love after death, and so on." (New Yorker) Indexes.

Reviewed by George Dillon

Book Week p21 D 8 '46 290w

"A book of permanent value and assuredly long life."

+ Kirkus 14:533 O 15 '46 200w

"Mr. de la Mare's collection is a rich, sthenic syllabub on an extremely personal and complex theme. . . While the anthology itself is unusually adequate, it is Mr. de la Mare's wide-ranging introduction that most distinguishes it. Here in an arch, persuasive style he writes of human affections and human emotions with simplicity and idealism. There are few aspects of love, few interpretations of its meaning from St. John the Divine to Sigmund Freud that Mr. de la Mare overlooks. This fact, indeed, makes the introduction, in spite of its length, seem somewhat overpacked." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p20 D 8 '46 360w

"Mr. de la Mare, as he has proved in earlier anthologies, uses more than a pair of scissors and a pass to the public domain. He has put his material together with taste and skill and has produced another delightful book."

+ New Yorker 22:134 N 16 '46 80w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 13 '46 450w

"Skillfully, De la Mare makes obscure aspects of the passion understandable. At one moment he centers on the petty and the personal only to swerve suddenly and justifiably to the abstract and the universal. . . Somewhat uneven, however, is his treatment of specialists in love like Pascal, Maurois, and Chateaubriand. . . As a whole, the introduction is informative, outspoken, and comprehensive, but not exhaustive, for certain cults and concepts which have had an important influence on literature receive no consideration. . . Though De la Mare states that his selections are 'wanting both in method and consistency,' the poet-novelist's procedure is unquestionably systematic, establishing the worth of the volume as a scientific study, fresh, provocative and profound." Bernard Sobel

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 D 14 '46 1200w

"In this anthology the pieces are so arranged that they seem to be the continuous and unified work of a single great mind and not the work of many writing on the same subject. The whole is a remarkable and indeed unprecedented performance, very English, very revealing of qualities in the English race that have had but little common attention. It is actually one of the great anthologies of the world, but it is proper to state it is essentially one for well read people. It is possible that by hunting through complex indexes to these 709 pieces one can find the names of the authors of the less recognizable pieces which will provide an educational indoor occupation." M. M. Colum

+ Weekly Book Review p7 N 24 '46 1150w

DE LANGE, ANNEKE, pseud. See Chase, E. H.

DE LA ROCHE, MAZO. Return to Jalna. (Atlantic monthly press bk) Whiteoak ed 462p $2.75 Little

46-7090

The tenth in the series about the Whiteoaks of Jalna begins during World war II, shows the brothers coming home from the war and settling down again at home, with their children growing up around them.

"Although the Jalna books have never been strong in plot, 'Return to Jalna' is more superficial than most of the earlier ones. . . Also after four generations of turbulence, the Whiteoaks blood is running thin. The younger Whiteoaks lack the vigor, spice, color and transibility of Old Adeline. They even lack the dilettante eccentricities of the aged uncles, still alive in Jalna. Only young Adeline, daughter of Renny and Alayne, gives promise of embodying the vitality and wicked fascination of the old matriarch." A. E. Gasaway

Book Week p12 O 27 '46 550w

Booklist 43:69 N 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p16 O 26 '46 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"Familiar scenes and familiar characters, for readers who are Jalna fans and like to spend an entertaining enough weekend in the Jalna household"

Kirkus 14:395 Ag 15 '46 240w

"There comes a time in any family chronicle when it begins to sag of its own weight. Miss de la Roche's has reached that point. . . The book moves along entertainingly. One episode follows fast on the heels of the last. But the necessity of covering all the family branches requires cutting off one thread of narrative—just as you are becoming absorbed in it—to pick up another." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p50 N 17 '46 360w

New Yorker 22:132 O 19 '46 80w

"There are no jarring notes in the return of the Whiteoaks. Miss de la Roche has sustained the characters as we know them and they behave true to form. This is one of the best of the Jalna books." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p30 D 1 '46 200w

"As the list of the Jalna novels has lengthened, Mazo de la Roche's gifts as a storyteller have lost no whit of their freshness and vigor. In this tenth, as in the first, the individuality of the characters and the suspense of the telling rivet one's interest to the page. To that is added, for the confirmed reader of the Jalna saga, the pleasure in again meeting old friends and watching what the years are doing to people whom one has known for a long time. I cannot recall any other instance in which a novelist has spent a professional life with one family: happily the size and forcefulness and diversity of the Whiteoaks clan and the march of events over generations have given the author almost endless scope for variety within the saga." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p22 O 27 '46 500w

Wis Lib Bul 42:151 N '46

DE LA TORRE-BUENO, LILLIAN (MRS G. S. MCCUE). Dr Sam: Johnson, detector. 257p $2.75 Knopf

Johnson, Samuel—Fiction 46-6547

Nine mystery stories, all of them supposedly solved by Doctor Samuel Johnson, and written in the eighteenth-century idiom of James Boswell.

Booklist 43:69 N 1 '46

Kirkus 14:353 Ag 1 '46 160w

"Lillian de la Torre has done a mighty impudent thing in writing 'Dr. Sam: Johnson, Detector.' She not only has turned the literary dictator into a detective, but she has also borrowed the pen of James Boswell and added nine imaginary stories to his 'Life.' All this, of course, she has done lightheartedly, but at first thought it hardly seems a project that one could be light-hearted about." D. S. Norton
N Y Times p6 S 22 '46 1000w

"Dr. Johnson makes a good detective and comes off very nicely as a fictional character, as well he might; he has always seemed to be something of a fictional character, anyway."
+ New Yorker 22:119 S 21 '46 80w

"If de la Torre is new to you, I envy you as you discover these magical eighteenth century pastiches, conceived and written with an ideal blend of scholarly precision and the delightful will to entertain." Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 S 15 '46 120w

"The author has managed to make a detective of the great Doctor, and a Watson of Bozzy, without in any way transgressing the reasonable probabilities. As I've noted—and as she freely admits in her notes at the end of the book—Miss de la Torre does take an occasional liberty with time and background. But it is never more than the fiction writer is entitled to take. Dr. Johnson as a 'detector of cheats' will most certainly do. And the author's hand with a plot will most certainly do also." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 4 '46 600w

"Taken in judicious doses this admirably turned out book is good hunting and good fun. At one sitting it may be cloying."
+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 N 30 '46 50w

"Lillian de la Torre is comfortably at home in the eighteenth century and very good at atmosphere and conversation, though if the truth must be told, the detection is hardly good enough to enable the tales to stand on their own feet in competition with Agatha Christie or Carter Dixon." J. W. Krutch
+ Weekly Book Review p20 S 29 '46 360w

DE LAVIGNE, JEANNE. Ghost stories of old New Orleans; il. by Charles Richards. 374p $3.50 Rinehart

Legends—New Orleans 46-7188

Collection of ghost stories of many types, but all stemming from old New Orleans. The author was born in New Orleans and has lived there most of her life.

"Miss De Lavigne has shown industry and imagination; and none can deny that it's an awesome collection of screeching things that she's conjured up. Charles Richards is responsible for a series of drawings—twisting bodies, ghostly faces—that provide the proper mood for the text." H. T. Kane
Book Week p10 N 24 '46 320w

Kirkus 14:478 S 15 '46 120w

"Miss deLavigne's book is not one to be read all at once, but in pleasant, blood-chilling doses. She has worked earnestly and well. Charles Richards' pictures are amusing and imaginative. He knows his French Quarter and, too, one would guess, his hants." H. T. Kane
+ N Y Times p24 N 3 '46 500w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 8 '46 70w

"In spite of Miss deLavigne's occasional faddicity, the enthusiasts of the weird will find 'Ghost Stories of Old New Orleans' rich in distinctively American imagination, and the individual stories free from the artificiality of the modern Gothic tale." Edwin Fadiman

+ Weekly Book Review p18 N 17 '46 600w

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE. Nobody's doll; il. by Anne Vaughan. 85p $1.75 Little 46-3568

Susan Araminta was an old-fashioned doll, left on the curb for the trash man to pick up. But the scottie, Mr MacHugh, found her and adopted her, and from that moment her adventures began, until at last she found the little owner she had been looking for, and was no longer "Nobody's doll." Ages seven to ten.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 178:162 N '46 40w

Book Week p12 Je 2 '46 270w

Booklist 42:319 Je 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '46

"Children who like dolls and dogs will appreciate both pictures and story." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 22:268 J1 '46 80w

Library J 71:827 Je 1 '46

"The author hasn't been entirely successful in fusing fantasy with everyday life, but little girls who have a proper affection for dolls will follow with breathless interest this one's encounters with a burglar, a tramp and a collector of antiques—not to mention that dour but helpful Scottie, Mister MacHugh." E. B.
+ N Y Times p31 My 26 '46 80w

"When a child is ready to move on from the usual early short stories to full-length tales this book will fill the need in a satisfying way. Indeed, although it is a slim little volume, it has in it all the desired elements—characters who are original and interesting, a good plot, adventures and narrow escapes and—important to most children—pets, who share their fortunes in real companionship." M. C. Dodd
+ Sat R of Lit 29:44 Je 15 '46 150w

"There are not so many doll stories as there used to be; we can always use a good one, and this is thoroughly good in substance, feeling and looks. I haven't read one since 'Hitty' that stands out so well. . . . The pictures are large and in color, beautiful as decorations and really illustrating."
+ Weekly Book Review p12 My 19 '46 400w

Wis Lib Bul 42:116 J1 '46

DELEHANTY, ELIZABETH (MRS LIAM O'CONNOR). Year one. 215p $2.50 Dutton

46-2485

The scene is a military hospital; the chief characters are a small group of patients, two doctors with opposing views, and a pretty nurse. A series of sudden deaths sets off the action.

"[An] excellent novel." Ralph Peterson

+ Book Week p4 My 12 '46 500w

Booklist 42:365 J1 15 '46

"'Year One' is a war book in appearance only. In truth it is an absorbing tale of the spirit of man off center and striving to gain hold on some small patch of comfort and joy." J. N. Vaughan

+ Commonweal 44:241 Je 21 '46 500w

"Effective in its tension, [and] its compassion."

Kirkus 14:132 Mr 15 '46 180w

"Despite author's excellent style and psychological insight, there is a lack of suspense that causes the novel to taper off too soon towards its pat moral conclusion." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 71:667 My 1 '46 70w

"More interesting than the artificially developing plot, to this reader at least, is the humane viewpoint which Miss Delehanty sustains in the contrast between two rival psychiatrists: Dr. Mosley, who is only interested in getting quick results, regardless of whether the cure sticks, and Dr. Thorne, wise, understanding, taking each soldier as an individual in trying to discover the source of the unknown conflict in them. Unfortunately, though Miss Delehanty writes with sympathy and from close observation, she doesn't take a hint from Dr. Thorne: her soldiers are not seen as individuals, but rather vaguely as 'veterans' who, because of her smooth writing, make the most of the melodrama in which she has plunged them." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p16 My 26 '46 500w

"Miss Delehanty should have been able to produce an interesting book. Certainly, if nothing else, 'Year One' could have been important as both sociological and psychiatric study. Unfortunately, this is not the case. Perhaps it is the age-old problem of an abundance, rather than a lack, of material to work from; but whatever it was, a serious study in mental treatment is rudely and quite unnecessarily turned into a crude murder-mystery-love formula." A. C. Fields

Sat R of Lit 29:31 My 18 '46 650w

Springf'd Republican p4d Je 9 '46 280w

"Elizabeth Delehanty's novel measures up to its possibilities without flinching." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p20 My 12 '46 140w

DELETAILE, ALBERTINE. At the top of the house. [27p] $1 Harcourt

46-6399

Picture story book by a Dutch-Belgian artist. It is about a cheese, a mouse, and a cat, all three of which got mixed up in an attic. For very young children.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22 461 N '46 30w

Kirkus 14:382 Ag 15 '46 90w

"The author's technique, both in words and drawings, is spasmodically fresh and effective, but the book seems short-weight on the whole." Dorothy Waugh

N Y Times p18 S 8 '46 60w

Sat R of Lit 29:43 N 9 '46 50w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 8 '46 120w

"These animal pictures are gay and decisive, and the tiny story, to be read to the littlest, is set down like the pictures, in scarlet and black." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 S 29 '46 120w

DE MARIGNY, ALFRED. More devil than saint. (Beechhurst press publication) 256p il $3 Ackerman

B or 92 Trials

46-4415

Autobiography of the man who was accused, tried and acquitted of the murder of his father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, in 1943.

"The prissy to hypocritical autobiography of a dandy who wove his way precariously through cosmopolitan circles until he was floored by the murder of his father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes."

— Kirkus 14:141 Mr 15 '46 170w

Reviewed by R. E. Kingery

Library J 71:585 Ap 15 '46 130w

"By his own pen the Count remains a superficial person. He shows little awareness of those whom he met in his whirl through high society in three continents. Although he mentions knowing various celebrities like Ernest Hemingway, Madeleine Carroll and Brenda Frazier, they are only puppet people when he tells of them." Lucy Greenbaum

N Y Times p37 My 5 '46 360w

New Yorker 22:111 My 4 '46 120w

Reviewed by R. H. Morgan

Springf'd Republican p4d My 19 '46 500w

DE MENT, JACK ANDREW. Fluorochemistry. 796p il $14.50 Chemical pub. co.

541.35 Radiation and luminescence 45-10598

"Subtitled: 'a Comprehensive Study Embracing the Theory and Application of Luminescence and Radiation in Physico-chemical Science.' Technical exposition of fluorochemistry, a physicochemical science still in experimental stage. Sections cover fluorochemistry in theory, 'homogeneous' and 'heterogeneous' luminescent systems, ultraluminescence and infraluminescence, fluorochemistry and fluorobiology. The book is the result of author's own investigations. Bibliographies, glossary, nomenclature, symbols, abbreviations, notations, tables and illustrations." Library J

"The reviewer believes that those desiring an introduction to the subject of luminescence would be better satisfied with the books by Riehl, Pringsheim or Hirschclaff. The reviewer cannot recommend the present book as an authoritative text on any of the diversity of subjects discussed in it." G. R. Fonda

Am Chem Soc J 68:347 F '46 350w

"The chapters of greatest value are those descriptive of fluorescent organic compounds and dyestuffs, natural and synthetic phosphors, and what the author terms ultraluminescent and infraluminescent effects. Useful listings and tables summarize the luminous colors produced when various sources are used to irradiate fluorescent and phosphorescent substances. The treatment of the physical aspects of luminescence is sciolistic and insufficiently integrated. . . The printing and paper are well above average, although several of the figures are somewhat crudely drawn; the glossary appears to be adequate and author and subject indexes are included. Only a few and minor errors were noted in sampling the 2,000 items comprising the bibliography and references; the latter appear to be reasonably complete through about 1942." E. N. Harvey

+ Chem & Eng N 24:264 Ja 25 '46 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:135 D 1 '45 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:56 O '45

DEMETRIADES, PHOKION. Shadow over

Athens, 155p il $3 Rinehart

741.91 World war, 1939-1945—Greece. World war, 1939-1945—Pictorial works 46-2537

This volume contains 77 drawings by a Greek artist, depicting that "shadow over Athens" that was the German occupation. Brief captions and a short introduction.

"You won't easily forget some of these drawings. Although they may not be great art, they are very effective graphic journalism." Dorothy Odenheimer

+ Book Week p14 Ap 21 '46 400w

Foreign Affairs 25:345 Ja '47 40w

"To anyone looking for the mordancy and vigor of Goya, the drawings in 'Shadow over Athens' will at first glance seem tame and over-restrained. But look at them again and you will find a hatred as corrosive as that of Goya, and in addition a burning delight in retaliation by good men." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 29:15 My 18 '46 600w

"Demetriades, in his chronicle of the reign of terror—the floggings, the killings and concentration camps—manages always to make the heroic valor of his countrymen shine out gloriously. His drawings are not particularly distinguished in draughtsmanship but they are informed by great nobility of spirit, a tenderness toward his people and a sympathy with children that are extremely effective and touching." Thomas Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ap 28 '46 320w

DENEKE, HELENA. Grace Hadow. 234p il $3 (10s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 Hadow, Grace Eleanor [A47-135]

"Grace Hadow was born in a vicarage and grew up in a rural English village. Educational opportunity exceptional for a woman in her day she obtained through her own ability and the help of an older brother. She became a leader in the field of education for women in England, influential especially in the development of colleges for women at Oxford.

DENEKE, HELENA—Continued

She pioneered in adult rural education, organizing rural libraries and classes for women. She taught for a year at Bryn Mawr, early in her career, and lectured in the United States and Canada, in 1918 and again in 1938." Book Week

"Her book is a genuinely appealing portrayal of a person it is good to know." J. T. Frederick
+ Book Week p2 S 1 '46 200w

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 10 '46 300w

"This book is a conscientious attempt to provide an orderly account of a distinguished life, and will no doubt be welcomed by all who remember Miss Hadow with affection. But for the general public the most attractive portions will be Miss Hadow's own writings (particularly her letters), which give an impression of gaiety, complete lack of 'side' and a love of adventure. It is a pity that the least pleasant portrait of her forms the frontispiece."

+ Spec 177:494 N 8 '46 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p171 Ap 13 '46 850w

DENGEL, ANNA. Mission for samaritans; a survey of achievements and opportunities in the field of Catholic medical missions; with a foreword by John M. Cooper. 126p il $1.75 Bruce pub.

266.2 Missions, Medical. Roman Catholic church—Missions 46-2120

"The author founded the order of Medical Mission Sisters in 1925. She gives a general survey of Catholic medical missions, not the work of her own order only, in many countries. A short section is devoted to a comprehensive and appreciative account of Protestant medical missions, with not a hint that they are other than valued participants in the same beneficent enterprise." Christian Century

Cath World 163:188 My '46 150w

Christian century 63:369 Mr 20 '46 80w

DENNIS, MORGAN. Dog book (with some special cats) [il. by the author]. [64p] $3 Viking

636.7 Dogs—Pictures, illustrations, etc. Cats—Pictures, illustrations, etc. Agr46-18

"The young artist and the lover of dogs will enjoy this charming sketch book. Facing a portrait of the mature dog is a brief comment on the breed, accompanied by small informal drawings of the puppies in playful and serious poses. The artist succeeds very well in catching the exact expressions of the animals. A few cats and kittens are included." Booklist

Booklist 43:119 D 15 '46

"Children will enjoy the book although its appeal will be mainly to adults. Recommended." D M. MacDonald

+ Library J 71:1811 D 15 '46 70w

"Morgan Dennis is an artist whose popularity is due as much to his love for animals as for his facility in expressing it. I have never seen a Dennis dog in or out of this book that is represented as other than somebody's beloved—or at least as one that should be somebody's beloved. . . The expression of these dog's faces is often human." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p10 N 17 '46 200w

DENT, LESTER. Dead at the take-off. 223p $2 Doubleday

46-8139

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p15 My 26 '46 150w

Booklist 42:349 J1 1 '46

"Sustained interest, superior suspense."

+ Kirkus 14:112 Mr 1 '46 130w

"The story is spotty in the beginning, but it gains coherence as it proceeds toward a startling climax." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p40 Ap 14 '46 80w

"Exciting, though, in a curious way."

New Yorker 22:119 Ap 13 '46 110w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p22 Ap 7 '46 110w

DENT, LESTER. Lady to kill. 192p $2 Doubleday

46-7666

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p12 N 17 '46 70w

"A fairly exact, expert job"

+ Kirkus 14:402 Ag 15 '46 40w

"Fast, medium hard, and highly readable."

Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 3 '46 50w

"Diverting."

Sat R of Lit 29:40 N 30 '46 40w

DENVER, DRAKE C. pseud. See Nye, N. C.

DE POLNAY, PETER. Two mirrors. 312p $2.75 Creative age

46-2490

Argentina, and Patagonia particularly, forms the background for this story of two half-brothers: Derek, who owns a ranch in Patagonia; and William, who has nothing and comes to South America when he is cast upon the world by the death of a beautiful older sister. The story is mainly of William's readjustment to life, after the loss of his mainstay, Mary.

Kirkus 14:111 Mr 1 '46 180w

"Characters are unusual and not ones to be admired. A number of life stories of many individuals are woven in with the main characters, but none are appealing. Despite its hardness and uncouthness of backgrounds and personalities, the book holds one's interest." R. B. Rankin

+ Library J 71:280 F 15 '46 140w

"The author has done what he could to save his hero's soul, and perhaps he's successful, but it's at the expense of the novel. What is created is not convincing drama but rather the diagram of a situation from a psychiatrist's handbook." John Farrelly

N Y Times p5 Mr 24 '46 400w

"Wit and style are commodities rarely offered us these days, and when they turn up together in a novel, there is a strong temptation to throw caution, as they say, to the winds. Let's admit, then, that this story of a neurotic, frustrated intellectual . . . is, despite some very weak spots, a subtly ironic, beautifully written novel. When Mr. de Polnay is telling about the Argentine highlands . . . he is brilliant and effective. When he is trying to make the hero's childhood escape psychosis seem real, or when he uses a clumsy device for disentangling the young man from his intricate neuroses, he is just pretentious."

+ New Yorker 22:109 Ap 6 '46 180w

"Two Mirrors' is a work of distinction and fascinating novelty, vigorous and fluent in style, arresting as a study of strange relationships. In its contrast of the highly civilized and starkly primitive, it achieves an artistic balance between states of emotion and outbreaks of action. . . 'Two Mirrors' is spacious and rich, its pages glow with color and zest." David Tilden

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 24 '46 320w

DE PURY, ROLAND. See Pury, R. de

DE QUINCEY, A. Little giant; il. by Jon Nielsen [Eng title: Little half-giant]. 199p $2.50 Howell, Soskin [7s 6d Hamilton, H.]

46-7879

The adventures of a young giant, who was small for his age, being only some ten feet high, in the land of men. Even with magic at his command the Little Giant had some rather unfortunate encounters, and was glad to get back to his own country.

"Told with charm and humor."

+ Kirkus 14:346 Ag 1 '46 100w

"Humorous and pleasant read-aloud book for the six- to twelve-year-olds. However, the humor may be a bit adult for many children to read to themselves." Margaret Miller
+ — Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 100w

"This is a book which succeeds in giving the glants a place in our world and in making very clear their own magnificent natural habitat, with its great forests, its snow-capped mountains, and its gleaming lakes filled with salmon. There is humor and some irony in the story, which as a whole, rings true." R. A. Hill
+ Sat R of Lit 29:46 N 9 '46 220w

"Mr. de Quincey exploits his promising theme well, and develops a very convincing fairy-story atmosphere, Russian, perhaps, rather than Grimm." J. A. Smith

+ Spec 176:670 Je 28 '46 40w

Weekly Book Review p18 N 10 '46 550w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM, ed. Who knocks; twenty masterpieces of the spectral for the connoisseur; with a foreword; il. by Lee Brown Coye. 391p $2.50 Rinehart

Short stories—Collections 46-2409

Collection of ghost stories, some of them taken from magazines, some from books. The editor implies that all are now out of print. Contents: The shadows on the wall, by M. E. Wilkins-Freeman; Running wolf, by Algernon Blackwood; Old Martin, by A. E. Coppard; Alannah, by Stephen Grendon; The shunned house, by H. P. Lovecraft; The lake, by Ray Bradbury; The seventeenth hole at Duncastr, by H. R. Wakefield; The Ankardyne pew, by W. F. Harvey; It, by Theodore Sturgeon; The phantom farmhouse, by Seabury Quinn; Squire Toby's will, by J. S. Le Fanu; Negotium perambulans, by E. F. Benson; The intercessor, by May Sinclair; The dear departed, by Alice-Mary Schnirring; The house of the nightmare, by E. L. White; A reversion to type, by E. L. Hampton; The follower, by Cynthia Asquith; The Ravel Pavane, by H. S. Whitehead; The ghosts of Steamboat coulee, by A. J. Burks; The woman at Seven Brothers, by W. D. Steele.

Reviewed by E. D. Branch

Book Week p12 Ap 21 '46 490w

Booklist 42:265 Ap 15 '46

Kirkus 14:8 Ja '46 150w

"The term ghost stories of course is a convenient but loose one. . . The dreadful things that took place on 'The Seventeenth Hole at Duncastr,' of which H. R. Wakefield told us, were explained by its having been a place of druid sacrifices, but surely it is not the druids who returned to claim those victims. . . And the swamp-born creature that Theodore Sturgeon calls simply 'It' . . . certainly is no revenant, no returner. This is not intended to cavil at Mr. Derleth's inclusions, but merely to recognize the difficulties of definition and the deficiencies of our phraseology. . . If you are one of those who would respond to the Fat Boy's 'I wants to make your flesh creep!' with a hearty, 'How delightful!' here is a fine collection." Basil Davenport

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:15 My 4 '46 700w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p22 My 5 '46 320w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Writing fiction. 201p $2.50 Writer

808.3 Fiction—Technique 46-25122

A prolific writer of American fiction here gives some helpful suggestions to those who would become writers. He divides his stories into three types: the realistic story; the romantic story; and the imaginative story, for purposes of discussion, and lists examples. The last section contains brief notes on such things as: taking issue with editors; autobiography as fiction; book reviews, and their effect; etc. Index.

Booklist 42:295 My 15 '46

Reviewed by James MacBride

N Y Times p37 Je 16 '46 200w

"This book is a pretty solid analysis of the fields of popular fiction and the attitudes which should be maintained in writing it in order to make a saleable piece of goods. Mr. Derleth doesn't, however, give much advice as to the actual process of writing the stuff, confining himself to discussing the types and their restrictions. Categories such as, 'The Realistic Story' (which he curiously divides into hardboiled, regional and elliptic types), seem arbitrary, without the logic of real criticism or the practicality of actual procedure methods." C. McKay

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 1 '46 150w

Weekly Book Review p18 O 6 '46 160w

DEROUNIAN, ARTHUR (JOHN ROY CARLSON, pseud). The plotters. 408p $3.50 Dutton

351.74 Fascism—U.S. Veterans. U.S.—Politics and government 46-11944

"Report by the author of Under Cover on his investigation of organizations attempting to influence veterans of World War II. Chiefly an exposé of obscure individuals and groups preaching hatred of minorities, it also discusses anti-democratic elements in better known areas." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 179:106 Ja '47 140w

"The author might well have omitted some of the last pages in the book which deal not with undercover groups and individuals but which analyze, for instance, the differences between such veteran groups as the American Legion, the Amvets, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Veterans Committee. Disregarding this nonessential material, however, 'The Plotters' contains real dynamite and offers the reading public invaluable information as to the various undemocratic activities in our society. The fine index to the book makes it an extremely useful reference work on the enemy boring from within." Walter Johnson

+ — Book Week p3 N 24 '46 500w

Booklist 43:82 N 15 '46

"There's the same breathless sense of personal adventure as in Under Cover; it isn't quite such an individual smear campaign; but it turns out in the pitiless daylight many of the hate spreading organizations. A sure seller, with the impetus of the earlier book"

+ Kirkus 14:449 S 1 '46 170w

"Carlson is a zealous prosecutor, and his book is a sensational and highly controversial document. It is also, for librarians, a useful source of information about the origins of many questionable pamphlets and newspapers." H. W. Hart

Library J 71:1623 N 15 '46 100w

"As in Under Cover, Carlson cites first-hand information gleaned through contact with them, to damn the patriots of the extreme Right. His case against the Communists, who he believes are also out to capture The Veteran, is sincere but not so effectively documented. Carlson takes a fast run through the veterans' organizations, and is generally nice, innocuous or mildly critical in sizing up the regular groups." Sam Stavisky

New Repub 115:770 D 9 '46 600w

Reviewed by C. G. Bolte

N Y Times p3 N 17 '46 1200w

"Even the most indulgent reader will find it nearly impossible to avoid bogging down in the names, dates, facsimile letters, hate pamphlets, and other data that the author, with more enthusiasm than artistry, has crammed into his book."

New Yorker 22:128 N 23 '46 100w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p36 D 1 '46 100w

Time 48:113 N 25 '46 550w

"Like 'Under Cover,' 'The Plotters' is badly organized and badly written; but its very lack of technical sickness increases the sense of the stubborn honesty of the author. The book provides an invaluable check list of organizations appealing to veterans. It supplies an unforgettable picture of the minds and operations of those diseased persons who would like to transform the United States into something on the model of Nazi Germany. Above all, it is animated by a generous and courageous spirit in the most militant tradition of American democracy. It deserves to be read as widely as its best-selling predecessor." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

DEROUNIAN, ARTHUR—Continued

+ — Weekly Book Review p7 N 17 '46 1250w

DE SHERBININ, BETTY. Challenged land.
241p $2.50 Morrow

45-11150

Novel of civil war and counter revolution in an unnamed South American country, supposedly Argentina. Eduardo Castells, the country's leading engineer is the protagonist. Castells is no politician, but he conceives of a way to appeal to the people. He fails the first time, but he has hopes for the future.

"In this novel, Betty de Sherbinin proves to be a writer of undeniable talent. . . . There is a hard, uncompromising quality to her prose, which is devoid of rolling phrases and 'inspired' verbiage. Her characterizations are full-bodied, human. She writes with great restraint, which is all the more praiseworthy because one can detect her bitter hatred of Fascism. This latent and never-obvious hatred gives the work an intensity that compels the reader to finish it in one sitting." David Karno

+ Book Week p4 Ja 13 '46 400w

Booklist 42:213 Mr 1 '46

Kirkus 13:477 N 1 '45 160w

"An average book which missed an opportunity to provide American readers with a searching study of South American politics. Unimportant." H. A. Carpenter

Library J 71:54 Ja 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by Mildred Adams

N Y Times p12 Ja 20 '46 400w

"Though brisk and purposeful, it is not much more than a standard anti-Fascist novel, stocked with the usual assortment of representative characters and sentiments."

New Yorker 21:84 Ja 26 '46 90w

"The whole novel is a righteous tract, overlaid with Anglo-Saxon rather than Latin sentimentality. But it is also a study in utter futility. . . . Whether the author intended to point her tale up so explicitly I do not know, for her political sermons are on the teen-age level, and the tempest in the tea-pot which she has described and which resulted in considerable unnecessary tragedy largely takes place in a vacuum of ideas and of organization; it is merely a plot of little schemers on the boy-scout level, individual schemers without parties, without real principles, ignorant of past history, and with an incomprehensible absence of techniques since the leader has been a practical engineer." Carleton Beals

— Sat R of Lit 29:20 Ja 19 '46 1150w

"The principal value of 'The Challenged Land' is the feeling it gives the reader of being taken behind the scenes, the third dimension it adds to newspaper accounts of revolution and counter-revolution. It is better journalism than it is a novel because the events it describes are more memorable than the characters who partake in them; but its tenseness and turbulence are skillfully combined into a striking picture of South America today." Herbert Kupferberg

Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 6 '46 450w

DESMOND, ALICE (CURTIS). Glamorous Dolly Madison. 274p il $2.75 Dodd

B or 92 Madison, Dorothy (Payne) Todd—Juvenile literature 46-3153

"A full-length biography, covering the complete life span. She shows us a shy Quaker girl, awed by her stern father, dutifully accepting the husband of his choice. In her widowhood she meets the fascinating Aaron Burr, falls hopelessly in love with him, and marries his friend Madison out of pity. The story carries on through her years of social triumphs, through poverty-stricken old age, to her death at 80." (N Y Times) For older girls.

Booklist 42:319 Je 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:274 Jl '46 80w

"Well documented, extensive historical backgrounds. Good school and library material."

+ Kirkus 14:106 F 15 '46 90w

"This thoroughly satisfying rags-to-riches biography will find a wide audience. . . . Recommended for ages 13 and up." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 71:920 Je 15 '46 50w

Reviewed by N. B. Baker

N Y Times p27 My 12 '46 180w

Sat R of Lit 29:69 N 9 '46 40w

"It makes uncommonly pleasant reading, drawing along with it the social life of the new republic in its formative years. There are many well chosen photographs, chiefly of contemporary paintings, and as practically every one of national importance was in her circle these make a portrait gallery of our great."

+ Weekly Book Review p14 My 19 '46 600w

DESTLER, CHESTER MCARTHUR. American radicalism, 1865-1901; essays and documents 276p il $3.50; pa $2.50 Conn. college bkshop

973.8 U.S.—Politics and government—1865-46-6081

"An account of the main reform movements of the period with copious reference to contemporary documents. Many quotations and cartoons from the press." Am J Soc

Am J Soc 52:380 Ja '47 30w

Reviewed by J. D. Lewis

Am Pol Sci R 40:1180 D '46 700w

Reviewed by R. E. Noble

Ann Am Acad 248:274 N '46 450w

DE TOLNAY, CHARLES. The Sistine ceiling. (Michelangelo, 2) 297p il $17.50 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Michelangelo Buonarrati A46-647

"Every conceivable aspect of the Sistine murals; every problem connected with the paintings and the life of their creator, is analyzed and discussed with reference to the ceiling as a whole; and the accumulated scholarship of past authorities, far from being unheeded, is considered, supplemented by fresh investigations and postulates, and extended in many directions, particularly in the field of fundamental meanings." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by Benedict Nicolson

New Statesman & Nation 32:269 O 12 '46 360w

"Mr. de Tolnay, in this second of his five projected volumes on Michelangelo, offers a piece of critical writing which is well worthy of the mighty Florentine and of his masterpiece. . . . As a study of the great man and his most important work it is so complete, so well documented (and a large part of the documents are actually reproduced), so illuminated, and so illuminating, that it virtually makes unnecessary further research on these years of his life. Unless it is to tell the story in untechnical language for less patient readers, no one need write about Michelangelo's Sistine phase again." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p5 D 30 '45 1050w

"The book is written primarily for students of Renaissance painting. Because of the great spiritual content of the material treated, however, and the unique cultural and historical significance of the Sistine Chapel, the book may be much more widely read."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:2 Mr '46 280w

"It would be difficult to exaggerate the value of the present volume, or even, in a short review, to enumerate its outstanding virtues. . .

For the depth and freshness of Mr. de Tolnay's scholarship, I have the highest admiration; for his total lack of pedantry in the innermost technicalities of philosophical criticism, I am duly grateful; but I cannot follow him when he includes in the appendix thirty pages of letters and documents all in the original Italian! Nor can I follow him in his adherence to the old Italian combination, Michelangelo, while adopting, quite properly, the Anglicized form, Raphael, instead of the Italian Raffaello." Thomas Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Mr 17 '46
750w

DETTE, — Adventures of Olle; il. by [the author]. [24]p $1 Duell

Picture story book about a little three-year-old who traveled far and wide in his little birthday automobile—in a dream.

Kirkus 14:344 Ag 1 '46 80w

"Interesting pictures and good format." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 71:1054 Ag '46 50w

"A real international flavor is brought to the library of the very young reader with this story. . . This version has a nice mixture of reality and magic with amusing pictures in color." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p41 S 15 '46 130w

Reviewed by Leone Garvey

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 10 '46
30w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 4 '46 140w

DEUCHER, SYBIL. Edvard Grieg, boy of the Northland; il. by Mary Greenwalt. 165p $2.50 Dutton

B or 92 Grieg, Edvard Hagerup—Juvenile literature 46-6784

Musical biography for grades four to six. It presents the life story of Edvard Grieg, describes the writing of some of his best-known compositions, and includes simple musical arrangements of some of these.

Booklist 43:74 N 1 '46

"Grieg had an exceptionally happy life, both musically and emotionally. Nevertheless, this book's tone of unfeeling sweetness and light is apt to give children the impression that nothing is easier than to hear, for example, the song of a bird and promptly to compose a masterpiece entitled 'Little Bird.' It is written in the uncomplicated style which the author has successfully employed in previous musical biographies, and the black and white illustrations sympathetically convey the Norwegian atmosphere which inspired the composer. The musical selections are excellent." S. L. Goldsmith

+ N Y Times p28 O 27 '46 150w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:144 D 7 '46 60w

"Sybil Deucher, endeavoring to make music and art a living experience for children, combines anecdotes with actual music in a way that should have especial appeal for young musicians." Eleanor Breed

+ San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 10 '46
80w

"All easily and simply told, [the book] creates a rounded impression of the man. The music shows familiar but never banal little pieces for the young and honest simplification of larger works."

+ Weekly Book Review p16 N 10 '46
320w

Wis Lib Bul 42:153 N '46

DEUTSCH, BABETTE (MRS AVRAHM YARMOLINSKY). The reader's Shakespeare. 510p il $4 Messner

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Stories, paraphrases, etc. 47-444

A reworking of fifteen of Shakespeare's plays, relating them in straight narrative form. Contents: Romeo and Juliet; King Richard II; The Merchant of Venice; King Henry IV; A Midsummer Night's Dream; Julius Caesar; Hamlet; Twelfth Night; Othello; Macbeth; King Lear; Antony and Cleopatra; Coriolanus; The Winter's Tale; The Tempest.

Book Week p10 D 8 '46 90w

Booklist 43:166 F 1 '47

"Miss Deutsch succeeds especially in merging Shakespeare's phrasing almost imperceptibly with her own sensitive style and in quoting the poet directly and tastefully. She maintains clearly both the order of the dramatist's story and the atmosphere of the poet's lines, with something of the fidelity and glow of a reduced photograph in color." R. B

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 4 '47
450w

"I confess to approaching this with reluctance and disapproval, and to not changing my mind. Perhaps this method of briefing Shakespeare's plays, presenting them in libretto form, has its value, for theatre goes rather than for play readers. . . But for an introduction to reading the play itself (and that seems the author's main intent), I should feel that the cream was off the jug, and the zest destroyed. There is no quality, no style to the text."

+ Kirkus 14:565 N 1 '46 170w

"Recommended for individual purchasers, but not to libraries." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:1714 D 1 '46 70w

"Her book of stories based on [some of] 'the great plays' is something of another and more ambitious Lambs' Tales From Shakespeare." Like Charles and Mary Lamb, Miss Deutsch renders the plays into stories. Like them, she uses the poet's own words whenever it seems possible to bring them in. . . The chief difference between the old book and the new is one of objectives and methods. The Lambs were concerned with entrancing children, to whom they addressed themselves; their method was simply to tell their tales as tales. Miss Deutsch is addressing herself to grown-ups, and concerned with enlightening them, albeit as painlessly and pleasantly as she is able." A. S. Morris

+ N Y Times p6 D 15 '46 950w

"Unfortunately, her revisions, written in a sparse style and in the present tense, read not like stories but like unconsciously long program notes."

New Yorker 22:145 D 14 '46 80w

"Miss Deutsch's work, unlike that of Charles and Mary Lamb, her predecessors in the art of boiling down the bard, is not designed in the first instance for children's reading. Consequently, where the Lambs contented themselves with mere simplified narrative slightly embroidered with moralizing, Miss Deutsch has deftly introduced a minimum of interpretation and explanation. Occasionally she supplies background information that helps to clarify the motives of the characters or the social forces implicit in the action. . . In the technical work of abridgment and rearrangement of material Miss Deutsch has displayed an admirable tact." G. F. Whicher

+ Weekly Book Review p10 D 15 '46 800w

DEUTSCH, HELENE. Psychology of women; a psychoanalytic interpretation; foreword by Stanley Cobb. v2 480p $5 Grune

396 Woman (44-5287)

"The present volume, which is the second of a two volume study on the psychology of women by Dr. Deutsch . . . is a comprehensive, detailed, and very rich study of the psychological aspects of motherhood, by an experienced, observant, and sympathetic woman. The approach is largely clinical and is everywhere colored by the author's work as a psychoanalyst." (Am J Pub Health) For first volume see Book Review Digest, 1944.

Reviewed by A. S. Damm

Am J Psychol 59:311 Ap '46 1800w

"It is not quite clear for what group of readers the book is primarily intended. Consequently one misses a certain clarity of focusing and organization. This is, however, a minor defect in a valuable presentation. It is a presentation which possibly foreshadows and paves the way for more precise understanding of emotional-sexual functioning which may be achieved through the combined efforts of gynecologists and psychiatrists—two groups who are as yet much too far apart." Phyllis Greenacre

DEUTSCH, HELENE—Continued

+ — Am J Pub Health 36:663 Je '46 330w

"The author, in this second volume on the psychology of women, gives a perfunctory nod of recognition to environment, to social and cultural factors, but in general she still follows the strict Freudian line. We meet the familiar traumas and guilt feelings, the usual fondness for portentous terms to describe very simple human matters." Margaret Nordfeldt, M.D.

Survey 82:27 Ja '46 320w

DEVLIN, DENIS. Lough Derg, and other poems. 79p $2 Reynal

821

46-4649

"[This] is the first book of poems to be published in this country by the young Irish poet. His poems, however, have already gained appreciation through publication in leading literary journals, both in England and America. . . The poems in 'Lough Derg' are steeped in many traditions—myths, rituals, histories, religions, oracles, wars, martyrdoms, sensualities. They are romantic and highly discursive, tapestries of many colors, many moods, unified not so much by the abstraction of intellectual argument as by the all-encompassing ego which believes itself to be the unifying principle." N Y Times

"All the long poems here, and many of the short ones too, are as good as anything we have had in a long time. The danger for Devlin would be the occasionalness of his poetry. It is nine years since 'Intercessions,' yet seven of these poems—three of them long ones—are reprinted from that volume. However, poetry as good as this is worth waiting for." Arthur Mizener

Nation 163:160 Ag 10 '46 500w

Reviewed by Selden Rodman

+ New Repub 115:106 Jl 29 '46 700w

"A distinguished volume." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 21 '46 230w

"Mr. Devlin's classically constructed style reinforces his complex thought, and he has power over imagery, a wide range of interests, and a fresh approach to ideas. No exploitation of Celtic charm here, but a good deal of Celtic intellect, boldness, and uncommon sense."

+ New Yorker 22:75 Jl 20 '46 60w

"Mr. Devlin, inheritor of the Irish poetic tradition, brings to his work its feeling for rhythm and cadence, Celtic mother wit and rich religious background. But he adds modern youth's re-examination of the past and awareness of the significant part that science now plays in man's universal orientation. Using greater economy of language than most of his Celtic forebears, he attains a strength of structure sometimes lacking in even the greatest of them. The bone structure of a philosophy is here more clearly defined than in other Irish poets, beneath that metaphorical process which is the flesh of all poetry." Inez Boulton

+ Poetry 69:169 D '46 480w

"Denis Devlin's small collection represents a mode of intellectual poetry which will interest serious students of verse. Mr. Devlin is a young Irishman who has studied his Yeats and Perse, but his own lines show evidence of a mature individuality." George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p11 S 1 '46 50w

"Although he combines a fine perceptiveness with an understanding of contemporary techniques, Mr. Devlin is a learned rather than an accomplished craftsman. His inversions, for example, are not always effective, nor are his cadences sufficiently compelling. Among the most moving pieces are the love poems toward the end of the volume." Babette Deutsch

+ — Weekly Book Review p3 Jl 28 '46 900w

DE WEESE, FRED C. Transmission lines; design, construction and performance. 297p $3.50 McGraw

621.3192 Electric lines

45-10103

"This volume is aimed both at engineers charged with the design of transmission lines and at construction men engaged in building them. In the parts dealing with construction, the expected practical information is given. The chapters dealing with design range from the design of short lines to the design of long high voltage lines, and the mathematics necessary for comprehension of the author's discussion varies with the complexity of the subject. New methods for the calculation of sag in long spans, and for finding the economical size of a.c.s.r. and copper-weld-copper cables are given. Unfortunately no bibliography has been included." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 70.751 S 1 '45 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:55 O '45

DEWEY, JOHN. Problems of men. 424p $5 Philosophical lib.

191.9 Philosophy. Education

46-25157

"A collection of essays covering a half century, reproduced from periodicals and bearing the dates on which they first appeared. One, written more than 50 years ago, had not been published earlier. A summation of Dr. Dewey's philosophy of education. Well indexed." School & Society

Reviewed by R. W. Sellars

Am Soc R 11:645 O '46 600w

Booklist 42:311 Je 1 '46

Reviewed by Glenn Negley

Ethics 57:73 O '46 450w

Reviewed by G. O. Kelley

Library J 71:755 My 15 '46 120w

"This is a collection of thirty-two essays, most of them gathered from Dewey's writings during the past ten years. The exceptions are the introductory chapter, written expressly for this volume, and one essay which dates back to the end of the last century. The selection is excellent and offers a consistent picture of Dewey's philosophy." Hannah Arendt

+ Nation 163:447 O 19 '46 1250w

Reviewed by Jerome Nathanson

New Repub 115:562 O 28 '46 1200w

Reviewed by Alvin Johnson

N Y Times p7 Je 9 '46 1150w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 18 '46 100w

Reviewed by Ordway Tead

Sat R of Lit 29:14 Jl 20 '46 1200w

School & Society 63:366 My 18 '46 40w

"The most amazing feature of the latest Dewey volume is the freshness and spontaneity of expression. Greater earnestness has never been found in a book dealing with such profound subjects of discussion. To new readers of John Dewey will come a full understanding of the significance of this name in the literature of psychology, education, politics, sociology, and philosophy. To old readers there will be discernible a provocativeness stronger than ever. The numerous allusions to history and to the struggle of man to make the most out of science and religion will be welcomed by both the disciples of our great laboratory innovators and the advocates of a more extensive application of religious principles to efficient social living. Despite his nearly ninety years of effortful living, the Dewey intellect is still sharp and penetrating. John Dewey proves he is still competent to handle technical topics of high controversial potential, refuting cleverly the profoundest thrusts of his ideological rivals. No less than his most capable contemporaries, he displays a delicious sense of humor and attitudes of tolerance, reconciliation, and sympathy. He is the best living example of the philosophy of education that has long been associated with his name. His reverence for, and understanding of, the problems of childhood and the classroom will help to win a large audience of patrons for his latest book, in which we see better than ever before what the author wants us to accept as the meaning, purpose, and value of philosophy." C. D. Champplin

+ School R 54:493 O '46 750w

"Although the book lacks something of the coherence it would have if it had been worked out as a unified book, the articles which make up the chapters have been very well selected and fit together into a plan much better than would be expected in a synthetic volume. Bringing these articles together in this manner has been an excellent service, because they would not otherwise be readily accessible." Charles Peters

+ Social Studies 37:327 N '46 750w

"Dr. Dewey has produced a philosophical work that has a broad appeal. Part 3, which is made up largely of previously published articles replying to critics of his views, seems designed rather more for professional than lay reading, but the rest of the book provides stimulating material for a wide range of serious-minded readers." E. A. F.

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 30 '46 550w

"This review is not an attempt to explain John Dewey or to take issue with his points of view. Its primary object is to suggest the vitality and freshness of these papers by an octogenarian, and their relation to the main currents of our time." Harry Hansen.

+ Survey G 35:166 My '46 2050w

Reviewed by J. H. Randall

Weekly Book Review p10 S 1 '46 1050w

Reviewed by Raphael Demos

Yale R n s 36:166 autumn '46 1400w

DEWEY, THOMAS B. As good as dead. (Jefferson house publication) 218p $2 Morrow 46-7182

Detective story.

Kirkus 14:360 Ag 1 '46 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p40 N 10 '46 150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 13 '46 50w

Sat R of Lit 29:37 O 5 '46 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p46 N 10 '46 70w

DE WITT, JOHANNA. Littlest reindeer; pictures of Phoebe Erickson. [28p] $1 Childrens press 46-1788

The littlest reindeer had no antlers and therefore he wept with shame and refused to go south with the herd. When his tears froze he rushed off southward where he could cry in comfort. And then when spring came he had his reward. For beginning readers.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 178:162 N '46 270w

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p19 Mr 31 '46 180w

Kirkus 14:125 Mr 1 '46 80w

"Pictures by Phoebe Erickson are an attractive, important part of the book. Recommended for pre-school as well as beginning readers." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 71:1054 Ag '46 120w

DIAMOND, FRANK. Murder rides a rocket. 336p $2 Curl 46-18488

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p6 Ag 18 '46 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p23 Jl 28 '46 140w

"Nonsense, if you're going to be stuffy about it; but to my taste highly agreeable nonsense, with a fantastic absurdity not unlike some of the brighter moments of the Saint saga."

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 28 '46 70w

"The characters of the tale are well-drawn and the final unmasking is sufficiently unsuspected." J. E. English

Spring'd Republican p4 Ag 4 '46 90w

DIARY of a public man; and, A page of political correspondence, Stanton to Buchanan; foreword by Carl Sandburg; prefatory notes by F. Lauriston Bullard. 137p il $3 Rutgers univ. press

973.71 U.S.—Politics and government—1783-1865. Secession

"This day-by-day record of public life covering activities in Washington for the period December 1860 to March 1861 first appeared in the North American Review in 1879. The authorship of the diary has mystified historians since that time. The preface contains an explanation of the importance of the work and the opinions that have been expressed about it. It has never before been available to the general reading public and will be desirable for collections of Lincolniana or for special American history collections." (Booklist) This, published in 1945 by the Abraham Lincoln bookshop, Chicago, was entered in Book Review Digest, 1945.

Booklist 43:98 D 1 '46

Current Hist 12:62 Ja '47 70w

"Large and medium sized libraries." G. W. Hill

Library J 71:1204 S 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by Jay Monaghan

N Y Times p38 N 10 '46 470w

"Obviously, the writer knew his way around the Washington drawing-rooms and was a good man on details and a story. How true a picture of the capitol and its executive he presents, it is hard to say for it is one man's opinion, and a biased man, at that. Taking everything in the book as gospel would be like judging the Roosevelt administration by a series of, say, Pegler or Winchell articles; but still it remains of no little interest to the Lincoln scholar or to the general reading public."

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 17 '46 260w

"The diary is rich reading, and it is good that it is now available in book form." G. F. Milton

+ Sat R of Lit 29:17 N 23 '46 170w

DIAT, LOUIS. Home cookbook; French cooking for Americans (la cuisine de ma mère) foreword by Monty Woolley. 309p $2.50 Lip-pincott

641.5 Cookery, French

46-2645

Some 600 recipes by the chef of New York's Ritz-Carlton. Altho based on French recipes they are possible for the American housewife, in most cases. The arrangement of the recipes is alphabetical under the larger main headings, such as soups, sauces, fish, salads, etc. Contains a chapter on French eating customs, a glossary, and index.

"There is a special delight in reading cook-books. This pleasure is intensified when the book offers something extra in the way of amusing writing. . . For the charm with which Louis Diat presents his early cooking adventures and the economical good sense with which he generally introduces his recipe groups, his Home Cookbook deserves to stand beside Miss Fisher's and Mr. Wright's volumes."

+ Atlantic 178:156 Jl '46 240w

"The simple, delicious cookery to be found in a typical gallic home has been captured with spice."

+ Book Week p7 S 1 '46 50w

Booklist 42:361 Jl 15 '46

"You will find this book clearly and concisely written, making it possible to follow any recipe without difficulty." E. L. Taylor

+ J Home Econ 38:530 O '46 100w

"The housewife may pick up here and there a dish that appeals to her imagination, but in the main it is not a book to provide the average cook with a basic cookbook. The intimate glimpses of his mother's kitchen, scattered through the text make it a very personal sort of cookbook, and the coverage is wide—though not complete."

DIAT, LOUIS—Continued

+ — Kirkus 14:55 F 1 '46 170w

"The recipes take care and time in amounts seldom expended. Nevertheless he has provided fine guidance for those ready to follow and he has an inspiring approach for those who don't know their own possibilities." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p24 My 12 '46 230w

DICK, ALEXANDRA, pseud. See Ericson, S. A.

DICK, CAPPY, pseud. See Cleveland, R.

DICK, MRS ISABEL. Country heart. 376p $2.75 Crowell

46-2359

"About the return of Charlotte Acton to the serene valley of her sheltered childhood after years abroad... Her return is an escape from a mother endowed with more ambition than understanding, from the prospect of marriage to an older man whose merits left her cold, from all the forces that threatened the only happiness she could imagine—the open spaces, the quiet, the closeness to the soil that had enriched her childhood. She was to discover, of course, that Tasmania would offer certain romantic possibilities unguessed in her care-free youth." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by Edith Roberts

Book Week p10 Mr 31 '46 330w

Booklist 42:265 Ap 15 '46

"It all makes a pleasant, well-bred novel, easy but not unusual in style, and one that can be recommended to readers who have no liking for realism or sophistication." W. K. R. + Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 13 '46 500w

Kirkus 14:76 F 15 '46 180w

"The style is on the prim conventional side, made refreshing with the author's love for the productive, living land." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p10 Mr 24 '46 200w

"Mrs. Dick's ancestors migrated from England to what was then called Van Diemen's Land more than a century ago, and one suspects that her book is in some degree a distillation of family records. Her familiarity with the valley's human relationships leads her to introduce too many characters without clarifying the links. Her narrative would have benefited if she had given more attention to the fact that the reader has never visited her pleasant valley before." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p8 Mr 24 '46 360w

Wis Lib Bul 42:75 My '46

DICKEY, GEORGE D., and BRYDEN, CHARLES LAZARUS. Theory and practice of filtration. 346p il $6 Reinhold

660.284 Filters and filtration 46-4330

"Beginning with the history of filtration the chapters cover theory and principles of filtration applied to the separation of solids from liquids by use of porous media. One chapter on gas and light filters. Practical book on various types of filters and auxiliary apparatus, testing and selection of equipment, installation and operation. Special chapters on vacuum filters, oil filters, extractors and expellers, pressure filters, water filtration, hydraulic presses, sewage clarification and sludge dewatering." Library J

"This is probably the most comprehensive book that has been published on the subject of filtration... The book should be of great value not only to specialists in the filtration fields, but also to students, process engineers, and laboratory technicians." J. F. D'Antonio

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2108 Ag 10 '46 350w

"On the whole, the book presents a comprehensive review of the subject of filtration and is a book that can be used to practical advantage by engineers."

+ Chem Eng 53:313 N '46 400w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:980 Jl '46 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:24 Ap '46

DICKINSON, JONATHAN. Journal; or, God's protective providence; being the narrative of a journey from Port Royal in Jamaica to Philadelphia between Aug. 23, 1696 and Apr. 1, 1697; ed. by Evangeline Walker Andrews and Charles McLean Andrews. 252p il maps $3 Yale univ. press [15s Oxford]

917.59 Florida. Shipwrecks. Indians of North America—Florida A45-4821

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"Scholars will greet with pleasure this new edition of Dickinson's Journal, one of the outstanding seventeenth century narratives of Indian captivities. Replete with dramatic incident, this tale of shipwreck and misery on the coast of Florida and of final deliverance from the Indians by the compassion of the Spanish governor at St. Augustine, gives a vivid picture of the perils encountered by the hapless travelers." D. B. Goebel

+ Am Hist R 51:550 Ap '46 400w

Atlantic 177:153 F '46 2400w

"Its present editors, recognizing it as a fine piece of prose, a unique account of the seventeenth century Florida Indians, and a historical document deeply rooted in the stories of American colonization and Quaker beginnings, have lavished upon it a remarkable effort of scholarly rescue work. They annotate in great detail the course of this terrible journey and fill in the naval and historical background of the voyage from which it sprang... Jonathan Dickinson clothes the gaunt skeleton of his story with a plain homespun of prose so strong and seemly that it is not likely to wear out."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p165 Ap 6 '46 850w

"No more competent editor could have been found in the world than the historian, Charles McLean Andrews, who unfortunately did not live to see the work completed. His wife has splendidly brought the book to its finished stage. The Introduction, written by Evangeline Walker Andrews, is an admirable piece of work. There are 133 pages of illuminative appendices and seven coast line maps. It is difficult to conceive how Jonathan Dickinson could have produced such a vivid and detailed narrative under the perilous and strenuous conditions of travel. But here it is." R. M. Jones

+ Yale R n s 35:561 spring '46 800w

DICKINSON, ROBERT ERIC. Regions of Germany. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 175p maps $3.50 Oxford [10s 6d Routledge]

914.3 Administrative and political divisions —Germany [45-5605]

"Dr. Dickinson's purpose is 'to give a picture of the regions in Germany which have a large measure of unity in their history, present activities and organization, regions which should be adopted as provinces of the Reich.' He hastens to add: 'We are not concerned with the political aspects of the problem.'" Times [London] Lit Sup

"Dickinson's book was put together somewhat hastily while its author was occupied with wartime government service. As an authority on problems of regionalism and on the German area in particular, however, he is thoroughly familiar with his material. His volume offers an admirable summary not only of the geographic but of the historical, social, and economic factors that have operated to develop 'natural groupings' of German territories." H. C. Deutsch

+ Am Hist R 52:118 O '46 400w

"How much of such a program can be realized under the Four-Power condominium which has been imposed upon Germany—now divided into four zones which cut across all historical and economic boundaries—Brecht does not pretend to discuss. But political scientists who are interested in realistically analyzing this unprecedented experiment in undemocratic government of a modern industrial nation as it unfolds its weird pattern will find much that will help them in the detached and well-informed study which Brecht has given us." C. J. Friedrich

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:364 Ap '46 750w

"A convenient book which, not pretending to cover everything, outlines the physical nature of Germany, tells where the Germans live and how they made their living, and portrays the geographic background of the problems involved. This volume is not for those who wish to learn all about the German problem at one sitting. It should, however, be on the book shelves of those who must make decisions as to the future of Germany." O. P. Starkey

+ Ann Am Acad 245:187 My '46 450w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Ja 6 '46 40w

Foreign Affairs 24:557 Ap '46 40w

Reviewed by C. D. Harris

Geog R 36:336 Ap '46 1150w

"The book may be useful for the Allied administrator who wants to have quick and reliable information about the economical and geographical set-up of the region in which he has to work, but Dr. Dickinson offers only vague generalisations with regard to the political and social problems which the Allied administrator has to face."

New Statesman & Nation 29:326 My 19 '45 180w

Reviewed by J. H. Wuorinen

+ Pol Sci Q 61:138 Mr '46 450w

"As always with 'geopolitics,' even of the honest and democratic kind, it is difficult to keep a satisfactory balance between geography and politics; and between geography and history. Dr. Dickinson's work would be of even greater value if he were to give his readers more frequently and more consistently the warning that what follows is a political (or historical) judgment; that here are the views and contributions of a geography expert."

Times [London] Lit Sup p230 My 19 '45 700w

DICKS, RUSSELL LESLIE. Thy health shall spring forth; readings in religion and health. 61p $1.25 Macmillan

242 Sick, The. Prayers 45-8953

"No one has studied more thoughtfully and helpfully than Dr. Dicks the religious and mental problems of the sick and the salutary effects of right thinking. He exploits no dubious theories of faith cure. In this little volume there is an alternation of counsels and interpretations, which may be used as guides by those who minister to the sick (or by the patients themselves in many cases), with prayers, poems and reflections which may be read to or by the sufferers." Christian Century

"A sane and sanctifying little book."

+ Christian Century 62:1385 D 12 '45 70w

"The book is doubly worthy in that it inspires and instructs without resort to argument or insistence upon superior wisdom." I. M. Rose

+ Crozer Q 23:205 Ap '46 200w

Kirkus 13:365 Ag 15 '45 110w

DICKSON, CARTER, pseud. See Carr, J. D.

DICKSON, HELEN (MRS HELEN [CAMPBELL] DICKSON REYNOLDS) (DICKSON REYNOLDS, pseud). Gold in Mosquito creek; ll. by Grattan Condon. 192p $2 Nelson

46-7209

Three teen-aged boys on a fishing trip in the Pacific northwest accidentally discover gold, and have an exciting time of it with gangsters and other complications. For ages eleven to fifteen.

Kirkus 14:458 S 15 '46 90w

"Value of the book lies in its definite atmosphere and appreciation of the West with its marvelous outdoor life. . . Recommended for ages 11-15." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 71:1468 O 15 '46 70w

"With the goldmining country of the Northwest as a colorful background and plenty of adventure with which to fill in, this could have been an outstanding and exciting story. It is apparent that the author thoroughly knows his mining locale. However, his style of writing is too uneven, the dialogue drags, and the characters are, for the most part, unconvincing. The result is a flimsy story letting down a good plot, a story which should fail to interest the least discerning young readers." Margaret Goodloe

— + San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 10 '46 80w

DIEBOLD, MRS JANET OLIVE (HART). Mandrake root. 227p $2.50 Holt

46-6541

Joanna Geyer, an American girl just out of college, goes to Denmark to study the folk high school movement. There she is invited to join an exclusive seminar, whose head is a distinguished ex-ambassador. The story is of Joanna's experiences on the ambassador's beautiful estate, of the sinister element which enters into the picture, and of her escape.

"A little on the romantic side, this first novel shows considerable talent in the use of background material and the manipulation of personalities. . . Readers who seek the unusual will find this book entertaining." O. C.

+ Book Week p5 S 29 '46 140w

"The news that Janet Diebold had written a story having to do with Bishop Grundtvig and the Danish folk schools led to a brief flicker of hope that a competent co-op novel in English had appeared at last. But no. It is not that Miss Diebold isn't a pretty good writer; rather that she manifests little knowledge as to what the schools are up to and cares less." Edward Skilkin

Commonweal 44:626 O 11 '46 170w

Kirkus 14:280 Je 15 '46 170w

"The Count who conducts the seminar and awes the country people nearby has strange delusions of grandeur, while the young American heroine is too naive and emotional to be entirely convincing. The climax is melodramatic and leaves the reader dissatisfied with the whole story. Not highly recommended." R. P. Tubby

Library J 71:1050 Ag '46 120w

"Miss Diebold can occasionally write convincingly, and with humor. Her account of the fashionable Copenhagen ball . . . might be clipped from the binding and filed under Generic Descriptions: Charity Affairs. In general, however, she has created people and situations that are beyond her as a writer. Young girls with purity complexes and sinister seducers with hypnotic talents are best left to authors who can handle them." Patricia Blake

— + N Y Times p14 S 8 '46 600w

"A very pleasing background of a conventional Danish upper-class milieu gives the book a certain distinction it might have lacked had the setting been more familiar."

New Yorker 22:109 S 14 '46 70w

"Mrs. Diebold writes very well indeed. She writes with restraint, with delicacy, and with a kind of grave dignity which seems almost to belong to another time, but which satisfies one as belonging to another, and which gives its own intrinsic satisfaction, as well. Despite its relative brevity, the story does move slowly. The thunder rumbles in the far distance, the lightning flickers at sometimes lagging intervals. One gets at times, even within this brief compass, a feeling of impatience, and cannot always see the relevance of certain detailed scenes. But however retarding to the pace of the actual story, however seemingly inconsequential, there is no scene that is not vivid in itself. . . 'Mandrake Root' is worth reading, and Janet Diebold worth watching." R. P. Harnden

Weekly Book Review p4 S 15 '46 500w

DIFFIE, BAILEY WALLYS. Latin-American civilization: colonial period; with the assistance of Justine Whitfield Diffie. 812p il maps $4.50 Stackpole sons

980 Latin America—Civilization. Latin America—History 46-399

"The central thesis of the book is that Latin America is the product of a fusion into which three cultures have merged and are still merged; that without understanding of the contribution of the Indian, of the European and of the Negro to the resulting synthesis, there can be no true appraisal of modern Latin America. Mr. Diffie then proceeds with his analysis of the colonial experience, taking up stage by stage the economic development, the arts, the social patterns, religion and government; seeking in each case to uncover the influence of Indian and European and Negro." Weekly Book Review

"The book is a sound piece of scholarship and can be safely recommended as a text, its strength lying mainly in the skilful and well-thought-out organization of the material. A goodly number of attractive illustrations add a note of pleasure and enhanced enjoyment." William Ebenstein

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:825 Ag '46 220w

"The book obviously represents a vast amount of reading and study. Professor Diffie has made use of the works of a great number of Latin American and European as well as North American authors, and his footnotes, by themselves, will be useful to students as a guide to the best books which have been written in the field." D. G. Munro

+ Ann Am Acad 245:193 My '46 550w

"All in all it is a notable achievement in both analysis and synthesis." Bertram Wolfe

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 21 '46 500w

"Should prove a valuable source of reference. Well documented and carefully indexed."

+ School & Society 63:87 F 2 '46 30w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:116 Je '46 210w

"This is no book to be undertaken unadvisedly or lightly. It is heavy going. It is loaded down with figures, footnotes, quotations—not with the self-consciousness of the aspiring scholar who blankets himself with footnotes lest ill-mannered fellows think him unclothed—and they are excellently useful. It would be a better book had Mr. Diffie more of the gift of words. But it leaves all delivers into Latin America very much in his debt." Hubert Herring

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Mr 10 '46 1000w

DI MAGGIO, JOSEPH PAUL. Lucky to be a Yankee; introd. by James A. Farley; foreword by Grantland Rice. 210p il $2; pa $1 Greenberg

B or 92 Baseball 46-25209

The Yankee Clipper describes his life in baseball from the sandlots of San Francisco to his big league games with the Yankees.

Booklist 42:345 Jl 1 '46

"Because of Di Maggio's great popularity, this biography will be hailed by baseball fans; others will find it difficult reading. . . For older boys." M. F. Cox

Library J 71:1057 Ag '46 80w

"Copiously illustrated and told with modesty, humor and such professional agility that one suspects some anonymous sports writer rates an assist. In any case, anybody who likes baseball will like this book, and that includes a lot of people."

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ag 18 '46 200w

DIMOCK, MARSHALL EDWARD. Executive in action. 276p $3 Harper

658 Executives 45-9886

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

Reviewed by James Hart

Am Pol Sci R 40:140 F '46 480w

"It is not till one hundred pages have gone by that a significant example is adduced from business management. The central story is how Marshall E. Dimock, starting from scratch, organized and administered the Recruitment and Manning Organization for the War Shipping Administration. As a lifelong student of administration, Dimock is able to recount this story with a self-conscious sophistication that many executives lack. But the movement back and forth between specific episodes in the wartime story of R.M.O. and principles of executive action is difficult to maintain, and halfway through the book Dimock pretty well abandons it, so that the approach becomes that of the textbook, after all." C. S. Ascher

Ann Am Acad 243:173 Ja '46 750w

Current Hist 10:352 Ap '46 150w

"The greatest merit of this book is its demonstration of the organic, as contrasted with mechanical, nature of organizations and of the evolutionary process of adaptation as the dominant aspect of executive behavior. It is this, as Dimock points out (p. 216), that makes most executives inarticulate about what they are really doing. It explains why management and administration are so obscure to people without experience in this field. Professor Dimock has performed a needed service in making this so clear." C. I. Barnard

+ Pol Sci Q 61:134 Mr '46 700w

Special Libraries 37:51 F '46

"He has shrewd insights. He sees, for example, the dangers to the whole delicate network of relationships in an organization of insecurity on the part of the executive and the baleful effects of professionalism. . . His book does not sustain his expressed purpose to 'answer in detail the question: What does the operating official do?' The reader in search of general principles will not find the details of the operation of RMO of enough interest, because it appears at many points to be a special case—as indeed it must be, because the administrator was a special person. His general statements would stand better alone or fortified by a wider range of examples—which his experience and observations equip him to provide." C. S. Ascher

+ — Survey G 35:88 Mr '46 300w

DISNEY, DORIS MILES. Dark road. 219p $2 Doubleday

46-811

Murder story.

Booklist 42:227 Mr 15 '46

Bookmark 7:16 My '46

"Grim and mighty interesting." E. H.

+ New Repub 114:166 F 4 '46 60w

"This is an unusually fine example of the detective story in reverse." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 13 '46 100w

New Yorker 21:88 Ja 26 '46 60w

"Effective, convincing, and compelling tale about batch of people not even most doting mother could love. Sleuthing is especially well handled."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:39 Ja 19 '46 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p22 Ja 13 '46 60w

DISNEY, DORIS MILES. Who rides a tiger. 254p $2 Doubleday

46-7654

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p12 N 17 '46 90w

"Romantic mystery with art and substance."

+ Kirkus 14:402 Ag 15 '46 90w

"Solution takes a bit of believing, but most of the book is warm, full-bodied, well-written reconstruction of the past." Anthony Boucher

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 10 '46 60w

Sat R of Lit 29:32 D 14 '46 40w

DOANE, PELAGIE. Animals here and there; il. by [the author]. [48p] 50c Garden City pub. co.

590 Zoology—Juvenile literature 46-182

"Little children's picture book generously illustrated in color and black and white. Animals are introduced first in composite pictures showing them in their natural environment. They are then presented separately accompanied by brief notes regarding their habits. They appear for the third time, each group on a single sheet with the name of each animal directly below it." Library J

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 O 15 '46
150w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn BK 22:39 Ja '46 50w

"An animal picture book with more information than the average book in its class."
+ Kirkus 13:523 D 1 '46 110w

"Sturdily bound, heavy cardboard cover. Very satisfactory, especially for the price." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 71:123 Ja 15 '46 90w
Wis Lib Bul 42:21 Ja '46

DOANE, PELAGIE. Small child's Bible. 142p col il $3 Oxford

220.95 Bible stories 47-520

Brief stories from the Old and New Testaments retold for small children. Each story is complete on a page with a colored illustration facing it. Available also with an imprimatur, for Catholic children

"This is an admirable choice for any age. The text is simple and close to the original, and Pelagic Doane's color drawings, one for each story, are beautiful and distinguished."
+ Cath World 164:381 Ja '47 50w

"The stories are well retold and the illustrations are very fine indeed. I most heartily recommend it."

+ Commonweal 45:119 N 15 '46 50w
Kirkus 14:593 D 1 '46 50w

"Welcome addition to the Bible stories for younger children. However we wish the Bible text might have been used more frequently." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 50w

"The stories lack the simplicity and the poetic rhythm that they should have to carry their inspiration to the minds of even the youngest children. The intricacies of family and time relationships in the Old Testament are not thoroughly simplified and much of the story value is lost. The New Testament stories which follow Jesus throughout as the central figure are better handled. . . Taken as a whole, however, the book is a beautiful one for a child to own and read if he has already been introduced to these old and fascinating stories." Virginia Matthews

+ N Y Times p11 D 22 '46 150w

DOBBS, ROSE. Discontented village; il. by Beatrice Tobias. [31p] $1.50 Coward-McCann 46-7068

Fantasy about the people of a little village who were so discontented that a fog came between them and the sun. Then along came a stranger with an idea about getting rid of troubles, and before long the sun was shining again. For young children.

Book Week p12 N 10 '46 100w
Booklist 43:173 F 1 '47

Reviewed by F. W. Butler
Library J 71:1466 O 15 '46 90w

"Miss Dobbs' serenely humorous philosophy is expressed in clear and musical language, and the lithographs by Beatrice Tobias form an apt and gentle comment on the story. Eight-year-olds and upwards will enjoy it; the older ones will see deeper into it." Mary Mian

+ N Y Times p41 S 15 '46 180w
Sat R of Lit 29:46 N 9 '46 70w

"A child young enough to read large print will understand the scene that takes place when the bags are grabbed, and the longer they live the more cheerfully they will agree that the story tells the exact truth."

+ Weekly Book Review p14 N 10 '46
240w

DOBSON, RICHARD PORTWAY. China cycle. 217p il $2.75 (12s 6d) Macmillan

915.1 China—Description and travel A46-2637

"In the relatively calm days before Marco Polo Bridge, Richard Dobson, aged 22, went from England to China to begin a career with a tobacco company. His work required extended travel across the Central and Southern parts of that country, with journeys by rail, when there was any, by bus and auto, when there were roads, and, when there weren't, by rickshaw, wheelbarrow, chair and foot. Dobson proved to be not only an able cigarette merchant but an able observer and writer as well. He describes with humor and perspective the griefs, the boredom, the surprises and the disappointments of the businessman struggling to understand the Chinese." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by H. F. MacNair
Book Week p9 S 8 '46 290w

"As a reporter, Mr. Dobson is first-class at presenting us with the facts in a readable way. As a travel-writer, he is no less good at painting a landscape and conveying an atmosphere; but he is not nearly so skillful at depicting human beings." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 Mr 16 '46 650w

Manchester Guardian p3 F 20 '46 180w

Reviewed by Dorothy Woodman
New Statesman & Nation 31:342 My 11 '46 150w

"This is an enjoyable book with its quota of amusing incidents and picaresque characters, but I do not think I would recommend it to the serious-minded student of the Wisdom of the East." J. G. Hitrec

+ N Y Times p36 O 6 '46 600w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed
San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 6 '46
450w

"Here is a pleasant surprise—a modest and unpretentious little book of China reminiscences that has warmth, unstudied charm, and a remarkable amount of sympathetic insight." Richard Watts

+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 S 28 '46 750w

Reviewed by E. M. Gull
Spec 176:148 F 8 '46 700w

"The early section is the freshest and the most fascinating part of the book. It is full of good description, of sharp little character sketches, and of almost incredible stories of the Chinese genius for cut prices, tax evasion, the inclination to 'squeeze' and the invariable bonhomie of everybody."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p57 F 2 '46
750w

DODGE, MRS CONSTANCE (WOODBURY). In Adam's fall. 494p $2.75 Macrae Smith co. 46-7122

A story of Salem in the last years of the seventeenth century. Damaris Horn, the heroine, is one of the "afflicted children" who were instrumental in bringing on the witch hunt which blackened Salem's history.

Booklist 43:69 N 1 '46

"If the book seemed overloaded with forebodings and disasters, with brimstone lakes and clashing tongues of slander, the nature of those times must be recalled: the fact that witchcraft stood on the pages of English law as a mortal crime, and that years of theocratic repression had made New England like a pot, boiling violently under a fast-clamped lid. It is a witness to the writer's ability that all this becomes so graphic, but it is only in the full remembrance of those frenzied times that her characters can become credible." W. K. R.

DODGE, CONSTANCE—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 9 '46 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

Kirkus 14:397 Ag 15 '46 220w

"Mrs. Dodge's version is simplified for her purposes, and the sadism of the proceedings may be tidied up a bit. Otherwise, her treatment of the Puritan village background is excellent. It is naturally and skillfully combined with a sound plot—and a climax that couldn't have occurred anywhere else—into a dramatic novel." Catharine Brody

+ N Y Times p26 O 27 '46 650w

"The black, indelible blot on New England history—the Salem Village witch hunt—is the theme of Mrs. Dodge's story. . . The author has studied the grim records assiduously, and the picture is no doubt authentic. If you find the novel depressing reading, the fault is not here, but the reflection of human frailty and frightfulness." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p22 O 20 '46 90w

DODGE, PEGGY POLSKY. Little dog under the wagon; [il. by the author]. [28]p $1 Messner

Dogs—Legends and stories 46-21748

Story in verse about the little dog who disobeyed orders and followed the farmer to market instead of staying home. But when he saved the farmer from a robber he was forgiven for leaving the farm unguarded.

"A silly little story in rhyme. . . The line drawings reproduced in brown have a certain gaiety and humor, but aren't good enough to redeem the book, which is our candidate for the least book at the most price this season."

— Kirkus 14:520 O 15 '46 50w

"A delightful tale in verse." Marian Webb

+ Library J 71:1718 D 1 '46 70w

N Y Times p44 N 10 '46 120w

DODSON, OWEN. Powerful long ladder. 103p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

811

46-6372

A first volume of poems by an American Negro poet. Some of the poems are purely personal; others of more general interest are in the form of sonnet, song, or verse drama.

"Owen Dodson's utterance as a poet shows search and growth in these pages, but nothing of empty experimentation. Poems, dramatic in form, occupy a third of the book, and it is clear that print can convey to the reader only a fraction of the effect they would have if the lines were spoken. Dodson has little interest in mere verbal melody, and uses it most sparingly, but his rhythmical patterns are strong and consistent." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 S 8 '46 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

"These poems, except for an occasionally brilliant and scorching line, show more emotion and zeal than skill. The author feels deeply the plight of his people and expresses his emotions strongly. Most of the verse has more the tenor of propaganda than of pure poetry. Yet they have a certain rugged quality."

Kirkus 14:380 Ag 1 '46 90w

"With the friendliest intentions, I'll risk saying that Mr. Dodson makes too much of an issue of his race and color. It obtrudes, and that is bad art in any language. There is good poetry in his book, best when least self-conscious. . . Passages from longer works also indicate his power and promise. But he appears to be in some danger of falling into certain patterns somewhat expected of poets who are Negroes. Dodson uses language and rhythm in a way that I think is book-learned —slave songs, blues. It is clear from the bulk of his poetry that he can, if he will, outgrow this." John Holmes

+ — N Y Times p22 S 29 '46 350w

"The book has a note of complete sincerity and lack of pose, accomplished chiefly by freedom of pattern and absence of inhibition." J. N. North

+ Poetry 69:175 D '46 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 10 '46 120w

DOGBOLT, BARNABY, pseud. Eve's second apple. 318p $2.75 Dutton

46-5410

"The plot swirls around the adventures of Dr Willie Clipyard and Prof S. Potatow of a Kentucky medical college, who are in love with southern belles, and more particularly with Willie's experiments with Dr Kirsten's Bomb of Gilead, a beverage which is similar in its benefits to another famed fictional drink, Mulliner's Buck-U-Uppo of P. G. Wodehouse's stories. Willie also experiments with some girls named Delia, Rouge, Stanla and Kitty, and has an interesting business connection with Arnie Gresco, manager of an eating establishment known as a Cholereteria which seeks to stimulate bile by having everything green." Springfield Republican

Reviewed by Norman Hoefeld

Book Week p8 S 8 '46 250w

— Kirkus 14:301 J1 1 '46 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 5 '47 250w

"A novel of slapstick humor, satire and sex which seems to have no relation to its title or for that matter, to anything else." R. F. H.

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 18 '46 300w

"In this somewhat ribald romp the author is agile if not graceful, fast but not subtle. He has fun with glands and patent medicines, Southern aristocrats and sex. It may remind you of magazine articles for the housewife—what to do with leftovers." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p9 Ag 18 '46 250w

DOLBIER, MAURICE. The Magic shop; il. by Fritz Eichenberg. 75p $1.75 Random house

46-5290

A modern fairy tale. Dick and Denise went shopping for a magic wand for their father's birthday present. With them went their dog Woofie. In a magic shop they met a delightful old dealer in white magic, J. Wellington Oberon, and Puck, his apprentice. The magic wand was procured, and thereby hangs the tale. The scene is supposedly present-day New York.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p7 J1 28 '46 230w

Booklist 43:19 S '46

"Fritz Eichenberg's pictures are delightful in their humorous and spirited appreciation of this fresh and lively story."

+ Horn BK 22:350 S '46 120w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn BK 22:456 N '46 80w

"A medley of magic spoofing, with a Faustian villain, Shakespearean Oberon and Puck, a magic carpet, and a perfectly plain family of modern New Yorkers. . . Makes gay reading aloud, with a pleasant sulphurous tinge for more adult readers."

+ Kirkus 14:324 J1 15 '46 110w

"This modern fairy tale is rather sophisticated with adult touches, but it does have humor and originality. Will appeal to boys and girls of nine to twelve. Blue-and-white illustrations by Fritz Eichenberg add distinction and humor." J. E. Lynch

+ Library J 71:1046 Ag '46 90w

"The Magic Shop" is an unconventional fairy tale with most of the attributes of the classic fairy tale—the folk wit, wisdom and touches of childlike, cold-hearted common sense. . . Fritz Eichenberg's jolly and brilliant illustrations are an integral part of the story, and the book itself, designed by Fritz Eichenberg and Andor Braun, is a beautiful object to hold and to possess, as well as to read. For 6 to 9 year olds." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 4 '46 230w

"Once in a long time there comes a book about which a story teller exclaims, 'Won't it be fun to tell?' This is one of those times. The book is a natural. The fun, the dramatic quality, the action and the dialogue all make it so." E. B. Schilpp

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 10 '46 110w

"There is humor and imagination in this story, and it is nicely balanced between the real and the unreal. It would be a grand story to read aloud. Then the book should be given to the children, because Fritz Eichenberg's drawings are a pure delight." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:40 S 28 '46 320w

"The appearance of the book is what it should be—tidy, graceful and with its little pictures right on the pages where they belong. There are no more loose ends about it than about magic—which must, to convince a child, have unbreakable logic all its own. All you must take for granted is that there is such a thing; after this, it must proceed without caprice." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 J1 21 '46 450w

DOLIVET, LOUIS. The United nations; a handbook on the new world organization; pref. by Trygve Lie. 152p $1.75 Farrar, Straus

341.1 United nations (organization) 46-25244

"A handbook on the New World Organization with a definitive introduction by Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations. An objective, non-political study of the structure, powers, aims, and limitations of the United Nations is presented as well as the text of the Charter and Statutes of the International Court. Key personnel and self-explanatory charts are also listed." School & Society

"Here is an important and timely handbook. It is important because it provides for the first time a concise over-all picture of the infant organization known as the United Nations. It is timely because in giving the basic facts concerning the U.N. in an objective and simple and informal interpretation of aims, methods and component parts, it provides a frame of reference by which to understand and follow the oftentimes confusing axe-wielding of this youngster feeling out his strength." Claire Danziger

+ Book Week p9 O 27 '46 270w

Booklist 43:7 S '46

Reviewed by H. S. Hayward

Christian Science Monitor p12 O 22 '46 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '46

Commonweal 45:150 N 22 '46 40w

Current Hist 11:511 D '46 100w

Foreign Affairs 25:334 Ja '47 60w

"The United Nations is a timely book in spite of its publication date. . . It is the great merit of Dolivet's book that it substitutes a real and working United Nations, with living personnel and actual tasks, for the experimental abstraction and that it reaffirms in specific and convincing language both the ideal and the practical character of the enterprise. . . It is because he attacks the whole question from that point of view—from the point of view of the United Nations in action—that Dolivet's book is so valuable. It will certainly be widely used. It is comprehensive, exact and readable." Archibald MacLeish

+ New Repub 115:597 N 4 '46 1100w

"Mr. Dolivet's handbook could not have been better timed. . . The author ranges himself definitely on the side of the angels, as may be gathered from the fact that his book has been endorsed, not only by Secretary General Lie, but by the American, Australian, British, Chinese, French and Soviet delegates to the United Nations. . . Nevertheless, he is by no means an official apologist for the present order of things." T. J. Hamilton

+ N Y Times p30 O 13 '46 800w

School & Society 64:208 S 21 '46 40w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

Weekly Book Review p16 O 20 '46 550w

DOLSON, HILDEGARDE. We shook the family tree [il. by Robert Day]. 199p $2.50 Random house

818

46-3971

Memories of the author's youth, when she and her family lived in a small Pennsylvania town. The last chapters describe her experiences in her first jobs in New York.

Booklist 42:313 Je 1 '46

"Anecdotal, with much of it stock childhood and adolescent experience—but written in the zippy, humorous, light-hearted manner of Our Hearts Were Young and Gay."

Kirkus 14:62 F 1 '46 140w

"Should be popular except with readers who may be surfeited by the school which has provided Life with Father, My Sister Eileen and the rest of the family histories. Recommended for public libraries." Barbara Overton

Library J 71:666 My 1 '46 50w

"Unmitigated cheerfulness is the hallmark of this tidy little accumulation of Dear-Family items. So now that you're forewarned, don't blame anyone but yourself if it tends to pall." B. V. W.

N Y Times p19 J1 14 '46 270w

Reviewed by George Panetta

Sat R of Lit 29:38 Je 29 '46 900w

"On the road to reminiscence, overflowing with traffic like all other highways, the elderly and even the middle-aged no longer have the right of way. What was once a winding, shaded turnpike for those who had the literary urge to jog backward in memory has now become an express highway along which the younger generation rolls blithely, catching impressions of its past in a rear-vision mirror. Hildegarde Dolson is a happy example of this ambidextrous facility; her book is autobiography on wheels. . . The final chapters relate her adventures in New York, and although they are diverting and engagingly enthusiastic, they have a whiff of artifice." Lisle Bell

+ — Weekly Book Review p16 Je 2 '46 350w

Wis Lib Bul 42:128 O '46

DONER, MARY FRANCES (MRS C. L. PAY-ZANT). Blue river. 274p $2.50 Doubleday

46-4734

The scene of this novel is northern Michigan; the time the 1920's. The heroine is a talented musician, tied to a once-brilliant father, who had tried to drown the tragedy of his life with too much drink. The man she married was a wealthy automobile manufacturer, and the course of their happy life was disrupted for a time by a particularly venomous sister-in-law.

Reviewed by J. A. Cook

Book Week p7 J1 7 '46 230w

Kirkus 14:157 Ap 1 '46 140w

"Plot is commonplace. Average novel which will appeal to readers of light fiction who demand a happy ending." H. P. Bolman

Library J 71:824 Je 1 '46 80w

"Mary Frances Doner, wisely enough, is never stingy about plot. . . Her latest book is no exception. . . A tale of 'tangled destinies' handled somewhat in the manner of the radio soap operas, it tells the story of a brave little girl in a world full of obstacles." Anne Richards

N Y Times p15 J1 7 '46 270w

Reviewed by Grace Frank

Sat R of Lit 29:24 Ag 24 '46 230w

Reviewed by P. H. Bickerton

Spring'd Republican p4d J1 28 '46 360w

DONER, MARY FRANCES—Continued

"The story takes place in the Great Lakes country and is told with a smoothness and ease that seem like a reproach to the stuttering prose of so many contemporaries. Miss Doner is especially deft in her handling of scenes of personal frustration and unhappiness, and at times she makes the wife's plight poignantly moving." Stephen Stepanchew

+ Weekly Book Review p10 Je 16 '46
350w

DONN, WILLIAM L. Meteorology, with marine applications. 465p il maps $4.50 McGraw

551.5 Meteorology 46-4783

"In a simple and readable style this text presents a general study of weather changes and their causes, and relates such information to the problems of seamanship and navigation. The purpose of the book is to provide meteorological training for the merchant marine officer. It includes such material as will enable him to take accurate weather observations, code and transmit the data to the Weather Bureau, and make for himself local short-period weather predictions. . . . The author was formerly Head of the Meteorology section at the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:980 J1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:27 Ap '46

"More than most of us, the mariner is dependent on weather, and it is as a textbook for deck officers that 'Meteorology With Marine Applications' is primarily intended. However, the basic facts are similar whether on land or sea, and the book will serve any one seriously interested as a fine introduction to modern concepts and the way they help to understand the weather." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p31 O 6 '46 50w

DONOHUE, JAMES JOHN. Exile in the stars; a book of hours for the first Sunday in Advent. 56p $1.50 Macmillan

811 45-10292

"A group of lyrics paraphrasing and interpreting poetically the Divine Office for the First Sunday of Advent. Its matter concerns the creation, the fall and the promise of redemption, and . . . its various parts are lyrically developed in the form of sonnets, hymns and the versification of prayers." Cath World

"The book as a whole forms a dramatic unity rising to a climax beautifully sustained from sexte through compline." F. X. Connolly

+ Cath World 163:90 Ap '46 40w

"This is an unusual type of book to be published with ecclesiastical sanction, and one full of beauty and suggestion."

+ Christian Century 63:82 Ja 16 '46 70w

"Father Donohue's work is a remarkable achievement in literature. Its conception, development, and conclusion are unified and strengthened by the haunting refrains of the antiphons, versicles, and responses." Sr. M. Marguerite, R.S.M.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:24 J1 13 '46 500w

DONOVAN, FRANK PIERCE, and HENRY, ROBERT SELPH, eds. Headlights and markers; an anthology of railroad stories. 406p $2.75 Creative age

Short stories—Collections 46-806

Contents: The yellow mail story, by F. H. Spearman; The roadmaster's story, by F. H. Spearman; A little action, by Harold Titus; The stolen railroad train, by Marquis James; An engineer's Christmas story, by J. A. Hill; Run to seed, by T. N. Page; The night operator, by F. L. Packard; A ghost train illusion, by Cy Warman; The angel of Canyon pass, by C. W. Tyler; Huey, the engineer, by Jesse Stuart; The berth of hope, by O. R. Cohen; Mrs. Union Station, by Doug Welch; Remarks: none, by W. W. Haines; Wide-open throttle, by A. W. Somerville; Counterbalance, by A. W.

Somerville; Smart boomer, by Harry Bedwell; Priority special, by Harry Bedwell.

Reviewed by R. E. M. Whitaker

Book Week p4 F 17 '46 650w

Booklist 42:282 My 1 '46

"Readers of 'Headlights and Markers' will agree that the editors have been successful. The stories are packed with action, adventure, and heroism. . . . Some of the stories are incredible, of course, but they make good reading for any evening. While railroad jargon is used freely, it is not necessary to understand it to go along with the theme of the stories." L. F. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 F 1 '46
300w

Wis Lib Bul 42:46 Mr '46

DOOLEY, ROGER BURKE. Less than the angels. 261p $2.75 Bruce pub.

46-7726

Story of a Catholic family, dominated by the mother, Caroline Straubmeyer Murray, who tries to satisfy her social ambitions by forcing her reluctant husband into local politics.

Book Week p4 D 1 '46 140w

Kirkus 14:547 N 1 '46 170w

N Y Times p22 N 17 '46 230w

DOOLITTLE, HILDA (H. D.) Flowering of the rod. 50p pa $2 (3s 6d) Oxford

811 47-591

The third poem of a trilogy, the earlier parts of which were The Walls Do Not Fall, and Tribute to the Angels. In this is recounted the dream of Kaspar, who brought the offering of myrrh to the Christ child. "It is a legend of resurrection and regeneration, which takes the fragrant, flowering rod as its symbol of hope and survival." (N Y Times)

"Her delicate skill in the precise, Hellenic presentation of image is strikingly displayed throughout this long symbolic work, and after the visual clarity, the psychological insight and the subtle rhythms of the parts the transcendental quality of the sum is all the more potent." I. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 23 '46 70w

"The telling is simple, colloquial and staccato, but rich in suggestion withal." Milton Crane

+ N Y Times p46 D 1 '46 290w

New Yorker 22:147 D 14 '46 40w

"Almost the whole poem is written in couplets. It is very uneven; sometimes so vague that the reader cannot find the drift of the thought among the words; sometimes so simply and straightforwardly prosaic that the short lines cut across the sense. It seems as if H.D. is too rigidly conforming to her own style to express everything, instead of allowing the form to change with her mood. But the reader is always aware of the writer's intense emotion, though not always able to share it."

Times [London] Lit Sup p357 J1 27 '46
400w

DORFMAN, JOSEPH. Economic mind in American civilization, 1606-1865. 2v $7.50 Viking

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—

Economic policy 45-11318

"A monumental study of economic thinking and writing in the United States from 1606 to 1865. Many of our pioneer economists were erudite and urbane men of affairs who tossed off theories in their spare time. With a few notable exceptions, their thinking was dominated by their working-hour interest in world commerce. They signed their pamphlets 'Workingman' and 'Mechanic' and the like, but they confined their arguments to matters within the cozy bounds of mercantilism. This scholarly index shows how their ideas developed and how more valid notions about economic problems came into favor." (New Yorker) Bibliographical notes. Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Barker

Am Hist R 52:140 O '46 950w

"The Economic Mind in American Civilization provides political scientists for the first time with a thoroughgoing review of economic thought in many of the areas with which they are most concerned in contemporary governmental organization and policy. More than fifty-five pages of bibliography and twenty-five pages of index attest the range and quality of Mr. Dorfman's scholarship. They will long remain a major source for further exploration. The only major criticism of this unusually scholarly work has to do with the nature of its presentation. Although there are several brilliant and incisive summary chapters, in which Mr. Dorfman appraises the context of the ideas he presents from the sources, the very wealth of materials he includes sometimes obstructs the flow of the narrative, even of the record itself. There is less synthesis by the author than one would wish to have; it would have been interesting to have more of the author's own estimates of the value and validity of the ideas he traces. This reticence does not detract from the substantial debt we owe Mr. Dorfman for his definitive study; its completion will be eagerly awaited." Phillips Bradley

Am Pol Sci R 40:794 Ag '46 850w

"Professor Dorfman's volumes will prove a mine to students for many years. . . [He] deserves the thanks of all social scientists for the fruitful results of his long labors." A. H. Cole

+ Ann Am Acad 245:207 My '46 1300w

"This brilliant study underscores again America's greatest wonder—that somehow democracy has been able to push through the mercantile and industrial mold to establish itself in a land which was founded apparently on the cupidity of adventurers, dedicated to the exploitation of the Indians and reared on the gutting of a continent. No more frightful story has ever been told than this recital of the aims and desires of the founding fathers. Dorfman writes in no muckraking mood. Indeed the book is urbane in tone, as brilliant in style as a compendium of economic thought can be, as understanding of the motives of the entrepreneurs as could be wished. But it is a sordid tale nevertheless, dealing in the main with the buttery justifications of the well-fed over the evils that befall the ill-fed." Harvey O'Connor

+ Book Week p9 F 3 '46 1000w

Reviewed by L. J. Gordon

Christian Century 63:918 J1 24 '46 1000w

"From the standpoint of scope and scholarship, the Columbia professor of economics has produced a work that rivals Parrington's and Beard's studies in this field. These volumes, it is suggested, may serve as an antidote to those earlier writers who have come to be regarded generally as the leading proponents of a school which interprets American history primarily in terms of economic motives. Dr. Dorfman's study follows a narrower path. It lacks the fine literary sweep which characterized Parrington's readable brand of economic determination. Rather, Dr. Dorfman's research in the realm of America's economic mind is valuable for its impartiality." Harlan Trott

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 24 '46 650w

"Scholarly circles will welcome this definitive monumental work on our national history as seen through the pattern of economic thought."

+ Kirkus 13:484 N 1 '45 270w

Reviewed by Oscar Handlin

New Eng Q 19:261 Je '46 850w

"Joseph Dorfman's monumental new work can hardly be evaluated in detail, since it is improbable that any student other than its author has so thorough a knowledge of the sources from which it was compiled. Nor is anyone else likely to duplicate his achievement, because the need for a summary of American economic thinking through the Civil War is here abundantly satisfied. To say this is to say that here is a book which henceforth will have a unique place in libraries of American history and economics. . . A few comments should be made about the plan of Mr. Dorfman's book. It is confined rather exclusively to abstracts of what people wrote; it is not a political or an economic history, but essentially a bibliography. Therefore the bearing of much of its contents does not clearly appear without prior knowledge of what was actually happening. . . This is scarcely a criticism, since if the author had fully described the political and economic setting of his material, his book would have been far more bulky even than it is. Yet one wonders whether it is possible to write a readable history of economic thought, as one might write a history of the physical sciences or philosophy, without far more interpretation and more classification according to school and subject than Mr. Dorfman has employed." George Soule

+ New Repub 114:352 Mr 11 '46 1800w

"Not the least of Mr. Dorfman's contributions to American history is his rescue from oblivion of a number of men of varying talents. Of these the most important is Jacob Newton Cardozo, self-taught editor of Charleston, S.C., and ancestor of the distinguished jurist of the same name. Mr. Dorfman gives new emphases to his presentation of many familiar figures. . . The volumes blaze a new trail. They make available a vast amount of material pertinent to an understanding of American civilization. They are not easy reading. There are times when the multiplicity of pros and cons and the turns and twists of the arguments concerning a great economic issue threaten to bog down the reader. But these defects spring more from the materials than from lack of skill on the part of the author. Mr. Dorfman dedicates his volumes 'To the Pioneering Spirit of Thorstein Veblen.' Veblen would have liked this book." R. H. Gabriel

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 13 '46 2500w

"An important addition to the shelves of economic literature, and comforting proof that economists have made a lot of progress in the last couple of centuries."

+ New Yorker 21:86 Ja 26 '46 130w

Reviewed by P. M. O'Leary

Sat R of Lit 29:10 Mr 9 '46 1200w

Sat R of Lit 29:6 My 11 '46 1500w

"Mr. Dorfman has produced an invaluable record of the continuing pre-occupation of American writers with economic questions, which must supplement any economic history, but he has neglected to give us an interpretation such as we find in Parrington and Beard. By summarizing books individually, he has left it to us to trace a vital idea through the years. If in his later volumes he should present his own independent reflections, it would give greater value to a distinguished effort in economic history." Harry Hansen

+ Survey G 35:87 Mr '46 1350w

"Once in a decade or so, there appears a work which not only illumines its terrain but stimulates new directions of inquiry and new appraisals of events. Such a work is The Economic Mind in American Civilization."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:105 Je '46 310w

"Mr. Dorfman is already at work on [the] later story, and his publishers promise an early printing of subsequent volumes. When finished, his history will be one of the truly impressive works of American learning. The breadth and the depth of these first two volumes clearly prove Mr. Dorfman's claim to our serious attention as an economics scholar and a social philosopher." L. M. Hacker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ja 20 '46 2250w

Wis Lib Bul 42:57 Ap '46

"A thoughtful and provocative analysis of materials which should lead to more searching histories, and a better understanding of the process of making public policy in the United States." E. V. Rostow

+ Yale R n s 36:159 autumn '46 1400w

DORSON, RICHARD MERCER. Jonathan draws the long bow. 274p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

398.2 Folklore—New England A46-4126

"Much has been done to collect folk song in New England but surprisingly little effort has been made to collect the New England folk tale. Richard M. Dorson is now here both to call our attention to the omission and in part to remedy it. From the riches of New England's printed sources, from her newspapers, magazines, almanacs, and town histories, Mr. Dorson has made a rich haul. He begins with a chapter on New England storytelling, describing the conditions that bred this chimney corner pastime into an art. Then he proceeds to give us samples of supernatural stories, Yankee yarns, tall tales, and local legends." Christian Science Monitor

DORSON, R. M.—Continued

"This is a proliferative book which deserves a better typographical form than the Harvard University Press has given it. Students of the American language and literature may read it with profit. Mr. Dorson has apparently searched the fields in thoroughgoing fashion, he has ideas, but he writes a craggy style: some of his sentences are crooked and hard to read. As he deals only with the folk tale in print, he leaves open, both for himself and others, the whole field of collection of New England folk tale from oral sources." Horace Reynolds

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 J1 25 '46 500w

"Recommended for large libraries and wherever interest in folklore warrants." E. L. Lewis

Library J 71:976 J1 '46 140w

Reviewed by Donald Moffat

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 4 '46 950w

Reviewed by Jane Volles

San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 29 '46 300w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 18 '46 250w

"Jonathan Draws The Long Bow should make a useful reference tool in the field of regional American folklore."

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:280 D '46 260w

"Mr. Dorson has made a bang-up and most readable job of what, in more academic hands, might well have resulted in a dreary exercise in citations and professorial humorous asides." S. H. Holbrook

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ag 4 '46 1000w

DOS PASSOS, JOHN RODERIGO. Tour of duty; decorations by Howard Baer. 336p $3 Houghton

940.548173 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 46-5929

"Wanderings of Dos Passos among men who listened to the call of Mars. His portrayal of scenes in various theaters of war is a connected recital, but the book is a series of short graphic cameos covering the period from late December 1944 to December 1945." Library J

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p2 Ag 25 '46 900w

Booklist 43:13 S '46

Cath World 164:188 N '46 200w

"'Tour of Duty' is among the better books recording scenes of war from on-the-spot vantage points. But, like yesterday's news, it is largely out-of-date. . . Part three, his report on Americans as administrators in Germany, is more abreast of today's problems. The situation may not be as grim in Germany as Mr. Dos Passos' scenes imply. But his report coincides with other criticisms of Americans abroad since the days of victory." R. S.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 Ag 31 '46 480w

"A good deal of the fire has gone out of him. And yet, as he reveals himself in his latest book, he is still a first-rate craftsman and a remarkably honest, humble and appealing figure. He may have been slowed up by time and the multiple quicksands of success, but there is little wrong with either his head or his heart." J. C. Cort

+ Commonweal 44:556 S 20 '46 700w

Foreign Affairs 25:340 Ja '47 40w

Kirkus 14:289 Je 15 '46 180w

"While this is another reporter's description of the war, it does have the redeeming feature of good style. With prose that borders on fiction at times, Dos Passos holds the reader's attention to the very last." W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 71:976 J1 '46 140w

Reviewed by McAllister Coleman

Nation 164:80 Ja 18 '47 280w

"The blurb writer insists that the author 'is not presenting a personal point of view' in this account of his wartime travels and that 'he preaches no sermons.' In the chapters dealing with the Pacific bases and the Philippines, this is entirely correct. . . John Dos Passos is a keen and sensitive observer and there has been no finer account of the wartime spirit of a citizen soldiery than that offered by these two parts of his report. Once the traveler has moved on to Europe, though, the entire atmosphere changes. . . Dos Passos writes just as sensitively, just as eloquently as he did when contemplating combat in the Pacific, and the air of disillusioned sadness adds a new and moving quality to what he has to say. His reporting, too, remains as skillful as ever, and in this respect all his work stands high. . . Nevertheless, something new and chilling has been added. The Russians have arrived." Richard Watts

+ — New Repub 115:267 S 2 '46 900w

"One may question the hastiness of Dos Passos' impressions, the absence of any sort of documentation, but his focus is sharp and the meaning plain: our two wars have not yet created one world." David Dempsey

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 25 '46 1550w

"It is true often of the most vivid reporting that it is at the same time over-dramatized and critically superficial. 'Tour of Duty' is neither. Never pitched in a high key, it unveils a varied panorama with a readiness of literary expression and a gift for taking in at once all the elements of the passing picture that are amazing in a journalistic survey of the kind that is likely to involve hasty writing and perfunctory description. Dos Passos' handling, for example, of that new order of sensations and perceptions . . . seems to me more brilliant than anything else that I have yet seen attempted in this line; and his chronicle of precipitous happenings . . . has been set down with fullness and coolness that one would expect to find only in a novel that had been pieced together at leisure." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 22:66 Ag 24 '46 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 22 '46 650w

"Mr. Dos Passos's book is a sum more significant than all the flights, voyages, or train trips he made, more important even than his vivid descriptions of any of the places he visited or any of the people he chanced to see. It seems certain that his tour must have been shaped by the same sort of plans and chances which patterned the travels of other correspondents who went out to report the war. . . Yet his report seems not merely one man's diary but a whole vivid and penetrating picture of the human meaning of the war." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 29:6 Ag 3 '46 950w

Reviewed by Cord Meyer

Weekly Book Review p2 S 1 '46 1350w

Wis Lib Bul 42:148 N '46

DOUGLAS, ROBERT LANGTON. Piero di Cosimo. 142p 87pl $5 Univ. of Chicago press [27s 6d Cambridge]

B or 92 Piero di Cosimo

A46-1189

"In this study of the life and works of Piero di Cosimo the author attempts to amend critical opinion of the Florentine renaissance painter. He recognizes the artist's copyings from other painters but attributes to him genuine contributions and innovations in technique and composition. For large or special libraries. Bibliography: p.131-136." Booklist

Booklist 42:298 My 15 '46

"This brilliant monograph by the author of Leonardo da Vinci: His Life and His Pictures, is a revelation of the power of creative criticism to evoke an artist from his tomb and restore to him the validity and value of his work, as well as the high honors of his lifetime. Mr. Douglas's thorough scholarship combined with his aesthetic intuition places the singular genius of Piero di Cosimo in a novel perspective—that of a highly original and not a derivative artist." A. M. Sholl

+ Cath World 164:91 O '46 550w

Reviewed by Christopher Fremantle

+ Commonweal 44:364 J1 26 '46 200w

"Piero di Cosimo deserves a full and thoughtful study, and this Mr. Douglas has given him. In the realm of criticism and analysis, in the field of identification and appraisal, this is a work not lightly to be challenged, nor could the eighty-seven plates with which it is illustrated be well improved upon except by adding one or two in color. But Piero di Cosimo wants another kind of treatment also, and this is lacking. Still wanted is a modern Walter Pater, who will not stop to prove that the Florentine artist did this painting or could not possibly have done that other one, but will write of him in a glowing spiritual comprehension in a prose that is the equal of his oils." T. C. Chubb

N Y Times p26 Ag 11 '46 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p592 N 30 '46 850w

"The author has not spared himself for thoroughness and he brings to his subject a seasoned familiarity with the history of the times. . . The chapters have the air of separate essays arranged in sequence; the method requires reiteration, from which the author does not shrink in his determination to be complete. . . It must now be remarked that Mr. Douglas asks more for charity than he gives. . . In dealing with a man of genius there is no last word, and to reach for it at the risk of heavy-handedness is a mistake." Frederick Wight

Weekly Book Review p12 J1 7 '46 900w

DOUGLAS-IRVINE, HELEN. Torchlight procession. 217p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Longmans]

46-3289

Chronicle of a titled Scottish family in the middle of the last century. The stage is set at a rather dull dinner, given on the night of the traditional torchlight procession at St Andrew's school. The story is of two of the middle-aged guests, who long ago had been engaged. Their broken engagement gave rise to other events. The night of the torchlight procession all the scattered events are traced to their conclusions.

— Book Week p4 Ap 14 '46 140w

"This has a quiet awareness and attraction, a certain faint fragility, which will recommend it to discerning readers."

+ Kirkus 14:130 Mr 15 '46 150w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 D 14 '45 60w

"Simon Hepburn—who, in résumé, sounds like a crude worshiper of Success—is actually a complex and, in many respects, admirable human being. Despite some theatrical rattling of Hepburn family skeletons, the author's examination of the shattering effect of one 'small' incident on a half-dozen lives is done with restraint and compact, cameo-like perfection. Here, classically restated, is the age-old violation of the Romantic ideal. It happens every generation, in Edinburgh as in Eden." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p41 Ap 7 '46 270w

"Miss Irvine fills in her background with ease and assurance—the Edinburgh of claret and legal dinner-parties, the Review and the New Town—but she does not obtrude her knowledge, and attention is always focused on the characters for whom these things are the conditions of their daily life and not historical colour. And by enclosing the novel in a Prologue and Epilogue, which shows the characters thirty years after, Miss Irvine has added pathos and depth to a quiet, attractive story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p617 D 29 '45 270w

"This engaging story is told against a background of the 1840s in Scotland, and it is greatly to Miss Irvine's credit that she does not bog down in a superfluity of historical reference. Carefully eliminating all but relevant historical data, retaining just enough to give her readers a flavor of the time she describes, she concentrates on the human and universal essentials of Simon Hepburn's flawed success story." Stephen Stephanev

+ Weekly Book Review p14 Ap 14 '46 500w

DOUKAS, KIMON APOSTOLUS. French railroads and the state. 287p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

385 Railroads—France

A46-786

"In [this work] an attempt is made to present the story of the relationship of the French railroads to the state. This central theme touches, while it can hardly exhaust, many aspects of railroads: how they were built and how they were managed; what contribution they made to the national economy of France and what part they played in her national defense; to what extent private capital kept them running and how often treasury funds came to their rescue; what public controls were applied to supervise the privately owned and operated lines and what functional devices were invented to administer those owned by the state; and, finally, what compelling factors brought about their so-called 'nationalization.'" (Intro) Bibliography. Index.

"It seems to the reviewer largely a summary in English of French governmental policies, decrees, and regulations, and of railroad accounting. All this is of interest to legal historians, and, possibly, to economists and political scientists, but hardly to economic historians. So many details, mostly legal and financial, are given that the reader cannot find the synthesis announced in the introduction." A. L. Dunham

Am Hist R 51:754 J1 '46 240w

"While Doukas' courageous attempt may be admired, and while he has given us the first treatise in English on the general subject, the work is scarcely definitive—even though the assistance of almost a round dozen of Columbia professors is mentioned gratefully in the 'Acknowledgements.' Perhaps the study can be labeled 'exploratory.' Perhaps it can more appropriately be labeled 'narrative,' for it falls more easily into the latter category than into that of a penetrative analytical investigation under its own title. A person whom the reviewer would consider not unreasonable might suggest that 122 years of French railroads and the state is a subject much too complicated for treatment in 272 pages of text. Doukas has staked out a claim in a subject of comparative government toward which the brethren of our profession are singularly shy. But he has not yet 'come up with the gold.'" J. G. Heinberg

Am Pol Sci R 40:823 Ag '46 280w

"The author has handled an extremely complex subject very capably. . . The chief fault of the book is possibly a merit—namely, that a mass of statistical information is interspersed throughout the study, which, while necessary for accurate reporting, presents a very formidable obstacle to all except the few who may have a very special interest in the subject. . . The study is well documented and contains a bibliography, which, however, omits some French sources available in this country as well as several articles on the subject which have appeared in American journals." H. E. Dougall

+ Ann Am Acad 246:164 J1 '46 320w

Current Hist 10:351 Ap '46 100w

Foreign Affairs 24:750 J1 '46 20w

Spring'd Republican p4d J1 7 '46 120w

"The work is unique in its presentation of a vast field in such a compact form in English. It should be highly useful to the student of economic history and of modern France."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:200 S '46 120w

DOWDEY, CLIFFORD. Experiment in rebellion. 455p $3.75 Doubleday

973.7 Confederate States of America. Davis, Jefferson 46-8113

History of the fall of the Confederacy, which begins just before secession, and describes the period up to the fall of Richmond. The city itself is the heroine of the account, and Davis and the other Southern leaders are studied exhaustively. The author is a native of Virginia, and has written several historical novels Bibliography. Index.

"This unusual book is highly readable, thoughtful, speculative, and always vivid. Many will wish that Mr. Dowdey had expanded it to the multi-volumed scope of Freeman's Lee's Lieutenants—and this reviewer is among those many." Bruce Lancaster

+ Atlantic 179:110 Ja '47 480w

"Open to question are Dowdey's interpretations of various battles. In addition, to say that the prewar North deluged the South with incendiary literature urging the slave to murderous insurrection is to repeat an old untrue piece of propaganda. 'Experiment in Rebellion' is a book to be read judiciously. It will please unreservedly the nostalgic and unreconstructed, but it might well be balanced for other readers by Lewis, Bills, Freeman, Henry, Thomason, Pratt, Hendrick and others." R. B. Nye

+ — Book Week p3 D 29 '46 450w

Booklist 43:152 Ja 15 '47

"Colorfully written, full of vivid and incisive portraits, romanticized perhaps in spots, seemingly well-documented, this is primarily a book for students of the period, for libraries, for serious readers."

+ Kirkus 14:477 S 15 '46 170w

"Mr. Dowdey exhibits a capacity for comprehending, digesting, and even facing what might be called revisionist interpretations, and has thus been enabled to write a popular summary of this scholarship that can safely be recommended to that coddled creature, the general reader. . . . Disproportion is a fault of this book: it is difficult to say just what it is designed to be. In spite of its breadth, it is not a history of the Confederacy (her States and people, for example), for it scarcely gets out of Richmond; and the Congress receives scant attention. . . . Perhaps the lack of a clear purpose can be blamed partly for the faults of style which mar this book. There are all the signs of hasty writing, without enough planning or revision." W. B. Hamilton

+ — N Y Times p4 D 1 '46 1100w

Reviewed by S. L. A. Marshall

Sat R of Lit 29:42 D 7 '46 800w

"The good lady who wanted an 'unbiased' history of the Civil War 'from the Southern point of view' has had her wish granted. Clifford Dowdey has written just such a book. And be it said right in the beginning that he has done an excellent job. The good lady, however, will not be pleased. The work is far too unbiased for her taste. Nor will the orthodox historians like it any better. It is written entirely too much from the Southern point of view. . . . The real significance of Dowdey's book lies in the fact that he understands that there are, necessarily and rightly, two points of view in dealing with a civil war. . . . A fair picture requires an understanding of both points of view by a united nation which contains the once warring parts. In presenting an 'unbiased' story from the Southern point of view Clifford Dowdey has rendered a real service." Avery Craven

+ Weekly Book Review p5 D 1 '46 1600w

DOWNEY, FAIRFAX DAVIS. Army mule; II. by Paul Brown. 192p $2 Dodd

45-10641

Tale of adventure, the scene of which is Arizona in the 1870's. The real hero is an intelligent army mule, leader of one of the pack-trains which carried ammunition and food to the United States troops during the campaign against the Apaches.

Booklist 42:185 F 1 '46

"The great devotion of the clever mule for his courageous packmaster and their hair-raising experiences will provide interesting reading for all boys and girls who love adventure." Helen Brogan

+ Library J 71:123 Ja 15 '46 80w

"A lively, entertaining story."

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 13 '46 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p6 Mr 17 '46 150w

DRAKE, ROLLEN H. Aircraft woodwork. 197p il $3.50 Macmillan

629.1341 Airplanes--Design and construction. Woodwork 46-7739

"It can be expected that many of the small private planes that will be built within the next few years will be constructed of wood. This book is an elementary text on woods used in aircraft, woodworking operations in the manufacture of aircraft, and repairs to aircraft woodwork. Its chief use will probably be as a text in vocational training courses, but it contains information of value to aircraft mechanics, and also, to workers in wood-using industries other than aircraft. Considerable information of an elementary nature is presented on the molding of plywood. There is a six-page glossary of terms pertaining to aircraft woodwork." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1627 N 15 '46 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 31.35 Jl '46

DRAKE, ST CLAIR, and CAYTON, HORACE

R. Black metropolis: a study of Negro life in a northern city; with an introd. by Richard Wright. 809p maps $5 Harcourt

325 26 Negroes—Chicago 45-9257

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"Both as a community study and as a contribution to the study of the Negro problem this is an excellent book." A. M. Rose

+ Am J Soc 51:569 My '46 1150w

"Black Metropolis is a vigorous and definitive delineation of Negro life in a northern city." E. R. Moses

+ Ann Am Acad 244:186 Mr '46 500w

"It is a contribution to the scientific study of Negro-white relations and to a mature understanding of the pattern of life in a Negro urban community. Its wider meaning is equally unmistakable: it mercilessly poses the American dilemma—the contrast between the principles of democracy and the existence of the color-line." Benjamin Quarles

+ Social Educ 10:332 N '46 550w

Reviewed by E. F. Frazier

Social Forces 24:360 Mr '46 1100w

"Especially informative is the pioneer study of urban class stratification among Negroes; here are chapters of vital importance to social workers who need to understand Negro attitudes as well as Negro situations, and need further to learn to regard them as changing and subject primarily to environmental factors. Negroes, likewise, need to understand themselves more modernly and more objectively: to that, also, the volume can and should be contributory. In last analysis, however, such compendious evidence of growing maladjustment and mounting social and economic self-contradiction should provoke not further studies but explicit programs of reform and remedy." Alain Locke

+ — Survey G 35:26 Ja '46 500w

U S Quarterly BkI 2:55 Mr '46 400w

DRAPER, EDGAR MARIAN. Hawaiian schools. See American council on education

DRAPER, MRS MABEL (HOBSON). Though long the trail. 313p $3 Rinehart

B or 92 Hobson, Mary (Quinn). Frontier and pioneer life 46-5173

Account of pioneer life in the American west, covering the years from 1865 to about 1888. The story is that of the author's mother, who went with her family, over the Oregon trail from Illinois to California in the 1860's. A four-month's stop-over among the Mormons in Utah, on the way out is included. A return to the mid-west, life in rough mining towns, and home-steading in Kansas and New Mexico is part of the story.

"The theme of this book inevitably suggests comparison with two similar volumes, published in recent years—'No Life for a Lady' and 'The Bride Goes West.' In my opinion, 'Though Long the Trail' suffers by such comparison, both in literary quality and historical value as authentic pioneer woman narratives." E. S. Watson

Book Week p7 J1 21 '46 270w

Booklist 43:14 S '46

"Warm-hearted is the word for this book from beginning to end, from the kindly, generous, quick-acting Irish father to the pretty baby Elsie who grows up to marry a farmer, but determines never to go near a cow. The father comes to life in his quick decisions, his generosity, and his love of change." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 J1 19 '46 480w

"Natural in speech and thought, this graphic recital is sometimes touching, sometimes gay, always honest. Good Americana."

+ Kirkus 14:235 My 15 '46 170w

"Beauty of the book lies in its simple, intense style and in the courage and warm human relationships displayed. Recommended." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 71:976 J1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Hoffman Birney

N Y Times p14 Ag 18 '46 360w

"Mrs. Draper, having always heard her mother's story in the first person, passes it on that way, with the homely words and phrases that Mary might have used at the time of the experience and with her sparkle. The simplicity of the telling brings it home. You become a part of this valiant, warm-hearted and fun-loving clan. . . 'Though Long the Trail' is a spirited and endearing book, a home-spun epic that will be cherished and reread." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p4 J1 21 '46 1300w
Wis Lib Bul 42:129 O '46

DRAPER, THEODORE. The 84th infantry division in the battle of Germany, Nov. 1944-May 1945; maps and drawings by Walter H. Chapman; foreword by A. R. Rolling. 260p $5 Viking

940 542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. U.S. Army. 84th infantry division 46-19598

This minutely detailed account of the lives and achievements of the men of the 84th Division from November 1944 to May 1945, is based not only on official records but also on personal interviews with the men themselves, for the most part taken down within a few hours after their return from the front, sometimes during the actual course of fighting. Illustrations include many photographs, some drawings in color, and both large and small maps.

Booklist 43:33 O 1 '46

Current Hist 11:328 O '46 30w

Kirkus 14:94 F 15 '46 110w

"While written primarily for the men who made the story, the book is couched in good, simple English, devoid of military jargon. Topographically perfect, adequately mapped, splendidly illustrated, The Battle of Germany stands in the forefront of war books published to date." R. E. Dupuy

+ New Repub 115:298 S 9 '46 500w

"After a time one loses—in these pages—most of the feel of battle; the reader is anesthetized by repetition and comes to regard the regiments, the battalions, the companies and the platoons too much like puppets moving in an ordered death march across the same narrow stage. Despite these virtually unavoidable defects, Lieutenant Draper has written an account which will serve as a model for divisional histories." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p7 J1 28 '46 1300w

"The narrative is considerably helped by good photographs and drawings. This account of the fighting is very different from those of single-handed and personal exploits, for a whole division is the hero and the reader gets a comprehensive picture of the actions." + New Yorker 22:75 J1 20 '46 80w

"The 84th Infantry Division in the Battle of Germany will make fascinating reading for anyone who wants the vast scope and confusion of battle broken down into a common denominator—a division of 14,000 infantrymen and its supporting units. . . As always, there is the one complaint. Although Draper never lets you forget the price the division paid in casualties, and the hardships it suffered, nowhere does his record show that the division made any major mistakes. If this is true, the 84th was indeed unique. A true history of an outfit shows the mistakes as well as the honors." Jack Foisie

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 28 '46 850w

"The story of the Railsplitters, as the men of the 84th called themselves, has been so well and judiciously told by Lieutenant Theodore Draper, who was delegated to the task before the outfit got its first whiff of cordite, that the general reader who has never known shot or shell, will find it an excellent guide to the 'feel' of war—the fright and the fumbles when the going is tough and bitter and the danger is constant, the exhilaration when the enemy is on the run. Though he has had to burden his running account with frequent mention of units, this platoon, that company, this battalion, that regiment, Lieutenant Draper, even admiring a tree, still keeps the forest in view. . . This story of the Railsplitters has maps that are adequate and easy to understand. The color reproductions of paintings by Army artists add genuine flavor to the book, and the photographs, all the work of G. I. cameramen are excellent." Edward Angly

+ Weekly Book Review p4 Ag 11 '46 1200w

DREIFUSS, JEROME. Furlough from heaven. 254p $2.50 Crown

46-810

"Heaven had been running smoothly for a considerable span of eternity without benefit of fact-finding panels, special surveys or departments of research. . . Finally, in the year 1941, celestial top executives decided that a survey of the state of civilization on earth might come in handy, and the assignment was entrusted to Leonardo da Vinci and one Ernie Corbett, who was with the marines until he was shot down in Nicaragua in 1926. 'Furlough From Heaven' is an account of their adventures, a fantasy studded with some bitter truths coated in humor." Weekly Book Review

"Jerry Dreifuss has discovered a pleasing device for analyzing the paradoxical 'progress' of the past half millennium while telling a touching story of heart-warming simplicity. But his advice would have been even more effective if the author had known more about two things: (1) Leonardo and his interests; and (2) the modern world and its technology." Sterling North

Book Week p2 F 17 '46 600w

"The attempt to illuminate some current evils through the sudden descent of Leonardo is not carried out with the deftness and originality demanded by the theme. While the approach to the heavenly sphere is pleasantly suggestive, the earthbound sequences lose conviction as Leonardo becomes entangled in a series of routine misunderstandings, the usual solution of which seems to be the abundance of cash provided by his celestial guardians. Ernie's nostalgic visit to an old flame is the book's most effective episode; but it is a side excursion, incidental to the primary theme." F. W. Leary

N Y Times p14 F 24 '46 800w

DREIFUSS, JEROME—Continued

"A heavy-handed little fantasy, from which none of the obvious reactions of Leonardo are omitted."

— New Yorker 22:97 F 16 '46 60w

Reviewed by George Conrad

Weekly Book Review p12 F 10 '46 350w

DREIKURS, RUDOLF. Challenge of marriage.

271p $3 Duell

392.5 Marriage

46-8048

"A sane treatment emphasizing the psychological values involved and using the studies of Jung and Freud to sustain the theories expounded at length. Covers children as a factor in the relationship between husband and wife as thoroughly as any other feature. Emphasizes cooperation as a basis for harmony." (Library J) The author is professor of psychiatry at the Chicago Medical school. No index.

Kirkus 14:413 Ag 15 '46 200w

"Excellent as an all around treatment, and better as an introduction than many of the other texts on the same general topic. Good for all but the smallest libraries." M. C. Manley

+ Library J 71:1462 O 15 '46 100w

New Repub 115:701 N 25 '46 240w

Reviewed by Fern McGrath

San Francisco Chronicle p34 D 1 '46 70w

DREISER, THEODORE. The bulwark. 337p

$2.75 Doubleday

46-25076

This is the story of Solon Barnes, who was a stanch member of the Society of Friends and "a bulwark of the faith." It is also the story of his devoted wife, Benecia, and of his children, some of whom went their turbulent way in spite of their father's stern Quaker supervision of their lives, and eventually brought their parents to grief.

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan

Book Week p1 Mr 24 '46 1400w

Booklist 42:247 Ap 1 '46

"The book is largely lifeless; its drama undeveloped. It carries no conviction, for Dreiser was better at depicting revolt than affirmation. This is a book about Quakerism, but a far better picture of that faith emerges from Jessamyn West's far less pretentious and more eloquent book, 'The Friendly Persuasion.' Either the subject or the unfinished character of the book is responsible for an unanticipated variation from Dreiser's wonted elephantine prose. 'The Bulwark's' simplicity is the greatest strength of a weak book." Mason Wade

— + Commonweal 44:220 Je 14 '46 260w

"Without the prestige of the Dreiser name, this would be labelled a slow, stolid portrait of a man's life, set against the materialism of the modern world. As such it is worthwhile in its fidelity, its realism—but it seems a little dated."

Kirkus 14:21 Ja 15 '46 180w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 162:466 Ap 20 '46 3500w

Reviewed by George Mayberry

New Repub 114:449 Ap 1 '46 600w

"As it stands, 'The Bulwark' is a whole cycle of taste away from 'Sister Carrie.' That book was virtually suppressed by its publisher because of its shock to conventional morality. This new novel, if it had been by an unknown writer instead of by Dreiser, might conceivably not have found a publisher at all. That is not a reflection on its value, but on its lack of accord with current formulas. It also breaks with Dreiser's previous work in being a religious novel. We have had currently a recrudescence of best-selling novels of religiosity, embellished by slick and sentimental handling. But 'The Bulwark' is as bare as a parable." F. O. Matthiessen

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 24 '46 2250w

"As you read 'The Bulwark' you go through all the familiar experience of first groaning over the commonplace characters and the shoddy clichés of the style, then gradually finding yourself won by the candor and humanity of the author, then finally being moved by a powerful dramatic pathos which Dreiser has somehow built up. The people of 'The Bulwark,' when we start it, seem to be among the least promising that Dreiser has ever tackled. . . . Yet, even in its earlier and duller stretches, this is not one of Dreiser's most tedious books. He seems, by the time he wrote it, to have learned to cover ground more quickly. The language, too, is somewhat less oafish than it is in the worst of his work, and, here as elsewhere, the personal voice, the rhythm, carries off the vague and fumbling vocabulary." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 22:88 Mr 23 '46 1250w

"'The Bulwark' is a major novel, a substantial piece of work, well conceived and carefully executed, representing its author in his full creative power. If it may also be taken as a last will and testament, it presents an interesting biographical problem, for here is an answer in faith to the spiritual doubt of his best work. . . . The sacrifice of full character development is more than repaid in firmness of texture, a quality not so certain in Dreiser's work. This is the most solidly built of all his novels, in plot and ideology. The long pages of minutiae which stretch out the slim plots of his other works are here severely cut to essentials, and he is able to tell a much longer and more involved story than is usual with him in half the space. And the uncertainty of direction which spoiled 'The Genius' is no longer present." R. E. Spiller

+ Sat R of Lit 29:23 Mr 23 '46 1050w

Time 47:102 Mr 25 '46 700w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:89 Je '46 210w

"Dreiser's 'The Bulwark' lacks the energy and force that we associate with the writing of his Cowperwood novels and 'Sister Carrie'; but the book carries with it a lyrical overtone and unexpected charm that is inspired by the quotations from John Woolman's 'Journals.' And even the most critical (as well as the most thoughtless) reader of 'The Bulwark' cannot fail to be moved by the pathos of the scenes in which Solon Barnes faces his failure to live by the ethics of his faith. Here, as in his earlier novels, Dreiser is the great and critical biographer of that figure that was once called 'the American business man.'" Horace Gregory

+ Weekly Book Review p1 Mr 24 '46 1900w

Wis Lib Bul 42:87 Je '46

"Sincere, inept, mediocre, and superficial, The Bulwark has been sadly over-praised by those who are bemused by Dreiser's place in literary history as a pioneer of blunt realism. But judged solely on its own merits this book is much inferior to scores of current novels which are not seriously reviewed." Orville Prescott

— Yale R n s 35:767 summer '46 180w

DREPPERD, CARL WILLIAM. First reader for antique collectors. 274p il $3 Doubleday

749 Antiques

46-5627

A collector of much experience describes for the layman how to recognize antiques, or how to distinguish the genuine from the spurious. Includes not only furniture, but also pottery, glass, silverware, paintings and engravings, and children's toys. Glossary and index.

Booklist 43:50 O 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '46

Kirkus 14:61 F 1 '46 190w

"A good book is due on [the nineteenth century's] collectible artifacts, but you will not find it in Mr. Drepperd's 'First Reader.' You will find instead a deal of first-rate material, borrowed with proper credits, and rewritten; you will find many illustrations, amusing or helpful; misinformation interlarded with capricious opinions cast about glibly. . . . We are told that in preparing the book . . . a staff of researchers were used, and scientific sampling and analysis. . . In one section this approach has been most helpful to the antiques collector who wishes to know what stocks are available in the country's shops, and in what percentages items are to be found. This is an ingenious way of reconstructing the culture of a century by picking up scattered pieces and forming a general index of design thereon. It has been listed with care and praiseworthy thoroughness." W. G. Dooley

— + N Y Times p22 Ag 11 '46 700w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 8 '46 200w

"Expressly for the layman, but the expert also will find informative this logical guide-book on a fascinating business. . . The author writes, not without a touch of humor, for owners of old pieces as well as for dealers and fanciers, pointing out that by no means are all relics antiques." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 J1 19 '46 240w

Weekly Book Review p14 Ag 25 '46 140w

Wis Lib Bul 42 128 O '46

DRESSER, DAVIS (DON' DAVIS, BRETT HALLIDAY, pseud.). Blood on Biscayne bay. 213p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

46-22596

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoz

Book Week p15 N 3 '46 50w

Kirkus 14:504 O 1 '46 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 N 24 '46 120w

"The action is fast, but the solution is only so-so."

New Yorker 22:128 N 9 '46 80w

"Possibly the best of the fast-paced Shayne novels." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 O 27 '46 50w

Sat R of Lit 29:36 N 16 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p12 D 22 '46 150w

DREWRY, JOHN ELDRIDGE. Book reviewing. 231p $2.50 Writer

028.1 Books—Reviews. Literary criticism 46-247

Information for book reviewers. The book begins with a chapter on fundamentals, continues with two chapters entitled Background for reviewing, and The technique of reviewing. Then the author considers the various types of books to be reviewed: biography, history, contemporary thought, travel and adventure, fiction, and poetry, and gives samples of the work of some well-known book reviewers.

"Reader or reviewer, you should have this volume. It is first aid to an appreciation and evaluation of the writing art." F. N. Litten

+ Book Week p3 Ja 20 '46 300w

Booklist 42:177 F 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '46

"His book is logically arranged, clearly presented, but offers little that is not already obvious to book review readers. . . The effect of this extended comment on writing about writing is about what the average book-reviewer would expect—harmless enough, but not very conclusive." N. K. B.

+ N Y Times p38 Ap 14 '46 100w

Springf'd Republican p4d Ja 27 '46 300w

Weekly Book Review p34 My 19 '46 60w

DRISCOLL, CHARLES BENEDICT. Country Jake. 256p $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Irish in the U.S. 46-8481

The second in the author's trilogy about his early life on a farm near Wichita. The first book, Kansas Irish (Book Review Digest 1943) told about the author's father. This book carries the family fortunes up to the author's twentieth year.

Reviewed by Herman Kogan

Book Week p4 Ja 5 '47 250w

"As a whole 'Country Jake' flows along with apparent spontaneity and naturalness. An attractive book."

+ Commonweal 45:308 Ja 3 '47 100w

"The book is best when dealing with homey details or the boys' determination to escape; it is weakened by some rather pointless mystical interpolations, intended as commentaries on religion and philosophy. Except as a heartening story of two ambitious kids—and some comments on rural education—it is pretty dull going."

Kirkus 14:478 S 15 '46 120w

"Rural Kansas of the 90s, with its revival meetings, illiterate school boards and ignorant teachers holds little attraction for author. Yet book does not lack warmth and many readers will enjoy these people among whom Charlie Driscoll grew up." J. C. Shipman

Library J 71:1539 N 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by Mari Sandoz

N Y Times p10 D 29 '46 550w

"The reader is left with the feeling that the author's Gaelic temperament never lets facts stand in the way of telling a good story." Paul Corey

Weekly Book Review p22 N 24 '46 700w

DRUCKER, PETER FERDINAND. Concept of the corporation. 297p $3 Day

338.74 Corporations. General motors corporation 46-3477

"As consultant for General Motors, author prepared this book on big business, the fundamentals of industrial society and social and political problems involved. He says, 'Mass production is not a technique, but a basic concept of industrial organization.' He tells the growth, organization and policies of General Motors, advocating decentralization. One chapter is on 'Small Business Partners,' the problems of the automobile dealer. He believes that free enterprise, to succeed, must have full employment and this will contribute more than anything else to world peace." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by E. A. Beder

Canadian Forum 26:117 Ag '46 600w

Harvard Law R 60:171 N '46 320w

Library J 71:486 Ap 1 '46 130w

"The book is valuable for its exposition of some of the ways in which a corporation like General Motors goes at its problems. It will be acceptable to the prejudices of those who think that profits ought to be bigger, that unions have been making extravagant demands and that governmental planning for full employment is undesirable. While the author correctly identifies some of the more important obstacles to stability and expansion in a modern system of private enterprise, his remarks about these problems are chiefly in the realm of platitudes. There is no marshaling of fact and little keen analysis. Mr. Drucker's thesis may conceivably be true, but he has done little to prove it."

— + New Repub 114:844 Je 10 '46 180w

"The book is a highly suggestive study of the corporation and, as it treats that institution in terms of politics and sociology rather than economics and law, merits consideration as one of the first efforts of its kind."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:200 S '46 270w

"Mr. Drucker, it must be apparent, has not found the answers; but he has raised the problems and, because of this, we are in his debt. He has written a thoughtful book, with many brilliant flashes of insight, about one of our fundamental modern concerns." L. M. Hacker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 J1 7 '46 1900w

DU BOIS, JOHN HARRY, and PRIBBLE, WAYNE I. Plastics mold engineering. 494p il $7 Am. tech. soc.

668.4 Molds (for plastics) 46-1193

"Most complete book to date on the subject of plastics molding. Includes design of important types of molds and their use, construction methods and procedures, and specific molding processes. Raw materials are discussed, also equipment used in making the mold, finishing methods, mold sampling, maintenance and repair of molds and other techniques. Chapter on design and drafting practices. Many engineers contributed suggestions and data for use in preparation of the book. Tables, abbreviations and symbols. Many drawings and photographs." Library J

Booklist 42:222 Mr 15 '46

Chem & Eng N 24:2287 Ag 25 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:345 Mr 1 '46 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:11 Ja '46

"The book obviously should be valuable to students of plastics manufacture and to those in the business. Also, it should prove entertaining and informative to those with a passing or philosophical interest in materials and mechanical processes."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:256 S '46 180w

DU BOIS, MRS THEODORA (MCCORMICK). Murder strikes an atomic unit. 223p $2 Doubleday

Detective story. 46-3138

Booklist 42:300 My 15 '46

"Adequate—but not up to her best."

Kirkus 14:50 F 1 '46 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p30 Ap 7 '46 100w

"A deplorable plot which might well have been hatched by a subnormal child of ten. All very hasty indeed."

— New Yorker 22:96 Mr 30 '46 150w

"Rather helter-skelter affair"

Sat R of Lit 29:88 Ap 13 '46 40w

Reviewed by P. H. Bickerton

Springf'd Republican p4d Ap 21 '46 280w

"Anne tells the story smoothly enough while functioning as a member of the science group after her experience with a villain." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p33 Mr 31 '46 270w

DUGGAN, ANNE SCHLEY, and others. Conditioning exercises for girls and women. 116p il $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

371.73 Exercise. Woman—Health and hygiene 46-7524

"Exercises with illustrations, lesson plans, and suggestions for teachers. Music scores for 15 piano accompaniments. For use by instructors and groups rather than individuals." Booklist

Booklist 42:90 N 15 '45

Wis Lib Bul 42:17 Ja '46

DU JARDIN, MRS ROSAMOND (NEAL). Tomorrow will be fair. 253p $2 Macrae Smith co.

46-6025

Love story of a poor little rich girl who has longings for simpler ways of life, and finally succeeds in proving it to the right man.

Booklist 43:71 N 1 '46

Kirkus 14:281 Je 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p30 O 6 '46 100w

DULL, RAYMOND WILLIAM. Mathematical aids for engineers. 346p $4.50 McGraw

510 Mathematics. Motion 46-7558

"Book gives engineers basic mathematical tools and shows their application in many engineering fields. Covers every phase of mathematics from simple numeric computations through integration and summation. New equations for construction of types of alignment charts. Prominence is given to vector analysis and new methods to simplify solution of somewhat difficult engineering problems." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1332 O 1 '46 80w

"Others than engineers may also find it useful, either to gain acquaintance with these methods for the first time, or to refresh their memory of subjects partially forgotten." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p56 D 1 '46 80w

DULLES, CHARLES AVERY. Testimonial to grace. 121p $1.50 Sheed

B or 92 Roman Catholic church—Converts 46-8634

The author of this little book, the son of John Foster Dulles, became a Catholic in 1940 and entered the Jesuit novitiate of St Andrews on-the-Hudson after the war. This narrative account of the steps which led to his conversion "falls," he says, "chronologically, into two sections, devoted respectively to the search for sound philosophic values and to the scrutiny of religious doctrines."

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 164:277 D '46 470w

"'A Testimonial to Grace' has the ring of sincerity which is characteristic of such accounts. The style is a bit pedestrian, due perhaps to the author's evident shyness in discussing publicly what touches him deeply." L. J. Trese

+ Commonweal 45:100 N 8 '46 260w

"A brilliant son of a brilliant father, Avery Dulles, now a student for the priesthood, has given us a beautifully written and a soul-stirring account of his spiritual pilgrimage. . . For the America of today, this is a far more significant book than Newman's Apologia, for the reason that many more of our younger generation must start where Dulles started, from a bland and superficial materialistic atheism. For Catholic readers this book should be balm to the soul. But the book should be read widely by Protestants too, for it is a revelation of the sort of spiritual product which is coming out of many of our 'better' private schools and colleges which the Protestant Churches founded and now have abandoned to secularism."

+ Kirkus 14:552 N 1 '46 260w

DULLES, FOSTER RHEA. China and America; the story of their relations since 1784 277p $2.75 Princeton univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—China. China

—Foreign relations—U.S. Eastern question (Far East) A46-14

History of Chinese-American relations from 1784, when the first Yankee trader entered the harbor at Canton, to the end of World war II. The author contends that the key to our entire Far Eastern policy is our attitude toward Chinese affairs. Bibliography. Index.

"The study makes it abundantly clear that something more than good will is required if aggressive nations are to be kept under control. Our romantic views of China and the Chinese are rudely shocked by the present crisis in China, and the lack of understanding makes settlement the more difficult. By clarifying the situation, Mr. Dulles has put us all in his debt." A. E. Nuquist

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:1223 D '46 500w

"Professor Dulles has produced what now becomes the best available book for introducing the general reader and the undergraduate student to the subject it treats." R. A. Norem

+ Ann Am Acad 248:283 N '46 360w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Jl 7 '46 450w

Booklist 42:344 Jl 1 '46

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 63:1407 N 20 '46 490w

"An excellent history of Sino-American relations. Foster Rhea Dulles writes with the knowledge of a scholar and with a journalist's talent for telling a story. His achievement is not surprising, in view of his earlier works (notably 'The Road to Teheran') and in view of the fact that he literally is both a scholar and a journalist. Years ago he was a foreign correspondent in Peking and currently he is a professor of history at Ohio State University." Floyd Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p26 Je 7 '46 600w

"Lucid, intelligent and readable."

+ Foreign Affairs 25:164 O '46 40w

"It is a scholarly and competent job—but, to be frank, it is not very lively reading."

+ — Kirkus 14:93 F 15 '46 140w

"An excellent bibliography is appended. Scholarly in approach, but readable." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 71:755 My 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 115:52 Jl 15 '46 850w

"Mr. Dulles makes his points without bombarding his reader with detail from State Department archives, material that is the kiss of death for so many books of this sort. Most important, his writing has a pleasing timbre, a tone that suggests a sure instinct for justice." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p29 Je 9 '46 500w

"China and America is addressed not to the specialist but to a much wider public. The style is bright and the nontechnical reader will be reassured by the absence of footnotes. In reality this lack of documentation is regrettable since the study deserves a wide and serious reading by college and university students whose attention should be constantly directed to sources. The very brief bibliography, so far as it goes, is excellent, but it omits many significant titles." P. H. Clyde

+ — Pol Sci Q 61:627 D '46 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p558 N 16 '46 950w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:214 S '46 220w

"'China and America' has the same attractive qualities that distinguished 'The Road to Teheran.' Professor Dulles has a most unusual gift for brief, telling references to the significant things that were going on in China, in America and in other countries in order to explain the significant things that were going on between China and America. He does this with such skill that the main story is never slowed down. There are, of course, a few points on which Professor Dulles is open to challenge as to the accuracy of a statement or the validity of an opinion. To take only one example, I think it is a serious misreading of the situation at the time of the Marco Polo Bridge incident in 1937." Owen Lattimore

+ — Weekly Book Review p5 Je 2 '46 900w

DULLES, FOSTER RHEA. Twentieth century America. 582p $3.75 Reynal

973.91 U.S.—History—20th century 45-8081

"This breezy text, punctuated with pungent quotations, catch phrases, popular jingles, refrains from popular songs, extracts from advertisements, and touches of irony, is indicative of what is happening to American college education. The author wastes no time before plunging into the mad stream of the twentieth century. Three brief chapters summarize salient developments and events prior to 1900: social and economic conditions, the trust problem, the Spanish-American War and its results, the elections of 1896 and 1900, and the like. The story then continues on to the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt." (Am Hist R) Bibliography. Index.

"The author is successful in evaluating personalities; but the sectional aspects of legislation and foreign policy are slighted; at least they deserve more emphasis. The author does not pull his punches and does not attempt to ride two or more horses; he is on the side of liberalism and does not conceal his admiration for the New Deal and its author, to whose administration he allots more than two hundred pages." G. M. Stephenson

+ — Am Hist R 51:387 Ja '46 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46

"Mr. Dulles' book satisfies most of the requirements of both the general reader and the teacher in search of a textbook for the history of the United States since 1900. It is both readable and teachable. That it is written by one of the abler craftsmen in the historical profession lends added distinction to the volume. For the teacher the book has more merits than demerits. The organization, chronology, and emphasis follow the conventional pattern of the more recent general textbooks that cover the same period. A comparison of treatment reveals a richer coverage of social history and a more detailed discussion of other topics." C. C. Qualey

+ Social Educ 10:181 Ap '46 450w

"This book is likely to be most useful in high school and college classes concerned with recent American history and civilization. It will also appeal to libraries and organizations as a general reference work. Unfortunately, the highly selective bibliography is rather spotty, but on the other hand the index is helpfully detailed."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:43 Mr '46 260w

DUMAS, ALEXANDER GEORGE, and KEEN, MRS GRACE (GRAHAM). Psychiatric primer for the veteran's family and friends. 214p il $2 Univ. of Minn.

355.115 Veterans. Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc. Personality, Disorders of A46-567

Portrays the problems, both personal and occupational, of the returning service men. It takes up the normal, the physically disabled, the psychotic, and the neurotic, and gives advice and tells where help can be obtained. Suggestions for reading. Index.

"A most readable and helpful discussion of the ways we can aid in the necessary adjustment to civilian life of returning servicemen." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Mr 3 '46 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '46

"This practical book is written interestingly and well in language that can be easily understood by the veteran's family and friends. Descriptions of the various neuropsychiatric illnesses, while necessarily brief, are quite clear. . . [It] can be recommended not only to families of veterans but also to others who have mentally ill relatives." Morris Kleinerman

+ J Home Econ 38:529 O '46 250w

"Sound common sense and not too psychiatric."

+ Kirkus 13:416 S 15 '45 150w

"It is clear, instructive, and very elementary—perhaps too elementary in regard to psychiatric concepts. However, it truthfully declares itself a primer." B. L. Lewin

+ Sat R of Lit 24:49 Ap 20 '46 70w

"An especially good point is made of a more enlightened attitude of industry toward the handicapped than has been prevalent in the past: that industry's obligation toward the handicapped should be to use his assets to the fullest extent, to compensate him accordingly, and not to provide him with charity. It should be strictly a business proposition. There are few spots in this book that warrant specific criticism. There is some question as to whether the government is or should be as free, as is implied, in telling employers or any one else the diagnoses of veterans without the consent of the veteran himself." G. S. Stevenson, M.D.

+ — Survey 82:123 Ap '46 550w

DU MAURIER, ANGELA. Lawrence Vane. 274p $2.50 Doubleday

46-3290

Lawrence Vane, the heroine of this novel, is a celebrated concert pianist when, at the height of her career, an automobile accident paralyzes

DU MAURIER, ANGELA—Continued
her right hand and makes her blind. In this extremely a man whom she has known only thru correspondence, begun with a "fan" letter, offers her marriage and a home on a South Sea island where he and his forefathers have lived for generations. How and why this marriage was nearly wrecked is told in the story.

Kirkus 14:109 Mr 1 '46 170w

"Miss du Maurier has worked very hard, but not always successfully to make the story convincing." J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 12 '46 120w

"Angela Du Maurier has written a novel of burning love and fantastic melodrama. She tells it in the coolest way in the world. Flat British restraint doesn't whip up ardent sympathy for the lovers. What keeps the reader tense is watching for the next bombshell of melodrama to explode." Barbara Bond

N Y Times p12 My 5 '46 230w

"Miss du Maurier is a resourceful writer and a fluent one; she manages a complicated tangle of relationships with undeniable adroitness, but there is more than a trace of the mawkish in the composition. After a time your faith in the figures she has created begins to crumble; you look behind the fiction, suspecting a frame-up." Lisle Bell

— + Weekly Book Review p18 Ap 21 '46 360w

DU MAURIER, DAPHNE (MRS F. A. M. BROWNING). King's general. 371p $2.75 Doubleday

46-25004

Historical novel of Cornwall in the days of the parliamentary wars. The hero is Sir Richard Grenville; the heroine Honor Harris, who tells the story many years after the events took place. As a girl Honor was in love with the blustering Sir Richard, when an accident crippled her for life, only a few days before their marriage. The rest of the story is told as it seemed to the still beautiful cripple.

"The posturing, the hidden passages, the cold steel of jealous lovers are the old familiar effects of melodrama; yet here in The King's General the blend of fact and fiction is to me more brooding and plausible than in Frenchman's Creek; it is written pensively and accompanied by that feeling of loss which must today have been sharpened in any sensitive Englishwoman who surveys the present and remembers the past." Edward Weeks

Atlantic 177:151 F '46 650w

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Ja 6 '46 750w

Booklist 42:165 Ja 15 '46

Cath World 163:94 Ap '46 200w

"Somebody has blundered with regard to the King's General and it could have been the author. For this is primarily a motion picture, and only secondly a novel. Miss du Maurier seems to have sent it forth with her gaze firmly fixed upon Hollywood. It will be a gorgeous motion picture—all bright paper and shining tinsel, not too skillfully joined together in a sorry attempt to make literature. It is sensational and rather lurid; it is repetitious and none too convincing. Maybe some of the Royalist houses, like Menabily, were twice sacked by the Parliamentary forces; but it need not happen twice between the covers of a book. In short, this book will not add to the reputation of the author of 'Rebecca'. It is, quite shamelessly, designed for the screen." Margaret Williamson

— Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 5 '46 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '46

"Daphne du Maurier's formula of romantic melodrama in the cloak and sword tradition, spiced to the modern taste with hardboiled Hemingway characters serving as foils for her genteel if foolhardy heroines, remains the same. There is no doubt that the formula is to the popular taste, but repetition is making it somewhat wearisome, despite the gorgeous settings and trappings which positively demand technicolor. It is a pity that Miss du Maurier's real talents for the telling of tales, the creation of character, and the evocation of the colorful past of her beloved Cornwall should be devoted to essentially cheap and vulgar entertainments." Mason Wade

— Commonweal 43:460 F 15 '46 200w

"I liked this better than any novel Daphne Du Maurier has done—yes, I think even better than Rebecca though it is not likely to be as widely popular. Fascinating historical romance, set in the period of England's Civil Wars."

+ Kirkus 13:476 N 1 '45 300w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 5 '46 20w

"Though much of its melodrama is strangely muted, and though its protagonist seldom seems worthy of the attention he receives, it is a generally satisfactory portrait of that bitter twilight of feudalism known to history as the English civil war. . . . Some of her history comes brilliantly alive; all of it told with the practiced tempo of an old hand. But 'The King's General' is still, in essence, the story of a rather-too-perfect heroine who happens to be in love with a curiously juvenile sadist. Grenville may have been the product of his times, but Miss du Maurier has presented him in surface terms: his blustering egomania gets really windy before the reader can go the distance." C. V. Terry

+ — N Y Times p6 Ja 6 '46 700w

"I am no authority on the contemporary historical novel. I am happy to say, but I think that Miss du Maurier has more talent and feeling for it than any of her competitors I have read. She has a sharp sense of character . . . and she has the ability, despite her slipshod writing, to get the feel and temper of old houses, gardens, and rooms. Why, then, is nearly everything in her new book so wrong and exasperating? The wrongness, I think, is the same wrongness I have found in practically every modern historical novel that has come my way—the old, fallacious theory that the first duty of an author is to be interesting." Hamilton Basso

— + New Yorker 21:85 Ja 12 '46 1850w

"Essentially a piece of escapism, it is as carefully thought out and as neatly calculated to suit the post-war mood as anything on the market at the moment. By virtue of Miss du Maurier's patent enthusiasm for the antiquities of Cornwall, which often communicates itself to her writing, it even approaches a literary quality now and again. Always it is far more convincing and atmospheric than the other cloak-and-sword romances which have headed the best-seller lists of the past year. While it is never as tense and suspenseful as 'Rebecca', it is likely to rank as the author's best book since that great success. . . . Excellent as the author's performance is in this book, one cannot read it without a certain sense of regret. . . . Her people are alive only in a vivid fourth-dimensional unreality of their own." Theodore Purdy

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:9 Ja 12 '46 800w

"It is a story for the teen-age, or at least it is the sort of story that the teen-age liked to read long ago when I was in my teens. I do not know whether it will appeal to the fourteen-year-olds of nowadays, but it is carried along in fluent, swashbuckling style and has that ring of conviction that marks Miss du Maurier's work." Kate O'Brien

Spec 176:384 Ap 12 '46 90w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Spring'd Republican p4d Ja 20 '46 480w

Time 47:98 Ja 14 '46 550w

"The conventions of Miss du Maurier's tale have their undoubted uses, but her figures are pasteboard and in thought, sentiment and language represent little of the England of the Civil War."

Times [London] Lit Sup p161 Ap 6 '46 480w

"The first-person technique, one that Miss du Maurier has used before, is highly effective in setting the nostalgic mood of the tale. For those who like their romances laced with bloodshed, jealousies, secret chambers and love beyond reason, "The King's General" should make stirring reading." Rose Feld

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 6 '46 800w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 35:576 spring '46 140w

DU MAURIER, DAPHNE (MRS F. A. M. BROWNING). Years between; a play in two acts. 113p $2 Doubleday [3s 6d Gollancz]

822 [46-1371]

Text of a play first produced in England in 1944. It is based on the Enoch Arden theme, and the hero is a member of Parliament, supposedly lost in an airplane crash during the war. He returns to find his wife taking his seat in Parliament and there is also another man.

Booklist 43:115 D 15 '46

Kirkus 14:271 Je 1 '46 120w

"The Years Between" is smoothly written, craftily balanced, and equipped with two good, old-fashioned tableau curtains. We still insist that it would prove no more stimulating to an American audience than the tea that's poured by stout old Nanny." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p14 Ag 18 '46 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p36 D 1 '46 200w

"The play might be a comedy, were it not so concerned with the mental plight of returned soldiers at this moment of history. The solution is rather less satisfactory than the body of the play." W. P. Eaton

Weekly Book Review p10 N 17 '46 180w

DUMBAULD, EDWARD. Thomas Jefferson, American tourist. 266p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas. Voyages and travels 46-5538

"Being an account of his journeys in the United States of America, England, France, Italy, the Low countries and Germany." (Sub-title) The author, now a special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States, during his student days in Europe attempted to follow Jefferson's travels. Feeling the lack of a specialized guide to these journeyings, he conceived the idea of writing this book.

"Dumbauld's study of Jefferson's peregrinations both in the United States and abroad has, besides a personal and an antiquarian interest, quite relevant historical value... Appended to the volume is a chronological itinerary of Jefferson's tours and a useful bibliography. The illustrations add interest, and the University of Oklahoma Press does its usual competent job of bookmaking." R. B. Nye

Book Week p2 O 6 '46 700w

Booklist 43:14 S '46

Christian Science Monitor p15 S 14 '46 360w

"Mr. Dumbauld has done a thorough and intelligent job of tracing Jefferson's peregrinations throughout a long life time, disclosing what he learned from his travels, and presenting what may be called his philosophy of traveling." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 18 '46 1350w

"Because many of Jefferson's political opinions and prejudices were molded by what he saw in Europe, his travels are undoubtedly important to the student of Jefferson. But it's all fairly familiar stuff."

New Yorker 22:74 JI 20 '46 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 8 '46 100w

Springf'd Republican p4d JI 28 '46 480w

Reviewed by Dumas Malone

Weekly Book Review p12 S 22 '46 1000w

DUNCAN, DAVID. Shade of time. 244p $2 Random house

46-7496

Detective story.

Booklist 43:133 Ja 1 '47

Kirkus 14:438 S 1 '46 80w

"Few real people talk like these characters; but then, few plots are as fresh and well constructed as this one." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 3 '46 60w

"Skip its higher-mathematical trappings if you wish. Beneath are expert plotting, interesting people, good talk and practically last-page enlightenment."

Sat R of Lit 27:44 N 2 '46 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p40 O 27 '46 270w

DUNLAP, ORRIN ELMER. Radar; what radar is and how it works. 208p il $2.50 Harper 621.38 Radar 46-1698

"Mr. Dunlap's aim has been to give a popular version without equations or technical language, so that the lay reader may gain an appreciation of the nature and significance of radar and may realize the tremendous importance of science in the destiny of nations. He has confined himself to statements made public as news and to scientific bulletins, passed by wartime censorship. Some of the devices and techniques of radar, or other processes more or less akin to it, are still locked in military secrecy, but enough has been released to make a thrilling story." Scientific Bk Club R

Booklist 42:243 Ap 1 '46

Bookmark 7:7 My '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '46

Kirkus 13:556 D 15 '45 120w

Library J 71:182 F 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:12 Ja '46

Reviewed by D. G. Fink

N Y Times p43 Ap 14 '46 360w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p23 JI 14 '46 40w

"The story is told in part by quotations from news bulletins and radio announcements. Some of these are repetitious, and consequently the book lacks the careful organization and smooth sequence that might be desired. It is nevertheless a dramatic and accurate presentation of one of the most thrilling chapters in all the annals of science."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:2 F '46 300w

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p31 O 6 '46 90w

Wis Lib Bul 42:71 My '46

DUNN, FREDERICK SHERWOOD, and others. Absolute weapon. See Brodie, B., ed.

DUNPHY, JACK. John Fury; a novel in four parts. 269p $2.50 Harper

46-7497

The story of an Irish immigrant in Philadelphia in the early years of this century. John Fury marries first the gentle, loving Mamie, but when she dies, he finds it necessary for his children's sake to marry again. His marriage to Bridget is unhappy, his life becomes more and more sordid, and finally he dies in disgrace.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p8 D 8 '46 420w

"As in McSorley's Our Own Kind, here again is the clannish Irish in all their hopeless belligerence, warm kindness, abject surrender to the conditions of living. The formalization of the prose, and the sustained pitch of the story give this a distinctive quality that emphasizes its social consciousness, but which has little of the tender, wide appeal of the McSorley."

+ Kirkus 14:259 Je 1 '46 170w

DUNPHY, JACK—Continued

"Written with rawness that smacks of the Farrell style, it somehow doesn't ring true. Not recommended." M. H. Zippich

— Library J 71:1330 O 1 '46 70w

"It is not a reviewer's place to make predictions or recommendations, particularly after an unusually strong first novel, but I think if Jack Dunphy is hesitant about writing that difficult second novel, he should try his hand at short stories. They demand all the gifts of compassion he has shown to such splendid advantage in John Fury." Richard Plant

+ New Repub 115:832 D 16 '46 650w

"Mr. Dunphy indicates that his novel was inspired by a reading of Gertrude Stein's 'Making of Americans' and his sparsely punctuated style echoes her primer-like simplicity, although not her unintelligibility. He writes starkly in vivid, suggestive images, indulging only rarely in extraneous, non-stop, pseudo-lyric flights, using repetition for effect, but sparingly. Divided into four self-sufficient episodes dealing with different members of the family, the novel's unifying theme is Fury's crescendo of wrath. It adds up to a remarkable first novel, warm and strong, its unflinching realism saved from brutality by the author's compassion and restraint." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p5 O 27 '46 850w

Reviewed by J. T. Farrell

Sat R of Lit 29:31 N 9 '46 600w

"John Fury is finished, but John Dunphy, his creator, is just begun. He can write; he has a feeling for people and language; but he needs a plot." Thomas Sugrue

Weekly Book Review p18 N 17 '46 550w

DUPUY, JUDY. Television show business; a handbook of television programming and production. 246p il $2.50 General electric co, 1 River rd, Schenectady, N.Y.

792 Television broadcasting 46-3337

"First television production textbook tells what future television producers will want to know about this new industry. Author spent some time at the General Electric Television Studio, Schenectady, studying television programming and this book is the result. It is nontechnical in scope and has many practical details. Part one deals with the production and telecasting of programs at WRGB and second part concerns the engineering and production aspects from backstage." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:761 My 15 '46 100w

"Will be a valuable guide to future telecasters, who will go on the air as equipment becomes available. James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p30 Mr 31 '46 140w

DURAN-REYNALS, MARIE LOUISE (DE AYALA). The fever bark tree; the pageant of quinine. 275p $2.75 Doubleday

615.75 Quinine. Cinchona. Malaria SG46-213

History of man's battle with malaria, from the death of Alexander the Great of this dread disease in 323 B.C., to World war II when it caused more than half the total casualties. The story of quinine, the great malaria cure, is treated from its first appearance to the present. Index.

Atlantic 178:156 Ag '46 500w

Booklist 42:361 JI 15 '46

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 163:568 S '46 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '46

"Mrs. Duran-Reynals has told a wonderfully good story with great charm and readability." H. L. Binns

+ Commonweal 44:460 Ag 23 '46 260w

Foreign Affairs 25:377 Ja '47 30w

Kirkus 14:169 Ap 1 '46 150w

"Not treated in a popular enough style to be of interest to the layman. It can be recommended for large public libraries and college libraries." H. R. Forbes

Library J 71:822 Je 1 '46 30w

"In telling the full story, Mrs. Duran-Reynals has performed a work of significant and lively scholarship." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p22 Je 9 '46 500w

"An admirably handled piece of popular scholarship."

+ New Yorker 22:87 Je 22 '46 40w

"An exciting and swiftly moving tale. It reads like fiction but has the importance of history and of the social implications of malaria left unchecked in various parts of the world." K. F. Mather and others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:1 Je '46 1150w

Reviewed by R. M. Morgan

Springfd Republican p6 JI 26 '46 120w

"The book provides a convenient review of its subject, and should appeal not only to those whose interest is in medical subjects, but to the general reader as well."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:245 S '46 120w

"Mrs. Duran-Reynals's book is not on malaria as such nor on its treatment. It is a fascinating history of human stumbling and stupidity. . . The story deserves to become a classic for it is here told in attractive form and is a remarkable tale of fumbling, prejudice and pride for which millions of human beings throughout the centuries paid with their lives. Most startling is the powerful and persistent efforts to maintain a monopoly on the quinine supply." Gerald Wendt

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Je 9 '46 750w
Wis Lib Bul 42:163 D '46

DURANT, JOHN, and RICE, EDWARD. Come out fighting. [248p] il $3 Essential bks.

796.83 Boxing—History 46-25213

Pictorial history of prize-fighting, made up of over 200 prints and photographs supplemented by some 30,000 words of text and captions. No index.

Booklist 42:362 JI 15 '46

Reviewed by James Fuller

N Y Times p8 JI 7 '46 290w

"Just about the most lively book ever published about the manly art." Herbert Kupferberg

+ Weekly Book Review p12 JI 14 '46 700w

DURHAM, JOHN GEORGE LAMBTON, 1st earl of. Durham report; an abr. version with an introd. and notes by Sir Reginald Coupland. 186p $2.75 (8s 6d) Oxford 971 Canada—Politics and government. Great Britain—Colonies, dominions, etc.

"Durham sailed for Canada as High Commissioner and Governor-General in April, 1838. . . He resigned in October and was back in England in December. The Durham Report which refashioned the British Empire was debated in Parliament on February 11, 1839. After completing his report, Durham took little part in public life." (Times [London] Lit Sup) "Sir Reginald Coupland suggests that the length of this 'greatest state document in British imperial history' has stood in the way of its being more widely read. In preparing this abridgment he has emphasized the constitutional issue in the British North American colonies and French Canadian nationalism. Where passages have been cut out, summaries of their contents are given. The Introduction presents the historical setting of the Report and contains brief comment on some of its statements and recommendations." (Pol Sci Q)

"Publication of an abridged version of The Durham Report will probably serve a useful purpose in making Lord Durham's more important observations and recommendations on Canadian government familiar to students of British colonial history. The Report has become a classic more often referred to than read. Professor Coupland has done a skillful job in cutting out the less significant parts and bringing the whole together in a compact little volume of 186 pages." S. D. Clark

+ Ann Am Acad 248:277 N '46 360w

Reviewed by R. L. Schuyler
Pol Sci Q 61:475 S '46 140w

"It is to be hoped that many readers may be tempted by the appearance of this edition to peruse the 'Durham Report' and Professor Coupland's illuminating commentary. They will learn there the advisability of taking long views in politics. What once seemed the optimism of an unbalanced egotist has proved to hold a great truth."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p49 F 2 '46 200w

DURLACHER, ED. Play party book; singing games for children; il. by Arnold Edwin Bare; music arranged by Ken Macdonald. [90p] $2.50 Devin-Adair

793.3 Singing games 46-25035

"Ed Durlacher, authority on square dances and singing games, presents in this book thirty-seven singing games handed down to us from frontier frolics and from centuries of children's play. Directions are given with explicit simplicity and further illumined by Arnold Bare's diagrams, and Ken Macdonald has thoughtfully arranged the music for non-professional pianists." N Y Times

Booklist 42:215 Mr 1 '46

"These games are all traditional, having been commonplace in homes and nurseries two or three generations ago. They still possess great charm and can prove a God-send to mothers of large broods, directors of nursery schools, persons in charge of playgrounds and organizers of birthday parties." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 43:122 N 16 '45 70w

"The book will be a real boon to teachers and mothers. They will find in it such favorite folk games as Mulberry Bush, Frog Goes Walking, Muffin Man, Farmer in the Dell, and be well prepared for the next children's party or playtime. The children themselves will turn to it to learn the way a game should be played and sung." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:131 Mr '46 80w

"An attractive book of singing games for children of kindergarten age, which presents 37 popular music games that will be useful for adults with groups to handle. The music is simplified for easy reading. The directions are clear. The illustrations are in the tradition of The Singing Lady game books formerly so popular."

+ Kirkus 14:128 Mr 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p26 D 9 '45 100w

"A book for small children, easily taught and full of fun."

+ School & Society 63:15 Ja 5 '46 10w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 27 '46 200w

Wis Lib Bul 42:61 Ap '46

D'USSEAU, ARNAUD, and GOW, JAMES. Deep are the roots. 205p $2.50 Scribner

812 46-1288

A play based on the postwar experiences of a Negro lieutenant who returns to his home in the South and the white family in whose house he had been raised. With the exception of one young daughter of the family, who wants to marry him, they all turn against him.

"This is a hard-hitting, honest, splendidly devised drama which pulls no punches and asks no quarter. It gives thoughtful people new hope in the American theater." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 F 10 '46 700w

Booklist 42:244 Ap 1 '46

Bookmark 7:9 My '46

"The play is conscientiously done and (perhaps for that reason) it leaves the whole problem unsolved and apparently insoluble."

Christian Century 63:240 F 20 '46 160w

"One is tempted immediately to compare this play with Paul Green's powerful drama In Abraham's Bosom. Unfortunately Deep Are the Roots comes off rather badly in this comparison. The deep and potent conflict which the authors conceive is resolved in what might be termed a melodramatic fashion. External aids are utilized, including the faked theft of a watch, rather than the more basic psychological disintegrations bound to affect Brett Charles and those involved in his problems. The roots of prejudice and tradition are deep indeed, both below and above the Mason-Dixon line. One can wonder whether this play does very much to disturb these roots, let alone pull some of them from the strange soil that harbors them." W. P. Sears

Churchman 160:18 Mr 1 '46 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

Kirkus 14:64 F 1 '46 50w

"Recommended for drama and Negro collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:407 Mr 15 '46 40w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols

N Y Times p3 F 3 '46 450w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Weekly Book Review p24 My 19 '46 250w

Wis Lib Bul 42:44 Mr '46

DUVALL, MRS EVELYN RUTH (MILLIS), and HILL, REUBEN LORENZO. When you marry. 450p il $3 Assn. press; educ ed 464p $2.40 Heath

392.5 Marriage 45-10371

A serious study of family life, with emphasis on the preparation for, and adjustment to, marriage. The book is in four parts: Anticipating marriage; What it means to be married; The making of a family; Family life yesterday, today, and tomorrow. Index.

"This volume, in the opinion of the reviewer, represents the best of its class and marks a new achievement in what may be called sex hygiene in its most inclusive sense." R. M. Atwater

+ Am J Pub Health 36:291 Mr '46 400w

"This is a valuable book, which, though it contains many misconceptions and unwarranted generalizations, is nevertheless, one of the most outstanding and usable in the field." L. G. Brown

+ — Am J Soc 52:77 J1 '46 800w

"This book can be heartily recommended to all persons looking forward to marriage. It contains a great deal of helpful material, organized in an interesting and readable way. Each chapter is streamlined with a 'kickoff cartoon' which serves to introduce the subject, and is supported by well-selected bibliographical references at the end. The volume should be serviceable equally for the general reader and for classroom purposes." J. H. S. Bossard

+ Ann Am Acad 244:226 Mr '46 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '46

"The book's interesting and lively style will attract young people even though they may not have access to a course for which it serves as text. It covers an exceptionally wide range of interrelated fields which are both valuable and interesting." R. F. Hamilton

+ J Home Econ 38:172 Mr '46 240w

"This is not an ordinary textbook. Its style and approach are quite at variance with the volumes one usually finds on the shelves of the college bookstore. Whether this makes it a better book than others, or a poorer, is a question for debate. . . . When You Marry provides, what seems to me to be, a very adequate coverage of the essentials of the subject. The criteria of value for a book with the purposes of this one are not so much the originality of data and hypotheses as inclusiveness, logic of arrangement and presentation, and readability. When You Marry rates high on each of these counts. Its primary sources are authoritative and contemporary."

Social Forces 25:108 O '46 350w

"The book is as readable as it is valuable." W. H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p4 N 17 '45 240w

DUVALL, E. R.—Continued

"This book is an attractively presented manual of information for married couples and young people contemplating marriage. It is vividly and clearly written and the point of view is at the same time sympathetic and objective." Eleanor Clifton

+ Survey 82:94 Mr '46 220w

DWOSKIN, CHARLES. Shadow over the land. 285p $2.75 Beechhurst press

46-20994

"Charles Dwoskin's novel is an attack on the insidious and destructive technique of organizations which line the pockets of their promoters and foster race and color prejudice under the banner of patriotism. By feeding the discouraged veteran and the discontented worker with slogans and rabble-rousing oratory, they manage to feather their own nests while fouling the community's." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by Clinton Textor

Book Week p13 N 3 '46 150w

"The astute perception of the otherwise not-quite-bright Harold, plus his activities with a group fighting Patriots United, seems quite false and unconvincing. The relationship between Dan and Tom (with all its implications) emerges merely as psychoneurotic bait with Freudian overtones. But when the author tells the story of Paul, when he exposes the inner workings of Patriots United, he writes a shrewd, hard-hitting story. His descriptions and dialogue show that in his just twenty-four years his eyes and ears haven't missed much." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p18 O 13 '46 360w

"With all its youthful shortcomings, 'Shadow Over the Land' must be called a promising first novel." Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 30:23 Ja 4 '47 360w

"The theme is familiar, but the author has given it a certain freshness and focus by tracing the consequences in an average family—one in which there is a returned soldier son and a daughter grieving for a soldier who will never return." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p30 O 6 '46 110w

DYER, CAROLINE. Three famous ugly sisters; pictures by Donald McKay. (Whitlessey house publication) [52p] $1.75 McGraw

46-2893

Nonsense story about three ugly sisters who lived in a castle overlooking a village where they were much in demand, for they could scare the wolf from the door, the ferrets from the fields, the bats from the belfries. What happens when the sisters get too old to do any scaring makes the story.

"A most entertaining story, to which Donald McKay's many pictures add a great deal of fun." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p23 Ap 14 '46 230w

"Moderately funny story with colorful pictures on every page."

Kirkus 14:126 Mr 1 '46 80w

"It seems to me unnecessarily involved for the fourth- and fifth-graders who are always demanding more fairy tales. However, it has enough good points so that I shall try it out with the children before making final judgment on it." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 71:588 Ap 15 '46 70w

"This story is full of juicy puns, and has the sound of a modern folk tale. The lively colored illustrations by Donald McKay add to the fun. For children 6 to 10." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 7 '46 90w

Reviewed by Sylvia Cowett

Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 21 '46 160w

"The Three Famous Ugly Sisters, who look just like their names, will damage the nerves of no child who has felt the thrill of being chased, in the course of such a game, by one of his own comrades temporarily disguised.

They will be recognized by any one who has seen himself in a concave mirror—and laughed." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 14 '46 500w

DYKSTRA, GERALD OSCAR, and DYKSTRA, LILLIAN GREEN. Business law of aviation. 523p $5 McGraw

387.7 Aeronautics—Laws and regulations. Commercial law 46-3434

"A study of some two hundred legal cases directly concerned with or arising out of aviation. The cases are arranged in groups, each covering a specific application of the law to a particular issue. These include questions involving Federal control; state police authority and tax measures; the power of municipal corporations to operate airports; charges of trespass, nuisance, or negligence; common carrier responsibilities; insurance and workmen's compensation; contracts and bailments; criminal proceedings; and international agreements in air law. Problems for discussion are given at the end of each chapter." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Eng N 136:112 Ag 8 '46 80w

"Written in simple language. Of interest for pilots, transport passengers, aviation manufacturers, airport managers, salesmen, those engaged in air transport, insurance and other aviation businesses and related interests." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:825 Je 1 '46 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:19 Ap '46

"The authors have relied primarily on the case method of presentation, but they have accompanied the excerpts from leading court decisions with lucid and concise summaries and explanations of the principles involved, thereby imparting to the book the characteristics and readability of a treatise rather than a law school casebook. Because of this treatment, the book also should have an appeal to persons outside the legal profession who have a general interest in aviation problems."

+ U S Quarterly, Bkl 2:228 S '46 240w

E

EASTON, WILLIAM BURNET. Faith of a Protestant. 76p $1.50 Macmillan

230 Protestantism 46-1418

"It is the intention of this book to present some of the major beliefs of the Christian Faith in simple, non-technical language which lay men and women who are untrained in philosophical and theological terminology can understand." (Pref) The author is religious director and assistant professor of religion at Massachusetts State college. No index.

"Should be on the required reading list of those who are interested in contemporary religious trends since this is a book that attempts to blend the orthodoxy of Protestant positivism with liberal social action. . . . The Unitarian theologians will disagree with much of this book and Roman Catholics will find that Dr. Easton's theology, which is part of the growing 'Christus Victor' movement, is similar to their own. The Catholic, however, will be quite surprised at Easton's own summaries of Catholic theology, whether Roman or Anglican. Here Dr. Easton oversimplifies to the point of error. The book is nevertheless a stimulating, worthy exposition of a challenging theme." J. O. Supple

+ Book Week p4 Mr 24 '46 180w

"Small but highly valuable book. . . . The book merits high commendation and wide use."

+ Christian Century 63:498 Ap 17 '46 300w

"It is refreshing to read a book on Protestantism which does not mention Roman Catholicism until it is necessary in its chapter on the church." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 160:15 Je 1 '46 150w

"This is a useful, plain, and nontechnical book which undertakes to set forth exactly what its title describes." F. C. Grant

Crozer Q 23:298 J1 '46 300w

"This is no polemic, as the title might suggest. It is rather the simple, straight-forward confession of faith of a Protestant minister trained in the liberal school and yet alive to the weaknesses of liberal Protestantism. It is a plea for a return from the materialism and secularism of our time to a vital faith together with a simple statement of the essentials of such a faith from the Protestant standpoint."

Kirkus 14:99 F 15 '46 60w

EASTWICK, IVY O. Fairies and suchlike; il. by Decie Merwin. 63p $1.50 Dutton

821 Children's poetry 46-5907

Collection of delicate verses for children. Some of the verse has appeared in magazines in England and in this country, and some is being printed for the first time.

Booklist 43:58 O 15 '46

"It echoes no other collection but breathes its own sincerity and a single-minded wish to please children. The line drawings by Decie Merwin are delightful." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:474 N '46 40w

"Imported from England, but it scarcely seems worth the trip."

— Kirkus 14:419 S 1 '46 50w

"Attractively and appropriately illustrated with delicate drawings by Decie Merwin."

Claire Nolte

+ Library J 71:1334 O 1 '46 30w

Reviewed by Phyllis Fenner

N Y Times p11 S 1 '46 90w

"A series of short verses by an English poet that bring into harmony the English countryside, with its flowers and birds and little animals, and the fairies who are in sympathy with these things. . . The drawings by Decie Merwin illustrate effectively the illusive quality in the poems." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:63 N 9 '46 130w

Spring'd Republican p4d S 22 '46 60w

EASTWOOD, LA VERNE WINFIELD. Gas in light alloys. 99p il $2.50 Wiley [15s Chapman]

669.7 Aluminum. Porosity 46-3717

"Handbook for men in the shop concerned with the practical problem of melting light alloys. Simply written." Library J

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:345 Mr 1 '46 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:19 Ap '46

EATON, ANNE THAXTER. Treasure for the taking; a book list for boys and girls. 248p $2.50 Viking

028.5 Children's literature—Bibliography 46-25087

"To supplement her Reading with children [Book Review Digest, 1940], the author, reviewer and critic, and librarian of the Lincoln school of Teachers college, Columbia university, has compiled a list of books, old and new, for boys and girls from two to 15, to aid parents and other adults in the selection of books for children. The selection is a personal one, the annotations excellent; both reflect the author's wealth of experience in the field of children's literature. Grouped under subject, each entry gives author, title, publisher, date of publication, and tentative age range." (Booklist) Index.

Book Week p25 N 10 '46 90w

Booklist 42:241 Ap 1 '46

Bookmark 7:3 Ag '46

Cath World 163:188 My '46 150w

"Most of the annotations are very good and give an adequate idea of the nature of the book. The categories listed in the Table of Contents, seventy in all, are those under which children are most likely to seek books. . . This book list should be useful to adults wishing to survey the field of juvenile literature and to those who purchase books for children."

Evangeline Colburn

+ El School J 46:595 Je '46 360w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:213 My '46 160w

"A valuable booklist for parents and libraries. Favorites of the past are in this as well as a good selection of moderns and there is excellent classification according to subject and age level. A brief resumé of each book is invaluable in aiding parents, teachers and librarians to make adequate selection of reading material. The organization is very thorough, covering, among many others, picture books, folktales, historical works, science, animal stories, and career books."

+ Kirkus 14:178 Ap 1 '46 110w

"Here is that welcome rarity, a creative book list, with Miss Eaton's enthusiasm for books and knowledge of young readers' interests apparent on every page." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 71:973 J1 '46 160w

"Here is a working book collection which caters to individual reading tastes, and builds up good readers by many roads and varied approaches. Mass production, book club choices, prizes and publicity have little to do with the results. Here is a library which really does defend the children, the authors and artists, the whole pro-book, anti-materialist world."

L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 14 '46 1100w

Reviewed by K. S. White

New Yorker 22:148 D 7 '46 80w

"Here is everything that boys and girls need, that they can grow on. One feels that the experience that produced this book was satisfying and rewarding, although like all experience it probably had its ups and downs. It is not a book to stand on the shelves, to be taken down only when there is a definite need. It is a book to live with, to keep close at hand. Its format and printing are simple and dignified. This reviewer's copy will be well worn before another spring rolls around."

M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:56 Ap 20 '46 400w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Social Studies 38:44 Ja '47 250w

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:260 S '46 150w

"If you know Miss Eaton's 'Reading With Children,' the name of this book and the statement that it is in effect a supplement to that valuable companion will turn you toward a bookshop in search of it. But for the benefit of beginners it should be pointed out that this is more than a supplement; as a basic book list it has life, interest and usefulness all its own. . . It is an admirable source for family, school or library book-equipment." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 7 '46 360w

Wis Lib Bul 42:70 My '46

EBERHART, MRS MIGNON (GOOD). Five passengers from Lisbon. 242p $2 Random house

46-25202

Detective story.

Booklist 42:349 J1 1 '46

Bookmark 7:15 N '46

"The master touch for murders with superior entertainment value."

+ Kirkus 14:51 F 1 '46 80w

"Hospital environment is nothing new to Mrs. Eberhart, as those can testify who remember 'The Patient in Room 18.' In this story of a hospital at sea she has equaled if not surpassed her early Nurse Keete stories." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p32 Je 9 '46 150w

"Eberhart fashion, which is both sleek and efficient."

New Yorker 22:96 Je 15 '46 100w

"Standard brand."

Sat R of Lit 29:86 Je 15 '46 40w

EBERHART, M. G.—Continued

"Time is just at the close of the war, so you can excuse all concerned for acting strangely through it all. It's a highly entertaining Eberhart opus with a lovely heroine who ought to be more careful about her men." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p30 My 26 '46
250w

EBERHART, MRS MIGNON (GOOD). White dress. 307p $2 Random house
Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Book Week p15 O 20 '46 180w
Booklist 43.103 D 1 '46
Kirkus 14:333 J1 15 '46 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p36 O 20 '46 190w

"Miss Sanderson's predicament will undoubtedly appeal to Eberhart fans, who will find it just as sleekly presented as all its predecessors."

New Yorker 22:115 O 12 '46 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 13 '46
60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p18 S 22 '46 240w

EBERHART, RICHARD, and RODMAN, SELDEN, eds. War and the poet; an anthology of poetry expressing man's attitudes to war from ancient times to the present. 240p $3 Devin-Adair

808.81 War poetry. Poetry—Collections
46-754

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"The tracing of the various themes that have emerged with time is, in general, excellent. The evaluation of Cummings and Rosenberg as two of the best voices of World War I has been delayed long enough, and it is proper and good to find it made here. But it is difficult to escape the feeling that the editors fumble on the one-yard line after a fine long run. There are some surprising omissions in the section of World War II poets, among them John Pudney. And Randall Jarrell, who has written some of the best poetry of the last few years, is inadequately represented by one short poem." John Ciardi

+ — Atlantic 177:176 Ap '46 300w

Booklist 42:210 Mr 1 '46

Reviewed by Randall Jarrell
Nation 162:238 F 23 '46 550w
New Yorker 21:95 F 9 '46 650w

"This is a compact, readable anthology" George Dillon

+ Poetry 69:46 O '46 900w

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:184 S '46 240w

"At this writing the Second World War is not over officially. Nor is it over in fact. Fighting is in progress on more than one continent and on the islands, and where the conflict is not a bloody one, there are ugly rumors of wars. Poetry may perhaps be regarded as the opposite of warfare, because it involves the delight in life, the awareness, the responsibility, that the soldier resigns. The present volume is valuable because it represents both these fields of human activity, and because it shows the one in terms of the other." Babette Deutsch

+ Weekly Book Review p14 F 17 '46 750w

EBERLE, GERTRUDE. Chariteer; a story of old Egypt in the days of Joseph. 295p $2.50 Eerdmans

46-20993

"The romance of old Egypt lives in this colorful account of the life of Joseph and a bondslave, Raanah, who wanted to be a chariteer." Book Week

"The theme is of course religious, but it is presented without stickiness, and the account reads like a story of contemporary life." O. C.

+ Book Week p48 D 1 '46 50w

"Those who like their biblical stories retold in the novel form may find this wholly unsubtle example pleasantly entertaining." H. J. Forman

N Y Times p25 O 27 '46 230w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE (PHYLLIS ANN CARTER, pseud). Basketful; the story of our foods; il. by Marion R. Kohs. 256p $2 Crowell
630 Food—Juvenile literature Agr46-203

"Informative, simply told story of food-raising the world over, written for children under twelve. It opens with wheat, telling the story of Mark Carleton's struggle against rust, working back to the origin and adaptations of the wheat plant. . . . Rice brings in the Far East and our own South. The cow country's meat, the teeming ocean's food, fruits from near and far: the fats, milk and cheese; the sweets and the various nuts round out the work." Weekly Book Review

"This story of our foods should be of particular value in schools and libraries. Except to the young person who is an earnest seeker after information, it may prove a bit slow-going as straight reading."

Book Week p17 Je 2 '46 140w

Booklist 42:319 Je 1 '46

"An attractive page with good type and inviting headings here calls attention to the sources of our food supply, now seeming more important than ever before. . . . Such a book will be both useful and entertaining in school and at home." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:273 J1 '46 160w

"A well written, succinct and lively account. . . . Some historical items on inventions, and on agricultural science add to the value of this book for libraries and schools."

+ Kirkus 14:174 Ap 1 '46 90w

"Valuable, attractively arranged and well-written book on the complete food picture" V. W. Schott

+ Library J 71:982 J1 '46 70w

"This attractive fact book, of special interest to schools and libraries, is spiced with colorful bits of scientific information, interesting items of human interest and history, and gay spot drawings." Nina Schneider

+ N Y Times p27 My 12 '46 100w

"Coming at exactly the right moment, this is an entertaining record of the foods that the people of America eat. . . . It covers practically the whole world. It is amazing to realize how far we go to get the things we take for granted."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:45 Je 15 '46 60w

Weekly Book Review p20 My 19 '46
320w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE (PHYLLIS ANN CARTER, pseud). Visiting Jimpsons; il. by Ruth Kreps. 188p $2 Reynal

46-7720

The Jimpsons were three orphans who had been passed around from one relative to another for years. They were rather mild in all but one particular: they refused to be separated. The story is of their visit to an elderly great-aunt living in a small town, and what happened when it became known that this time they must be separated.

"Good values, fresh story line, lively characters, and Miss Eberle's competent writing to hold it all together. Sprightly line drawings."

+ Kirkus 14:386 Ag 15 '46 90w

"A natural story of children in a pleasant little town. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 71:1718 D 1 '46 70w

"A pleasant, realistic story." R. A. H.
+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ja 18 '47 140w

"It is a good book for nine-year-olds, it gives them an unusual inside view of others of that middle age." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p10 N 17 '46 340w

EBY, LOIS, and FLEMING, JOHN C. Blood runs cold. 224p $2 Dutton

46-4806

Detective story.

"The preceding novel by this mystery writing team—'The Case of the Malevolent Twin'—was much better than the present book." Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p15 S 15 '46 100w

Kirkus 14:261 Je 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 J1 14 '46 140w

"The wildness of the action and the brightness of the humor may overpower you a bit." San Francisco Chronicle p21 J1 28 '46 50w

"Choice collection of movie luminaries, refugees, and minor figures give story plenty of color and zest, although solution doesn't quite tell."

Sat R of Lit 29:30 Ag 3 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p14 J1 7 '46 180w

EBY, LOIS, and FLEMING, JOHN C. Case of the malevolent twin. 256p $2 Dutton

46-403

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p19 F 17 '46 90w

Booklist 42:227 Mr 15 '46

Kirkus 13:548 D 15 45 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p35 Ja 27 '46 200w

"All very confusing."

— Sat R of Lit 29:38 F 9 '46 40w

"How 'The Case of the Malevolent Twin' is solved will provide entertainment for a rainy night." H. O. A.

Spring'd Republican p4d Je 16 '46 120w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p24 Ja 27 '46 230w

ECKENRODE, HAMILTON JAMES. The Randolphs; the story of a Virginia family. 310p il $3.50 Bobbs

920 Randolph family

46-6799

Collective biography of the Randolphs of Virginia, from William Randolph of Warwickshire who came to Virginia about 1669, and founded the family, to George Wythe Randolph, who became Secretary of War in the Confederacy. Includes a chapter on Thomas Jefferson, whose mother was a Randolph. Index.

"Dr. Eckenrode's volume is a solid, thorough study of a tradition as well as of a family. We cannot minimize the Randolphs, for they represent too much of American history, and to understand certain chapters of it we must know them." R. B. Nye

+ Book Week p5 O 20 '46 350w

Booklist 43:100 D 1 '46

"The whole book lacks freshness of interpretation and attitude. Mr. Eckenrode repeats much well-known history in a style that is commonplace and platitudinous. The result is an undistinguished book on a distinguished family." Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 2 '46 480w

"One could wish that Mr. Eckenrode had discovered the semblance of a theme to unify his book." Wayne Andrews

Commonweal 45:281 D 27 '46 350w

Kirkus 14:316 J1 1 '46 180w

"Dr. Eckenrode's presentation of the Randolph history is entertaining and useful, not only for the individual portraits which it sympathetically presents but for the background against which they are projected. It is not scholars' history, manifestly, which is disappointing in an author of Dr. Eckenrode's standing; it is sketchy, inexhaustive, besides being based entirely on secondary sources which do not always appear to have been weighed carefully. But as an introduction to a picturesque and fascinating group of people too little known today, 'The Randolphs' should prove appealing and popular. If it is running history, it is interesting history—and well worth reading." A. C. Gordon

+ N Y Times p34 N 24 '46 600w

"Mr. Eckenrode's presentation of the Virginia milieu is somewhat on the pedestrian side, but he has succeeded very well, indeed, in showing the contrasts and purposes of this family and in evaluating their social and political contributions to State and Nation." J.V.

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 10 '46 130w

Reviewed by Avery Craven

Weekly Book Review p10 Ja 19 '47 1400w

ECKMAN, DONALD P. Principles of industrial process control. 237p $3.50 Wiley

620.78 Control equipment 45-8690

"Thorough, comprehensive treatment of principles governing automatic control. Among contents are measuring characteristics of controllers, the effect of process load changes, effect of valve characteristics and correlated or multiple control systems." (Library J) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 42:179 F 1 '46

"This book should meet the needs of anyone interested in automatic control, especially in the process industries. Executives, chemists, engineers, and maintenance men should all find it valuable. It might well be used for a text for an instrumentation course, either for college classes or for industrial classes." R. H. Munch

+ Chem & Eng N 24:264 Ja 25 '46 500w

"All in all, the author has accomplished his task and has laid down a useful foundation of both theory and practice of automatic process control. The fundamental simplicity and clarity of this book should make it valuable to anyone interested in the design and operation of the process industries." R. W. Porter

+ Chem & Met Eng 53:287 Ja '46 400w

Library J 70:307 Ap 1 '45 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:62 O '45

ECONOMIC RESEARCH GROUP. Economic development in S. E. Europe; with an introd. by David Mitrany [pub. by] PEP (Political and economic planning). 165p $3 (10s 6d) Oxford

330.94 Central Europe—Economic conditions. Balkan states 45-5170

"A sympathetic survey prepared for PEP (Political and Economic Planning) and covering Poland, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Hungary and the Balkans." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

Ann Am Acad 243:159 Ja '46 360w

"There is no short or easy solution indicated, but the book gives hope that, with wise planning, co-operation and hard work, great progress can be made step by step. Indeed, much progress has been made." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 9 '45 330w

Foreign Affairs 24:167 O '45 20w

Reviewed by Antonin Basch

J Pol Econ 54:561 D '46 900w

Nation 161:528 N 17 '45 120w

Reviewed by Oscar Jaszi

+ New Repub 113:806 D 10 '45 1800w

"It is impossible to discuss at length in a book-review the problem whether it is really possible—as the book attempts—to avoid politics when discussing the economic problems of any area. It seems to me that the 'functional approach' of Professor Mitrany is certainly useful but has its strict limitations. . . . However, Professor Mitrany may be justified in retorting that his 'a-political' attitude is for the outside neutral observer the only fair approach. The book gives one of the best expositions of the economic structure of the discussed countries on the basis of the available pre-war data, and very useful suggestions for their economic development." Alfred Drucker

ECONOMIC RESEARCH GROUP—Continued
+ — Spec 174:438 My 11 '45 600w

"Beyond its general recommendations the book does not put forward a concrete plan, and leaves the political problem untouched. If these omissions and the use throughout of pre-war statistical data appear to give the whole work an air of unreality, it must be allowed that the group had no other data on which to work, and the only alternative would have been to use no figures at all. With so much uncertainty overhanging so many of the issues involved, it would have been dangerous to go farther than Dr. Mitrany and his colleagues decided to go. The study constitutes a more constructive programme for the rebuilding of this sorely tried region than any yet published."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p231 My 19 '45 1000w

EDDY, WILLIAM CRAWFORD. Television; the eyes of tomorrow. 330p il $3.75 Prentice-Hall

021.388 Television 45-10404

"Nontechnical survey. Brief history and development of television, precedes discussion of mechanics of the television camera, transmission, networks, control rooms, lighting, color television, motion pictures in television, make-up, acting, studio design, visual effects, staging production and economic aspects of television and television commercials." Library J

Kirkus 13:391 S 1 '45 110w

Library J 70:1090 N 15 '45 70w

"On the whole this is the most exhaustive consideration of television which has thus far been presented for the general public. It is well worth the attention of anyone who is curious about the subject." Waldemar Kaempfert

+ Sat R of Lit 29:46 F 16 '46 850w

"Even so worthy an effort suffers from Captain Bill's far-flung embrace. In touching upon the mosaic of subjects that total to television, he has brushed over some so lightly as virtually to neglect them. . . . Developments in television's fast-changing structure have further curbed some of the book's value. More sensitive cameras, released since the book was written, permit greater flexibility in lighting, and new concepts of net-works have already outdated some of the book's basic information, to cite but two examples. Nevertheless, as of manuscript delivery date, the volume gives good basic information about how television works technically, practically and programmatically. You have a sense of sharing knowledge and experience with a practical expert in television." A. W. Bernsohn

+ — Theatre Arts 30:368 Je '46 300w

Reviewed by James Stokley
Weekly Book Review p30 Mr 31 '46 230w

EDELSTADT, VERA (MRS MICHAEL KRAUS). Oceans in the sky; il. by Louis Bunin. [63p] $1.75 Knopf

551.5 Water. Geology—Juvenile literature. Meteorology—Juvenile literature 46-3243

The story of the part water has played in the history of the earth and its inhabitants. The text is printed in short lines giving the effect of free verse and there are wash drawings on every page. At the end of the volume an appendix gives in straight prose further information on some points.

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney
Book Week p11 My 5 '46 230w
Booklist 42:284 My 1 '46

"Fine pictures make the dramatic story even more arresting." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 22:210 My '46 80w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 22:214 My '46 240w
Kirkus 14:149 Mr 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by K. H. McAlarney
Library J 71:588 Ap 15 '46 90w

"Despite the many sensitive black-and-white illustrations, the unusual lyrical free-verse style, and the attractive format, this book will appeal largely to adults and to the precocious, literary child. The more science-minded reader will find that, despite the fortification of an excellent appendix, the book touches on too many fundamental concepts in its sixty brief pages to achieve meaning in terms of the child's experience." Nina Schneider

N Y Times p32 Ap 28 '46 140w

"This [first] section of the book, although it is in straightforward prose, is printed as verse with striking and imaginative illustrations. A child who is perhaps too young for the text will be fascinated by these dramatic drawings of the swirling creative forms of sea and sky, sun and earth, with primitive animals and primitive man appearing among them. The second section, which is not illustrated, is more simple in its presentation. Young people will find it clear and interesting long before they are ready to read technical geology." M. C. Dodd

+ Sat R of Lit 29:57 Ap 20 '46 270w

EDGINTON, MAY (MRS F. E. BAILY). Winds of desire [Eng title: Captain's house]. 400p $2.50 Macrae Smith co. [8s 6d Macdonald & co]

46-4359

"Just before World War II, Clover Jones married Henry Brann, scion of the first family of Eastminster in England. She married for a home and money, and hadn't a notion of how much undercover viciousness she would find in her dreadful husband and her two brothers-in-law—almost enough to match her own young ruthlessness." Library J

Kirkus 14:78 F 15 '46 190w

"Taylor Caldwell's public will relish this one. Recommended for small libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 71:758 My 15 '46 80w

"It is skillfully done but often oppressively sentimental." H. I. A. Fauset

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 3 '45 40w

Reviewed by Catharine Brody

N Y Times p16 Je 9 '46 360w

"Winds of Desire" is unhurried and precisely detailed, an interesting study of an English family clinging to its traditions and its capital, but a little faded in dignity, a little impoverished in spirit." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p16 Je 16 '46 150w

Wis Lib Bul 42:132 O '46

EDGLEY, LESLIE. Fear no more. 202p $2 Simon & Schuster

46-6855

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Book Week p8 O 18 '46 90w

"Leslie Edgley is a new name in detective fiction and one which cannot be ignored." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p28 S 15 '46 140w

"Well organized, if not exactly original." + — New Yorker 22:104 S 28 '46 140w

"For macabre tension and quietly satisfactory writing, it's one of the best yet, within a formula which constantly threatens to prove exhausted." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 S 15 '46 50w

"If the tale seems overwrought at times, that's all right with the self-scaring trade and others, may well interest themselves in the puzzle." Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p19 S 15 '46 90w

EDMONDS, MRS HELEN (WOODS) (ANNA KAVAN, pseud). Asylum piece. $12p $2.50 Doubleday

46-6090

Volume of short stories or sketches in which the author attempts to portray the patients in a Swiss mental hospital.

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 Ag 18 '46 600w

Booklist 43:35 O 1 '46

Kirkus 14:279 Je 15 '46 170w

"The interest is usually sustained and often acute, but it is the impersonal interest of the nurse for the patient, compounded of anxiety and curiosity and occasional annoyance. But in the best of these stories, Miss Kavan has created with poetic devices those states of mind between reality and illusion in which contradictions hold each other in a terrified embrace. This is the hell of souls lost within themselves, and she has charted the territory of loneliness they inhabit and has registered the persistent single voice that forms their silence." John Farrelly

+ — New Repub 115:355 S 23 '46 950w

Reviewed by Isa Kapp

N Y Times p6 Ag 11 '46 700w

"Miss Kavan writes with much sensitiveness and imagination and, in some of the more subjective stories, with considerable subtlety."

+ New Yorker 22:90 Ag 17 '46 40w

"Miss Kavan is almost inhumanly successful in communicating an interior impression of mental sickness. But her contribution is a fragile one, for although it is intellectual it is essentially subjective. And the subjective when quite divorced from action, when dedicated almost exclusively to emotions, ideas, and experiments in craftsmanship, communicates only to those prepared to decode the message. . . . What you get out of 'Asylum Piece' depends on how hard you are willing to work. It's not Joyce, but it is intentionally difficult to read. Anna Kavan is definitely a most important new writer." Leo Lerman

Sat R of Lit 29:9 Ag 10 '46 1100w

Time 48:96 S 2 '46 460w

"It is clear from her book that Anna Kavan, the author, is a person of cultivation and background. Her prose is highly sensitive; at times, movingly poetic, but the undertow of aberration continually draws her work away from the shores of the understandable and normal. With the exception of two or three sketches, the material leaves one with a sense of depression and horror. It is the outpouring of a mind pursued by fear and insecurity, that seems lucid and objective in spots and then wanders off into paths that are difficult to follow. Unlike 'The Snake Pit,' the book has no direction or unity, no humor to relieve the tension of intimacy with an appalling illness." Rose Feld

Weekly Book Review p8 S 1 '46 600w

EDMUNDS, MURRELL. Time's laughter in their ears. (Beechhurst press publication) 220p $2.50 Ackerman

46-3955

"A short, tense novel concerning the Negro problem in the South in which an 'educated nigger' tries to organize laborers into a union and meets underhanded and violent opposition." Springfield Republican

"Edmunds pictures his characters with little subtlety of shading, even though they are seen obliquely most of the time from Bobby's naive viewpoint. Nevertheless, the writing is competent enough and the novel on a whole is enjoyable and even stirring in spots." Jack Conroy

+ — Book Week p4 My 26 '46 270w

"The incidents are seen through the eyes of a 12-year-old boy, which effectively heightens the drama but sometimes stretches credulity as to the conversational nuances to which a young ear can be considered attuned. The plot is simple, the action restrained, and the characters very well done, although the undercurrent of scandal and tragedy in the chief white family in the story sometimes seems in danger of taking the spotlight away from the Negro family the author presumably is desirous of featuring." R. F. H.

+ — Springfield Republican p6 My 23 '46 180w

"This story derives its dramatic effect by mirroring the action through the eyes of a twelve-year-old boy. . . . The child only half understands the angry forces that are being unleashed, and his bewilderment is conveyed with notable skill. Most of the grown-up characters are one-dimensional; they advance the thesis but do not have the creative touch." Lisle Bell

+ — Weekly Book Review p14 J1 21 '46 110w

EDWARDS, ALLEN LOUIS. Statistical analysis for students in psychology and education. 360p $3.50 Rinehart

311.2 Statistics. Education—Statistics 46-7412

Statistics for non-mathematically trained students of psychology and education, designed to show them the uses to which statistical techniques can be put. Bibliography, tables, and index.

"The author claims two distinctive features for this text: it demands almost no mathematical training beyond arithmetic, and it emphasizes small-sample techniques (pp. vi, vii). If it is advisable to teach modern statistical methods to persons unable to follow the simplest algebraic proof, at least we should make sure that the basic concepts and the limitations of statistical analysis are clear. In my judgment, the book fails to do either adequately." J. J. Williams

+ — Am J Soc 52:286 N '46 600w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:48 J1 '46

School & Society 63:463 Je 29 '46 30w

EDWARDS, CORWIN D., ed. Cartel policy for the United Nations, by Corwin D. Edwards [and others]. 124p $1.50 Columbia univ. press

338.883 Trusts. Industrial—International trusts. U.S.—Commercial policy A46-268

Five papers originally presented as lectures at Columbia university which "seek to summarize the bearing of international cartels upon economic prosperity and political security, to appraise the efforts which have been made separately by various countries to cope with the cartel problem, and to indicate the possibilities for curbing cartels which are implicit in the defeat of Germany and in the plans for joint development of post-war commercial policies by the governments of the United Nations." Foreword

"All five studies are lucid, stimulating, thought-provoking, and, above all, most timely. . . . The volume is a useful step in the direction of enlightenment and sound policy determination. Even those who do not agree with all of the book's propositions will read the volume with interest and profit." Ervin Hexner

+ — Am Econ R 36:420 Je '46 1950w

"It is impossible to offer an adequate review of the particular studies in a brief space. Even those who do not agree in all details with the authors of these very instructive papers will read them with interest and profit. They contain much new material and new reasoning, along with the presentation of traditional cartel opinions. The volume is well organized, clearly written, and deserves to be read widely by experts and laymen alike." Ervin Hexner

+ — Ann Am Acad 245:197 My '46 850w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Mr 3 '46 50w

Booklist 42:178 F 1 '46

Reviewed by Samuel Klaus

Columbia Law R 46:682 J1 '46 750w

Current Hist 10:350 Ap '46 40w

Foreign Affairs 24:552 Ap '46 10w

EDWARDS, C. D.—Continued
 Harvard Law R 59:477 F '46 480w
 Special Libraries 37:52 F '46
 U S Quarterly Bkl 2:34 Mr '46 160w

EGLOFF, GUSTAV. Physical constants of hydrocarbons; v3. Mononuclear aromatic hydrocarbons. (Am chem. soc. monograph ser) 661p il $15 Reinhold

547.2 Hydrocarbons (39-7977)

"This reference book provides a tabulation of data found in a comprehensive survey of published literature and accessible unpublished data. The information given varies according to what was found in the literature search, but for most compounds it includes the name and important variations, a diagram of the molecular structure, the reported values for the melting point, boiling point, specific gravity, and indices of refraction. Certain other constants such as critical temperature, critical pressure and sublimation points are given less frequently. The reported values are tabulated and the source of each is cited. Where a number of differing values have been reported, the most probable value has been calculated. Volume I of the work, covering the paraffins, olefins, acetylenes and other aliphatic hydrocarbons was published in 1939; and Volume II, covering the cyclanes, cyclenes, cyclynes and other allycyclic hydrocarbons, was published in 1940 [Book Review Digest, 1939, 1940]." N Y New Tech Bks

"The reviewer feels that every technical library should have a copy of this book." F. D. Rossini

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2109 Ag 10 '46 750w

Reviewed by B. L. Crawford
 J Phys Chem 50:491 N '46 300w
 Library J 71:486 Ap 1 '46 100w
 N Y New Tech Bks 31:8 Ja '46

EICHLER, ALFRED. Death at the mike. 248p $2 Lantern press, inc, 257 4th av, N.Y. 10 46-2152

Detective story.

"The radio industry and its people are described in most unattractive colors by one who should know whereof he writes." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p30 Mr 10 '46 130w

Sat R of Lit 29:40 Mr 2 '46 40w

"Strictly for the horror trade and radio mystery listeners." Will Cuppy
 Weekly Book Review p24 Mr 17 '46 110w

EINSTEIN, LEWIS DAVID. Historical change. (Current problems ser) 132p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

901 History—Philosophy. Change A46-3408

"A sketch of the meaning of change as it affects history. Illustrations have been taken from history almost at random in order to show some of the aspects of change that can be found in history. They are mainly familiar and of recent interest, many having been found in the practices of the dictators. Power is the instrument of change and history its record; but power has many and complicated origins, and its outcome is not to be foretold. Among other aspects Mr Einstein examines the Role of Leadership and of Ideas in Historical Change, Interpretations of Power, the Greek view of Change, the relations of Faith, and of Civilization, and of Life to the principle of Change." Publisher's note

Current Hist 11:48 Jl '46 50w

Foreign Affairs 25:159 O '46 30w

"Mr. Einstein's essay is interesting to read but difficult to review. The essay is interesting to read—and to read more than once—because it covers a very wide range, asks questions of the highest importance, and comments acutely upon any subject which it touches." E. L. Woodward

+ Spec 176:278 Mr 15 '46 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p118 Mr 9 '46 480w

EISENHOWER, DWIGHT DAVID. Eisenhower's own story of the war. 122p il maps $2.50; pa $1 Arco

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles 46-25240

"The complete report by the supreme commander on the war in Europe from the day of invasion to the day of victory." Subtitle

Booklist 43:12 S '46

"While not purporting to be a full or final history, it is nevertheless an important and interesting historical document, written in the concise and simple language for which our Chief of Staff is famous." J. F. Waldie

Cath World 163:566 S '46 750w

Foreign Affairs 25:339 Ja '47 60w

Reviewed by R. E. Dupuy

New Repub 115:296 S 9 '46 1550w

"This report's great value, and it is a lasting one, is its view of the war through the eyes of the Supreme Commander. It is a historical document of permanent worth." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 21 '46 900w

"A clear, concise, historical report of the war in Europe." V. M. S.

+ Springfield Republican p4d Ag 11 '46 850w

"[This] is straightforward, coherent, objective, and factual, a model presentation of the intricate chessplay of modern battle as seen and directed on the highest echelons."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:314 D '46 260w

"In the category of official reports, it rates high. It has the balance, moderation and generosity with which Eisenhower has always been associated. Its temper is excellent and its moments of apology are muted. But when, for example, the report states, 'In the matter of command, it can be said here that all relationships between American and British forces were smooth and effective,' this is to be taken as courtesy, or statesmanship, or campaign oratory—but surely not, in the words of one paper, 'as the completely honest record of the man who was there and who was in charge.'" A. M. Schlesinger, Jr

+ — Weekly Book Review p8 Ag 11 '46 750w

EISENSCHIML, OTTO. Story of Shiloh; pub. under the auspices of the Civil war round table; and decorated by Joseph Trautwein. 89p il maps pa $5 Abraham Lincoln bk. shop 973.732 Shiloh, Battle of, 1862

Story of one of the bloodiest battles of the Civil war, as told by an acknowledged scholar. Bibliography.

"Shiloh has been a controversial subject during all of the generations since it was fought. The surviving generals debated about it acrimoniously. Their fuglemen swung mighty axes. Partisans still roar and reel. Dr. Eisen-schimpl has his own prejudices; but they have not prevented him from writing the best story of Shiloh." Elmer Gertz

+ Book Week p12 My 19 '46 650w

"The author, a careful student of the Civil War, offers a smooth, concise account of the entire action, supplemented by excellent maps, as well as a narrative of his personal experiences on a memorable visit."

+ Weekly Book Review p12 Je 23 '46 230w

EISLER, GERHART; NORDEN, ALBERT, and SCHREINER, ALBERT. The lesson of Germany; a guide to her history. 222p $2.50 Int. pubs.

943 Germany—History. Germany—Nazi movement 46-295

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"The authors make no attempt at writing responsible, pragmatic history, but offer a selection of facts, editorialized to suit the principles. Since a political writer usually has a sharp eye for the iniquities of the enemy, the reader will occasionally find a choice tidbit of Pan-German imperial dreams that hitherto was not known to him. These little items, however, lose much of their value because the authors do not give exact references. On the whole, we may say that to the faithful this type of history will be greatly edifying, while to the scholar it is a farce and to the reviewer a pest." Eric Voegelin

— Am Pol Sci R 40:385 Ap '46 400w

"The authors of this volume attempt to explain the German tragedy, as it unfolded from Luther to Hitler, with the irrevocable logic of a Greek tragedy. Being orthodox Marxists, they are unwilling to analyze the morphology of the German mind objectively. Instead, they use the yardstick of historical materialism to interpret German history. Their main reference sources are Marx, Engels, and Lenin. As a result, their book shows an appalling ignorance of the ideological, political, and social forces which shaped German destiny." K. L. London

— Ann Am Acad 244:213 Mr '46 750w

Christian Science Monitor p13 Mr 2 '46 100w

"This is a Communist interpretation of modern German history. The authors devote only a score of pages to the period before 1848, presumably on the theory that what took place before the promulgation of Marx's 'Communist Manifesto' is pre-history."

Foreign Affairs 24:751 Jl '46 80w

"The book abounds with street-corner oratory, futile generalizations, and outright fabrications. It quotes almost no sources or literature, but in the early parts relies extensively on Mehring's biased historical concoctions and, for recent developments (1914-45), on the official Moscow version with a few explicit references to that source of information." Melchior Palyl

— J Pol Econ 54:558 D '46 700w

"The volume under review is interesting even to one who disagrees with the authors' slant and cannot accept many of their interpretations. The first five chapters of the book are at least well done. They try unsuccessfully to cover the four centuries of German development from 1517 to 1914 in sixty pages. There is much oversimplification and distorted emphasis. . . The authors, however, do much better in discussing the aims, methods and motives of the Hitlerites and in describing the guilt of 'the great mass of the German people.'" W. C. Langsam

+ — Pol Sci Q 61:308 Je '46 700w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Sat R of Lit 29:28 F 2 '46 200w

EISNER, HELEN GELLER. The little boy who did not know why; pictures by Marian Cannon [35p] $1 Lothrop

46-7369

Picture storybook about a very small boy and a black dog who lived across the street. For a long time the little boy tried to make friends, but without success. Finally he learned the little dog's name and that made everything different.

Booklist 43:74 N 1 '46

"Good primer material in interest and reading level for first year readers."

+ Kirkus 14:422 S 1 '46 50w

"Text and pictures by Marian Cannon are full of everyday experiences to interest the preschool child. Board binding seems too fragile for many library circulations." N. L. Rathbun

Library J 71:1208 S 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p8 N 3 '46 180w

EKVALL, ROBERT BRAINERD. Tibetan voices [poems] drawings by Jean Hammond. 63p $1.50 Harper

811

46-4193

"In a series of fairly long poems, of free and irregular form, a missionary long resident in that country (and more recently a major in the U.S. army in Burma and China) causes various people of Tibet to express their responses to Christianity as it relates itself to their ideas and experiences." Christian Century

"This is such an unusual piece of missionary writing that it invites attention first as pure literature, and as such it merits high praise. To crack the shell of a Tibetan, see how he thinks and feels, and put the findings into excellent and imaginative English, is an achievement both in Christian understanding and in good writing."

+ Christian Century 63:807 Je 26 '46 70w

"Deep insights into Oriental character and the impact of Christianity on it are revealed in the poems." C. E. Batten

+ Crozer Q 23:302 Jl '46 100w

"It is fortunate, perhaps, that as a poet Mr. Ekvall does not make a good missionary. His characters are always credible, speaking with no false pretensions to a faith they understand only dimly. In fact, his most successful monologues are those in which cynicism or naïveté negates the new faith. Mr. Ekvall's interest is foremost in people and their reactions. He has set them forth effectively in artfully simple verse that reflects a sophisticated and receptive mind." Nona Balakian

+ N Y Times p14 Je 23 '46 450w

ELDRIDGE, FRED. Wrath in Burma; the uncensored story of General Stilwell and international maneuvers in the Far East. 320p il $3 Doubleday

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Burma. Stilwell, Joseph Warren 46-3622

Story of General Stilwell's China-Burma-India campaign, told by an American correspondent who during the war was "Uncle Joe" Stilwell's public relations officer. The author gives a very sympathetic picture of Stilwell, describing in detail the obstacles put in his way, and his trouble with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson

Atlantic 178:146 Jl '46 300w

Reviewed by Sterling North

Book Week p2 My 12 '46 750w

Booklist 42:326 Je 15 '46

"This book is straightforward, and often fascinating. Yet there are some grave faults of which any reader should be aware before he opens the volume. 'Wrath in Burma' is candid, and apparently highly accurate in detail, but it tells only a part of the story. It is prejudiced and sometimes inconsistent in its viewpoint. Events in London, Burma, India, and China since VJ-Day indicate the failure of the author to perceive some of the great international trends which were in movement long before the war. When, in the opening pages, Mr. Eldridge surveys the background of Far Eastern policy, he is also on uncertain footing. The grand strategy of World War Two is seen from an isolated viewpoint, and the author reveals little understanding of it; likewise with the personal animosities of Stilwell and Alexander, Hurley, Wedemeyer and Chiang; Chinese and British; British and Burmese—all are seen from the position of one who almost worshipped 'Vinegar Joe,' and who disliked anyone or anything that stood in Stilwell's way. The result is a considerable lack of balance." R. A. Brown

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 17 '46 800w

Foreign Affairs 25:164 O '46 80w

"A sharp, severe picture of a great general and the war in the CBI theatre, this is the story of 'Vinegar Joe' Stilwell from his defeat in Burma through the treachery of the allies, to his recall in 1945 at the request of Chiang Kai-Shek. . . Important in its expose, revealing."

Kirkus 14:142 Mr 15 '46 190w

"The book is likely to provoke the same sort of controversy as Ralph Ingersoll's 'Top Secret,' but for this reader it was particularly enjoyable as an effective portrait of a man who is both a great democrat and a remarkable military leader." Andrew Roth

ELDRIDGE, FRED—Continued

+ Nation 162:788 Je 29 '46 210w

"This is a denunciatory, sometimes almost a sarcastic, book, unbalanced but honest, a Far Eastern mixture of Ralph Ingersoll and Harry Butcher. There is one hero—Stillwell—but there are many villains, most of them British... 'Wrath in Burma' will never be accepted as official history, but it provides considerable information that official histories will never provide; it courts, rather than avoids, controversy, and it supplies in an informal, anecdotal manner the background of action in one of the war's most terrible campaigns. But its chief value is the illumination it casts upon Stillwell, the man and leader... 'Wrath in Burma' is a good book and a candid one, but it would have been a better book were it a more balanced one." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p3 My 12 '46 1550w

"The book is written in open-mouthed admiration for its central character and is hardly objective; nevertheless, it is worthy of serious attention even if only half of the author's charges of dirty dealings in the Far East are true."

+ New Yorker 22:98 My 11 '46 160w

"Mr. Eldridge tells his melancholy story without literary flourishes and with considerable feeling. He is not at his most comfortable in political analysis and is best when expressing the frank indignation of an impatient American who wants to see a war won and is outraged to find political considerations getting in the way of victory. In his anger he is frequently unfair to both the British and the Chinese, he occasionally gives the unwitting impression that he regards us as their moral superiors, and I still wonder if his familiar story of the alleged Chinese practical joke of pushing a soldier from an airplane has any actual basis. Such details do not keep 'Wrath in Burma' from being a valuable document on the fantastic difficulty of international cooperation, even under stress of fighting a powerful foe." Richard Watts

+ Weekly Book Review p5 My 12 '46 1500w

ELDRIDGE, PAUL. Men and women. (Beechhurst press publication) 224p $2.50 Ackerman

46-4293

Sixteen short stories all dealing with love in some manifestation—conventional or otherwise.

"Eldridge writes carefully and honestly, so that despite his startling combinations one does not feel that his whole intent is to shock. Nevertheless in many of the stories (particularly 'Porcelain Hens,' which describes an ordinary conflict between a mother and her spinster daughter) a stunning impact waits between the quiet beginning and the quiet end. The author is at his best when he writes about France. Indeed even when he is not describing French people the stories have a tinge which gives the reader the feeling that he is reading French in translation. Eldridge may set a story in Gramercy Park, but he is not writing about New Yorkers." A. J. Hiken

+ Book Week p11 Ap 28 '46 330w

"They seem to us deliberately derivative de Maupassant and not good at that... French backgrounds in the main fail to achieve for these a continental condiment and their sensationalism proves to be quite dull."

— Kirkus 14:44 F 1 '46 110w

"Most of the tales in the present volume take sarcastic little jabs at sex, a few deal with it seriously, some humorously, but none of them is unpleasantly raw. Quite a few depict the life of the Parisian boulevards and show the influence of De Maupassant, a master of this form of art. However, the author is a facile, versatile writer and not restricted to one theme or locale." P. H. Bickerton

+ Spring'd Republican p1d My 5 '46 350w

ELECTRONIC engineering master index; a subject index to electronic engineering periodicals, Jan, 1935 to June, 1945; ed. by Frank A. Petraglia. 217p $6 Macmillan

016.62138 Electronics—Bibliography. Electronics—Periodicals—Indexes

"This work indexes selected technical articles that appeared in sixty-five American and foreign periodicals during the period 1935-1945. Most of the indexed material is directly in the field of electronics but some material is included also from the fields of chemistry, electricity, and general industry. The indexed articles are arranged under commonly accepted subject headings in electronics. Further to facilitate the finding of material a detailed cross index of subjects is furnished at the back of the book. Another edition of the book was published in 1945 under the imprint of the Electronics Research Publishing Company." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1628 N 15 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:39 J1 '46

ELECTRONICS (periodical). Electronics for engineers; reference articles, charts and graphs; ed. by John Markus and Vin Zeluff. 390p il $6 McGraw

621.38 Electronics 45-11369

"Valuable collection of articles and charts taken from Electronics, covering design data required by engineers engaged in designing circuits, equipment and individual parts for radio, electronics, television, facsimile, radar, sound and related vacuum-tube apparatus. Topics are included which have been brought into prominence by the acceleration of electronic research during the war." (Library J) No index, but gives detailed list of articles in table of contents.

Booklist 42:209 Mr 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '46

Library J 70:687 Ag '45 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:7 Ja '46

ELFENBEIN, HIRAM. Socialism from where we are; with an introd. by Norman Thomas. 214p pa $1.50 Samson press, 112 E. 19th st, N.Y. 3

335 Socialism. Capital levy 46-569

"The purpose is to point out the shortcomings of the contemporary socialist movement and to show the way for advancing the socialist movement in the postwar era." (Social Studies) Index.

Reviewed by J. F. Cronin

Ann Am Acad 245:207 My '46 650w

"This book is a peculiar mixture of reformist nonsense and economic discernment. The author is best in his understanding of the nature of capitalist economy... It is a pity that Mr. Elfenbein is so unseasoned in his study of socialism. He has the economic insight for better stuff." E. A. Beder

Canadian Forum 25:270 F '46 350w

Social Studies 37:144 Mr '46 30w

ELFENBEIN, JULIEN. Business journalism, its function and future. 341p $4 Harper

070.486 Journalism. Trade journals 45-8359

Manual on trade paper practice, written especially for editors, publishers, advertising agencies, teachers, writers, business leaders and government officials. The book is in two parts: the first gives the background of the development of business journals, and the place they have come to occupy. In the second part the author analyzes the organization of the business paper and its functions. Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:345 Mr 1 '46 70w

"There are comparatively few books on business journalism, despite the magnitude of the field. Mr. Elfenbein's book should prove valuable to those seeking information on this subject. . . While a work on such a specialized subject will be limited in its appeal, it will be of interest to those teaching or engaged in business journalism, either on the editorial or business side, and to those considering going into business journalism. The person concerned with the daily newspaper also will find some things to interest him."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:9 Mr '46 160w

ELIOT, MRS ETHEL AUGUSTA (COOK).

Roses for Mexico. 119p $1.75 Macmillan

232.931 Guadalupe, Nostra senhora de

46-5638

In the year 1531 a vision appeared to the Indian convert Juan Diego, as he was on his way to Mass in Mexico City. The Blessed Virgin, using Juan as her messenger, sent to Bishop Juan de Zumárraga to tell him she wanted a church built on the spot where she appeared. Disbelief greeted Juan Diego until he came bearing the Virgin's sign. Her likeness imprinted on his cloak. This retelling of the story is for adults, but could be used for older children.

Christian Century 63:1015 Ag 21 '46
40w

"Mrs. Eliot, whose husband is a member of the faculty of Smith College, is so sincere in her enthusiasm for Guadalupe that her story acquires impetus in spite of a predetermined naïveté and the strangely collegiate vocabulary she assigns to Juan Diego. Our Lady spoke to her Indian in Aztec but the translation of the old Spanish text to 'littlest and dearest' has a painfully Fauntleroyish ring to it." E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 44:485 Ag 30 '46 400w

"A legend, of inspirational appeal, and with a certain innocent charm."

+ Kirkus 14:183 Ap 15 '46 130w

"Told with feeling and restraint. Well recommended." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 71:917 Je 15 '46 140w

"Mrs. Eliot tells the story with the simplicity of unquestioning faith. She tells it well; moreover she tells it reverently. It is likely, I think, that her retelling of the ancient legend will become the classic one in English, at any rate for the general reader. And anyone who has seen the throngs at the Guadalupe shrine will understand, reading Mrs. Eliot's story, a little more about why the Virgin of Guadalupe has become so significant a part of Mexico's life." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 18 '46
600w

ELIOT, GEORGE FIELDING. Strength we need. 261p $3 Viking

355.45 U.S.—Defenses. International cooperation

46-11946

In this book, presenting "a military program for America pending peace," the military expert of the New York Herald Tribune explores the conditions in the world today when the war is over but the peace has not yet been achieved. It is his thesis that the United States should not adopt a plan for national defense but rather a plan for international strength so that no nation will dare become aggressive before international law can be made truly dominant.

Reviewed by R. N. Schwartz

Book Week p46 D 1 '46 300w

Booklist 43:82 N 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 3 '46
600w

Kirkus 14:407 Ag 15 '46 170w

"This is a must book, far seeing, timely, clear, complete." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 71:1462 O 15 '46 140w

"Major Elliot's book is recommended as a thorough and honest analysis of our need for security and of the minimum requirements for attaining that security." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 O 19 '46 1000w

Reviewed by H. A. De Weerd

Weekly Book Review p6 O 20 '46 1400w

ELLERY QUEEN'S MYSTERY MAGAZINE.

To the queen's taste. 606p $3 Little

Short stories—Collections 46-5985

Thirty-six short mystery and detective stories selected from those published in Ellery Queen's Mystery magazine during the last four years. Each story is prefaced by an editorial comment.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p8 Ag 11 '46 140w

Booklist 43:71 N 1 '46

"Here is a collection of 36 stories, some of which are genuine detective discoveries, all of which result from the 'patience, persistence and passion' of the editors who have spent many years in research and selection."

+ Kirkus 14:262 Je 1 '46 110w

"A collection worthy of an honored place on the shelves of any lover of short stories dealing with mystery and crime." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 11 '46 170w

"All very nice, though perhaps not quite as wonderful as the editorial comment would have you think."

New Yorker 22:92 Ag 17 '46 80w

"The essential book of the year for all permanent libraries of detection." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 11 '46
80w

Springf'd Republican p4d S 15 '46 430w

"I have been struck by the fact that the American stories, while more experimental in form, are on the whole inferior to the English in style and, to my taste, in essential interest. Too many of the American stories are unconvincing. Nor do the Americans in general write so well as the Englishmen."

Weekly Book Review p17 Ag 11 '46
320w

Wis Lib Bul 42:152 N '46

ELLIOTT, STANLEY B. Alkaline-earth and heavy-metal soaps. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 342p il $7.50 Reinhold

668.1 Metallic soaps 46-6660

"Purpose of book is to acquaint research chemists and technologists in the petroleum, paint and lubricant industries with properties, raw materials, constitution, manufacturing methods and utility of the alkaline-earth and heavy-metal soaps. Six appendices on patents, specifications, applications, tables, etc. As usual in this series, the book gives extended references to the literature." (Library J) Index.

"Recommended." A. W. Ralston

+ Chem & Eng N 24:2552 S 25 '46 400w

"Important and first complete book in English on metallic soaps." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:1128 S 1 '46 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:47 Jl '46

ELLIS, DAVID MALDWYN. Landlords and farmers in the Hudson-Mohawk region, 1790-1850. 347p maps $4 Cornell univ. press

333.53 Land tenure—New York (state).

Agriculture—New York (state). Anti-rent troubles, New York, 1839-1846 46-5336

"The author has set before him certain major tasks: to describe the process of settlement, the growth of population, and the characteristics of pioneer agriculture; to trace the rapid shifts from grain culture to sheep raising and dairying . . . to contrast the forces leading to rural decline with the beginnings of scientific husbandry and agricultural education; to evaluate the role of roads, canals, and railroads; and to outline the land pattern and the effect of the leasehold upon the agrarian development of eastern New York." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

ELLIS, D. M.—Continued

"Although some may carp at Ellis' failure to ascribe the worst possible motives to the anti-renters, and others may cavil at the imputation of subconscious resentments to the recipients of the Patron's kindness or at a few minor points of topography, nevertheless this published doctoral dissertation ranks as an important contribution to the farmer's history." Irving Mark

+ Pol Sci Q 61:635 D '46 390w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:215 S '46 250w

ELLS, RALPH W. Salary and wage administration. 120p $1.50 McGraw

331.2 Wages. Job analysis 45-9553

"Presents a sound workable wage and salary plan applicable to all types of business. Discusses job normals, rate range schedules, job classifications and job evaluation. Outlines a program explaining why and when salaries should be reviewed, methods to use and how activities of the employment, training and job evaluation units should be correlated." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 42:276 My 1 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 70:1135 D 1 '45 70w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:106 Je '46 290w

ELLSBERG, EDWARD. Under the Red Sea sun. 500p $3.50 Dodd

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. Salvage 46-11947

The day after Pearl Harbor the author, a retired naval officer, applied for active service in the Navy and got it. He was placed in command of salvage work in Eritrea, and under almost impossible conditions, hampered by terrific heat, lack of materials, only a few men, and quantities of red tape, he accomplished wonders. This is Commander Ellsberg's story of that experience. Maps on end papers.

Reviewed by William McFee

Atlantic 178:172 D '46 550w

"All in all, what the book lacks in occasional logic, it more than makes up for in excitement. While it may not be significant, it is readable—so readable that it is hard to lay it down once you have started 'Under the Red Sea Sun.'" David Karno

+ Book Week p8 N 17 '46 490w

Booklist 43:84 N 15 '46

"The book leaves the reader with admiration and inspiration. In it he meets many efficient, devoted, noble men. One has confidence in nations containing people who work so hard for freedom, without asking for glory or seeking rich rewards." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 15 '46 600w

"Ellsberg did things and writes about them in a slam-bang way that should appeal to construction men. . . . The reader will have to wade through a good deal of pointing with pride at Ellsberg, but will have to admit the accomplishments and admire them, as well as the author's devotion to duty, and his courage. . . . Ellsberg has the ability to write, and in 'Under the Red Sea Sun' has turned out a rousing if sometimes intemperate story of American accomplishment in the early days of the war."

+ Eng N 137:127 D 12 '46 800w

"A detailed account of a superb war achievement. Commander Ellsberg, the marine salvage expert, is also a skillful writer. . . . I have not heard or read before about any single war project that required so much 'beating the system' as the one tackled by Commander Ellsberg when he attempted to restore, with virtually no backing, the shambles of a former Italian port—Massawa in Eritrea." Austin Stevens

+ N Y Times p5 N 3 '46 900w

"The author describes complicated operations in simple, untechnical language, and his account of this struggle of man against inert machines is often stirring."

+ New Yorker 22:65 D 28 '46 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 12 '46 750w

"A war book with the urgencies of war constantly in the background, but a peculiar sort of war book, in which the essence of the story is not the release and employment of destructive energies, but of construction—construction in its most difficult form, of turning ruins, both physical and psychological, into smoothly operating machinery. The appeal it makes is by no means hampered by Captain Ellsberg's manner of telling his tale. He has written a good many tales of adventure since his account of the S-51 job and has learned how to build up to and bring off a climax. . . . All in all, this is a good book, a story of achievement that lifts the heart, for which the captain may take a double bow." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 29:14 N 16 '46 700w

"If ever a ship salvage expert did a magnificent job and wrote a whacking good book about it, that man is Commander Edward Ellsberg. . . . Technical discussions are usually not easy reading for the layman, but the author explains and describes so lucidly and so absorbingly that the operations become clear and take hold of the imagination. Not even in any of his previous fascinating books of the sea are there passages to compare with those telling exactly how ships are raised and the hourly dangers confronting divers and surface workers. 'Under the Red Sea Sun' can be as technical as a textbook and as exciting as an adventure story because it is written by an expert who knows how to use words." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p4 N 10 '46 1250w

ELMER, ROBERT POTTER. Target archery; with a history of the sport in America. 524p il $5 Knopf

799.32 Archery 46-6217

"In the latter part of the year 1943 the book called Archery, by the author of this volume, became sold out. It was first published in 1926, was revised and extended in 1933. . . . Inasmuch as the technical portions largely represented the opinions of a former era, the author persuaded the publishers not to print it over again but to replace it with one or two entirely new books. Target Archery is therefore in no sense a revision of Archery, but is a fresh volume covering a limited field much more minutely." (Pref) Part I is a history of archery in America. Part II contains nine chapters covering such subjects as bow-woods, wooden and steel bows, arrows, strings, accessories, how to shoot, and arrow flight.

Booklist 43:50 O 15 '46

Kirkus 14:315 Jl 1 '46 170w

"Seldom has any book on any sport been so complete as 'Target Archery.'" R. R. C.

+ N Y Times p10 O 13 '46 400w

ELTING, MARY. Trucks at work; pictures by Ursula Koering. [48p] 50c Garden City pub. co.

629.2 Automobiles—Juvenile literature 46-7830

Text and pictures describe and illustrate different kinds of trucks, their drivers, and their uses. Written for mechanically minded small boys.

"A bright book with a fresh approach, introducing all kinds of trucks and truck drivers, and the ordinary and curious and important jobs they do."

+ Kirkus 14:523 O 15 '46 150w

"Recommended." M. M. Smith

+ Library J 71:1718 D 1 '46 70w

"Very attractively designed and illustrated, this book falls between two age groups. In appearance it is a lively gay book for the 6 to 8 year-old, while in actual text content it is written for 10 year-olds or older. . . . While full of interesting information the book lacks drama in its too evenly paced writing." R. A. Gordon

+ — N Y Times p30 O 20 '46 150w

"Most small boys who are mechanically minded will find it interesting."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:65 N 9 '46 40w

"Its size and shape is that of a picture book and it is jam-full of pictures in color, all along its margins, but because it is also a fact book and for so many small boys trucks are facts more fascinating than fiction, you will soon see that this absorbing work need not be given only to four-year-olds. Indeed, I read it myself with unabashed absorption. It told me a lot about trucks that I was glad to find out."

+ Weekly Book Review p30 N 10 '46 210w

ELTON, GODFREY ELTON, 1st baron. Imperial commonwealth; foreword by Allan Nevins. 544p il $5 Reynal

942 Great Britain—History. Great Britain—Colonies 46-5424

History of the British Empire from the Tudor period to the present. "Lord Elton has three basic points to make . . . (1) that the British Empire grew, it was not purposefully planned or conquered. (2) The successes won by British rule depended upon the character of the British and their institutions and not upon special formulas or tactics. (3) The British Commonwealth of Nations is the noblest experiment in international government that the world can show." (Weekly Book Review) Index.

Reviewed by Preston Slosson

Ann Am Acad 248:276 N '46 450w

Reviewed by Ellery Sedgwick

Atlantic 178:148 S '46 650w

Reviewed by George Probst

Book Week p20 D 8 '46 430w

"Reliable if not too readable."

Foreign Affairs 25:170 O '46 20w

"Here, in one volume, is a much-needed history of the British commonwealth. . . . The integration and paralleling of factual material is valuable; one could wish Lord Elton might have been objectively critical, less naively convinced that the Empire has 'spread organized political freedom across the world.'"

+ — Kirkus 14:210 My 1 '46 130w

"Most of the facts are here, from the first voyage of the Cabots at the end of the fifteenth century to the Cripps mission to India. Yet, on the whole, the facts do not, and cannot on a one-volume scale, have the comforting savor of reality. People, even Chatham, Livingstone, Rhodes, do not quite come alive. Places from the rock of Gibraltar to the continent of Australia, do not quite seem of this earth. There was simply too much to cover. . . . For the American reader, this book is not only an adequate survey—perhaps as good a single-volume survey as can be found—of the building of the British Commonwealth and Empire; it is a very useful indication of the temper of contemporary British minds as they approach the problems of this Imperial Commonwealth. . . . Yet Lord Elton is not quite the right instructor for the average American, and it is to be doubted whether his book will in this country do much more than preach to the already converted Anglophile minority—as an abundant literature already does. . . . He will not grant to Britain's Continental rivals in the expansion of Europe, to the Spanish, the Portuguese, the Dutch and the French, any virtues whatever as colonizing powers. Anglo-Saxons alone have grown and acquired land fitly; they alone have reconciled liberty with authority. The others, from Charles V and Philip II to Napoleon and Hitler, were agents of despotism and totalitarianism." Crane Brinton

+ — N Y Times p3 Ag 4 '46 1800w

"Often fascinating and always interesting." G. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 29 '46 100w

"Godfrey Elton writes in the tradition of Froude and Seely, and a little in that of Rudyard Kipling and Noel Coward. . . . Most Americans will find facts new to them about a fascinating and important series of experiments in colonial self-government and free international association. But the trouble with this kind of historical writing, as reading for us lesser breeds without the law, is that the spectacle of God's Englishman bowing in astonished awe before the image of his own transcendent moral superiority is likely to move us to responses unhelpful to international good feeling. So if you have any latent Anglophobic tendencies, choose some account of the British Empire which will strain your patience less." Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 29:10 J1 20 '46 1050w

"It is a superb pageant, popular history in the best sense, readable, informative and thought-provoking." Geoffrey Bruun

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Je 30 '46 1150w

ELWOOD, MURIEL. Deeper the heritage. 344p $2.75 Scribner

A romantic novel of life in Montreal and eastern Canada in the 1700s. Some of the characters of Heritage of the River (Book Review Digest, 1946) reappear in this book.

"Marred by some rather childish writing, this nevertheless has a comfortable feeling of French pioneer life, of the farming, the fur trade, the regional customs."

+ — Kirkus 14:434 S 1 '46 160w

"As part of a French-Canadian family saga, 'Deeper the Heritage' can only offer wooden characters hard to distinguish or remember, whose Frenchness does not go beyond the most superficial traits." C. B.

N Y Times p62 D 1 '46 500w

"'Deeper the Heritage' is a sprightly story, peopled with pleasant, believable characters and compounded of all the elements that make for good romance." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p14 D 8 '46 750w

EMANUEL, CEDRIC. Southwest Pacific sketchbook. [56p] $3.50 Prentice-Hall

741.91 World war, 1939-1945—Pictorial works. Islands of the Pacific 45-10140

Sketches of life behind the lines in Papua, Port Moresby, etc., by an Australian air defense officer. He shows ground crews servicing the planes, the life of the natives (called boongs by the Australians), the cook tents and washlines, and the scenery of that outpost of the Pacific war.

"Mr. Emanuel's sketches provide an excellent record of life there. He was greatly attracted by the natives, as well as by the towering Owen Stanley Mountains, which the Japanese tried vainly to cross, but most Americans will be more interested in his sketches of camp life." T. J. Hamilton

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 27 '46 150w

"This brief collection of drawings provides one of the few Aussie views of the Southwest Pacific war which so far have reached an American audience. Emanuel introduces his hearty informal countrymen in the angular postures, unconcerned about dignity, which he observed among them aboard the troopship Katoomba." Barrett McGurn

Weekly Book Review p6 Ja 13 '46 650w

EMERSON, CAROLINE DWIGHT. The little green car; il. by Paul Galdone. (Story parade picture bk) [28p] 50c Grosset

46-7349

A little green country car, unused to city ways, was badly damaged by a rambunctious taxi. For months the little car languished in a garage, until two boys, California bound, fixed it up. And on the way the little car had its revenge. For ages six to eight.

EMERSON, C. D.—Continued

Kirkus 14:490 O 1 '46 90w

"Pleasant, inconsequential Story Parade Book, delightfully illustrated by Galdone." Gertrude Andrus

Library J 71:1645 N 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p26 N 3 '46 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 10 '46 50w

EMERSON, CAROLINE DWIGHT. Mr Nip and Mr Tuck in the air; il. by W. C. Nims. 160p $2 Dutton

46-17780

"More absurd adventures of the mouselike Nip who had a fishhook in his tail and Tuck who was a cross between a teddy bear and a cat. This time they leave Sandy Cove by air and their adventures take place in the desert of the southwest." Library J

"Nice writing, good storytelling, sympathetic characterization, and hand-in-glove illustrations by W. C. Nims."

+ Kirkus 14:323 J1 15 '46 110w

"The humor and talking animals will appeal to boys and girls from six to ten. Not a necessary book for a small library." Elizabeth Burr

Library J 71:1131 S 1 '46 70w

"Generously illustrated by W. C. Nims, the story makes gay reading for the 7 to 10 readers." Florence Crowther

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 4 '46 180w

"The initial feeling of boredom which might possibly strike the average parent as he begins to read this book aloud to his children is dispelled as the story progresses. For the most part the narrative moves quickly and has funny situations enough to please small boys and girls." Marian King

Sat R of Lit 29:40 S 28 '46 230w

EMERSON, MRS ELIZABETH (HOLADAY) Good crop; decorations by Joseph W. Hopkins. 297p $2.50 Longmans

46-7970

A chronicle of a Quaker family living in eastern Illinois during the middle decades of the nineteenth century. The story follows the course of the lives of William Rees and his eleven children from the days of William's childhood back in Tennessee, to his death. In a brief foreword the author explains that the work is imaginative and fictional in form "the main characters . . . travel under their own good names . . . in accordance with Quaker devotion to truth."

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p5 D 29 '46 120w

Booklist 43:137 Ja 1 '47

"A well written, honest and heart-warming story."

+ Christian Century 64:48 Ja 8 '47 60w

Kirkus 14:349 Ag 1 '46 120w

"Interesting picture of Quaker home life in Illinois, but novel lacks sustaining quality. Effect is group of loosely knit sketches rather than a connected story." E. P. Nichols

Library J 71:1464 O 15 '46 70w

"Along with this gentle account of family life, Mrs. Emerson has managed to include much of the early history of the Quakers as well as a picture of our country at the time when Abe Lincoln rode his horse around the dirt roads of Illinois." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p64 D 1 '46 350w

Social Studies 38:48 Ja '47 20w

"The Good Crop' is a quiet book, but like the steadfast couple in whose home it is centered, with its full measure of imagination and fun. It is a substantial and illuminating witness both to the Quaker faith and traditions and to family life on the homesteads that grew up in the wake of the pioneers." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p16 D 8 '46 700w

Wis Lib Bul 42:168 D '46

EMERSON, RALPH WALDO. Portable Emerson; selected and arranged with an introduction and notes by Mark Van Doren. (Viking portable lib) 664p $2 Viking

818

46-11849

Collection of prose and verse from the works of Ralph Waldo Emerson. The selections include: essays chosen from all his books; addresses and lectures; selections from his journals; poems; and some of the letters. There are editorial notes on the different sections, and an introduction which is a tribute to Emerson.

Booklist 43:134 Ja 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '46

Kirkus 14:341 J1 15 '46 120w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 17 '46 230w

"As nearly pure gold as representative selections from a miscellaneous writer can be. This volume wastes no pages on the thin transcendentalism of such too-often reprinted essays as Compensation and The Over-Soul, but instead finds room for such too-often neglected essays as Farming, Memory, Quotation and Originality, and the magnificent public letter To Martin Van Buren, President of the United States."

+ Weekly Book Review p44 N 17 '46 360w

EMERY, ANNE. Tradition; drawings by Ruth King. 250p $2.50 Vanguard

47-30021

"A high school story of two young Japanese-Americans in a stuffy small-town school, and of their struggle to win acceptance by their contemporaries." Atlantic

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 178:170 D '46 30w

Booklist 43:156 Ja 15 '47

"High school activities and sports and the general bustle of high school life are made vivid and exciting, and the students are real and alive."

+ Kirkus 14:491 O 1 '46 120w

"This is a thoughtful story, very much needed now." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p33 N 24 '46 220w

"'Tradition' is an entertaining story for teen age that deals well with a situation involving racial minorities." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Ja 5 '47 470w

EMMET, DOROTHY MARY. Nature of metaphysical thinking. 238p $3 (10s 6d) Macmillan

110 Metaphysics

[45-4209]

"The general view [put forward] in this book is that metaphysics starts from the articulation of relationships, which are judged to be constitutive of an experience or experiences in a significant way. . . . A conceptual expression of such a relationship is then extended analogically as a co-ordinating idea, in terms of which further ranges of experience may be interpreted." (Pref) The author is Reader in philosophy in the University of Manchester. Index.

"In an age of transition the danger is that we seek the salvation in a synthesis and that we try to synthesise elements which are incompatible. It is the great value of this book, that it represents the meeting, and the conflict, of extremes in contemporary metaphysical thought, and that it makes a most serious attempt to pave the way for a real metaphysics." F. H. Heinemann

+ Hibbert J 44:184 Ja '46 1450w

"The greatest weakness of this work is its failure to discuss in an adequate fashion the relation of analogy to either scientific or metaphysical truth. To be sure, analogy has been used effectively in scientific inquiry, but scientific truth is its objective. The validity of a scientific theory does not seem to reside in the analogy from which the theory was derived. The claim that metaphysics uses analogy in its thinking about the world has been pretty generally admitted. The critical question is how metaphysics, by the use of analogy, attains theories which are true." J. G.

J Philos 43:669 N 21 '46 750w

ENCYCLOPEDIA Americana [ed. by A. H. McDannald]. 1945 ed 30v $150-$164.50 Americana corp

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 45-4707

"The principal editors of the Encyclopedia Americana remain unchanged from the 1941 edition. . . The Americana has called upon a distinguished list of contributors and is maintaining its previous standard in the new edition. However, it still clings to the policy of including only a partial list of contributors in the preface of each volume. . . The 1945 Americana is advertised as containing 502 entirely new articles and an additional 811 thoroughly revised, with 271 new half-tone plates representing 982 new pictures. Examination of the 1945 edition shows important revisions in the following articles: Labor Movement in America, Labor Legislation, Immigration, Social Reform Programs and Movements, Atlantic Charter, South America, Canada, China, United States Diplomatic Relations with Egypt, Geopolitics, Astronomy, Cartel, Colloid Chemistry, and Music. . . Articles revised in 1943 included Plastics, Mexico, Sulfa-Drugs. Articles on cities, towns and states in the United States have been quite consistently and thoroughly revised since 1941, and also those on many other countries. . . Biographies of most of the outstanding figures in the present war picture, such as De Gaulle, Eisenhower, Admiral King, Franco, Osmeña have been added, although some among them, for example Rudolph Hess and J. Edgar Hoover, are missing. . . Census figures for 1940 are used in material on cities and states in the United States, both in general articles and in those on individual places." Subscription Bks Bul

"The Americana has been considered unusually good in its coverage in scientific and technical fields. Many of the basic articles on scientific subjects are still valuable, but new developments and revised bibliographies need to be added. . . Alphabetizing is sometimes inconsistent and occasionally incorrect. There are also some mistakes in cross references. Another inconsistency is in the form of society or institutional entries. . . Again the 1945 Encyclopedia Americana is recommended for purchase to those persons and libraries needing a new encyclopedia or to replace worn-out copies. For libraries having a 1939 or later edition and the current yearbooks it does not seem a necessary purchase."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 16:65 O '45 1650w

ENCYCLOPAEDIA Britannica; a new survey of universal knowledge [Walter Yust, editor]. 1946 printing 24v il pl maps $219-$249 Encyclopaedia britannica

032 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 46-1901

"This review covers the 1945 'U' printing of the Encyclopaedia Britannica. . . The contributors are authorities in their fields and the high standard of Encyclopaedia Britannica has long been recognized. Walter Yust continues as editor and the contributors whose names are listed in each volume are authorities in their fields. The percentage of deceased contributors is not readily apparent, however. Out of over 400 names listed in Volume I death is indicated in only 17 cases by the adjective 'late', although several had died many years ago. . . A page by page comparison with the 1941 printing shows that in 450 pages of Volume 17, 12 articles have been rewritten, 8 have been revised in some measure, 5 new articles have been added, 2 have been dropped and new illustrations have been added to 5 articles. If the revision of Volume 17 is considered representative for the set, the number of new or revised articles in the 24 volumes would amount to only about 1900, and the new illustrations to about 400. . .

Population figures appear to have been carefully revised, although there are exceptions. . . Statistics are out of date in many instances. . . Many technical articles remain unchanged. . . Revision is definitely needed in the field of medicine to include further information on new developments which have occurred during the war years, e.g., penicillin, blood plasma." Subscription Bks Bul

"There seems to be no accepted form for bibliographies, nor do they always include recent books. . . Many of them are out of date. . . However, those articles which are thoroughly revised do have the bibliographies brought up to date, for example, Europe, Japan, and the Pacific Islands. . . The 1945 printing of the Encyclopaedia Britannica is recommended for all libraries where the purchase of an encyclopedia is contemplated or where a worn set is to be replaced. Libraries having printings since 1939 will find them still of value especially when used with the yearbooks."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 16:62 O '45 2000w

ENGELMANN, SUSANNE CHARLOTTE. German education and re-education; with an introd. by Lewis M. Terman. 147p $2 Int. univ. press

370.943 Education—German 46-118

"To prevent the renaissance of a martial, aggressive Germany, Miss Engelmann says, its people must undergo an educational revolution. The 'drill school' principle must be eliminated and the people made to realize that they have been the victims of 'a gigantic self-deception caused by an inferiority complex of long standing.' Miss Engelmann believes that this can be done only by restricting education until a new and trustworthy generation of teachers can be trained." New Yorker

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Mr 3 '46 50w

"Her approach to the problem is intelligent, realistic, and on the whole convincing."

+ New Yorker 21:67 D 29 '45 120w

"It discusses with competence and good judgment the educational methods in the German Empire, in the Weimar Republic, and under Hitler's regime. It should be read by all those who wish to discuss the problems of German education, and who so often do it without any knowledge of the educational development of modern Germany. . . The author's trust in the German churches might be too great, but on the whole her sane little book can be recommended as a serious approach to a serious and difficult problem." Hans Kohn

+ Sat R of Lit 29:29 F 2 '46 300w

ENGLE, NATHANAEAL HOWARD, ed. Marketing in the West; sponsored by Pacific advertising association. 263p $3.50 Ronald

658.8 Marketing. West—Commerce 46-4674

"Each of the 22 chapters of this symposium was written by a different author in an attempt to give a regional marketing picture of present and postwar business in the 11 western states. Virtually every industry which markets goods is discussed, with two chapters devoted to the over-all picture. Composed of new and old statistics, and some forecasting, the book might be of help to the western manufacturer, both actual and potential, as well as to market researchers in various existing industries." Chem Eng

Reviewed by J. F. Cosgrave

Chem Eng 53:273 D '46 80w

Library J 71:1052 Ag '46 70w

ENRIGHT, ELIZABETH (MRS ROBERT GILLHAM). Borrowed summer, and other stories. 275p $2.50 Rinehart

46-5232

Thirteen stories of varying lengths by a writer of children's books, who here offers her first book for grown-ups. Contents: Borrowed summer; These yellow sands; Pastoral; The shores of Triple-E; A message from Delphi; Song in a high voice; A ton of pitchblende; Sugar for the old horse; Home to grandma's; Dancing lesson; Bureau of lost and found; Those big silk moths; The maple tree.

ENRIGHT, ELIZABETH—Continued

Book Week p49 D 1 '46 90w

Booklist 43:102 D 1 '46

"Many of them, like the title story, reveal the hidden longings or stifled ambitions of ordinary middle-aged persons. This is done with sympathy and imagination. . . Miss Enright has a special gift for dealing with manifestations of nature, whether they be flowers, moths, trees, or, above all, wind and rain." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 30 '46 450w

"Not the quality in writing of say New Yorker level, but in theme and tenor, distinctly superior to the run-of-the-mill ladies' magazines." Kirkus 14:396 Ag 15 '46 120w

"Some stories have a wry gaiety like her 'Pastoral' which tells of the spiritual adventure that a handkerchief-size garden can be to a New York couple. Others have a stern grandeur like her moving and tender 'Home to Grandma,' which inches a sensitive colored child into an awareness of racial discrimination. Some are deft enough to put one in mind of Dorothy Parker, while others are so relaxed and leisurely that the reader does not realize how deeply involved he has become." E. S. Holsaert

+ N Y Times p14 N 17 '46 270w

"Taken one at a time, each story has a flavor of its own, some sharply seasoned and others more tenuous to the tongue. As a collection, however, the stories display a prime preoccupation with the contrast between the sweetness of man's longing and his sour fate. . . A few of the stories are told through the untutored, but perceptive eyes of children and Miss Enright's children, neither cute nor quaint nor unduly sensitive, come very much alive. But the sharpest of the stories are seen through the disabused eyes of women." Virgilia Peterson

Weekly Book Review p4 O 20 '46 800w

EPSTEIN, ALVIN. How to draw animated cartoons. 64p il $2.50 Greenberg

741.58 Moving picture cartoons, Caricatures and cartoons 45-9676

"Principles and elementary techniques of drawing for the effect of animating figures, animals, and objects. Simple text with adequate illustration." Booklist

Booklist 42:160 Ja 15 '46

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 13 '46 70w

EPSTEIN, SAMUEL (CHARLES STRONG, pseud). Stranger at the inlet; a Roger Baxter mystery 216p il $2 Messner

46-25170

Mystery story for grades five to eight.

Booklist 42:334 Je 15 '46

Kirkus 14:37 Ja 15 '46 90w

"Boys interested in science and mystery will find this an exciting tale." A. H. McGinity

+ Library J 71:984 Jl '46 70w

"This is an exciting story, with a convincing plot and solution, and the characters have an honest warmth, life and wit." Marjorie Fischer

+ N Y Times p28 Jl 14 '46 120w

EPSTEIN, SAMUEL, and WILLIAMS, BERYL (ADAM ALLEN, DOUGLAS COE, pseud). Burma road; il. by Winfield Scott Hoskins. 192p $2.50 Messner

625.7 Burma road

46-5738

Descriptive record of the building of the Burma road, which was made almost wholly without machinery, and cost the lives of thousands of Chinese laborers. For older boys.

Booklist 43:19 S '46

Horn Bk 22:359 S '46 120w

"The style is concise, clearcut, and rightfully subordinated to the facts which are of interest to teen agers and adults."

+ Kirkus 14:38 Ja 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by M. A. Webb

Library J 71:1056 Ag '46 60w

"The saga of the Burma Road, related in this book with skill, sympathy and a painstaking regard for fact, is a story that will live long in the memory of man." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p28 Jl 14 '46 260w

"Replete with the detail and colorful background which appeal to young people, copiously illustrated with effective drawings, it is a book that should interest older boys and girls." R. A. Brown

Sat R of Lit 29:42 S 28 '46 360w

"It must be a dull boy who could find this book about the Burma Road anything but absorbing. Roads make history, but seldom has one made so much in so short a time, under conditions so appealing." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 11 '46 360w

Wis Lib Bul 42.116 Jl '46

EPSTEIN, SAMUEL, and WILLIAMS, BERYL (ADAM ALLEN, DOUGLAS COE, pseud). Miracles from microbes; the road to streptomycin; with an introd. by Norman T. Kirk. 155p $2 Rutgers univ. press

615.329241 Antibiotic substances

History of microbiology from days of the sixth century B.C. to the recent discovery of the "miracle drug" streptomycin. Written for the layman. No index.

Booklist 43:49 O 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

Current Hist 11:331 O '46 30w

"Told in nontechnical style." L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1128 S 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p23 Jl 14 '46 50w

"The book is honest, fair, sensible, and a long-needed antidote to some of the recent bilge in the public prints which has unfortunately given the idea that these drugs will cure anything. The authors have carefully weighed the evidence on the medical value of these new agents, considered that on the one hand most of them haven't been studied long enough and that on the other they have given some mighty startling results in a few patients, and come out with a reasonable attitude of 'we'll have to wait and see, but oh, brother!'" Milton Silverman

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 20 '46 350w

"A popular book which is a model of its kind." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ Sat R of Lit 29:12 S 28 '46 380w

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:1 Ag '46 1450w

"The book is written in nontechnical terms for popular reading. It explains that many phases of the problem discussed are still to be solved." E. A. F.

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 30 '46 300w

"Streptomycin has been greeted with so much spectacular ballyhoo in the press that this authoritative little book, with its unusual restraint and its careful story of the long, slow process of research, is very welcome. Its step-by-step account of the mixture of genius and hard work that eventually led to success is in striking contrast with the title of the book. There is no miracle between its covers. But there is a thrilling record of how such medical results are obtained. It is an excellent example of the anti-miracle school of scientific writing." Gerald Wendt

+ Weekly Book Review p24 S 29 '46 360w

ERCILLA Y ZUNIGA, ALONSO DE. Araucaniad; a version in English poetry of [his] La Araucana [by Charles Maxwell Lancaster and Paul Thomas Manchester] pub. for Scarritt college, Peabody college and Vanderbilt university. 326p $4.50 Vanderbilt univ. press 861 45-9396

"This is the first complete English verse translation of a work universally recognized as the national epic of Chile and the greatest epic poem produced by the Renaissance classical tradition in the Spanish tongue. Its author was a soldier who went to Chile in 1556 at the age of twenty-two to aid in the taming of the untamable Araucan Indians. . . . The poem thus begun in the midst of the rigors of the campaign was worked upon for nearly a quarter century, being published in three parts in 1569, 1578 and 1589. So stirring was this poetic report on the bloodiest and least successful of the campaigns of conquest that it begot a whole series of imitations, answers and continuations; but among them all, it stands unique as a work of art, a truthful chronicle, and a glorification of the indomitable Araucans." Weekly Book Review

"As a poem, it is one of those great sprawling awkward national monuments—every language has them: the kind of thing that you must read if you are a scholar, that you feel you must read if you are a patriot, but that only the itching of pedantry or the enthusiasm of patriotism could ever mistake for poetry. Its chief characteristics arerodomontade and gore." Dudley Pitts

— Sat R of Lit 29:20 Mr 23 '46 450w

"In making 'The Araucaniad' available in a complete verse translation, Messrs. Lancaster and Manchester have performed an important and somewhat prodigious service. . . . Unfortunately, the success of their venture is somewhat marred by certain errors of approach to the always difficult problem of poetic translation." B. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p22 Ja 13 '46 600w

ERICKSON, CLIFFORD ERIC, and HARP, MARION CROSLLEY. Guidance practices at work 325p $3.25 McGraw 371.42 Personnel service in education 46-3837

"Schools of many types have contributed descriptions of school guidance procedures that they have found effective. These descriptions offer a cross section of actual practice in the U.S. and cover organization of a program, classroom activities, co-curricular activities, and vocational guidance." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:7 S '46

School & Society 64:120 Ag 17 '46 40w

ERICSON, SIBYL ALEXANDRA (ALEXANDRA DICK, pseud). Curate's crime (Mystery house publication) 336p $2 Curl [8s 6d Hurst]
[45-10702]

Detective story.

"The very title of this book is misleading, for the curate commits no crime. Further than that, we are given a completely distorted impression of the characters of the persons involved. And to make matters worse, the story is too long and too dull." Isaac Anderson
— N Y Times p30 Ap 7 '46 90w

"Striving much too hard to pull off a literary feat, Miss Ericson certainly succeeds in confusing the reader but fails to give him a sporting chance toward working out the solution." M. L. H.

— Spring'd Republican 4d My 5 '46 180w
Times [London] Lit Sup p425 S 8 '45 60w

ERIKSON, SIBYL ALEXANDRA. See Ericson, S. A.

ERNENWEIN, LESLIE CHARLES. Rio renegade. 221p $2 McBride

46-3220

Western story.

Kirkus 13:549 D 15 '45 80w

"A good literate Western laid in Arizona territory, with plenty of hard riding, gun play, desperate men and hairbreadth escapes." P. H. Bickerton

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 14 '46 160w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p33 Mr 31 '46 80w

ERNST, MORRIS LEOPOLD. The first freedom. 316p $3 Macmillan

325.443 Liberty of speech. Liberty of the press. Radio broadcasting. Moving picture industry 46-1639

"It is Mr. Ernst's belief that, having taken the trouble to fight a long, hard war to protect our press and radio and movies from German and Japanese control, we might sensibly go a few steps further and protect them from American control. His book is loaded with facts and figures to support this theme, and it is written with the intensity and the courage of a citizen who has had long acquaintance with the rules and conditions of freedom, through battling its restraints. . . . 'The First Freedom' begins with a description of the vanishing market place of thought. It then takes up, in turn, the press, the radio, and the movies. It names names, gives bills of particulars, marshals quantities of disturbing figures, and ends with specific recommendations for correcting the illness—through laws designed to make life possible and profitable for small operators." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Yeager

Ann Am Acad 246 153 J1 '46 400w

Reviewed by Paul Bixler

Book Week p1 Mr 17 '46 1500w

Booklist 42:220 Mr 15 '46

Bookmark 7:5 My '46

Reviewed by Fergus Glenn

Canadian Forum 26:67 Je '46 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46

Foreign Affairs 24:745 J1 '46 30w

"Unfortunately Mr. Ernst has cheapened his subject by his headlong, dictaphonic style. It has much of the tastelessness of which he complains in the Hollywood monopolists; when he speaks of the 'idea businesses' and 'media of brain nourishment,' one has the uneasy feeling that the prostitution of the First Freedom has gone farther than even Mr. Ernst realizes. Such tawdry comments as that 'love-making, marriage, wealth, gangsterdom are the vitamins of the silver screen' do not improve the chances of the volume's 'readership,' as Mr. Ernst would call it, among persons who demand more of an author than fervor and good will." M. De W. Howe

— Harvard Law R 59:1016 J1 '46 400w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay

Library J 71:482 Ap 1 '46 140w

"We can readily concede the correctness of Mr. Ernst's indictment and the timeliness of his warnings without accepting in full either his assumptions or his conclusions, or even his interpretation of the facts which he presents." H. S. Commager

Nation 162:723 Je 15 '46 2100w

Reviewed by Heinz Eulau

New Repub 114:419 Mr 25 '46 800w

"Mr. Ernst believes that we in the United States are losing our first freedom, the freedom of expression. Government is not the agency of repression. 'Concentrated economic power' in the press, movies and radio, monopolies of the mind' which 'have entered our folkways' are the destroyers of our freedom. . . . The sincere, consistent service of Mr. Ernst in the battles he believes to be decisive ones in the fight for democracy are acknowledged. But the sweeping statements quoted above, and his promise to prove them by 'detailed factual analysis' will bear analysis by persons who think that they, too, are on the side of democracy and do not agree with Mr. Ernst. . . Mr. Ernst uses magnifying glasses to size up the hobgoblins he sees. They are not nearly so big as he makes out." C. McD. Puckette

ERNST, M. L.—Continued

N Y Times p4 Mr 17 '46 1760w

"It seems to me an exceptionally valuable and exciting book. Because it baits giants, the book will be greeted in some circles with a deafening silence. In others its facts and figures will, quite properly, be disputed. The phenomenon of evaporation is not perfectly clear-cut and has many modifying factors. Publishers and producers will have no trouble challenging Mr. Ernst's interpretation of the facts of monopolistic life. . . But I believe that Mr. Ernst is essentially right, fundamentally sound, and that he proves his case." E. B. White

+ New Yorker 22:97 Mr 16 '46 1400w

"Morris Ernst has won his right to write this volume by his lifelong enthusiasm for the cause of civil liberty and by his constant struggle against giantism in various political and economic fields. . . As a cry of alarm, this monograph is most successful. The constructive side of it will be found too rhetorical and abstract for most readers. It does not get far enough away from the writing-letters-to-Congress stage. Moreover, Mr. Ernst's faith in the value of the educational programs and the discussion forums of the air will seem a little touching to anyone who has listened to the ones we are getting over the radio today." W. S. Lynch

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:29 Mr 23 '46 850w

Reviewed by H. L. Cross

Springf'd Republican p4d My 19 '46 800w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 35:167 My '46 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p543 N 9 '46 1200w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:127 Je '46 160w

"Mr. Ernst is sincerely concerned about the effect of mass production of expression on the thinking and education of the public. His book is the most objective and most persuasive presentation of the problem of competitive expression of ideas which I have yet read." Thurman Arnold

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ap 14 '46 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 42:70 My '46

"[Mr. Ernst] has written here with care, competence, and restrained indignation his fear that in the name of free enterprise our free press is fast becoming not the safeguard of the many but the monopoly of a few." Jonathan Daniels

+ Yale R n s 35:726 summer '46 700w

ERSKINE, DOROTHY. Crystal boat. 216p $2.50
Fischer, L.B.

46-3406

Romantic tale of thirteenth century Scotland. The heroine fell in love with an unfrocked monk; later became mistress of King Alexander III, whose child she bore; was imprisoned by the jealous queen; but escaped and went to England with the monk who had rescued her.

"This brief tale of medieval lust and violence recalls, in its subject matter, Sigrid Undset's 'Gunnar's Daughter.' Unfortunately Mrs. Erskine lacks Undset's sobriety of taste. The theme demands a narrative style of simple strength; instead the author has lavished upon it a thousand irritating tricks and manners—tortured grammatical structure, archaic and dialect words and phrases, a kind of false and breathless lyricism, which together effectually smother whatever creative talent she may possess." Arthur Meeker
— Book Week p18 Mr 31 '46 600w

"This book only just misses. The story holds; atmosphere and background are scholarly and masterly; the language is haunting, and some scenes are poignantly alive—the baby's death, Guibert's death. But the final impact is plain dull. Perhaps it should have been written in French—it is not unlike Bédier's Tristan, or Péguy's Joan of Arc, or any Claudel. The sameness of the metre, the length of the paragraphs, the monotony of agglomerating irrelevant detail around each person in order to center them, tire mind and eye." Anne Fremantle

— + Commonweal 44:218 Je 14 '46 800w

"A modest enough story against a rich and breathless decor, a drawing, overwhelming spate of 13th century legend, lore, history, customs, apparel, religion, superstitions, that is not only background, but part of the story."

Kirkus 14:48 F 1 '46 150w

"The language, full of ancient usage, becomes most monotonous. Not recommended." R. P. Tubby

— Library J 71:484 Ap 1 '46 90w

New Repub 114:742 My 20 '46 120w

"Miss Erskine has unmistakably echoed the style and language of medieval romance; but that is as far as the imitation goes. Recreating with a precise historical perspective, she presents not a 'lovesome' tale of courtly love, but a realistic picture of Scotland with all the sophisticated, hard-headed, cynical aspects of the age which medieval romance glossed over. But though there is more than a hint of Chaucerian humor and insight here, Miss Erskine remains chiefly a historian. She has lost the essential mood of the genre, its Glottoesque disconcert with literal reality." Nona Bala-kian

N Y Times p22 Ap 14 '46 400w

"Miss Erskine knows her medieval Scotland well and uses her somewhat conventional though occasionally spirited plot as a string upon which to bead information about the life and legends of the period. . . That Miss Erskine can see her characters in the round, make them act effectively, and arouse among her readers an interest in their fate, all this becomes evident in the second half of her book. Before that point has been reached, however, she has expended too much time and effort on details which decorate but do not integrate her tale. For the most part her characters are types, not people. Moreover, by eschewing all dialogue and by imitating the vocabulary and formless prose of medieval narratives, she unnecessarily slows up her pace." Grace Frank

— + Sat R of Lit 29:35 Ap 27 '46 400w

"A remarkable interest in and familiarity with life, talk and legendry of the Middle Ages, together with a happy knack of reproducing conversation in indirect discourse, promises much for this author when she has more to tell; her first novel, slight as it is, makes uncommonly lively reading." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p26 My 5 '46 270w

ERSKINE, DOROTHY. Russia's story; ill. by Bob Smith. 154p $2.50 Crowell

947 Russia—Juvenile literature 46-4296

The geography, history, government, and social life and customs of four sections of Russia: the Arctic, the Steppes, a farm, and Moscow. The book is intended for sixth to eighth graders, and is illustrated in black and white.

Booklist 42:350 J1 1 '46

"The book is clearly and agreeably written and well illustrated. It should be a help to better understanding of the Soviet Republics." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:271 J1 '46 80w

Kirkus 14:105 F 15 '46 80w

"Recommended for 6th to 8th graders." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 71:489 Ap 1 '46 110w

"This is a perplexing book. For slightly half its length—the first seven chapters—it is a clear, direct exposition of Russian life in terms of geography and history. The workings of the Soviet State, political and economic, are explained objectively and with an illuminating simplicity that this reviewer has not seen surpassed anywhere. This section of the book might be read with profit by teachers and parents. It is exactly what thoughtful junior high school students are seeking. On Page 85, inexplicably, the book breaks in two. From there on we have a commonplace series of sentimental, prettified descriptions of child life in the U.S.S.R., written in a fourth-grade vocabulary for the first-grade intelligence level." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p23 Je 2 '46 160w

"To compress so much into 150 pages indicates great skill of omission, the result of which is a highly satisfactory story, clear and informative, of contemporary Russians and what made them the way they are." E. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 S 1 '46 100w

"After reading this very simple and systematic survey by Dorothy Erskine the children will probably know more about the U.S.S.R. than their parents, whom they might well interest in reading through at least the first nine chapters. Mrs. Erskine shows herself to be thoroughly familiar with the subject. For in writing a little one has to know much." Dola de Jong

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 J1 13 '46 360w

"Russia's Story" is told with freshness and imagination. It is also interpreted with rare sympathy and understanding that are at the same time wholly free of propaganda. . . The book is delightfully illustrated with charts, maps, and drawings that are both amusing and enlightening. . . Unfortunately, the book calls for various grades of reading ability. While it is recommended for the ten-to-fourteen-year age group, a few of the charts and parts of the text are a little too complicated for the ten-year-olds and some teen-agers may scorn the simplicity of the stories. It is to be hoped that many teachers and parents will want to read the story aloud, not only for the entertainment and instruction of their young listeners but also because they themselves will learn things about the Soviet Union which few people take the trouble to investigate. Miss Erskine has made a very real contribution to a wider understanding between the peoples of the USA and the USSR." B. W. Burhoe

+ Survey G 35:372 O '46 360w

"Simply told, with friendly admiration but without too much bias." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Je 9 '46 150w

ESSAYS on the eighteenth century; presented to David Nichol Smith in honour of his seventieth birthday. 320p $6.50 (21s) Oxford

820.4 English literature—History and criticism. Eighteenth century. Smith, David Nichol

"In this volume eighteen British and American scholars have written of the major and minor literary figures of the period between Anne and George III. . . Great figures are considered in single aspect, the lesser ones sometimes in entirety. Steele and Defoe are missing. Wordsworth and Burns, although they point to the next century, are included." N Y Times

"The most outstanding worth of the book—apart from its human testimony of scholars to their master—is the article which lists Nichol Smith's own bibliography. Next, the plain evidence that though Nichol Smith has consistently put scholarship first he has not inhibited the impulse of most of his scholars from the exercise of their human right and duty to pass judgment on the matter of their scholarship. They are expert in the technique of determining fact; but they venture, as in his modesty their teacher so seldom ventured, to record their sense of the fact's value." H. B. Charlton

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 28 '45 550w

"Few birth tributes can have been more highly appreciated than this delightful volume." E. E. Kellett

+ New Statesman & Nation 30:321 N 10 '45 700w

Reviewed by Thomas Lask

N Y Times p22 My 19 '46 400w

"This admirable volume is a symposium of extraordinary value, for it shows the trends, the habits—and, I may venture to say, the fashions—of modern academic thought in relation to the writers of this particular period. With one exception the essays are purely literary, and although many features of eighteenth-century literature and many of its most characteristic representatives are omitted, it is upon the whole an excellent survey." C. E. Vulliamy

+ Spec 175:364 O 19 '45 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p558 N 24 '45 2300w

"[This] volume is not, and does not claim to be, a survey of the entire literary achievement of that age, but it offers an abundance of intellectual recreation for alert minds. The contributions vary greatly in length, subject and method of treatment, but the quality is uniform and satisfyingly high. Only two or three of them—Mr. Harold Williams's discussion of the comparative unreliability of two editors of Swift: Professor Garrod on the evidence for dating Gray's Elegy; Mr. R. C. Chapman on the formal openings and closings of Dr. Johnson's letters—are technical and dry-as-dusty. Various other subjects, had they fallen into the wrong hands, might have been touched with excessive academic austerity. Fortunately they have fallen into the right hands." S. C. Chew

+ Weekly Book Review p20 Ag 25 '46 1250w

EURIPIDES, Medea. See Jeffers, R.

EUSTIS, HELEN. Horizontal man. 231p $2.50 Harper

46-2671

Psychological thriller, the scene of which is a New England college for women.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p11 Ap 28 '46 140w

Booklist 42:318 Je 1 '46

"For a first novel, this shows capable writing."

+ Kirkus 14:23 Ja 15 '46 150w

"The excellent characterization and background make this psychological thriller a continuously interesting job." E. H.

+ New Repub 114:486 Ap 8 '46 60w

"Miss Eustis writes with witty sophistication when she handles her lighter characters. . . It is a tribute to Miss Eustis' talent that she is able to weld together the various elements in her novel and maintain an excellent tension. She has written a splendid first book—and one hopes she will not succumb to a formula, as so many have done, but will continue to experiment and develop. Incidentally 'The Horizontal Man,' in the hands of a good director and uncensored, would make a swell movie." H. R. Hays

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 31 '46 650w

"[The] solution has obviously been lifted straight out of a textbook on abnormal psychology. A very interesting first try, however, by an author who has a keen eye for character and who will do much better when she has tossed out some of those textbooks."

+ New Yorker 22:96 Mr 30 '46 120w

"By all means read it!"

+ Sat R of Lit 29:54 Mr 30 '46 40w

"A better-than-average mystery novel." R. F. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 7 '46 130w

"First main fact about this psychological thriller is that it contains more psychiatric ideas and terminology than any of its predecessors in its currently fashionable bracket and thus deserves its billing better than most, if you go by actual measurements. . . Aside from her researching abilities, Miss Eustis proves a likable hand in lighter passages. She might not care if more knowing customers grin a little at her text-bookishness." Will Cuppy

EUSTIS, HELEN—Continued

+ Weekly Book Review p22 Ap 7 '46
310w

EVANS, BERGEN. Natural history of nonsense. 275p $3 Knopf

133.7 Errors, Popular. Errors, Scientific 46-11905

Essays on some of mankind's superstitions and delusions on subjects as diversified as race psychology, sex, religion, and hygiene. The author is a professor of English at Northwestern university. Index.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 178:142 S '46 240w

"In the true spirit of skepticism, I feel it necessary to comment that there is occasionally almost too glib an approach to certain aspects of fallacious thinking. The blunt dismissal of some investigations of clairvoyance and so-called para-psychology is unwarranted, although highly in the spirit of the entire volume. Certain omissions—particularly a discussion of lycanthropy and exorcism—are noticeable. . . But any adverse comment about this book seems heresy. . . Alone for its brilliant and unbelievably mordant writing 'The Natural History of Nonsense' should circulate well." Hugo Sonnenschein Jr.

+ Book Week p3 S 29 '46 750w

Booklist 43:65 N 1 '46

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 160:15 D 1 '46 420w

"Bergen Evans has done us a service in disproving the more popular misconceptions which spring from old wives' tales, taboos, and folk legends of childhood or race. Where he has failed, however, is in trying to entertain and edify us at the same time. He has compressed entirely too much material into one volume." Richard McLaughlin

Commonweal 45:75 N 1 '46 650w

"A witty, discursive book, an arsenal for skeptics, but, in the author's phrases, aimed at fortifying and entertaining the 'trained mind' rather than at instructing the 'popular mind.'" H. W. Hart

+ Library J 71:1204 S 15 '46 100w

"This volume is likely to amuse and instruct as well as disturb. Citing chapter and verse, Evans successfully destroys many of the shibboleths that have become so dear to humanity. In accomplishing his task he manages never to become ponderous about his anatomizing of credulities engendered by man's will to subscribe to the incongruous, because he finds that life devoid of the miraculous is intolerably dull. He punctures, deflates and ridicules with a zest and wit that make his book wholly delightful." A. V. A. Van Duym

+ New Repub 115:460 O 7 '46 1200w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
N Y Times p4 O 27 '46 750w

Reviewed by John Lardner
New Yorker 22:109 O 12 '46 1450w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 1 '46 850w

"The book is highly entertaining; many of the fantastic ideas cited would be funny by themselves, and they become much more so through Mr. Evans's gift for raging ridicule. For Mr. Evans is infuriated by human folly; an erroneous belief to him is like a red rag to a bull (only that's a fallacy, too). As a matter of fact, he so enjoys working up a good fury that he swings at a few beliefs which nobody believes. . . It must be confessed that Mr. Evans is at times a little brash. Skepticism can itself become a dogma." Basil Davenport

Sat R of Lit 29:26 N 2 '46 750w

Time 48:114 O 7 '46 480w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright
Weekly Book Review p7 O 6 '46 800w

EVANS, JOHN. Halo in blood. 245p $2 Bobbs 46-4253

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p15 My 26 '46 150w

"Tough to tougher, and a little preposterous."

— Kirkus 14:185 Ap 15 '46 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p35 My 26 '46 120w

"As good as most mysteries involving the brass-knuckles set."

New Yorker 22:95 My 25 '46 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 7 '46 60w

"Super-toughie."

Sat R of Lit 29:44 My 25 '46 40w

"If you like a funeral with 12 ministers for a starter and bang-bang-socko at intervals, this one is for you, perhaps. It is a bit too wholesale, but otherwise not unacceptable as an ante-siesta prescription." N. S.

Springfd Republican p4d My 26 '46 130w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p16 Je 9 '46 110w

EVANS, JOHN JOSEPH. Program for personnel administration. 100p $1.50 McGraw 658.3 Employment management 45-11269

"Philosophy prerequisites to successful results, scope of field to be covered, basis for organizing qualifications necessary in a personnel man are some subjects in this book designed to help the personnel executive in his duties with management." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 42:222 Mr 15 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:56 Ja 1 '46 70w

EVANS, LUTHER HARRIS. The Virgin Islands from naval base to new deal. 365p $3.50 Edwards bros.

342.7297 Virgin Islands of the United States
—Politics and government 45-35012

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"This scholarly and well-documented book is likely for some years to be the standard reference work to 1936 on America's administration of the Virgin Islands. The author, who is now Librarian of Congress, examined most of, if not all, the public and private papers about the islands and vitalized his knowledge by visits to the islands and interviews with natives and officials. It is to be hoped that, as the dependency progresses in responsible living, Mr. Evans will give us critical appraisals of its development subsequent to 1935." F. W. Pitman

+ Am Hist R 51:346 Ja '46 400w

Reviewed by C. P. Higby
Ann Am Acad 243:156 Ja '46 400w

"A scholarly history of the American islands."

+ Foreign Affairs 24:354 Ja '46 20w

EVANS, TREVOR. Bevin of Britain. 282p $3 Norton

B or 92 Bevin, Ernest 46-6729

Biography of the English labor leader, who has risen from poverty and obscurity to become the Foreign Secretary of Great Britain. The author is an English newspaperman who has been chief labor editor of the London Daily Express. Chronology. Index.

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Book Week p2 O 27 '46 450w

Booklist 43:52 O 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p17 D 7 '46 490w

Kirkus 14:371 Ag 1 '46 100w

"Mr. Trevor Evans is to be congratulated on an excellent book. It is no small achievement to collect so many fresh details of Mr. Bevin's career and to state them so arrestingly."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 27 '46 340w

"If I have any criticism of Evans' work, it is that the prose itself is too crisp, too matter-of-fact, too much like good newspaper prose. In any book on a great man, some of the character's genius usually drains, by a kind of literary osmosis, into the pen of the biographer. This has not, unfortunately, happened in the case of the present book. The result is that, while Evans gives you every fact in Bevin's life that you could possibly want to know, he has never quite managed to present a compelling picture of a man." Denis Plimmer

+ New Repub 115.490 O 14 '46 800w

"Despite the care with which the author has gathered his material, the book is somewhat disappointing, although it must be said that Mr. Evans succeeds rather better in telling the contemporary story of Mr. Bevin's work as wartime Minister of Labor than in the other parts of his biography of a man and a movement. In general, however, the book is parochial in outlook and one-dimensional in scope." Raymond Daniell

N Y Times p1 S 15 '46 1400w

"Until a more sober or more objective study of this very important figure appears, this book will serve."

New Yorker 22:127 O 5 '46 80w

"Mr. Evans is a talented industrial correspondent on a popular daily newspaper, and his book is written primarily for the American market, so that all the pounds have to be translated into dollars and familiar institutions simply explained. It is, what one would expect in the circumstances, lively, full of quotations and stories, running along the surface of events without pausing for more than an instant to sum up or estimate achievements, often perhaps giving a good anecdote without pedantic scrutiny, but within its limits good and honest journalism. . . This book does not explain Mr. Bevin, but it is a stimulating reminder of how necessary, and how difficult, it is to do so."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p488 O 12 '46 1300w

"The book is excellently timed. For this is surely a turning point in Bevin's career and in the destiny of the labor movement he has helped to lead." Joseph Barnes

+ Weekly Book Review p3 S 15 '46 2000w

EVATT, MRS HARRIET. Mystery of the creaking windmill; il. by the author. 243p $2 Bobbs

45-7649

Mystery story for young readers.

Booklist 42:215 Mr 1 '46

"Charm and tender humor pervade this sweet but somehow credible story of a little French-Canadian boy and his blind delivery horse, Tinette."

+ Kirkus 13:336 Ag 1 '45

Reviewed by Margaret Miller

Library J 71:123 Ja 15 '46 70w

"This is more than a mystery story. It is also a story of little Jacques and his blind horse, Tinette; of his loving family, and life in French Canada. Urged on by the need for money to have Tinette's eyes fixed, Jacques follows clue after clue until the mystery is solved. If it moves a bit slowly for a mystery, one does not mind too much, for there is warmth in it. Children up to 10 will like this one." P. F.

+ N Y Times p14 N 11 '45 100w

EVERS, HELEN, and EVERS, ALF. Monkeyface [il. by the authors]. 60c Rand McNally

"Monkeyface, newest addition to the Evers' fabulous menagerie for nursery and primary grades is a small simian with a highly varied talent for making faces. Naturally, when he makes the most horrendous one of all he gets his come-uppance from his long-suffering jungle companions." N Y Times

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

Book Week p15 My 12 '46 150w

"We think this fails to measure up to the level of child interest and enjoyment that the earlier books have had. Perhaps it is time for a new pattern, with a bit more zip."

— Kirkus 14:103 F 15 '46 90w

"Generally speaking, Monkeyface, as pictured isn't quite as comic as he might be, but he will surely jog small funnybones and provide parents of young facemakers with a suitable warning." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 3 '46 90w

EWEN, DAVID, comp. Listen to the mocking words. 160p il $2 Arco

780.883 Music—Anecdotes, facetiae, satire, etc. 45-10436

"This volume is a collection of jokes and anecdotes about singers, instrumental virtuosi, conductors and composers. Some of them are of considerable antiquity, but many are unfamiliar and amusing." Book Week

Reviewed by Felix Borowski

Book Week p22 D 9 '45 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '46

Kirkus 13:503 N 15 '45 50w

EYRE, KATHERINE WIGMORE. Star in the willows; pictures by Gertrude Howe. 174p $2 Oxford

46-25206

The two chief characters in this story for grades four to six are a ten-year-old Mexican girl, and the young daughter of the California ranch-owner for whom the Mexican family works. Nita loved the ranch, and was instrumental in saving it for her American friend.

Booklist 42:350 Jl 1 '46

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 15 '46 180w

"A warm-hearted story. . . Of interest to girls from eight to ten." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:267 Jl '46 80w

"The author has a quiet understanding of children that makes her handling of their pains and pleasures of real concern to her readers. Endearing family story, good values and good story pace."

+ Kirkus 14:253 Je 1 '46 90w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 71:982 Jl '46 80w

Reviewed by Florence Crowther

N Y Times p16 Je 30 '46 140w

Sat R of Lit 29:52 N 9 '46 30w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p7 Je 16 '46 270w

EZICKSON, AARON JACOB, ed. Roosevelt album; the highlights in the life and work of the 32nd president of the United States, Franklin Delano Roosevelt. [96p] il $1 Knickerbocker pub. co, 120 Greenwich st, N.Y. 6

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 45-8234

"Unforgettable moments in the nation's history are portrayed here in 200 photographs, letters, speeches and documents—the highlights in the life and work of the thirty-second President of the United States. The album pictures Franklin D. Roosevelt from his first visit to the White House (when he was a small boy and Grover Cleveland, wearied by the trials of office said to him, 'I hope, little man, you may never become President of the United States') to the day before he died." N Y Times

Foreign Affairs 24:748 Jl '46 10w

Reviewed by Lucy Greenbaum

N Y Times p12 D 9 '45 270w

F

FABRICANT, NOAH DANIEL, and WERNER, HEINZ, comps. Treasury of doctor stories, by the world's great authors. 507p $3 Fell

Short stories—Collections 46-8107

Collection of thirty-five stories, essays, or excerpts from novels, all dealing with some aspect of medicine or the medical profession. Partial contents: Doc Mellhorn and the pearly gates, by S. V. Benet; The nurse, by B. A. Williams; The enemy, by Pearl Buck; Zone of quiet, by R. W. Lardner; A work of art, by Anton Chekhov; Dr. Mahony, by H. H. Richardson; Indian camp, by Ernest Hemingway; The district doctor, by Ivan Turgenev; The witch doctor of Rosy ridge, by Mackinlay Kantor; Father is firm with his ailments, by Clarence Day; A Negro doctor in the South, by Walter White; Martha's vacation, by Vardis Fisher; The scarlet plague, by Jack London; "Speaking of operations—", by I. S. Cobb; Allergies and the man-eating carp, by H. V. O'Brien; The country doctor, by Ivan Beede; The bedchamber mystery, by C. S. Forester; A day's wait, by Ernest Hemingway.

"[The editors] have chosen well. They have produced an anthology that makes sense in an unusual and significant way, in that the arts of healing and of literature are peculiarly and effectively compounded. . . I hope thousands and thousands of people discover this book. They'll enjoy it no end." Wendell Johnson

+ Book Week p2 O 6 '46 420w

Kirkus 14:204 My 1 '46 130w

"The 'Treasury's' non-fiction might well have been strengthened by the addition of one or two medical memoirs and correspondents' reports of wartime medical heroism. As a comprehensive medical anthology, it has obvious gaps. As a bed-table standby, however, it offers variety, readability, and a glimpse of the human heart at each end of the stethoscope." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p8 S 22 '46 500w

"After several years of anthologies devoted to war and early death this collection comes along as an oblique refresher with its stories of men who are concerned with healing and the preservation of life." A. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 20 '46 120w

Wis Lib Bul 42:169 D '46

FABRICIUS, JOHAN WIGMORE. Night over Java. 168p $2 Greenberg [7s 6d Heinemann]

46-1868

Guerrilla warfare in Java is the theme of this novel. In it a force of Europeans, Eurasians, and Javanese establish a base of operations on the south coast of the island, and lead a successful attack against the Japs. Then there are terrible reprisals.

Reviewed by Joe Fromm

Book Week p19 F 17 '46 650w

Reviewed by Thomas Haynes

N Y Times p24 Mr 10 '46 400w

"The novel is set apart from the usual run of stories about this kind of fighting by the extremely vivid background which Mr. Fabricius, himself born and raised in those parts, has supplied."

+ New Yorker 22:96 F 16 '46 70w

"Structurally 'Night over Java' is an excellent, skillfully fabricated novelette: the exotic setting is adequately and economically pictured; the few characters are expertly sketched; suspense is created without tricks; the central incident of the story is never lost sight of, and its unexpected consequences bring the tale to a poignant, significant close. . . Those who relish good writing will welcome 'Night over Java' and will be inclined to blame the translator for such flabby, hackneyed expressions as 'sighed with relief,' 'untiring in their efforts,' 'filled with righteous indignation,' etc., which seem particularly banal in prose otherwise firm, uncluttered, and forcible." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 Mr 2 '46 450w

"The author was born and educated in the East Indies, and his story is a tribute to the faith that cements men of alien blood and belief when a common danger threatens. Apart from the action, there are interesting side lights on native customs and ceremonies." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p22 Mr 3 '46 90w

FAIR, A. A. Crows can't count. 281p $2 Morrow

46-2891

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p11 Ap 28 '46 90w

Booklist 42:300 My 15 '46

"Nimble."

Kirkus 14:51 F 1 '46 60w

"The story will interest those who like Donald Lam and are able to bear with the tantrums of Bertha Cool."

+ N Y Times p32 Ap 21 '46 80w

New Yorker 22:120 Ap 13 '46 70w

"A-1."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:59 Ap 20 '46 40w

"Chief interest is the puzzle." Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p28 Ap 14 '46 210w

FAIR, JAMES R. Give him to the angels. 184p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

B or 92 Greb, Harry

46-6053

Life story of the American prize fighter, Harry Greb, who at one time held the world middleweight and American light heavyweight championships. He died in 1926, in his early thirties.

Kirkus 14:213 My 1 '46 110w

"For those who like their prize ring literature smothered with large gobs of realism here is their dish. I don't think Mr. Fair's virile yarn would have lost any of its flavor, however, if he had been more sparing with the four letter words and left some of Harry's amorous antics to the imagination." Dan Parker

N Y Times p8 Jl 7 '46 1150w

Springf'd Republican p5 Ag 6 '46 180w

"There are a thousand good Greb stories. Mr. Fair tells as many of them as he has room for, and because Greb was really, in more than just the boxing sense, one of our great Americans, the book is engaging as well as sloppily written, and dramatic as well as poorly planned and arranged. The author is too much occupied with sideline 'characters,' including himself. Greb is a figure who deserves full attention and full biographical treatment. You do not get that here, but Greb was so good that anything written about him, if reasonably true, is worth reading." John Lardner

+ Weekly Book Review p8 Jl 7 '46 550w

FAIRCHILD, FRED ROGERS. Tax program for a solvent America. See Committee on postwar tax policy

FAIRMAN, SEIBERT, and CUTSHALL, CHESTER SHERMAN. Engineering mechanics. 2d ed 267p $3 Wiley

620.1 Mechanics, Applied

46-18985

"This volume is intended as a textbook for a basic course for students well-prepared in physics and mathematics. This new edition follows the same arrangement as that of 1933 [Book Review Digest, 1939] except that the chapter, Moment of inertia, has been separated into two chapters and a new chapter, Product of inertia of area, and many new problems have been added. Part I, Statics, discusses, in separate chapters, equilibrium of coplanar forces, stresses in simple structure, equilibrium of force in space, friction, centroids and center of gravity, moment of inertia, product of inertia of area, moment of inertia of mass. Part II, Kinetics, includes chapters on rectilinear motion, curvilinear motion and rotation, work and energy, dynamics of rotating bodies, plane motion, impulse, momentum and impact." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:980 J1 '46 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:44 J1 '46

FANCHER, ALBERT. A business of your own. (New home lib) 338p $1 Blakiston

371.425 Vocational guidance 46-25153

Surveys various types of small businesses, describes briefly the type of work in each, and the kind of person best suited to take up each. Partial contents: A mail order business; A photography business; Schools for youngsters; A bookstore; A beauty shop; A farming business; A food business; The clothing field. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 42:312 Je 1 '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:980 J1 '46 70w

"Result of careful co-operation on the part of well chosen experts, it gives a general idea of what must be faced in such enterprises as running a mail order, photography or housing business, an eating place, a service business, beauty shop, tourist accommodations, filling station, bookshop and several other types. Latest of a number of such books, it has improved on most of them."

+ Weekly Book Review p28 My 19 '46
100w

FANNING, LEONARD M., ed. Our oil resources. 331p 11 maps $4 McGraw

553.28 Petroleum—U.S. 46-79

"Papers by authorities on the American oil industry, oil and gas resources, conservation, oil technology, oil reserves, capital and role of private enterprise in development of oil resources." Library J

Reviewed by W. R. Maddox
Am Pol Sci R 40:820 Ag '46 250w
Booklist 42:262 Ap 15 '46

"The book gathers together a wealth of information in compact form which the reviewer believes will be most useful to any engineer or executive in the oil industry or in related fields. It suffers somewhat from repetition or from similar presentation of the same subject matter by more than one contributor, but this is not a serious drawback and would have been difficult to avoid." W. C. Schroeder

+ — Chem & Eng N 24:2844 O 25 '46 300w

"This book is probably the most exhaustive study on our oil resources that has been attempted in recent years by highly qualified authorities—sixteen of them, to be exact. It is the story of the petroleum industry in the United States, what has made it great and why it will remain a dynamic force for peace for many decades to come. With facts and logic, the authors reaffirm our faith in the future virility of the American oil industry, for petroleum is a product of freedom, initiative and enterprise, and technological democracy."

+ Chem & Met Eng 53:299 My '46 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '46

Foreign Affairs 24:749 J1 '46 30w

Library J 71:183 F 1 '46 40w

"The text includes fifty-five tables and thirty figures. In addition, there is appended a list of motion pictures available from the oil industry."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:107 Je '46 110w

FARADAY, JOSEPH ESCOTT, comp. Encyclopedia of hydrocarbon compounds; v. 1, C₁ to C₈. $15 Chemical pub. co. [£6 5s; annual suppl 15s Chem-index]

547.03 Hydrocarbons (46-3242)

"Looseleaf form, to be kept up to date by annual supplements. This first volume includes hydrocarbon compounds with one to five carbon atoms. Gives formulas, names, occurrence, methods of preparation, and constants, with bibliographic references. It is an index to the literature, rather than an encyclopedia." Library J

"This work would be of greater value if the author had also indicated the best methods of preparation and had summarized some of the most important reactions of the hydrocarbons listed. The references to the physical properties are poor, and in many cases common physical properties such as refractive index are not even listed. It would be desirable to have accurate values for the common physical properties in a work of this sort. The general plan and arrangement of the book is good. . . This is the first encyclopedia of this type to be published in English and undoubtedly improvements will be forthcoming in subsequent issues. It is a handy reference volume for all of those working in any phases of petroleum or in hydrocarbon chemistry." M. R. Fenske

+ — Chem & Eng N 24:2702 O 10 '46 750w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:980 J1 '46 70w

FARMER, FANNIE MERRITT. Boston cooking-school cook book; completely rev. by Wilma Lord Perkins; drawings by Martha Powell Setchell. 8th ed rev 879p $2.75 Little

641.5 Cookery

"This standard cookbook, now in its fiftieth year, appears in a newly revised edition, with additional material and new drawings." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:135 Ja 1 '47

"You are aware of no prose at all when you read any one of her thousands of recipes. They are uttered rather than written. Her simple clarity is phenomenal. She was both lecturer and demonstrator. Fragile though she was—in her later years she moved about on her lecture platform in a wheelchair—she had to make every word and movement count. She had a passion for improving recipes, and for making them clearer. . . Vitamins, pressure-cookers, and wider use of wine, new comestibles, and frozen foods have come in since Miss Farmer wrote. They are here in this revision, brought to date by her niece, treated of in the same clear style." Idwal Jones

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 12 '47 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 28 '46
600w

Weekly Book Review p21 Ja 12 '47 50w

FARNHAM, RICHARD BAYLES, and ING-HAM, VAN WIE, eds. Grounds for living. 335p il $2.50 Rutgers univ. press

635.9 Landscape gardening Agr46-10

"The home dweller's compleat guide to his lawns, trees, & gardens." (Subtitle) Partial contents: Your shade trees, by P. P. Pirone; Your hobby crop, by O. W. Davidson; Your best fruits, by J. H. Clark; Outdoor construction, by W. C. Krueger.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 My 5 '46 200w

Booklist 42:294 My 15 '46

Bookmark 7:6 N '46

"Book of sound and practical advice and information on how to plant things and make them grow outside the house, for couples with time and inclination and space in which to operate. There are some 150 sketches by way of illustration." D. B. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Ap 19 '46
240w

Weekly Book Review p20 S 8 '46 180w

FARRAR, CLARISSA PALMER, and EVANS, AUSTIN PATTERSON. Bibliography of English translations from medieval sources. 534p $7.50 Columbia univ. press

016.8 Literature, Medieval—Bibliography A46-1541

Bibliography composed of nearly four thousand English translations of medieval literature. "In the words of the preface, 'the aim has been to include English translations of important literary sources produced during the period from Constantine the Great to the year 1500 within an area roughly inclusive of Europe, northern Africa, and western Asia.' Thus, translations of material of a purely documentary nature, most of which are well covered in existing bibliographies, are excluded. Nor has it been deemed advisable always to list all editions of the numerous translations of such popular books as The Imitation of Christ or the Rubaiyat, especially where, as with these two books, excellent bibliographies can be cited. As an example of inclusiveness, modernizations of Old English and Middle English works are treated." (U S Quarterly Bkl)

"The bibliography fills a critical need at a critical time; it reflects scholarship of the highest sort, and on every page shows the industry, patience, and skill of all who aided in its production. Miss Farrar and Professor Evans, and Miss Judith Bernstein who contributed so much during the early stages of work on the volume, can take personal and professional pride in this tangible evidence of their scholarship. Students and scholars can rejoice in the possession of a work on which they will all lean heavily, and librarians should consider themselves thrice blest to have such an aid at hand." G. C. Boyce

+ Am Hist R 52:108 O '46 750w

"Fills a great need and will prove an invaluable tool for all students of the medieval period. . . . An excellent index, over seventy pages in length, and adequate cross reference will please the many future users."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:260 S '46 270w

FARRELL, JAMES THOMAS. Bernard Clare. 367p $2.75 Vanguard

46-3585

Story of a young man from Chicago who came to New York in 1927, intending to become a successful writer. He took up residence in a cheap hotel, and got a job. Lonely, unappreciated, and frustrated, he had an affair with a young married woman, and went to pieces when the husband discovered it and put a stop to their meeting. The book closes as Bernard is about to return to Chicago.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p12 My 12 '46 450w

"This might be defined as a minor Studs Lonigan, with the same socio-journalistic approach, but without the powerful compulsion of revealing internal conflicts."

Kirkus 14:78 F 15 '46 170w

"Uninteresting and familiar Farrell." H. G. Kelley

— Library J 71:484 Ap 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 162:668 Je 1 '46 1250w

Reviewed by Isaac Rosenfeld

New Repub 114:774 My 27 '46 1500w

"[The author's] word-sense, despite his long and painstaking practice, is still very dull. Despite his admiration for the great Irishman [Yeats], his prose, though doggedly honest, is without variety or resilience. . . . A more serious defect is in the novel's structure. . . . Farrell is still deeply concerned with social change, and his mind is disciplined to understand it. He knows that great fiction creates 'the consciousness of an epoch.' He can give us such fiction only to the degree that he gets away from the too detailed obsessions of a Bernard Clare into other lives in the city surrounding him." F. O. Matthiessen

N Y Times p1 My 12 '46 1500w

New Yorker 22:91 My 25 '46 160w

"That Mr. Farrell has successfully done the difficult thing he purposed to do, I now have little doubt. Whether or not he chooses to continue the history of Bernard Clare, he has already created in him a character that is at once an individual and a type; a character in which life has been breathed, who need only be known not to be forgotten. If it turns out that Mr. Farrell's creation does not give immediate pleasure to many readers, it will not mean that the creator has failed. 'Bernard Clare' (in retrospect, mind you) is a novel that could have been written only by a novelist of substantial talent and assimilated experience." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:7 My 18 '46 1500w

Time 47:94 My 20 '46 800w

"Mr. Farrell is a writer who needs room: what others accomplish by deftness and agility he accomplishes by sheer weight. And one has to admit that he does it effectively; at the end of a Farrell novel or series of novels you have seen clearly and closely whatever Mr. Farrell wanted you to see. This portrait of Bernard Clare is a solid addition to the Farrell gallery; it even has touches of tenderness and humor lacking in the others. As a novel it is probably Mr. Farrell's best since 'Studs Lonigan.' But there remains the persistent question—How good is his best?" Hubert Kuperberg

Weekly Book Review p5 My 12 '46 650w

"Mr. Farrell has made Bernard a completely believable representative of the young writer—callow, rebellious, ambitious, youthfully cynical. But he has not endowed him with an individualized personality. And the other persons who populate this book are only satirical glimpses of common types. This is an honest but a tedious book. Its central love affair is messy rather than significant; its insistence on vulgar biological details of all varieties is tasteless and unnecessary." Orville Prescott

— + Yale R n s 35:767 summer '46 320w

FARRELL, JAMES THOMAS. When boyhood dreams come true. 313p $2.75 Vanguard

47-418

"Short stories, sketches, essays and a full-length play to the number of twelve items, comprise this latest collection by James T. Farrell. Frustration is the general theme, and most of the inclusions are aptly described under the heavily ironic title 'When Boyhood Dreams Come True'—sometimes in reverse, sometimes with a vengeance. The play was written in collaboration with Hortense Farrell." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by Marie Seton

Book Week p2 D 8 '46 800w

Kirkus 14:355 Ag 1 '46 160w

"Needed where the newest Farrell will be read. Otherwise unnecessary." R. E. Kingery

Library J 71:1464 O 15 '46 100w

"As for [the play] 'The Mowbray Family' it is more surprising that Farrell has written a comedy than that he has written a play. If producers have been offered this work, they have refused it, and the reader can see some of their reasons. The people are less important than the politics, and there is more talk than action. . . . The short stories are the chief measure of this collection. As a stylist Farrell builds solidly, shoving and hauling his words into position. The result often has strength but seldom has grace. Sometimes his writing is simply careless. . . . Fortunately, however, there is one place and one society that Farrell knows by heart. Neither style nor theory can blunt his sharp sense of truth when he writes about lower middle class Irish-Americans of Chicago. He knows them with a fullness of detail and a depth of understanding which always touch them with life." D. S. Norton

N Y Times p9 D 1 '46 1400w

"Less effective than the author's previous works, probably because everybody by this time knows Mr. Farrell's drunks, schoolboys, old haridans, and priests as well as Mr. Farrell does. . . . Two stories of adolescence—'Tournament Star' and 'Two Brothers'—are exceedingly moving. Of the twelfth item of the collection, a play in three acts, which Mr. Farrell wrote in collaboration with his wife, the less said the better."

— New Yorker 22:140 N 30 '46 130w

Reviewed by Arthur Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 10 '46 600w

"I should like to see Mr. Farrell hold up a while, and think out his own destination, before he publishes again. Whatever it should be, he will sound and read more like the vigorous writer we have known, when he cuts away from this retelling of his beads, and moves in an affirmative direction." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 29:20 N 9 '46 700w

"The volume shows all of Farrell's long-familiar characteristics; if readers who do not like his bill-of-fare complain that it never improves, admirers can say with equal truth that neither does it deteriorate. The material of the present book is as somber, plotless and emotionally intense as that of his earliest works; there is no dilution of Farrell's original purpose and vision." Kenneth Fearing

Weekly Book Review p4 N 17 '46 650w

FARRINGTON, FIELDEN. The big noise. 301p $2.50 Crown

46-17070

Story of the rise of a first-class heel to a high place in radio. Anson Grogan's rise was part bluff, part cunning plus judicious double-crossing, but it brought him unhappiness as well as some success.

"Mr. Farrington tells the story very much as it might be serialized in a 'soap-opera' program if the radio's moral code would permit lurid details. There is a good deal of authenticity in the scenes describing radio studios and personalities, but I am not sure that Mr. Farrington can claim an equal degree of authenticity when he strays afield." John Desmond

N Y Times p10 Je 30 '46 210w

"It is unfortunate that this novel appears at the moment that another story ('The Hucksters') has just been published treating of the very same themes. . . 'The Hucksters' will probably be the better known. . . 'The Big Noise' will probably not make any big noise at all. Yet the book is well written; the action is fast; the tempo is high-pitched and exciting; the characters are real and the dialogue keeps the reader alert. There are continuity and style and suspense—all the ingredients of good story-writing—and yet the reader is let down toward the end, strangely enough because in dealing with a failure, the story deals with vapid, superficial qualities." Harold Fields

— Sat R of Lit 29:28 J1 6 '46 750w

Reviewed by P. H. Bickerton

Springf'd Republican p4d J1 7 '46 300w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p16 Je 16 '46 300w

FARRINGTON, SELWYN KIP. Railroadng from the rear end. 430p il $5 Coward-McCann 656 Railroads—U.S. 47-238

Series of essays on special aspects of railroadng, illustrated with groups of photographs. They deal with such features as the Santa Fe's communication system, the New York Central's modern milk trains, the Southern Pacific's fast overnight freight, the Boston & Maine railroad, the new Diesel-electric locomotives, etc. Index.

"The book has much new material in its thorough discussions of centralized train control, inductive train communication, maintenance of way and the problems of handling specialized commodities. These topics have not been elaborated to any extent in popular form. The text is fortified by an extremely well chosen group of photographs. . . The extremely poor organization of the book is a cause of regret. The reader is forced to endure sudden transitions in subject only to return to the same topic considered from only a slightly different viewpoint. The style of the book is almost conversational but comparisons with Farrington's earlier works will show a deterioration of his powers of description. A minimum of thoughtful editing would have improved it immensely." E. L. DeGolyer

— Book Week p5 D 8 '46 270w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:79 Ja 1 '47 80w

"Aside from a few encyclopedic dry patches, specifically 'The Story of the Potato' and 'Milwaukee Business Car,' the book is a well-told saga of present-day railroad operation, accurate, entertaining and highly informative." F. H. Hubbard

— N Y Times p32 Ja 12 '47 550w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

— San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 19 '46 200w

"This book in the main deals with modern railroadng as developed just before and since World War II, and it is written in a simple, chatty, folksy style. There is an index and more than one hundred photographs, many very good, of which almost one-third were taken on the Santa Fe, apparently a most photogenic line." Stewart Holbrook

— Weekly Book Review p14 Ja 12 '47 850w

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. The American; a middle western legend. 337p $3 Duell

Altgeld, John Peter—Fiction 46-25220

Biographical novel, based on the life of John Peter Altgeld, who was a midwestern politician, governor of Illinois from 1893-1897, a friend of the working man and a lawyer and judge. The book begins with his poverty-stricken youth, describes his painful rise, his successes and failures, and his death.

"In his effort to pose Altgeld as a latter-day Lincoln of the Labor Movement, the author has become too distracted by his thesis, with the result that the figure on the pedestal has neither the magnetism nor the plausibility which the reader expects." Edward Weeks

— Atlantic 178:144 S '46 300w

Reviewed by M. P. Akers

Book Week p1 J1 21 '46 1850w

Booklist 42:365 J1 15 '46

"Fast tells Altgeld's story in a simple and powerful style, the style best suited to the man he portrays. His book has captured much of the spirit and drive of an interesting period of American history when Altgeld was only one of the many fabulous figures to be seen on the streets of Chicago. Perhaps that is why this novel is like a cleansing wind sweeping through the listless literary forest of present day America." Edward Nugent

— Cath World 163:473 Ag '46 300w

"Mr. Fast's presentation of the case is not the first defense Altgeld has had, but it is one of the most effective. Mr. Fast is quite frankly an impassioned partisan. A historian, for example, would give Cleveland and McKinley the credit due them. Here, they are seen through Altgeld's eyes, and he invariably looked on them with something less than affection." M. W. S.

Christian Science Monitor p12 J1 16 '46 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '46

Reviewed by Paul Kinlery

Commonweal 44:338 J1 19 '46 390w

"I think this is Fast's best book—and I've liked most of his earlier books immensely, so that means a good deal."

— Kirkus 14:107 Mr 1 '46 400w

"Well-written, good character analysis but of limited interest." L. R. Etzkorn

— Library J 71:998 J1 '46 70w

"Mr. Fast . . . is all too obviously in the business, not of understanding, but of influencing. Altgeld is to be impressed upon us as the symbol of a militant liberalism, even at the cost of being lost to us as a man, and even though his liberalism was the crown rather than a continuing ideal of his life." Diana Trilling

— Nation 163:134 Ag 3 '46 1060w

FAST, H. M.—Continued

"For all its vivid writing and effective characterization, The American is not a good novel. Fast would have produced a much better book if he had not been so inexplicably slipshod with his material." C. A. Madison

— + New Repub 115:354 S 23 '46 800w

"The fact is that, despite his gifts of warmth, intensity and narrative verve, Mr. Fast has written a bad book. He has surrendered to a conventionalized pseudo-radical concept of Altgeld and his times which fits his own train of political thought, but which constitutes a distortion of history." Allan Nevins

— + N Y Times p4 J1 21 '46 1200w

"Told with distinction and with barely enough fictional trimmings to justify calling it a novel."

— + New Yorker 22:74 J1 20 '46 130w

"Like Fast's other books, this is eloquently written, admirably constructed. That Mr. Fast is plainly an extravagant admirer of Altgeld does not, in this case, detract from the novel's quality. It may be a piece of special pleading; is, in fact, just that. But it is an enormously readable book just as a novel." J. H. Jackson

— + San Francisco Chronicle p17 J1 21 '46 1200w

"Within the limiting framework of a fictionized biography of an important but not well enough known American political figure, Howard Fast has produced another extremely satisfactory study. Bringing to it his own liberal partisanship, he shows us not a knight in shining armor, but a less romantic figure who has left us a legend typically American and fine. His portrait of a man who could meet the politicians on their own ground, whether in a hotel room or around a beer keg, who was conditioned to play their game and yet could be awakened to the call of conscience and social responsibility, is as admirable for its vivid drama as it is for its choice of subject." W. S. Lynch

— + Sat R of Lit 29:6 J1 20 '46 1050w

"To some extent the rise of Altgeld to legendary status has paralleled the growth of labor unions to a dominant position, but his heroism transcends any clash of ideologies. His is the truly American story, the man who dares to battle against overwhelming odds for what he knows is the truth. Mr. Fast has caught at one time the majesty of Altgeld the hero and the tragedy of Altgeld the common man, and not again will a poet have to ask, 'Where is Altgeld, brave as the truth, whose name the few still say with tears?'" R. F. H.

— + Spring'd Republican p4d J1 21 '46 500w
Time 48:92 J1 29 '46 550w

"In the early chapters of this book, by the far the best, Mr. Fast succeeds in imaginatively creating the boyhood and youth of Altgeld: the hardships, the poverty, the bewilderment, the hopes and ambitions of the awkward boy. Where, that is, he depends upon his imagination he is most successful. It is where he attempts a more literal transcription of history that his unfamiliarity with his material betrays him. Unfortunately, he nowhere confides in his readers which is which." H. S. Commager

— + Weekly Book Review p4 J1 28 '46 2000w

"Mr. Fast has interpreted American history, politics, and labor-industrial relations solely as a struggle between virtuous and downtrodden proletarians and wicked, dirty capitalists. It is a crude and unjustified distortion of facts, made all the more dangerous to the unwary by Mr. Fast's undoubted skill." Orville Prescott

— Yale R n s 36:190 autumn '46 230w

FAST, JULIUS. Bright face of danger. 220p $2 Rinehart

46-6396

Mystery story.

Kirkus 14:333 J1 15 '46 80w

"A story replete with terror and suspense." Isaac Anderson

— + N Y Times p28 S 29 '46 140w

"A hasty and not particularly striking addition to the already sizable group of mysteries built on the same framework."

New Yorker 22:104 S 28 '46 90w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 6 '46 50w

"Nice going."

— + Sat R of Lit 29:41 S 21 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Weekly Book Review p28 S 29 '46 90w

FAULKNER, EDWARD HUBERT. Uneasy money. 114p $1.50 Univ. of Okla. press
338.91 U.S.—Economic policy. Agriculture—Economic aspects 46-846

"As in his Plowman's folly, Mr. Faulkner again raises a controversial issue. This time he offers a solution to our economic ills by suggesting that farm prices be reduced by the use of more efficient agricultural methods. This he hopes would scale down wages and prices. Though they probably will not agree, the one tenth of the population who grow our food should be especially interested in this book. It will also disturb a great many of the other nine tenths who eat the food." Booklist

Reviewed by Arthur Moore
Atlantic 177:174 Je '46 300w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Book Week p2 F 10 '46 550w
Booklist 42:220 Mr 15 '46
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '46

Reviewed by C. E. Noyes
Nation 162:378 Mr 30 '46 330w

"This new book, 'Uneasy Money,' is framed as another shocker, but it lacks the angry bite of a prophet long despised, and I am afraid that on the whole it misses fire. The present Faulkner is more urbane, less sharply taunting, almost mellow. His basic argument is sound, and sufficiently startling." Russell Lord

— + Sat R of Lit 29:23 Mr 16 '46 1000w

FAULKNER, WILLIAM. Portable Faulkner; ed. by Malcolm Cowley. (Viking portable lib) 756p $2 Viking

46-25133

"The various volumes of Faulkner's fiction combine to make the Balzacian history of an imaginary Mississippi county, in which a group of Southern families are shown in their successive phases and in their relations with one another between 1820 and 1945. Mr. Cowley has unscrambled this chronicle, a complicated and elusive one, and illustrated it, period by period, by an arrangement of certain short stories with a few episodes from Faulkner's novels, and he has prefaced it with an interesting essay on the criticism of Southern history implied by Faulkner's account." New Yorker

Kirkus 14:49 F 1 '46 80w

"Malcolm Cowley's editing of The Portable Faulkner is remarkable on two counts. First, the selection from Faulkner's work is made not merely to give a cross section or a group of good examples but to demonstrate one of the principles of integration in the work. Second, the introductory essay is one of the few things ever written on Faulkner which is not haggard by prejudice or preconception and which really sheds some light on the subject." R. P. Warren

— + New Repub 115:176 Ag 12 '46 3750w

"Cowley's book, for its intelligence, sensitivity and sobriety in the Introduction, and for the ingenuity and judgment exhibited in the selections, would be valuable at any time. But it is especially valuable at this time. Perhaps it can mark a turning point in Faulkner's reputation." R. P. Warren

— + New Repub 115:234 Ag 26 '46 3700w

Reviewed by Caroline Gordon
N Y Times p1 My 5 '46 2400w

"The book is a real contribution to the study of Faulkner's work." Edmund Wilson
— + New Yorker 22:65 J1 27 '46 120w

FAURE, RAOUL C. The spear in the sand. 280p $2.50 Harper

46-7211

Highly imaginative story in which an intelligent young man is marooned on a Pacific island, without hope of rescue. His intellectual resources keep him thru several years of contentment. But there is a gradual process of letting go as he grows older. At the end of thirty years he has reached the stage where he waits indifferently for the ultimate.

"Exquisitely written, poetic in its sensuous descriptions of the endless variety of color, light, sound, and animal life on the island and in its waters, and in its pitiless portrayal of man's inability to comprehend perfection." Dorothy Sparks

+ Book Week p7 S 29 '46 500w

Booklist 43:86 N 15 '46

"'The Spear in the Sand' is a composite work of imagination in which the natural world is at the same time approached with scientific understanding, esthetic sensibility, and primitive emotions of repulsion, terror, joy, and self-surrender. The magnificent descriptions of tropical life on sea and land are highly articulated, and necessarily make use of an appropriate vocabulary." R. G. Davis

+ N Y Times p5 O 13 '46 1100w

"A remarkably vivid story. . . Mr. Faure makes it all almost frighteningly believable." New Yorker 22:99 S 28 '46 150w

"Mr. Faure writes this unusual story in a warm, richly textured, poetic prose. His understanding of nature in its various aspects is uncanny; his ability to express this understanding and to relate it to his character, Sausal, is extraordinary. Put this together with his success in relating Sausal to the reader—a relationship which no intelligent reader can miss—and to life, and you have here one of the most remarkable novels in years." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 25 '46 850w

"This is an extraordinary book, one of the most extraordinary that have come to me for review during the past twenty-five years. That I found it less enjoyable than remarkable is probably due to failure on my part. That I found it exhausting because of its author's almost fabulous and completely tireless powers of description, that I put it down for a week or so after completing its first half, may prove that I am growing short of wind. But I am not sure. I suspect that even the hardest reader will find his feet lagging as he tries to follow Mr. Faure through the many years that he describes. Yet, even while one wearies, one can still admire, for it is all admirable." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:34 N 2 '46 1250w

"Mr. Faure is definitely a literary discovery. He can write, he can think, he can dream. In 'The Spear in the Sand' he does all three very well." Thomas Sugrue

+ Weekly Book Review p7 O 27 '46 1350w

FEARING, KENNETH. The big clock. 175p $2.50 Harcourt

46-6954

A murder story in reverse. Among the ingredients are a huge New York magazine combine, the head of that firm, his mistress, one of the combines' editors, a murder, and an unusual pursuit of the murderer.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p15 O 20 '46 150w

"The author, who is one of our minor poets, uses in this narrative the same American vernacular of advertising, radio and the newspaper which appears in much of his poetry and which is likely to irritate anyone who prefers standard English." L. E. Cannon

— Christian Century 64:17 Ja 1 '47 280w

"Better than average plus."

+ Kirkus 14:467 S 15 '46 140w

"The conclusion of Mr. Fearing's novel is as fortuitous as the arrival of the marines in an old movie thriller. But we cannot have everything, even in books whose only purpose is entertainment, and despite the letdown of its ending, 'The Big Clock' is one of the pleasantest suspense stories to appear in a long time." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 163:479 O 26 '46 280w

"If you enjoy top-drawer detective fiction (with overtones dusted expertly through the pattern) we can recommend this one with no reservations whatsoever." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p6 S 22 '46 750w

"One of the most original and gripping entertainments in a long time." E. H.

+ New Repub 115:462 O 7 '46 90w

"I have never developed the habit of reading thrillers, but I have read enough of them to know that from now on Mr. Fearing is my man. . . Mr. Fearing's hero acts and sounds as though his name appeared in one of the upper brackets of the masthead of Time. I don't think, though, that even the most case-hardened citizen of Mr. Luce's throbbing kingdom has ever had to face the sort of excitement that Mr. Fearing has cooked up." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 22:116 S 21 '46 200w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 22 '46 50w

"It would seem axiomatic that an author who essays the novel of plot undertakes the obligation to make factual sense to his readers if nothing else. This Mr. Fearing has failed to do in his headlong dénouement, and an otherwise brilliant and exciting tale suffers in consequence. The pseudo-philosophical passages about Life which give the novel its title would not be missed by one reader. Apart from these, Mr. Fearing's prose is lean, vernacular, and effective." Howard Haycraft

+ Sat R of Lit 29:50 O 12 '46 400w

"Kenneth Fearing's fiction has never had the kick of his verse; his first murder mystery, The Big Clock, has it—the deadpan, make-believe sinister quality, and the terse, preposterous fancy. It is, besides, a thriller with a unique plot."

+ Time 48:116 O 7 '46 170w

"Mr. Fearing's little classic of cardiac constriction has already appeared as a condensation in 'The American Magazine', under the title 'The Judas Picture.' Although the present change of title seems unfortunate, the story should now have an even larger audience, which it richly merits. It will be some time before chill-hungry clients meet again so rare a compound of irony, satire, and icy-fingered narrative. 'The Big Clock' is at once a psycho-thriller you won't put down and a devastating eye-ful of the hucksters who deal in pontification-with-pictures." Richard Mather

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 22 '46 800w

FECHNER, GUSTAV THEODOR. Religion of a scientist; selections; ed. & tr. by Walter Lowrie. 281p $3.50 Pantheon bks.

193.9 Religion—Philosophy 46-4428

Translations from the works of Gustav Fechner, a German physicist, two of whose students were Wilhelm Wundt and William James. A long introductory essay by the editor gives a biographical sketch of Fechner and explains some of his theories. Index.

"Walter Lowrie has superbly translated and edited the most eloquent expressions of [Fechner's] faith in 'Religion of a Scientist' with such sensibility as to make it an offering of the deepest piety. His warm, richly distilled wisdom courses throughout the commentary. Lowrie almost steals the show with a burial service over the now 'universally discarded' carcass of Darwinism. His text, taking off from Fechner's objections, was apparently so sensational that the publication of this book has been delayed for two years because no university press could be found which would assume responsibility for the introductory chapter. Good Darwinians shouldn't miss it." I. J. Lee

+ Book Week p11 My 19 '46 420w

FECHNER, G. T.—Continued

Reviewed by F. J. Moore

Churchman 160:17 S 15 '46 200w

"Dr. Lowrie had an almost hopeless task in attempting to distill the essence out of Fechner's fifty-one published works, which range from minute discussions of plant mores to poetic rhapsodies and pseudo-medical lampoons on such subjects as A Proof That the Moon Is Made of Iodine. The book leaves you unsatisfied—and a little bewildered—which is what the editor seemed to intend. I found his commentary lively and interesting." R. W. Flint

+ Nation 163:478 O 26 '46 550w

"This book quite obviously owes its existence to the editor's and translator's zeal. His judicious selections and his editorial notes, filling in the lacunae in the anthology of Fechner's religious writings, combine to produce a most readable volume. Walter Lowrie, the editor, has already placed American religious life greatly in his debt by his labor in translations and supervising the translation of most of Kierkegaard's major works. Having accomplished this monumental task, his thirst for this sort of activity appears unsated." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ N Y Times p7 Je 2 '46 1200w

"A combination of biography, appreciative survey of the entire writings of Dr. Fechner, and a few condensed and well-chosen essays. Almost one-third of the book is history of and introduction to the writings that follow and these opening remarks are meaty and well worth reading diligently if one wishes to gather the real flavor from the writings themselves. . . Dr. Lowrie has managed to whet the appetite for Dr. Fechner's theories in his opening pages and then satisfied it by a splendid choice of material on 'The Motives of Life,' 'The Invisible World' and 'Immortality.'" J. Z. Nichols

+ Springfield Republican p4 Ag 7 '46 360w

FEIBLEMAN, JAMES KERN. Theory of human culture. 361p $5; text ed $3.75 Duell 301 Culture 46-7988

"Important contributions to the literature on man and his world. Beginning with a general theory of culture, author proceeds to cite examples, dealing with two cultures in some detail. He then suggests methods for improvement and advancement of culture. Mr. Feibleman believes that man by himself, taken in relation to human culture, is meaningless. Human culture may be said to be the result of the response which is made by members of a social group to certain necessities or drives." (Library J) Index

"Price and content limit this to the intense student and/or savant, upper classes in philosophical, theoretical studies."

Kirkus 14.342 J1 15 '46 170w

"Scholarly treatment of subject not for general reader. Recommended for large public, college and university libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 71:1327 O 1 '46 110w

"The reviewer believes the author has mistaken the temper of our time. The study of culture is no longer an academic subject; it is every man's highly personal business. There is a great hunger for new information on human culture which this book offers little to satisfy. What is needed is not new theories about what was known a generation ago but new data, new techniques, and new types of demonstration that are empirical, not authoritarian." Abram Kardiner

+ Nation 163:668 D 7 '46 700w

"Feibleman's vocabulary, for which he is only partly responsible, is questionable; but his intent and his achievement are clear. He stands for an honest, realistic, generous approach to social problems. In chapter after chapter, even though we differ, I am impressed by his lucidity and vigor. This is not a new departure, but something more valuable today: a return to the grand tradition. He belongs with the Children of Light." Albert Guerard

+ Weekly Book Review p30 D 8 '46 1200w

FEININGER, ANDREAS. New York; photographs; with an introd. by John Erskine; picture text by Jacquelyn Judge. 103p $5 Ziff-Davis

917.471 New York (city)—Views. Photographic books 45-10514

Collection of 96 large-size photographs of New York city, from many angles and in many moods, with an introductory essay by John Erskine, and a chapter by the author describing how he took the pictures. Index.

Book Week p4 F 17 '46 110w

Kirkus 13:542 D 1 '46 90w

"Mr. Feininger has studied his subject intensely and intelligently and has come up with a book of fine photographs, lovingly printed and introduced by a native, John Erskine, in a proud monograph." R. F. Crandell

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Ja 6 '46 230w

FEIRER, JOHN L. Modern metalcraft. 288p il $3.50 Manual arts

745.56 Metal work 46-4910

"The author has designed this book for three types of student: vocational high school students, adults studying handicrafts in organized classes, and amateur craftsmen working at home. It should prove very helpful to beginners in the latter two groups. The material is organized into thirty-three projects, each of which teaches an operation in metal-working, such as cutting with a hack saw, cleaning with chemicals, flaring, chasing, etching and soldering. Each project includes detailed directions for making a metal object, using the technique illustrated by the particular project. Among the articles for which directions are given are lamps, flower boxes, metal dishes, trays, and book ends." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 43:97 D 1 '46

Library J 71:1052 Ag '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:27 Ap '46

"The use of tools is carefully described, as well as many processes, which include cleaning, working, and finishing the metal. These instructions are accompanied by photographs of the actual steps."

+ School Arts 46:11a D '46 150w

FELDKAMP, FRED, ed. Mixture for men. 239p il $2.50 Doubleday

810.8 American literature—Collections 46-6650

Collection of twenty-three stories about sports, crime, reporting, history, exploration, or humor. All are written by men and for men. Partial contents: Daguerreotype of a spy, by James Thurber; Ladies' night, by Robert Benchley; You wouldn't believe it, by MacKinlay Kantor; The Boston tar baby, by A. J. Liebling; The dodo, by Will Cuppy; Timber titan, by Stewart Holbrook; I hate dogs, by Stanley Walker; I like dogs, by James Thurber; Femme fatale, legion style, by Georges Surdez; Murder à la mode, by John Kobler; Wine, women, and Broun, by Heywood Broun; The English—they are a funny race, by John O'Hara; Cirrhosis on the copy desk, by Stanley Walker; Turning the tip, by Carlton Brown.

"A general appeal here makes this easy entertainment for most males; good gift for your week-end host."

+ Kirkus 14:290 Je 15 '46 130w

"Not all the entries are up to par: a few pages from Heywood Broun are unashamed shadow-boxing, and John O'Hara's feeble chuckles over an English newspaper don't belong between book covers. But the percentage of superior writing is high. High enough, in fact, to earn this slim volume a place on any male (or co-ed) bedside table—even if you must toss off a few more ponderous tomes to make room." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p8 S 15 '46 400w

"Most of these short pieces garnered from a magazine catering to the masculine taste retain their flavor and potency, adding up to a lively mixture that doesn't strive to be a blend."

The range of material, the diversity of mood and the expertness of the writing assure an evening—or several evenings—of relaxed and refreshing armchair entertainment, without a hangover." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p26 O 6 '46 230w

FELLIG, ARTHUR (WEEGEE, pseud). Weegee's people. 11 $4 Essential bks.

917.471 New York (city)—Social life and customs. Photographic books 46-8265

Another book of photographic studies of people by the photographer who made Naked City (Book Review Digest 1945). All the pictures were taken in New York city.

"The pictures are technically and artistically of a high order, but they concentrate almost wholly on the scabrous side of metropolitan life and give a very distorted idea of the city. In fact, the book's preoccupation with the poor and the unfortunate may even amount to a kind of snobbery."

— + New Yorker 22:134 N 16 '46 80w

"It is to be regretted that the quality of the reproductions is so poor that much of the detail of the photographs is lost. . . . As a pictorial satirist of society, both high and low, he has used the same technique by which he recorded more sordid subjects, bringing his camera close and photographing instantaneously with the brilliant, searching, and pitiless light of a single flashbulb. . . . When he satirizes, it is in the spirit of social criticism. For although he put on a tuxedo and became a society photographer for a fashion magazine, he still carries with him the memories of what he saw as a news photographer, and he still remembers how New York looked to a kid from the East Side." Beaumont Newhall

Sat R of Lit 29:15 D 28 '46 750w

"It is a fitting successor to 'Naked City', lacking some of the on-the-spot rawness of that work, but on the whole better. . . . Gradually Weegee (now a fashion and society photographer as well as magazine consultant) has worked his way uptown. There is still no starch in his shirt (he includes a photograph of himself, unlatteringly snoozing on a Washington Square bench) yet this reviewer feels that he has about worked out his beloved people of lower Manhattan. Brief forays into Central Park and Harlem will not do it. He should set his focus for a peak in Yonkers or Darien, Conn., for fresh subjects." R. F. Crandell

+ Weekly Book Review p14 D 8 '46 400w

FENICHEL, OTTO. Psychoanalytic theory of neurosis. 703p $7.50 Norton

131.34 Psychoanalysis. Neuroses SG46-165

"Dr. Fenichel has taught psychoanalysis for nearly twenty years, both in Europe and America, and has already published, in translation, 'Outline of Clinical Psychoanalysis' [Book Review Digest, 1934]. This present textbook not only embodies the subject matter of that volume, concerned mainly with the characteristic features of the individual neuroses, in a more systematic and up-to-date form, but presents also the question of the more general theory as well. It summarizes psychoanalytic doctrines in a comprehensive manner and thus provides 'teaching aids for psychoanalytic training.' " (Scientific Bk Club R) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Fenichel's book is not written expressly for laymen, but it is not formidably difficult. Its system and integration are admirable; repetition and 'persuasive' argument are avoided. It does not aim to convince, but to expound. The few lengthy case histories in it are frankly labeled digressions. I was more than satisfied by its precision of statement and impressed by the author's signaling of points that remain obscure or in debate within the profession." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 162:440 Ap 13 '46 280w

"An excellent compendium of psychoanalysis which summarizes a great deal of psychoanalytic literature. Such a serious book on theory is welcome in a field where empiricism is so prevalent. It represents a horizontal cross section of psychoanalytic knowledge and at the same time, by virtue of its very full bibliography, traces the line of development of psychoanalysis." Frederic Wertham

+ — New Repub 114:780 My 27 '46 900w

"It has a most impressive bibliography and is written lucidly and with great detail."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 17:4 F '46 120w

"While terminology and specialized definition have proved the weakest aspect of communication in the field, this work is, broadly speaking, an adequate presentation of the psychoanalytic theory of neurosis."

U S Quarterly BkI 2:148 Je '46 160w

FENISON, RUTH. Desperate cure. 216p $2 Doubleday

46-5906

Detective story.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock

Book Week p15 S 15 '46 90w

Kirkus 14:285 Je 15 '46 80w

New Repub 115:302 S 9 '46 20w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Ag 11 '46 130w

"Excellent plot, and written for the reader who adores the emotional problems confronting an apparently successful young professional woman."

+ New Yorker 22:92 Ag 17 '46 120w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 18 '46 70w

"Interesting emotional and psychological study, although certain parts are rather transparently overplayed. Suspense holds well to end."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:28 Ag 17 '46 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p10 Ag 18 '46 180w

FENNER, PHYLLIS REID, ed. Demons and dervishes; tales with more-than-oriental splendor; 11. by Henry C. Plitz. 183p $2 Knopf

398.2 Fairy tales 46-7371

Contents: Sir Buzz (India); Woman's wit (Orient); The phantom cats (Japan); The story of the seven Simons (Hungary); Three Fridays (Turkey); The turquoise princess (Tibet); Aladdin and the wonderful lamp (Persia); Valiant Vicky, the brave weaver (India); The dragon's strength (Jugoslavia); Story of Ali Baba and the forty thieves (Persia); Shen of the sea (China); The boy who stole the nightingale that was called Gizari (Albania). For grades five to seven.

Booklist 43:74 N 1 '46

"It is a well-rounded collection for many moods and ages, good family reading aloud, good story telling source material."

+ Kirkus 14:490 O 1 '46 80w

"Like the other Fenner anthologies, this is a well selected addition to the fairy tale shelves." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 71:1629 N 15 '46 40w

Reviewed by Mary Mian

N Y Times p26 N 17 '46 180w

Sat R of Lit 29:48 N 9 '46 30w

FENTON, FRANK. What way my journey lies. 243p $2.50 Duell

46-3636

"Here is another story of the readjustment of the combat soldier to the post-war world. The protagonist is a young man who has been through the mill and, owing to a severe wound, has been mustered out early. Having few ties of family or sentiment, he sets out to discover, in the light of his experiences, a meaning for life. Starting in mental confusion at the California beach cottage of a slain comrade, he moves to a boarding house, where he meets some bizarre characters who eventually help him obtain his answer." N Y Times

FENTON, FRANK—Continued

"Stylised, spare, subjective writing for a somewhat holding—if reminiscent—job."

Kirkus 14:78 F 15 '46 160w

"Though sometimes fumbling and not completely resolved, this is satisfying, intelligent fiction for adults who read Undertow." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 71:484 Ap 1 '46 90w

"While the problems debated are significant, the dialogue becomes labored when burdened with ideas. And while Mr. Fenton raises some very legitimate questions concerning the values of our civilization, the anthropocentric conclusion which his hero accepts is surely too simple." Alan Vrooman

N Y Times p8 Ap 28 '46 320w

"This is a very readable book. Despite its lack of humor it is one of the best of its genre. There is the story of an old landlady's death in it which shows Mr. Fenton as a writer of genuine warmth, obvious sincerity, and disciplined talent." Pierce Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 29:38 My 4 '46 500w

"Mr. Fenton's approach to the philosophical problem inherent in his story is elementary. He has very carefully presented two extremes, a middle-of-the-road course, and a final answer, which is based on a rather ordinary and irritating optimism. The reader cannot fail to enjoy 'What Way My Journey Lies' because it is easy and interesting reading, but many will lament the rudimentary nature of the author's underlying philosophy." W. M. Kunstler

+ Weekly Book Review p26 My 5 '46 380w

FERGUSON, CLARENCE JOSEPH. Mink, Mary and me; the story of a wilderness trapline. 248p il $3.50 Mill

917.12 Trapping. Mackenzie territory
46-11802

In 1928 the author, after failing to make a living at photography, left his bride in Montana and went to northern Canada to establish himself as a trapper. Some thirteen months later his wife joined him, and altho totally without experience was able to learn the ways of living in that cold climate in a short time. This account is of their struggles with cold, Indians, animals, floods, and other aspects of northern living for some seventeen or eighteen years.

"Recommended for jaded readers seeking a story of adventure based on genuine fact and genuine readability. . . 'Mink, Mary and Me' may not be 'great' literature, but it certainly is excellent reading." David Karno

+ Book Week p5 N 24 '46 340w

Booklist 43:99 D 1 '46

"A book like this is likely to send people into the Canadian North Woods in search of adventure (and furs). . . It is tops in reading."

+ Kirkus 14:411 Ag 15 '46 150w

Wis Lib Bul 42:165 D '46

FERGUSON, ERNA. Cuba. 308p il $3.75 Knopf
917.291 Cuba—Description and travel

46-11828

Study of Cuba by a seasoned travel-writer. History, description of the country, and manners and customs in all classes are discussed. The book can be used by tourists or students of Latin-American affairs. Index.

"It is pleasing for a Cuban to read a book about his country and find the author sympathetic and willing to understand the real life of the country: economic forces at play, intellectual movements, social evolution and revolution. Only in some aspects, like her chapter on the price of sugar, is her approach on the naive side. . . This book should not be missed by those contemplating a trip to Cuba, and it certainly is a must for those Americans who have Cuban friends." Lorenzo Medrano

+ Book Week p49 D 1 '46 270w

Booklist 43:116 D 15 '46

"Miss Fergusson is delightfully and deceptively natural, approaching Cuba as a tourist, and going over the ground as most tourists would. She realizes that tourists comprise possibly the best medium for understanding Cuba. . . Nowhere does the travelogue bog down. Yet she weaves uncruelly a woof of all the arts. Furthermore, Communism, clericalism, politics, graft, economics, hospitality, voodoo—all emerge concisely with the distinct Cuban stamp." R. K. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 D 13 '46 360w

Kirkus 14:478 S 15 '46 140w

"Erna Fergusson has managed to cram in a little of everything without confusion or surfeit—not too much sugar or scenery, not too much history or too many personalities, not too many native customs or American divergences, not too much of graft, gambling or culture. Her well-proportioned book brings the reader up to date on Machado and Batista, and prepares him for President Grau San Martin. In the same tone of cheerful realism she uncovers the tale of how the famous message to Garcia really got there, and what it was that put Hobson in peril of the kisses of American women for a generation after he got back. Neither seems to have been exactly as advertised at the time, or in the school books since." Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p5 D 8 '46 800w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 29 '46 700w

"It would not have been presumptuous or inappropriate of Miss Fergusson to have named this book 'The Intelligent Traveler's Guide to Cuba.' . . She is a zestful and determined traveler, a serious if not a profound thinker, a candid and clear-eyed observer, eagerly sharing with a growing number of readers all her discoveries and experiences and thoughts concerning lands she has visited. She gives the impression of always having a good time, physical and spiritual, but never forgetting to keep her notebook close at hand to jot down everything large and small." E. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p7 N 24 '46 800w

FERM, VERGILIUS TURE ANSELM, ed. Encyclopedia of religion. 844p $10 Philosophical lib.

203 Religion—Encyclopedias and dictionaries
46-3249

"The editor states in his preface that this one-volume desk-reference Encyclopedia of Religion is intended to be 'useful to both scholars and students and, at the same time, intelligible to cultured laymen,' that it includes 'the theologies of the major religions, denominations and cults with special attention to Biblical literature and Christian theology, ecclesiastical history and polity, the usual divisions of cultural and academic interests as these relate to religion, viz., philosophy, psychology, ethics, sociology, history, comparative religion, art and architecture, musicology and liturgy, important controversial disputes, missionary enterprises, religious education, and the like, together with the masters and leaders of classical religious thought'. The articles are signed. . . A broad interpretation of the word 'religion' permits the inclusion of such topics as Labor Movements, Negro Education, Penology, Juvenile Protection, Culture, Insanity, Horoscope. . . Entries are arranged alphabetically with topical headings at the top of each page to facilitate the finding of articles." Subscription Bks Bul

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 62:1217 O 31 '46 900w

"My general criticism of the volume is that the editorial organization was not adequately developed, so that categories of topics were not fully explored before assignments were made. But it is a useful work." E. E. Aubrey

+ Crozer Q 23:104 Ja '46 600w

"That the paper and printing are of inferior quality is no doubt due to wartime conditions, but it is unfortunate that the price will limit the sale of this volume; for it is a book which all libraries should have and most students of religion would like to be able to buy." W. A. Christian

+ J Religion 26:220 Jl '46 600w

"This encyclopedia of religion deserves a warm welcome. It is published at what, in view of its bulk and contents, must be regarded as a most modest price. In smaller but clear print it embraces tens of thousands of articles in which are compressed just those precise essentials that laymen and, indeed, scholars themselves wish to verify." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p15 F 10 '46 650w

"The many biographical sketches are a useful feature of the book. Many persons are included who are not well known and whose names probably would be difficult to find elsewhere. . . The volume is heavy and cumbersome. The paper is poor in quality and the print is small and light. The Encyclopedia of Religion is recommended for libraries having a considerable demand for material in this field, as there is an advantage in having the data assembled in one place for quick reference."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:3 Ja '46 420w
U S Quarterly Bkl 2:160 Je '46 230w

FERN, GEORGE HENRY. Training for supervision in industry. 188p $2 McGraw

658.3124 Foremen. Factory management 45-6938

"Outlines a proper method for training of supervisors, but can also be used by supervisors themselves to improve their methods of handling men. . . Mr. Fern writes about the problems a supervisor encounters from the starting of a worker on a new job to the training of other supervisors by the conference method, which Mr. Fern recommends as the best method of instruction. As the author analyzes the various situations that a supervisor must face, the book becomes a psychological text, instructing the supervisor in the best methods of handling the workers to secure the greatest cooperation from them. Among others, topics of 'Mental Health in Industry,' 'Safety and Accident Prevention,' 'Women in Industry,' 'Supervisors and Job Relations,' and 'How to Lead Conferences,' are discussed. Through a series of tables, the author breaks down the problems of industry into their causes, results, and remedies." (Chem & Met Eng) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 42:179 F 1 '46

"For many years the author has trained supervisors, and his book is the result of his experiences. . . Mr. Fern writes in a clear, simple style, treats his subject in minute detail, and has incorporated into his book material valuable to anyone who is involved in human relationships." B. K. McKee

+ Chem & Met Eng 53:287 Ja '46 420w

FERN, GEORGE HENRY, and ROBBINS, ELDON B. Teaching with films. 1l 146p $1.75 Bruce pub.

371.33523 Moving pictures in education 46-25046

"With special application to industrial arts and vocational education, all the practical techniques required for using this important teaching aid are presented. Contains bibliography and index." School & Society

Booklist 42:220 Mr 15 '46

School & Society 63:159 Mr 2 '46 90w

"The volume is entertainingly written, is spiced with pungent smiles, and may prove interesting to the potential visual educator new to the field. Because of technical errors and numerous contradictions, this reviewer, much as he regrets the necessity, cautions the acceptance of all the information included as fact."

+ School R 54:307 My '46 550w

"This is one of those rare publications, a book which does simply and well the job it assigns itself."

+ Theatre Arts 30:622 O '46 180w

FERRARS, ELIZABETH. Cheat the hangman. 249p $2 Doubleday

46-4357

Detective story.

Kirkus 14:185 Ap 15 '46 60w

"Praise the Lord for a detective story that concentrates on why rather than how the murder was committed."

+ New Repub 114:846 Je 10 '46 60w

"As a mystery story this book is very good indeed. As a novel of tangled human relations in wartime London it is even better than that." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p35 My 26 '46 150w

"The discovery she arrives at is very ingenious indeed and worthy of a less static plot. Nicely written, though."

+ New Yorker 22:95 My 25 '46 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 7 '46 50w

"Brittle atmosphere of London art and literary circles during war ably portrayed. People are interesting and plot has unexpected outcome."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:37 Je 1 '46 40w

"Miss Ferrars doesn't try to hide the fact that one of the characters would make an ideal killer; but then, the main idea in this story is not so much mere surprise as a polite going over of the people in a sort of non-mystery way. A pleasing change from formula whodunits." Will Cuppy

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Je 9 '46 270w

FERRE, NELS FREDERICK SOLOMON. Faith and reason. (Reason and the Christian faith, v 1) 251p $2.50 Harper

230 Faith. Reason. Religion and science. Philosophy and religion 46-4350

"Functional relationship between religion and reason discussed by Professor of Christian Theology at Andover Newton Theological School. He analyzes and defines these terms and demonstrates their agreements and disagreements with each other. His examination of methods of science, philosophy, and religion reveals the proper sphere of each. The Circle of Religion he maintains is out beyond science and philosophy. Dr. Ferré challenges people 'to be deeply enough religious to become vigorously and creatively intellectual.'" (Library J) Index.

"It seems to me that Professor Ferré's definition of religion is beset by a certain ambiguity. It is Christian and yet it is not. I am sure that he means to write as a Christian theologian. If this is the case, he could tone up his definition of religion and of God particularly by making use of the doctrines of creation and salvation. According to my impression, his present discussion of religion is subject to the suspicion that it is too philosophical and as such too indefinite, even subjectivistic." Wilhelm Pauck

Christian Century 63:963 Ag 7 '46 750w

"Believing that 'American theology has been weak in method, in basic principles,' Dr. Ferré begins here with the basic problem of the relation between faith and reason. And he does a thoroughly good piece of work on it." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 160:17 S 1 '46 120w

"Though Ferré treats of methodology at length, he apparently fails to present an adequate statement of his essential psychology, epistemology, and metaphysics. Without these the reader is likely to find the discussion truncated in its argument and even confused. Existentialists, we may say, are not excused from saying 'epistemological grace.' Therefore, despite the profound learning and religiosity of the author and the deep and moving concern for spiritual reality which he conveys, his existential confession lacks technical perfection and final persuasion. . . Despite its difficulties Faith and Reason is an important book. It rides the storm and cross currents of contemporary theology with a magnificent spirit of courage, enquiry, concern, and positive affirmation. It reflects the enormous vitality of its author's religious experience." W. G. Muelder

FERRE, N. F. S.—Continued

Crozer Q 23:373 O '46 3100w

"Recommended for theological and public libraries." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 71:666 My 1 '46 140w

Reviewed by G. R. Stephenson

+ N Y Times p32 S 15 '46 500w

FERRIL, THOMAS HORNSBY. I hate Thursday; decorations by Anne Ferril Folsom. 233p $2.50 Harper

814

46-7455

A collection of pieces first published in the Rocky Mountain Herald, Denver's oldest weekly paper. Chronologically arranged from April, 1939 to April, 1946, the sketches cover a variety of subjects from small boys and limericks, college athletics and pack rats, to war and peace.

Book Week p27 N 24 '46 140w

"There's a gentle humor here but also a very quiet seriousness; there's a level point of view, whether aimed at personal, local, or international questions; a tolerance as well as a thoughtfulness, a simplicity which makes for the apt point rather than the neat phrase. For his following, which is largely western."

+ Kirkus 14:373 Ag 1 '46 120w

"[These essays] deserve a wider audience, for Ferril (a poet of good reputation) writes strikingly individual prose—playful and ironic about small matters, vigorous and oblique (Thoreau is most often quoted) about large matters." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 71:1328 O 1 '46 100w

"Mr. Ferril writes with the neat touches of paradoxical humor that distinguish the good light essay. This is a book to be tasted, not swallowed. It's a condensed milk type of book that needs to be diluted with time. It won't set the Hudson on fire—or even the Colorado—and it doesn't prove anything, but it will please those who admire the well-turned phrase and the individual idea." Daniel Schwarz

+ N Y Times p42 O 20 '46 500w

"'I Hate Thursday' is one of the most entertaining volumes of miscellaneous comment to turn up in many a long day, just the thing for that tired moment before dinner, or that satiate moment after dinner." D. L. Morgan

+ Sat R of Lit 29:62 D 7 '46 400w

"Actually, Ferril's lounging prose works as productively for him as that of any man now writing English. Like Joe DiMaggio's fielding, it looks easy; and that, in baseball or rhetoric, is the mark of the major leaguer. A rookie writer could do worse than study these mile-high musings from Denver." Richard Match

+ Weekly Book Review p4 O 20 '46 750w

FERRIS, BERT R. Restless road. 180p $2.50 Houghton

46-6986

Story of a discharged veteran who comes back to his home town in Nebraska, but cannot seem to adjust himself to civilian life. He drifts first into a hobo existence, and finally enlists in the Merchant marine.

Kirkus 14:281 Je 15 '46 170w

"Stark realism of first half is contrasted and weakened by hero's escape into an idealistic hobo world. . . . Colorful, easy-flowing style carries novel along to swift conclusion. Language rather raw. Mr. Ferris speaks eloquently for all GIs. Book should be read." E. H. Kennedy

+ Library J 71:1050 Ag '46 100w

"If Mr. Ferris were a Sinclair Lewis he might have made his Blakesville the mean little town—and his veteran the misunderstood young man—which a story of this type needs. But his thesis is too transparent. His veterans never have a chance. . . . Furthermore, his veterans are such a salty bunch that the reader will be more inclined to want to scrape the barnacles off their chests than to sympathize.

Mr. Ferris hasn't written much of a novel, but he has turned out a good recruiting pamphlet for the Army." D. D.

— N Y Times p12 S 29 '46 450w

"This book might better have been entitled 'The Veteran's Revenge,' because the author misses no opportunity to damn the civilian population, the Veterans Administration, the American Legion and any and all groups or individuals with whom the returning service man comes into contact. . . . It is also highly unlikely that the normal veteran has, as the author intimates, been totally emasculated in so far as his initiative, adaptability and ambition are concerned." W. M. Kunstler

— Weekly Book Review p14 S 29 '46 800w

FEUILLET, OCTAVE. Punch: his life and adventures; tr. from the French by Paul McPharlin, with the original illustrations by Bertall and a few words on making puppets by the translator. 128p $2.50 Didier pub.

46-5941

"Under the title 'La Vie de Polichinelle et ses Nombreuses Aventures,' this is a children's classic in France. It was written in 1840 by Octave Feuillet. . . . The first translations in English of Feuillet's book appeared in Victorian days, and were sugar-coated to the taste of the times. This new one by Paul McPharlin is engagingly done in the modern idiom, and it should enable American children to give Punch his due place in the gallery of merry manikins, beside his grandchildren, Pinocchio and Mickey Mouse." N Y Times

Booklist 43:38 O 1 '46

Christian Science Monitor p18 O 19 '46 100w

"Paul McPharlin has added a chapter on how Feuillet came to write the book and one on the making of a puppet theatre. These with a short bibliography give the book special value to puppeteers. Children who chuckle over Pinocchio will find a kindred hero in Punch."

+ Horn Bk 22:349 S '46 160w

"There are sly, humorous episodes, impossible adventures, bold stratagems and lots of fooling which makes this good reading for ten and eleven year olds—and family reading aloud for younger children."

+ Kirkus 14:275 Je 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist

Library J 71:1466 O 15 '46 70w

"Punch lives, disenchanted, in a world whose follies and foibles he sees with clear eyes, and learns to sharpen his wits in order to make his hard way among them. There is a tonic quality to this book, along with its healthy slapstick, good for both children and adults. The original illustrations by Bertall recall those of Thackeray for 'The Rose and the Ring,' which appeared fifteen years later. Mr. McPharlin appends a valuable brief article on how to make a Punch and a puppet theatre of your own." Mary Mian

+ N Y Times p16 J1 21 '46 700w

Reviewed by Florence Little

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 10 '46 80w

"The translation is fresh and idiomatic, and the story is lively and amusing. There is a gay cover-jacket, but one could wish that the drawings had better reproduction." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 S 28 '46 160w

"The book, said to be the same size as the original, is as gay and fresh as if it had been written last week, and the Bertall illustrations are perfect. This is a splendid book for children jaded with the gyrations of Superman and his uranium-blooded contemporaries, and will amuse their parents too." R. F. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p4d J1 21 '46 360w

"A collectors item for any one interested in marionettes, this gay little volume will be bought by older people to give to some child in the family and retain for their own pleasure. Let's hope they get two copies for it will be likely to make a marionette fancier out of the child who receives it. . . Mr. McPharlin's new version is lively, light and just sufficiently mocking to match the meaning: the original illustrations by Bertall are used—no others would really fit—though the formality that we have come to attach to woodcuts is lightened by printing many of them in red. It makes a period piece that will please many." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 Ag 11 '46 270w

FICHTER, JOSEPH HENRY. Christianity. 267p $2 50 Herder

230.2 Theology. Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works 46-5089
"Subtitled, 'An Outline of Dogmatic Theology for Laymen,' [this book] . . . is concerned with the great verities of faith—God, Man, Jesus Christ, the Church and the Sacraments—in the light of what God has chosen to reveal of Himself." Commonweal

"For those Catholics who desire a clear-cut, mature, and organized expression of their faith this book is extremely good. For instructors it furnishes an excellent frame of reference. Perhaps its real value for the inquirer lies in the fact that it will enable him to see the whole, and then ask not only the right but the essential questions, thus coming to a real appreciation of the cogency of the proof and the exposition." E. M. Burke

+ Cath World 164:377 Ja '47 450w

Reviewed by L. J. Trese

Commonweal 44:412 Ag 9 '46 330w

FIELD, BEN. Piper Tompkins. 259p $2.50 Doubleday

46-1629

Piper Tompkins, a young Connecticut farm boy, leaves the farm and goes into a defense factory. When Piper made the change he was a rugged individualist, intolerant and anti-social, but gradually the life in the factory changed his nature and he became an ardent unionist and friend of his fellow workers.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p2 F 10 '46 600w

"A very disappointing novel, described by the publishers as a labor novel, and neither good on that score nor holding on any other."
— Kirkus 13:531 D 1 '45 190w

"It is an old story, and, as Ben Field tells it, a ballad in which good and evil are never to be confused. But Ben Field has also made it an intense and human story, credible and frequently vivid. In spite of his moral attitude, Mr. Field is a naturalist who insists upon sharp detail: the landscape and life of the farm; the tools and machines in the factory; the sights and sounds of Hartford boarding houses." Paul Griffith

+ N Y Times p5 F 17 '46 350w

New Yorker 21:97 F 9 '46 100w

"Piper Tompkins is a strange character to be carrying the weight of a novel. He has no apparent virtues except honesty, and honesty all by itself, unaccompanied by intelligence or charm or plain intuitive goodness, as demonstrated by Piper, is far from attractive. . . Mr. Field has sacrificed a great deal to his single-minded demonstration, for the book, like its central character, has little else to offer but its one dominant idea. It is a laconic description of a personal awakening in a land of strife, not even partially softened by Piper's gestures at love." N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 29:16 Mr 16 '46 400w

"The book is cluttered with robust, living, breathing people whom you might confidently expect to meet in the Nutmeg State. Mr. Field's language is rich and strong. Occasionally his writing is gummed up with the January-molasses thickness of Thomas Wolfe and sometimes his similes are strained and inexact. But this novel is as American as Whitman, Stephen Crane and Steinbeck, and deserves a place with other genuine American works." Paul Corey

+ Weekly Book Review p5 F 10 '46 600w

FIELD, GUY CROMWELL. Pacifism and conscientious objection. (Current problems ser) 122p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

355.22 Conscientious objectors. Peace A45-4076

"The treatment of conscientious objectors in war-time is an important and generally difficult problem, which has, on the whole, been handled much more wisely in this war than in the last. Prof. Field approaches the question with unusual qualifications. He holds the chair of Philosophy in the University of Bristol, and as member of a tribunal he has had in the last few years to listen to and discuss the representations of some thousands of conscientious objectors of all types, from the most reasonable to the most non-co-operative." Spec

"The book is an excellent demonstration of the conflict between value systems and between such systems and the social order in which their adherents attempt to realize them. Field's hope that the book will contribute to a settled public opinion with regard to the pacifist is hardly tenable." H. O. Dahlke

Am J Soc 51:348 Ja '46 300w

"By and large, the reason which pervades these pages reflects the attitude which Britain has taken toward conscientious objectors with even more consideration than has our own country. It would be hard to find a better mark than this of what the war was for, as contrasted with what it was fought against." Walter Sandelius

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:174 F '46 300w

Foreign Affairs 24:350 Ja '46 40w

"This is a most valuable contribution to the discussion of a problem to which few contributions at once dispassionate and comprehending have so far been made."

+ Spec 174:346 Ap 13 '46 270w

"Professor Field's is an interesting and well-written book on a subject too often debated in passion."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p261 Je 2 '45 420w

FIELD, PETER, pseud. Powder Valley showdown. (Jefferson house publication) 186p $2 Morrow

45-11147

Western story.

Booklist 42:227 Mr 15 '46

Kirkus 13:479 N 1 '45 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p18 Ja 20 '46 100w

FIELD AND STREAM (periodical). Reader; by a host of contributors from the magazine's beginning to the present. 434p $3 Doubleday
799 Fishing. Hunting. Short stories—Collections Agr46-233

Collection of outdoor stories selected from the sportsman's magazine Field and Stream. There are forty-four of the stories and they deal with subjects as widely separated as bagging walrus in the Arctic; shooting quail in Maryland; fishing in Australia; and hunting gorillas in Africa.

Book Week p8 Ag 11 '46 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '46

Kirkus 14:267 Je 1 '46 150w

"There is lots and lots of reading here, in great variety, reflecting in some degree the broad coverage the magazine gives to field sports and topics related thereto. Only in some degree, however. The nameless editors have, in this reviewer's opinion, loaded the collection with a disproportionate number of articles on hunting and shooting, at the expense of fishing. And they've done less than justice to their magazine by omitting altogether their excellent departmental material. But they were probably aiming at a dipping-and-browsing sort of book, for sportsmen's enjoyment on long winter evenings. And, with the exception above noted, they've achieved just that." J. R. de la Torre Bueno

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 26 '46 750w

FIELD AND STREAM—Continued

"The compiler offers the sort of thing that sportsmen, and possibly plenty of laymen, too, will enjoy."

+ New Yorker 22:92 Ag 17 '46 80w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold
San Francisco Chronicle p3 D 1 '46 90w
Wis Lib Bul 42:147 N '46

FIELDING, ANN MARY. Mayfair squatters. 254p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Heinemann]

46-2915

During the blitz four young people find shelter in a London house, deserted by its owners. At the first inkling of danger Mr Jenks-Scrutton had left for America, with his family. But his Mayfair mansion with its elegant furnishings was only empty a few months. The story is of the loves and lives of these charming young squatters, and of the tragedy which overtook some of them.

"Ann Mary Fielding, a direct descendant of Henry Fielding, the distinguished English novelist, shows in this unpretentious first novel a gift for characterization. Her irresponsible Mayfair squatters are all appealing and alive." Marion Strobel

+ Book Week p10 Ap 14 '46 400w

"Miss Fielding's publishers inform her readers that she is a direct descendant of Henry Fielding. In a daintier way she has a little of her famous eighteenth-century progenitor's taste for characters who are a law unto themselves." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p12 J1 13 '46 550w

"A mixture of fantasy, tragedy and farce, not too well blended, but there are moments of high entertainment and ingenious pleasure." Kirkus 14:108 Mr 1 '46 190w

"This is a strange, dreamy, evocative little novel, which somehow hints at more meaning than it actually discloses. There is an almost suspenseful quality in its withholding, as if, after some deliberate retardation, the story had been calculated to explode suddenly in general illumination. But despite much easy, pleasant writing, and a set of engaging characters, and a very promising situation, the book never fully lights up." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 14 '46 400w

"Brilliant and bizarre are the two adjectives which come first to mind in defining the effect of 'The Mayfair Squatters.' . . . The police sergeant who comes in just before the curtain says, 'It doesn't make sense to me,' but that's a constabulary point of view. The novel makes sense, but not conventionally, even when its characters are engaged in a harlequin charade." Lisle Bell

+ Weekly Book Review p26 My 5 '46 380w

FINE, BENJAMIN. Admission to American colleges; a study of current policy and practice. 225p $2.50 Harper

371.214 Colleges and universities—Entrance requirements 46-6749

"A study of the policies and practices of admission into American colleges [covering such questions as:] Who goes to college? Who is permitted to enter? Who is told to stay out? Do we, by existing procedures, secure the best possible type of boy and girl for the campus? Are present standards for testing and examining potential students efficient and satisfactory? Can they be improved or modified to meet changing needs of post-war America?" Pref

Booklist 43:128 Ja 1 '47

Current Hist 11:401 N '46 40w

Kirkus 14:268 Je 1 '46 140w

N Y Times p38 S 15 '46 320w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 28 '46 850w

"The book is frank and clear in its presentation. The author's sound and constructive recommendations, the specific references he makes to the admission requirements of the different colleges and universities, the overall picture of the situation throughout the country today, make this a most timely and helpful volume." Harold Fields

+ Sat R of Lit 29:35 O 5 '46 500w

School & Society 64:169 Ag 31 '46 30w

"In quoting from the registrars and admission office's reports, and he seems painstakingly to quote from each institution that answered his questionnaire, Mr. Fine unfortunately gives a strange impression of the college as a whole. This is no book to go to find out about one or two specific institutions. There are, of course, other books to meet this need. For the professional educator, for the disheartened high school senior, this is an excellent review of the intricacy of getting into college. But in being technical, it is too repetitiously complete to be any more engrossing than college catalogues generally are." H. L. Varley

Springf'd Republican p4d S 22 '46 440w

FINE, BENJAMIN. Democratic education. 251p $2.50 Crowell

378 Colleges and universities—U.S. Education, Higher 46-1412

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"This book presents the educational philosophy of Dr. Fine, who is education editor of The New York Times, and it is likely that it will stimulate vigorous discussion. Many of its implications run counter to firmly entrenched thinking with respect to higher education and will undoubtedly engender charges that the doctrines enunciated can in the end only lead to an undermining of educational standards generally. . . . Fundamentally Dr. Fine poses the problem of what functions colleges should perform in modern society. In doing so he is forced to state his conception of liberal education and its relation to vocations and the earning of a living. From all of this there will be dissent, but not from those who, like this reviewer, are associated with public institutions and have seen them function in relation to the ambitions and needs of thousands of young men and women." M. M. Willey

Ann Am Acad 244:225 Mr '46 550w

Booklist 42:221 Mr 15 '46

Reviewed by Samuel Roddan

Canadian Forum 26:92 J1 '46 650w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 10:152 F '46 1250w

"I find Democratic Education disappointing because it seems to me to confuse the issue at a very critical moment. For the first time in our history young men—if they have worn our uniform—will have a chance at the kind of education which will be of use to them and to their country, and to have all they need of it. But it will do them no good, and it will do the cause of democratic education harm, to define 'higher' education simply as that which goes on in a place called a college; and then to ask that the colleges, understaffed and underequipped as they now are, should try to teach everything under the sun. Indoctrination in double-entry bookkeeping does not require the use of a cyclotron and the mysteries of ice-cream making are not clarified by walking the stacks of the Widener Library." Willard Thorp

New Repub 114:131 Ja 28 '46 1500w

Special Libraries 37:21 Ja '46

Reviewed by G. H. Henry

Survey G 35:332 S '46 270w

"In connection with the thesis, the volume surveys American colleges of all types, describes the accommodations everywhere being made for veterans, and reports on inquiries made among parents and students showing what the public wants, or thinks it wants, higher education to be like. The book is perhaps the fullest account which has yet appeared of the present situation in its transitional confusion and its underlying trends."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:40 Mr '46 320w

"With Mr. Fine's ideal there can be little quarrel. No promising student should be denied a college education for financial reasons. 'The campus belongs to all who can profit' from it. But there is still some question as to who can profit from it and how they can profit most." C. W. Cole

Weekly Book Review p6 F 3 '46 700w

Reviewed by David Worcester

Yale R n s 35:757 summer '46 700w

FINEGAN, JACK. Light from the ancient past; the archeological background of the Hebrew-Christian religion. 500p il maps $5 Princeton univ. press

220.93 Bible. Whole—Antiquities. Christian antiquities A46-820

"In this lavishly illustrated volume, Mr. Finegan, director of religious activities at Iowa State College, gives a well-organized account of the archeological background of the Hebrew-Christian religion. He has visited many of the sites from which the records have been secured, and he has studied many of the archeological objects in the museums of both the Old and the New World. His knowledge of the literature of the subject is extensive, and his well-phrased text makes the ancient world come vividly alive." Scientific Bk Club R

"Princeton University Press should be praised for the fine piece of bookmaking that it has accomplished in the production of this volume. A difficult text has been organized most handily and printed most legibly. The plates are marvels of clear illustration and are grouped just where they can be most conveniently consulted. It is a pleasure to work with this volume." H. R. Willoughby

+ Am Hist R 51:700 Jl '46 1100w

"Jack Finegan is director of religious activities at Iowa State College at Ames, Iowa. His book will be indispensable to ministers and to students in courses in Biblical history and literature. It will also be enormously stimulating and helpful to thousands of general readers, whose reading of the Bible it will make more enjoyable and more fruitful. More than 200 admirably chosen illustrations are integral parts of the book." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Mr 10 '46 450w

Booklist 42:296 My 15 '46

Bookmark 7:12 My '46

Reviewed by T. C. Petersen

Cath World 163:184 My '46 650w

"The first part of the volume is based not on first-hand control of the sources but on accurate and intelligent use of secondary sources. In this sketch Finegan generally follows the best and most recent literature, regardless of its origin, since he shows admirable control of modern European languages. A very good feature of this part of the volume—and indeed of the work as a whole—is the extensive use made of excavators' reports and of discussions of the material by critical scholars. Finegan here shows himself far superior to the usual author of books on archeology and the Bible. . . The author's tone is throughout reverent and moderately conservative. It is an unusual pleasure to read a book which does not gratuitously offend the religious feelings of Roman Catholics, Greek Orthodox or conservative Protestants." W. E. Albright

+ Christian Century 63:462 Ap 10 '46 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '46

"A long and intensely concentrated work, but it is not forbidding. . . Archeology has great fascination, and well written, well illustrated books about archeology have a special charm. They are in a way unexciting, in a way even dull, a normally impatient reader might say, but at the same time they can be envelopingly interesting. Mr. Finegan's is a good example, an excellent presentation, without extrinsic jazzing up by proving the inherent interest of the subject treated 'straight' and seriously." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 43:658 Ap 12 '46 850w

"This book serves a useful purpose. It is a Baedeker of Near Eastern archeology, packed with interesting detail, as well as with a wealth of bibliographical material on many subjects. No one will read it without learning from it. The two hundred well-chosen illustrations and the ten maps and plans are worth the modest price of the book. On the whole this is an admirable introduction to the archeological wealth of the ancient past for the minister, the student, and the interested layman. Professor Finegan is to be congratulated that he has had the courage to undertake such a large task and that he has been able to maintain such balanced proportions when confronted with such a wealth of material." J. B. Pritchard

+ Crozer Q 23:279 Jl '46 1200w

"The student of Hebrew-Christian archeology will find this volume a treasury of information culled from ancient resources, but the general reader, who has an interest in religions or simply ancient civilization, will find a continuous story of the Mesopotamian beginnings, the rôle of Egypt, the Hebrew era and the period leading up to the rise of Rome and the early Christian world. . . It is a book to be read leisurely."

+ Current Hist 10:446 My '46 100w

"Those interested in archeology, in history, as well as Hebrew and Christian scholars will find this an invaluable reference book."

+ Kirkus 13:514 N 15 '46 190w

"The earlier part of the book is of interest to all archeologists and in fact to the general reader with a scientific bent and curiosity concerning the rise of civilization. The latter part is more specifically intended for the student of biblical sources and of the roots of Judaism and Christianity."

+ Scientific Bk Club R p3 Ap '46 480w

"The book is written in a simple, non-technical style for the general reader, contains an admirable selection and reproduction of 204 illustrations, and an up-to-date bibliography."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:92 Je '46 120w

"The author has produced an eminently scholarly and readable volume on the Near East, one of the few which successfully synthesizes what is known of more than five millennia in history. Other books have dealt competently with certain areas (Breasted's 'History of Egypt,' for example), but few writers have attempted to cover so wide a field and done it so well." P. J. Searles

+ Weekly Book Review p2 Mr 17 '46 1050w

"On its own informative level, through synthesis of widely scattered facts, Finegan's book has given us much which is new—for instance the first up-to-date account in English of the catacombs and their art. Archaeologists, who are not themselves pursuing research in the Near Eastern field, will rejoice to have this excellent survey in one volume; teachers will find it a most suitable handbook for courses on archaeology and the Scriptures; and every minister or layman interested in the material aspects of the environment in which the prophets and apostles lived, will find clear and precise answers to his questions. The 'Light from the Ancient Past' may not be dazzling; but it is a good and steady light." G. M. A. Hanfmann

+ Yale R n s 35:761 summer '46 850w

FINER, HERMAN. Road to reaction. 228p $2 Little

338.91 Hayek, Friedrich August von. Economic policy. Totalitarianism 45-9861

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"All in all, the work of Finer is a vigorous and effective type of political polemic. I do not recall so complete a work of demolition since Henry George wrote his Perplexed Philosopher in reply to the befuddled Herbert Spencer." C. E. Merriam

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:134 F '46 900w

"Finer's views on planning are often sound, sometimes sketchy, and sometimes not quite in keeping with American ideas. . . Unfortunately, no sooner do we find something to agree with than we meet a fresh barrier. He lists the evils of big business; tuggery, conspiracies, lockouts, etc. These must be acknowledged; but he has no condemnation for equivalent practices of some labor unions. Haven't both sides played the same game, according to their strength and the times?" Roy Hillbrook

FINER, HERMAN—Continued

Current Hist 10:56 Ja '46 1050W

"Finer devotes the latter portion of his book to suggestions for a democratic program and for reforms in the machinery of American government. This is the least satisfying section of the work. While his ideas are suggestive, they are inadequately developed and the book stands on its critique of the Hayek school and of the operations of monopoly capitalism. That is enough for any book. I hope ways can be found to give it as wide a circulation as our great corporations were able to obtain for The Road to Serfdom." J. D. Kingsley

+ — New Repub 114:130 Ja 28 '46 1100W

"An inadequate notion of confutation and a slipshod method of argument make this book, as an answer to The Road to Serfdom, inconsequential. It has, however, an interest of its own, as exhibiting the creed of a moderate socialist: capitalism is a failure and cannot be made to work; planning can be moderate; the character of planning depends on who plans and how; the manipulation of ration values and the supply of capital to government corporations are substitutes for competitive pricing. Unfortunately in supporting his own theses, Dr. Finer uses modes of proof fully as fallacious as those which he employs against Hayek. When his errors of simple inspection, observation, generalization, ratiocination and confusion have been discounted, little is left but a string of assertions which may, or may not, be true—the reader must supply his own proof or disproof." Lucius Wilmerding

— Pol Sci Q 61:128 Mr '46 1750W

Wis Lib Bul 42:43 Mr '46

Reviewed by J. J. O'Leary

Yale R n s 35:550 spring '46 650W

FINER, HERMAN. United nations economic and social council. (America looks ahead) 121p 50c; pa 25c World peace

330.611 United nations (organization). Economic and social council 46-2948

"Long association with the International Labor Office especially qualifies this author to discuss the provisions in the United Nations Charter for World economic and social welfare. Dr. Finer analyzes with much informative detail the 'specialized agencies' either already set up or to be established through international agreements, together with the 'roof' organization which is to co-ordinate their activities, the Economic and Social Council." (Weekly Book Review) Brief bibliography. No index.

"The entire study is worthy of its important subject." J. W. Robinson

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:826 Ag '46 300W

"Dr. Finer's book, students of international relations will find, is a closely reasoned, well documented and rewarding study." E. N. Schwartz

+ Book Week p21 Ap 14 '46 200W

Reviewed by E. A. Beder

Canadian Forum 26:67 Je '46 240W

Current Hist 10:537 Je '46 50W

Foreign Affairs 24:744 Jl '46 30W

Reviewed by J. L. Kunz

Harvard Law R 59:1183 S '46 400W

Reviewed by R. C. Snyder

Pol Sci Q 61:472 S '46 380W

Reviewed by G. V. Price

Social Educ 10:235 My '46 270W

"Dr. Finer has taken the sections of the charter dealing with the council, analyzing them to set forth their functions, methods of procedure, and their relationship to the present group of international agencies. The result is a well-organized, logically arranged, clearly stated series of facts about the council and its work which will give the reader a clear picture of this all-important organization." H. W. Cross

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ag 25 '46 800W

"An excellent background study on which to judge daily developments." J. d'E. De Constant

+ Survey G 35:299 Ag '46 400W

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

Weekly Book Review p31 Ap 28 '46 550W

FINK, ZERA SILVER. Classical republicans; an essay in the recovery of a pattern of thought in seventeenth century England. 225p $4 Northwestern Univ.

320.942 Political science—History. Democracy A45-4212

"Seventeenth century England has much to offer to historians of political thought because then as in almost no other period, the fundamental nature of democracy and its political expression was explored and set down. . . [This work] makes a useful contribution by focussing on one important element; the influence of the classical idea of 'mixed government' on some of the leading writers of the period. Beginning with Aristotle, the idea of mixed government represents a search for stability by the combination of monarchic, aristocratic, and democratic elements in a state so as to get the benefits of each and avoid the inherent weaknesses of all. The works of Harrington, Milton, Nevill, and Sydney receive extended treatment after a review of their sources." U S Quarterly Bkl

"Miss Fink's study does not attempt too much, but it traces a theme through several centuries. It is modest in its claims, yet leaves no doubt as to the importance of the subject. It shows evidence of wide reading and proves its points beyond question. The plan is clear and unified, but many promising byways of further investigation are indicated." Hardin Craig

+ Am Hist R 51:296 Ja '46 550W

"The volume is well written and painstakingly documented, but it involves considerable repetition and is designed for readers trained primarily in English literature. The political scientist will find much of the background tedious, yet many allusions to literary personages, especially Milton, bafflingly incomplete." Margaret Spahr

+ — Am Pol Sci R 40:173 F '46 450W

"The documentation of this history is thorough and accurate, and the treatment is scholarly." G. H. Sabine

Class Philol 41:191 Jl '46 400W

"It is refreshing to find a wealth of material on Machiavelli's role as a purveyor of democratic ideas. The volume has also interesting information on such vehicles of ideas as translations, particular editions of books, and the like. Hardly intended for the general reader, the book's summaries of seventeenth century works are sometimes overlong for those familiar with the field. Not distinguished in style, the book nevertheless throws much light on a number of interesting problems and helps in rounding out a view of the period."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 1:36 D '45 280W

Times [London] Lit Sup p80 F 16 '46 650W

FINLETTER, MRS GRETCHEN (DAM-ROSCH). From the top of the stairs. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 252p $2.50 Little

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Damrosch, Walter Johannes 46-26263

Reminiscences of her childhood in the early 1900s by one of Walter Damrosch's four daughters.

Booklist 43:34 O 1 '46

"This is not just another striving for pungent personalities in parents, but gentle, plausible humor of real age of innocence."

+ Kirkus 14:404 Ag 15 '46 200W

Reviewed by G. E. Chamberlain
Library J 71:125 S 1 '46 100w

"A vastly amusing book." Brooks Atkinson
+ N Y Times p6 S 15 '46 100w

"These are rich, satisfying memories, unfogged by emotion and recorded with a warming humor." Jane Volles
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 8 '46 200w

"Best of all the book shows a family where children obeyed their parents without feeling down-trodden, where there was sophistication without decadence, and civilization without vulgarity, and great affection without jealousy or over-possessiveness, and sentiment without sentimentality. Mr. and Mrs. Damrosch evidently liked their daughters and were good friends with them and the daughters reciprocated wonderfully." Sophie Kerr
+ Sat R of Lit 29:10 D 21 '46 600w

"Mrs. Finletter writes well and accurately with just that touch of distortion, that narrow frame, that makes a minor work of art. The very young will never believe life was so old-fashioned; the getting-to-be-old will be delighted that the slate is not wiped clean. This is definitely a week-end book and a bedside book, and a springboard to conversation of how these same times looked to all of us, though the Damrosches were louder (being musical) and wittier (maybe) and handsomely numerous." Ernestine Evans
+ Weekly Book Review p5 S 15 '46 1250w
Wis Lib Bul 42:150 N '46

FINNEGAN, ROBERT. Lying ladies. 247p $2
Simon & Schuster
Detective story. 46-1879

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bullock
Book Week p22 Ap 14 '46 150w

"Bright and bawdy touches make this entertaining."

Kirkus 14:9 Ja '46 60w

"Americana at its least appetizing makes a realistic background for this fast, tough yarn." E. H.

New Repub 114:486 Ap 8 '46 90w

"This is a first novel and a lively one." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p30 Ap 7 '46 90w

"A plot complicated enough to confuse all but the most meticulous readers. Promising tough stuff, just the same."

New Yorker 22:103 Mr 16 '46 80w

"Convincing and cataclysmic tale of murders, blackmail and general villainy. . . Good stuff—even if author does overplay his hand."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:54 Mr 16 '46 40w

"A nice start in the whodunit business." Will Cuppy
+ Weekly Book Review p30 Mr 10 '46 200w

FIRTH, RAYMOND WILLIAM. Malay fishermen; their peasant economy. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 354p il $4.50 Inst. of Pacific relations [25s Routledge] 338.372 Fishermen. Fishing—Malay peninsula. Peasantry—Malay peninsula [46-5465]

"This book is a study of some Far Eastern peasant problems based mainly on field research carried out on the East Coast of Malaya in 1939-1940. It gives for the first time a survey of the fishing industry of that important region, followed by a detailed analysis of the economy of a community of peasant fishermen in a sample area on the coast of Kelantan." Publisher's note

Current Hist 11:232 S '46 100w

Foreign Affairs 25:348 Ja '47 20w

"The author's painstaking inquiries should be of the greatest use in the future regulation of the industry, but the very qualities which enhance its value to the administrator render it rather indigestible to the general reader. Apart, however, from the technical details, there are many references to Malay customs and beliefs, which cannot fail to be of interest to anyone desirous of increasing his knowledge of the Malay peasantry." A. & Beckett Terrell

Spec 176:512 My 17 '46 800w

FISCHER, BRUNO. Pigskin bag. 249p $2.50
Ziff-Davis

46-23136

A novel of suspense in which Adam Breen, an auto salesman, comes into possession of a mysterious pigskin bag and finds himself in serious difficulties.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Book Week p7 Ja 5 '47 190w

"This is an unusually good example of the novel of fear and suspense." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p14 D 22 '46 140w

"Excellent first half of domestic suspense, falling off into more routine, if still effective, gangster melodrama." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 5 '47 70w

"Good thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 D 7 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p15 D 29 '46 180w

FISCHER, BRUNO. Spider Lily. 251p $2 McKay

46-6086

Mystery story.

"Here is a well-told tale, with enough pace and enough suspense to carry you along." Elizabeth Bullock

+ Book Week p6 S 1 '46 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p25 Ag 18 '46 200w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 11 '46 50w

"Average."

Sat R of Lit 29:28 Ag 17 '46 70w

"Banking on his skill at poker, chess and mathematics in general, Alec Linn finally reduces the problem to a formula you may or may not find easy to follow. 'What does this gibberish mean?' inquires one of the characters; but it worked, didn't it?" Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p18 S 8 '46 90w

FISCHER, LOUIS. Great challenge. 346p $4 Duell

940.531 World politics. Russia—Foreign relations. World war, 1939-1945—Diplomatic history 46-11925

An American journalist summarizes his observations of world politics during the last two decades. He considers that present Russian policies embody a challenge to Western democracy that must be met by improvement of social and economic conditions, and by the renunciation of imperialism.

"This book is a good remedy for the fuzzy political thinking cluttering our obsolete brains in Year I of the atomic age." Sterling North

+ Book Week p5 S 29 '46 600w

Booklist 43:13 S '46

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 14 '46 400w

"Objectively this book takes its place in that wide range of periodical and other literature which leads away from Soviet-American co-operation rather than toward it." Robert Norton

Churchman 160:19 D 15 '46 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '46

"Measured by the highest standards, Fischer's book is very unsatisfactory. As an accumulation of factual information it has some value." Waldemar Gurian

+ Commonweal 45:50 O 25 '46 1150w

"For a better understanding of present world relations The Great Challenge offers some lucid, sane thinking."

+ Current Hist 11:399 N '46 100w

FISCHER, LOUIS—Continued

"This is an important book because it is a wise and objective book. . . At times one disagrees—at times agrees—always one is stimulated. It is a book to make us study our prejudices and inform our opinions."

+ Kirkus 14:366 Ag 1 '46 300w

"This is a highly intelligent, personal and argumentative book. . . Recommended." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 71:1125 S 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Nation 163:658 D 7 '46 1200w

Reviewed by H. J. Bresler
New Repub 115:419 S 30 '46 850w

"Louis Fischer's ideas, phrased in staccato, dramatic fashion, with many memorable and quotable aphorisms, would have been more effective if he had chosen to express them in the form of an essay rather than a cross between a journalistic diary (too often interspersed with personal allusions and references to previous writings) and a brilliant, mature and convincing analysis of contemporary events." V. M. Dean

+ — N Y Times p3 S 15 '46 1350w

"Louis Fischer is one of the very few of the innumerable American writers on foreign politics who understand thoroughly what they are talking about. Everything he says makes sense. It is a delight to be able to agree with him. It is instructive to find oneself in disagreement." E. A. Mowrer

+ Sat R of Lit 29:27 O 12 '46 1400w

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:277 D '46 220w

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles
Weekly Book Review p5 S 29 '46 1950w

FISH, HAMILTON. Challenge of world communism. 224p $2.50 Bruce pub.

335.4 Communism 46-5335

A factual exposition of world communism written by a former congressman. In his preface the author says "It should be clearly understood that this book seeks to arouse all Americans whether they be Protestant, Catholic, or Jew to the menace of international and revolutionary Communism." No index.

"This book is not a Red-baiting blast. On the contrary, it is a conscientiously-written and well documented presentation of Communist machinations in Europe, Asia, Latin America and the United States. To insure his efforts to produce an accurate, logical, well-rounded presentation of facts, the author asked the help of recognized authorities on Communism's threats to moral civilization. . . One must understand a wily foe's strategy, if he expects to win. Hence this book is must reading for every person of good will who will join a united front to defend God and country." H. C. McGinnis

+ Cath World 163:470 Ag '46 500w

Reviewed by F. S. Adams
N Y Times p25 S 8 '46 430w

"The general tone of [this] book is about what you would expect, but its technical competence is somewhat lower than one might reasonably look for in a man of his demonstrated ability. It is not merely that Mr. Fish constantly contradicts himself; his political philosophy is in the very nature of things a self-contradiction. It is that in this book he does it so crudely that its absurdity is patent." G. W. Johnson

— Weekly Book Review p8 Jl 28 '46 900w

FISHBEIN, MORRIS. Popular medical encyclopedia; the standard guide on health and disease. 540p il $4.95 Doubleday

616.02 Medicine, Popular SG46-182

Definitions and short articles, arranged alphabetically, on the human body, its functions and disturbances. Contains some treatments, but dosages of medicine are not given. For the layman.

Book Week p4 My 19 '46 80w

Booklist 43:30 O 1 '46

FISHER, MRS AILEEN LUCIA. That's why; with silhouettes by the author. 96p $1.50 Nelson

811 Children's poetry 46-16159

Collection of amusing verses for ages seven to ten.

"There are too few competent books of verse about everyday things for small children, and this one fills a real need."

+ Kirkus 14:222 My 1 '46 80w

"Here and there a poem is really lovely; mostly they are cute. Will answer many calls for 'little recitations.' Not a must, but decidedly worth having. Teachers and librarians stressing poetry writing by children should find the childlike images appealing and helpful to youthful creators." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 71:827 Je 1 '46 70w

"In this collection of verses children will be surprised that a grown-up has caught so accurately their impressions of the world they are exploring." L. P.

+ N Y Times p31 My 26 '46 70w

FISHER, ALLAN GEORGE BARNARD. Economic progress and social security. 362p $5 (18s) Macmillan

330.1 Economics. Progress [45-10309]

"Allan G. B. Fisher, well known New Zealand economist and professor at the Royal Institute of International Affairs in London, has set himself the difficult task of exploring the double impact of economic change and of the quest for security upon economic policy, national as well as international. . . After a general analysis of problems involved in progress and in change, Mr. Fisher discusses the consequences of cyclical fluctuations of business activity and of the dislocations brought about by the war. He then outlines at some length a positive program of domestic policies aiming at an increase of economic flexibility, in the interest of both progress and security. Thus he shows that stability can be achieved amidst change and security without loss of freedom, but the stability as well as the security he offers are relative rather than absolute. He discards the security of slavery as well as the stability of immobility. In a few polemic chapters he discusses and discards 'blind alley' policies and 'third-rate solutions,' as he calls them." (Weekly Book Review) Index.

"This book does much to clarify the economic rôle of government in the mid-twentieth century." W. H. Wickwar

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:829 Ag '46 300w

Reviewed by F. H. Knight
Ethics 57:68 O '46 1800w

Reviewed by O. H. Brownlee
J Pol Econ 54:555 D '46 800w

"With a cool, detached, and beautifully lucid mind Professor Fisher ranges over the whole economic scene: distilling from popular economic phraseology its meaning, its ambiguities, and its inconsistencies; tenaciously adhering to his main theme as he steps aside to dispose of the many economic fallacies cluttering his path; dispassionately displaying the choices we must eventually make if we are to win the high stakes in the desperate struggle for economic sanity. A polished and mature effort in the art of political economy." John Jewkes

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 24 '46 370w

"His target is anyone, left or right, who attempts to preserve a status quo, and his incisive criticisms of many currently popular economic proposals make his book required reading. . . Despite its many virtues, Professor Fisher's book is almost a counsel of despair, since he fails to convince the reader that there is any real possibility of establishing free competitive enterprise throughout the world. And in his long last chapter he holds that the free market system should be world wide to have a fair chance of success." C. E. Noyes

+ — Nation 162:439 Ap 13 '46 600w

"Professor Fisher is sometimes apt to erect Aunt Sallies and then knock them down—choosing for attack the weaker rather than the stronger among his opponents; and this leads to a somewhat wearisome iteration of platitudes. He is also not very helpful about what is to be done if the solutions which he knocks down one after another are rejected. Nor is it very clear to whom he is talking. He writes sometimes as if he were arguing with his fellow-professionals, and sometimes as if he were simplifying for the man in the street. In the end, he conveys rather a negative impression, having failed to convert his very true general thesis into anything in the nature of a practicable programme."

+ New Statesman & Nation 30:377 D 1 '45
240w

"The book is a neat and significant addition to the literature of international economics; it breaks new ground in sound political thinking." Ervin Hexner

+ Social Forces 25:105 O '46 440w

"The critic's task is greatly facilitated if his author can be assigned to a 'school.' Professor Fisher is in this respect singularly disobliging. He does, however, partially redeem this fault (if fault it be) by a lucid and lively style. The intelligent layman, who is fully able to follow the straightforward common sense of Professor Fisher's argument, may fail to appreciate a number of serious flaws, and may even be led by its apparently inexorable logic to accept one or two exceedingly paradoxical conclusions. But since his errors are not the fashionable ones of to-day the book may safely be recommended for its more numerous virtues."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p562 N 24 '45
850w

"Mr. Fisher has written one of the most important books that have come to the present reviewer's attention in the last few years." M. A. Heilperin

+ Weekly Book Review p29 My 26 '46
700w

FISHER, MRS ANNE (BENSON). No more a stranger. 265p il $3 Stanford univ. press

B or 92 Stevenson, Robert Louis A46-11

The story of the four months in 1879 when Robert Louis Stevenson lived in Monterey, California, drawn there by his love for Fanny Osbourne. At the beginning of her "notes," the author says: "the story is true. It is all based on fact. No character is imaginary—not even the horses. Incidents happened as described, and anecdotes related were those actually told. The only fictional episodes which enter into the story are some conversations which had to be filled in to retain the continuity."

"This book has great value to the Stevenson enthusiast, and much interest for the general reader. Mrs. Fisher's method may well suggest comparable treatments of decisive periods in other lives. I hope the method will always be used as worthily as it is in 'No More a Stranger.'" J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Mr 31 '46 160w
Booklist 42:281 My 1 '46

"The exalted, depressed, impractical, persevering, fascinating, heedless creature that was R. L. S. appears more plainly in this modest book than in some more voluminous biographies. Mrs. Fisher's honest determination to include as much as possible of the data accumulated by conversation with survivors of 1879 or their descendants and by reading old letters has made her style disconnected, but something has been added to Stevenson lore."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 20 '46 850w

Current Hist 11:48 Jl '46 100w

"Scholarly, well-documented, but delightful reading."

+ Kirkus 14:138 Mr 15 '46 190w

Reviewed by J. H. Berthel

Library J 71:404 Mr 15 '46 100w

"It is a book primarily for the enthusiast about Stevenson or about the local color of California in the Seventies." G. R. Stewart
N Y Times p41 Ap 7 '46 450w

"While 'No More a Stranger' is not a penetrating character study, it is eminently satisfactory as regional literature and as a factual narrative of Stevenson's little-known life in Monterey. At a time when all of us are looking backward to our roots for strength and guidance in our present politically difficult day, the Stanford University Press should be complimented on the publication of such a book. Minuscule though it is, Mrs. Fisher in her use of background does give us a slice of Americana." J. C. S. Wilson

+ Sat R of Lit 29:33 Je 8 '46 800w

"The student of Stevenson, particularly of his California period, will recognize that the author here has stuck to fact for her basis, and that her interpretation, even through her semi-fiction method, is both sensible and sensitive. She does incline to romanticize a man who must have been rather a nuisance sometimes even to his friends, but this is her privilege in this sort of book. I shouldn't be surprised, however, if many will find the most interesting part of the book in the bibliographical notes and the dozen or so reproductions of old photographs relating to the place and the man." J. H. Jackson

Weekly Book Review p24 Mr 31 '46
600w

FISHER, CYRUS, pseud. See Teilhet, D. L.

FISHER, GEORGE JAMES BURNS. Incendiary warfare. 125p $3 McGraw

623.45431 Projectiles, Incendiary 46-7762

"Colonel Fisher of the Chemical Warfare Service tells the technique of producing fire with military projectiles, ground and air. He cites development of these weapons, through the fire arrow to the bombing of Tokyo, showing comparative uses of high explosives and incendiary bombs, the results of bombing Japan and Germany and includes the future of incendiary warfare in the atomic age." (Library J) Index.

Library J 71:1052 Ag '46 80w

Reviewed by James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p56 D 1 '46 110w

FISHER, HAROLD HENRY. America and Russia in the world community; foreword by Frederick Hard. 175p $2.50 Claremont colleges

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia, Russia—Foreign relations—U.S. World politics 46-5149

"Dr. Fisher is a professor of history at Stanford University and director of the Hoover Institute and Library. For twenty-five years he has been a student of Russian history and institutions and he has traveled widely in Russia. In this series of lectures he gives a favorable estimate of the possibilities of friendly cooperation between the two countries in a peaceful world society. There is no question of greater present importance." Christian Century

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Am Pol Sci R 40:988 O '46 600w

Christian Century 63:870 Jl 10 '46 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '46

Foreign Affairs 25:164 O '46 30w

"As an excellent example of an educated liberal mind wrestling with the unpalatable facts of totalitarian politics this level-headed and comprehensive, if brief, discussion is well worth reading." M. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 4 '46 300w

"America and Russia in the World Community stands out as one of the most illuminating discussions of the relations between the two great Powers of the post-war world which has yet appeared. Professor Fisher had ably summarized the past history of Russian-American diplomacy, carefully analyzed the present status of the two nations in the world community, and outlined with cogency and acumen what he considers to be the possibilities of future Russian-American collaboration in support of international peace. He writes with a sure sense of historical perspective in dealing with the past and reasoned objectivity in treating of the present. He has succeeded within the brief compass of some 175 pages in giving us as clear and comprehensive an account of Russian-American relations as might well be expected in a book many times this length." F. R. Dulles

FISHER, H. H.—Continued

+ Pol Sci Q 61:464 S '46 500w

School & Society 63:431 Je 15 '46 20w

FISHER, M. F. K., pseud. See Parrish, M. F. K.

FISHER, STEPHEN GOULD. Winter kill. 208p $2.50 Dodd

46-1884

"In a shabby, lower Fifth Avenue office building five men shared one dingy room and one telephone, each in a down-at-heel business that barely justified the $10-a-month desk space rental. They were a private detective, a skip-tracer of bad debts, a retailer of toy novelties, a literary agent (reading fee, $1) and a dress designer. Mr. Fisher exhibits these tawdry, struggling, hounded souls with savage realism flecked with humor. Their love affairs, their domestic troubles, their harried finances are no secrets from one another." Weekly Book Review

"Steve Fisher has been writing for Hollywood for several years. There is little shading in his characterization, but he has developed a rough, fast-moving style, well suited to the material he deals with, and his feeling for atmosphere and situation produces some Grand Guignol scenes which have a very primitive freshness and vigor." Jex Martin

+ Book Week p6 Mr 17 '46 270w

N Y Times p14 Mr 31 '46 70w

"The action of the story keeps it alive, but the essence is in the hopefully hopeless little men at the desks, who are united by failure. They cling to immoderate prospects but know that nothing good will happen to them—and in that they are finally mistaken in a climax which is incredibly coincidental till it is explained. This is an amusing story, but smoothed and expanded it is a play rather than a novel." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 29:36 Mr 30 '46 320w

"If you like your fiction tough and hard-hitting, this is it." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p22 Mr 3 '46 120w

FISHER, VARDIS. Intimations of Eve. 331p $2.75 Vanguard

46-2410

This is the third volume in the author's series of novels dealing with mankind's slow climb up from savagery. In this tale the interest lies chiefly in the place of woman in one era of primitive life, an era when men were regarded as of little use except as hunters—women planted and harvested the crops, built the huts, worked the magic that brought fertility to the earth and its inhabitants. Raven, the "hero," has rebellious moments but for the most part, he lives under the rule of the old "grandmother" and her deity, the Moon Woman.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p6 Ap 21 '46 400w

Kirkus 14:4 Ja '46 150w

"There is an odd and bothersome change of viewpoint running through it all. For long periods we are inside the mind of the primitive man; then abruptly we are standing to one side and Mr. Fisher is saying sententiously, 'Little did he realize he was discovering so and so.' There is also, for a book whose intent seems to be a tracing of man's mental and spiritual struggles upward, a great deal of emphasis on the physical—eating habits, physiological reactions when sick, clinical details of many kinds." C. B. Palmer

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 31 '46 600w

"Only an anthropologist can say how much of this charting of our early ancestors' mental and spiritual growth is based on scientific truth and how much is just reasoned conjecture. The subject is of course an absorbing one, and Mr. Fisher's treatment of it is nearly always extremely interesting. It is not his fault that life in man's remote past inched along too deliberately to make perfect fiction."

+ New Yorker 22:115 Ap 13 '46 140w

"One weakness of Mr. Fisher's history, it seems to me, is his centering of man's development in the one man, Raven. . . . Another weakness, less fundamental, is the presence here and there of what may be called the interpolated comment. . . . It is a fascinating project. Inevitably his interpretations—as indicated in this volume—are going to be conjectural and debatable. They are also, by the same token, going to be philosophically suggestive, perhaps diagnostic of the quality of modern man, and certainly exciting reading." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:45 Ap 20 '46 650w

Time 47:100 Ap 8 '46 650w

Reviewed by F. T. Marsh

Weekly Book Review p6 Ap 28 '46 1100w

FISHMAN, NATHANIEL. Marriage, this business of living together. 368p $3 Liveright

347.6 Marriage law. Marriage

"The anomalies, curiosities and facts about marriage, divorce and separation in our 48 states." (Subtitle) The author is a member of the New York Bar. Index.

Book Week p16 D 8 '46 70w

"Subtitle sounds as though book would be either scholarly or entertaining. Actually it unsuccessfully tries to be both." L. R. Miller

— Library J 71:1328 O 1 '46 70w

FISKE, EDWARD REYNOLDS. The veterans' best opportunities; with basic business principles and their application. 324p $2.50 Essential bks.

371.425 Veterans—Employment. Business. Vocational guidance 46-25047

"The original intent of the author in preparing this work was to serve his fellow veterans in an effort to provide a rule and guide which would help them make the best possible decision regarding their civilian pursuits. Therefore, the terms Veteran and Serviceman will be found throughout the book, but as it turns out, business executives are of the opinion that the book has long been needed by all who must decide for what they are best fitted or adapted in choosing their life's work." (Author's note) Partial contents: Big city vs. small town; Store location and retailing; Sources of information for study; Opportunities in other than retailing and service businesses; Program for the revitalization of all small business; Opportunities in foreign trade, by Arthur Rocke. "Following Chapter 10 is a list of concise articles especially prepared for this book by leaders in many fields and industries who are interested in the welfare of our returning veterans and others who must find their place in our postwar economy." (Note on table of contents) No index.

Booklist 42:221 Mr 15 '46

Bookmark 7:4 N '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '46

"Sound book on vocational guidance."

+ Library J 71:346 Mr 1 '46 120w

"I think that Commander Fiske's effort in compiling the opinions of people who are close to and have succeeded in the many types of endeavor covered is extremely valuable. I don't, however, feel that it is necessarily a book for veterans, except in the sense that the veterans' best opportunities lie in the general welfare of the community." J. N. Feldman

+ Weekly Book Review p24 Mr 3 '46 320w

Wis Lib Bul 42:57 Ap '46

FITCH, LYLE C., and TAYLOR, HORACE, eds. Planning for jobs; proposals submitted in the Pabst postwar employment awards. 463p $3.75 Blakiston

338.91 U.S.—Economic policy. Unemployment 46-495

"In 1943 and 1944 the Pabst Brewing Co. parlayed its interest in beer into an interest in the nation's economic future by sponsoring a prize contest for plans to achieve postwar full employment. This book, by two members of the department of economics at Columbia University, is the result of an expert analysis and synthesis of the entries in that contest. Thus it professes to be a cross-section of public opinion on the problem of full employment. The prize plans themselves having already been published, this volume undertakes to sketch the main lines of thought which turned up in all the plans, winners and losers alike." Book Week

"A superficial evaluation of the causes of economic crises and of possible measures for their eradication. Most of the plans, at best, are ameliorative, rather than preventive. Many become seriously involved in self-contradiction, and still others would lead to the perpetuation, if not the aggravation, of the causes that make for crises. . . The impression left in the mind is not, however, a very satisfactory one. It reminds one a little too much of the six blind men of Indostan who went to 'see' an elephant." J. M. Gillman

— Am Econ R 36:405 Je '46 1500w

"Some of the individual contributions are of a high order, the search for technical means of stabilizing economic expansion being admirably illustrated with essays by Alvin Hansen, Frank D. Graham, and Homer Hoyt; but contributions such as these are so widely scattered amid so much heterogeneous matter that they have to be re-thought in the framework less of this book than of economic theory before their significance can become fully clear to the in-expert student. What gives this book its value lies not so much in the realm of theory as in its reflection of the spirit of practical inventiveness with which Americans are approaching contemporary social problems." W. H. Wickwar

Am Pol Sci R 40:400 Ap '46 400w

"In this very useful and interesting book, the editors have successfully tackled an extremely difficult assignment. . . This book is important reading for anyone who would sample informed public opinion on one of the major problems of our democracy." W. H. Stead

+ Ann Am Acad 246:160 J1 '46 480w

Book Week p18 F 17 '46 100w

"The glaring lack of interest in the problems of agriculture among the Pabst contestants really hurts an otherwise satisfying book." Shaw Livermore

+ Columbia Law R 46:508 My '46 1600w

"The book is stimulating reading, extremely interesting, simple in style, and should have an appeal to all looking for ideas to insure 'jobs for all.'"

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:107 Je '46 160w

FITZGAY, JOHN, pseud. See Hunt, F.

FITZGERALD, ARTHUR EUGENE. Basic electrical engineering; circuits, machines, electronics. 443p il $3.75 McGraw

621.3 Electric engineering 45-10102

"This textbook for engineering college students who are not specializing in electrical engineering is designed to give such students an understanding of fundamental electrical principles and an insight into the engineering and scientific applications of electronics, electrical measurements, and control. The space is about equally divided among the three main topics mentioned in the subtitle. Problems are included. The author is Associate Professor of Electrical Engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Library J 70:751 S 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:55 O '45

FITZGERALD, BARBARA. We are besieged. 298p $2.75 Putnam [9s 6d Davies] 46-6364

Tale of family life in Ireland, chiefly Dublin, between 1920 and 1930. The Adairs are a Protestant, Unionist family, and the two daughters of the family are aware that they belong to the hated minority. The story follows the two girls childhood and up to the early married life of each of them.

"Barbara Fitzgerald deserves a round of applause for her good sense, quite as much as for her good novel." Leo Kennedy

+ Book Week p11 S 8 '46 350w

Booklist 43:16 S '46

"Sustained in pace, appealing in portraiture, this is both good and popular reading."

+ Kirkus 14:300 J1 1 '46 130w

"Recommended." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 71:1050 Ag '46 70w

"The story is smoothly and convincingly told, and the characters of the two so differently minded sisters are very well developed. As a first novel it deserves encouragement." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 12 '46 90w

"On the whole it is an interesting family story smoothly and naturally told. Miss Fitzgerald's love for Ireland, town and country, is reflected in her graphic descriptions, and her interpretation of the Irish struggle for freedom is marked by a sincere effort to present both sides justly." Barbara Bond

+ N Y Times p10 S 8 '46 360w

"We Are Besieged" is a first novel, and has much of the weakness of a first novel; but there is real promise in the book. The story is well-sustained, the characterization, if rather typical, is simple and sound; and the descriptive passages will make anyone who knows Ireland anxious to take the first boat there to see if the soft, green, wet land is as beautiful as memory insists." R. E. Roberts

Sat R of Lit 29:48 O 12 '46 650w

"This story is a bit slow, but it is careful and serious, and quite pleasantly written." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 176:384 Ap 12 '46 120w

"This is undoubtedly a valid picture of a group and a situation extant not in Ireland alone. And the author has admirably described them, at their most vicious and their most weakly amiable. But it is puzzling to be suddenly asked to admire them in a series of chintz-draped happy endings where no one gets permanently involved with any of the 'wrong' people, and every one smiles for the camera in rigor status quo." R. P. Harnden

+ Weekly Book Review p14 S 8 '46 550w

FITZGERALD, WALTER. The new Europe; an introduction to its political geography. 298p maps $2.75 Harper [14s Methuen]

940 Europe—Politics. Europe—Boundaries 46-4243

"The author is Professor of Geography, Victoria University of Manchester, England. In this volume, intended primarily for British students, he describes present conditions in the various areas of Europe to give an understanding of environment, background and the natural advantages and disadvantages of each. Each chapter has its own Selected Bibliography." (Current Hist) Index.

"The importance of geography to an understanding of civilization is apt to be neglected in time of peace and over-emphasized in time of war. The present volume, originally published in England shortly before the end of the war, presents a remarkably well-balanced summary of the salient facts of European geography and their impact upon European politics. The author, who is professor of geography in the Victoria University of Manchester, is to be commended not only for his highly readable style, but for the admirable

FITZGERALD, WALTER—Continued
 way in which he has compressed so much into a brief volume." A. N. Dragnich
 + Am Pol Sci R 40:391 O '46 500w
Current Hist 10:132 Ag '46 80w
Foreign Affairs 25:160 O '46 30w
 Reviewed by C. G. Haines
Pol Sci Q 61:610 D '46 650w

FITZSIMMONS, MRS MURIEL (SIMPSON), and FITZSIMMONS, CORTLAND. You can cook if you can read 364p $2.50 Viking

641.5 Cookery 46-25262

A cookbook designed for the beginner in the art, assuming no previous knowledge except the ability to read simple, clear directions for preparing not-too-complicated dishes. The book includes a long list of definitions, tables of measurements, buying and cooking charts, sections on cooking for one or two, and a final section of "post-graduate recipes."

Booklist 43:30 O 1 '46 50w

"Here's another book to cheer, for this is a book to hearten the complete neophyte, even the incompetent cook—if only she wants to learn to cook. For nothing is taken for granted. . . . There are omissions—I'd like a section on substitutes, on rectifying mistakes, etc. But one can't have everything."

+ Kirkus 14:317 J1 1 '46 160w

"It is a complete, well-wrought and progressive manual for the neophyte. Inept cooks who can't read should be forcibly held while it is read to them, it should be as mandatory for young brides, or brides of any age, as a wedding ring." Idwal Jones

+ N Y Times p57 N 17 '46 180w

"The book is a first-rate piece of work. I'd call it, not the perfect cook book because I don't suppose there is any such animal, but an extremely well organized and thought out book for its purpose, which is to give the beginner something to start off with. I look to see it become a minor classic in its field" J.
 H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 S 2 '46
 800w

"A new cookbook which is the answer to the amateur cook's prayer." H. S. Neal
 + Spring'd Republican p4 S 14 '46 260w

FLACK, MARJORIE (MRS WILLIAM ROSE BENET). Boats on the river; pictures by Jay Hyde Barnum. 31p $2.50 Viking

46-11852

A large size picture book for ages six to nine, showing the kinds of boats and ships on the slightly idealized Hudson river and in New York harbor. The pictures are in color and the text is rhythmic.

Booklist 43:138 Ja 1 '47

"Perhaps, more of a gift book than a library item, but still a gorgeous book. Recommended." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 72:83 Ja 1 '47 70w

"It is unusual to find a book containing factual material which has so much texture of beauty in both prose and illustration." R. A.
 G.

+ N Y Times p22 D 8 '46 140w

"The artist's perspective brings the mountains up the Hudson nearer, so that they, too, seem to come down to the sea. It gives a very lovely skyline to the pictures. . . . This story will be at its best when it is read aloud. But boys and girls will want to own the book because the pictures are so unusual. It will make a grand Christmas present." M. G. D.
 + Sat R of Lit 29:31 D 14 '46 210w

"With all the books about boats offered to little children and with all their impassioned interest in the subject, this is the first picture book I have seen that spreads before them the pageant of Hudson River craft; certainly not in such brilliant colors and with a simple narrative so flowing." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p9 D 22 '46 190w

FLAGG, JAMES MONTGOMERY. Roses and buckshot. 224p il $3.75 Putnam

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 46-6663

Autobiography of James Montgomery Flagg in which the famous illustrator and amateur actor writes very frankly of his own life and that of some of his famous friends, especially John Barrymore.

"This is a chatty, amusing book, necessarily no more profound and no more dignified than the man who wrote it. Frankly, it is a little cheap. But interesting." Dorothy Odenheimer

Book Week p4 N 3 '46 400w

Kirkus 14:321 J1 1 '46 150w

"Autobiography of the famous artist—vigorous, frank, often witty. . . . Should have general appeal." L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 71:1204 S 15 '46 110w

"In shocking bad taste—and the author would be annoyed if both the fact and the intention were not recognized—this autobiography of James Montgomery Flagg reveals nevertheless a gratifying capacity to admire some of the most generally—and justly—admired of his contemporaries, among them a number eminently distinguished for good taste." H. I.
 Brock

N Y Times p28 O 20 '46 650w

"Mr. Flagg writes about [his friends] in a manner that is free from restraint to the point of indiscretion, and his wit is often close to mere malice and vulgarity. He was a member of John Barrymore's circle of cut-ups and his book contains quite a bit of Barrymoreana that seems to have escaped Mr. Gene Fowler's attention."

New Yorker 22:127 O 5 '46 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p5 D 1 '46
 300w

"This is a cheery, exasperating book; and you keep on reading it. It is frankly written by a man widely known as an illustrator. It is full of honest-to-God opinions, not to speak of tirades, and I hope I shall be as honest as the author in reviewing it. . . . The general tone of this book a Britisher would call
 'Breezy'; sometimes it unexpectedly blows a gale. You can skip the gripes, though. Don't ask more of it than it is. Take it as entertainment." W. R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 29:14 O 5 '46 950w

"Filled with zest and candid to the point of indiscretion is the history of himself which James Montgomery Flagg unfurls. He parades a personality as crisp and vigorous as his art, and the portrait of his pleasures and his prejudices is as unblurred, as the drawings that have been his nimble output since he sold the first one half a century ago." Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p20 O 13 '46 280w

FLESCHE, RUDOLF FRANZ. Art of plain talk.
 210p $2.50 Harper

808 English language—Composition and exercises. Authorship 46-1532

Two years ago the author published a Ph. D. dissertation: The Marks of a Readable Style (Book Review Digest, 1944) in which he presented a formula for estimating the comprehension difficulty of a given text. Because that was a dissertation, he says, it wasn't very readable itself, and in an attempt to rewrite it for popular consumption, he has produced this new book on "plain talk."

Booklist 42:244 Ap 1 '46

Bookmark 7:9 My '46

Reviewed by E. H. McClelland
Chem & Eng N 24:1974 J1 25 '46 350w

"The author of this book leans toward what he calls the 'casual style,' but which another might call the flip style. As to this, it may be remarked that the writer who flaunts his informal brightness is as odious as the one who struts his vocabulary. Even so, this book is good medicine for speakers and writers, including editors."

+ Christian Century 63:208 F 13 '46 180w

"A little book like this can do a large good. It can't teach the pretentious or dull man to write with simplicity and interest. Nothing can do that. But it can improve the writing of many to the profit and pleasure of all. He who improves men's writing improves the relations of man with man." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 F 16 '46 450w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 160:17 Ap 15 '46 480w
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '46

"There is a lot of good sense and perhaps a bit of nonsense in 'The Art of Plain Talk.' People whose business or desire is to convey ideas with the written word—and that includes almost everybody—will obtain valuable hints on effective presentation. Just to browse through the book will be an adventure in reading some excellent writing."

+ — Eng N 137:112 J1 11 '46 280w

"A book to be recommended to anyone who has to do any type of speaking and writing." Velma Beam

+ J Home Econ 38:303 My '46 250w

"Incredibly poor literary taste—naïve—superficial—this is a demonstration that the author practices what he preaches. He may find his audience in the eighth grade."

Kirkus 13:487 N 1 '45 110w

"Dr. Flesch's plea for a translation of much valuable printed matter into language understandable to the literate but intelligence-limited masses will impress librarians. Teachers of boys and girls too, will see herein a body of sound practice for their task of extending actual as contrasted with theoretical literacy. Heretofore such help has come to teachers almost solely from diagnostic studies. The current contribution is at once more practical and more extensive." R. M. Potter

Library Q 16:271 J1 '46 1050w

Reviewed by E. B. Garside
N Y Times p4 My 5 '46 440w

"Rudolf Flesch has done a book that tells how to talk plain, and it's written in good plain talk. If I had to recommend one golden book on writing, for beginners as well as for those who ought to know better, this would be the one. There are only 210 pages, including an index, but they're well peppered with wit and salted down with good sense. This man knows how to write, and he knows how to teach." Aaron Sussman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:9 F 23 '46 1250w

School & Society 63:87 F 2 '46 30w

"Mr. Flesch himself follows his formulas and writes easily, delightfully, and with humor. His examples, too, are proof that plain talk makes good reading as well as good understanding." M. S. Routzahn

+ Survey 82:93 Mr '46 600w

"A textbook so lucid and so snappy it doesn't sound like an English language textbook at all. There are exercises after each chapter, so it must be, but do not look for textbook English. Fortunately, that is just what Dr. Flesch has got everything else but." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p22 My 26 '46 450w

Wis Lib Bul 42:84 Je '46

FLETCHER, ALAN., and others. Index of mathematical tables. 451p $16 McGraw [75s Scientific computing]

510.83 Mathematics—Tables, formulae, etc.
—Indexes [47-949]

"Important index to all published and some unpublished mathematical tables compiled by three University of Liverpool professors, experts in the international field of mathematical tables. Part I is an index according to functions. Part II is an alphabetic author list of 2,000 entries referred to in Part I." Library J

Booklist 43:8 S '46

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1128 S 1 '46 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:44 J1 '46

"This is an important publication that will aid many a computer and make his work simpler. By indicating the gaps among present tables it will help to fill them." James Stokley

Weekly Book Review p31 O 6 '46 160w

FLETCHER, MRS INGLIS (CLARK). Toll of the brave. 547p $3 Bobbs

46-11948

The fourth in a series of historical novels set in the Albemarle district of North Carolina. The time is 1779, and the southern campaign of the Revolution is the background. The hero is Captain Huntley, a liaison officer for General Washington. The battle of King's mountain brings the story to a close.

"Once again Inglis Fletcher has written an outstanding novel, beautiful in conception, interesting in its historical background." Otto Eisenschiml

+ Book Week p3 N 17 '46 270w

Booklist 43:86 N 15 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"A sedate, well-upholstered historical romance."

Kirkus 14:430 S 1 '46 170w

"The mixture as before is rich: Mrs. Fletcher has poured in the ingredients with a lavish hand. There are attempted slave risings and criss-cross love affairs, moonlight walks and ambuscades, duelling on the green and whispering among the magnolias. There are also lumps of extraneous and complicated historical matters. That the book succeeds more as a picture of a way of life than as historical fiction can be laid to the author's diligent documentation of every costume, coiffure and bill-of-fare that comes along. . . Mrs. Fletcher's admirers will doubtless forgive her lack of focus in the light of compensatory pageantry, color and high romance." Mary McGrory

+ — N Y Times p10 D 8 '46 500w

"Perhaps the love interest has a more prominent part than in Miss Fletcher's other books, but the story does not suffer. She makes you forget documentation and carries you along into the stir and heat of battle and into the hearts and minds of her characters. If you believe that 'a small link of the past to the present forges a strong future,' you will like 'Toll of the Brave.'" Jane Volles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 D 1 '46 320w

Reviewed by Jennings Rice
Weekly Book Review p16 N 17 '46 750w

FLETCHER, JOHN GOULD. Burning mountain. 96p $2.75 Dutton

811

46-4558

Collection of the poems of this well-known American poet, written since the publication of his Pulitzer-prize winner Selected Poems (Book Review Digest 1938).

"One of the principles of the Imagists to which Mr. Fletcher subscribed in 1917 was that 'we are not a school of painters, but we believe that poetry should render particulars exactly and not deal in vague generalities, however magnificent and sonorous.' The present volume does not uphold the standards of some of Mr. Fletcher's earlier work, largely because he seems to have abandoned that principle." G. D. Lord

— Atlantic 178:156 S '46 400w

"On the whole, 'The Burning Mountain' is not impressive. A few of the poems are downright dull. . . In general, the lines on snow and about Spain are the most satisfying, more nourishing, indicative of continuing growth in expression and thought. To speak of growth in a writer with 21 books behind him may seem facetious, but it is a compliment." Donald Fairchild

Book Week p5 J1 7 '46 600w

Booklist 43:83 N 15 '46

"The poems are like a clear mirror, catching and giving back, without confusion, the strange scenery of the past eight years." P. P. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 J1 8 '46 410w

FLETCHER, J. G.—Continued

"Mr. Fletcher in 'The Burning Mountain' is curiously curates-eggish: sometimes very lovesome, at other times he has something intrinsic to say." Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 44:601 O 4 '46 380w

"These are thought-provoking poems, written by an intelligent man of deep feeling. Their technical skill does not always meet the power and sincerity of the emotion. But they should be enjoyed by Fletcher's already appreciative audience and by those who think profoundly about our native land."

+ — Kirkus 14:287 Je 15 '46 170w

"Mr. Fletcher, for all his talk about symphonic forms and his division of his longer poems into four movements, is no Mendelssohn, let alone Mozart, of the written word." Rolfe Humphries

— Nation 163:189 Ag 17 '46 140w

"In 'The Burning Mountain' John Gould Fletcher assembles his work of the last ten years. The best poem in the volume is undoubtedly 'Journey Day,' a crown to his years of writing. A powerful sense of the old space and quiet of the Southwest, which is his home place, and a mature realization of the vastness of time, give this new book its strength." John Holmes

+ N Y Times p22 S 29 '46 270w

"Once again Mr. Fletcher exhibits those felicities of phrase and cadence which have won for him the wide audience he enjoys. He is particularly good at capturing the mood of landscape and recreating a sense of the American past. It is a loose easy verse that he writes, but it has depth and a singing quality so often absent from modern poetry." George Snell

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 11 '46 70w

"John Gould Fletcher, author of 'Burning Mountain' is, despite his strong use of poetic license and his tendency toward melodrama, a poet well worth reading." William Manchester

+ — Spring'd Republican p4 Ag 3 '46 180w

"The Americana of John Gould Fletcher bear little resemblance to his early excursions with Imagism as a new technique. Only the form—or, rather, the skeleton of his original 'symphonic' structure—remains. In the present collection this consists usually of an opening section of loosely rhymed descriptive comment, continues with a lyric episode or two, and winds up with a philosophical or downright Victorian-moral conclusion. Upon this framework, with amazing disregard for the exacting demands of form and subject in good craftsmanship, Mr. Fletcher hangs his insular, conservatively tailored, made-in-America habiliments." Ruth Lechlitrner

Weekly Book Review p16 S 15 '46 700w

FLEWELLING, RALPH TYLER. Things that matter most: an approach to the problems of human values. 530p $3.75 Ronald

121 Worth

46-22009

"This work, prepared as a textbook, is the outgrowth of years of experience in the teaching of a specific course at the University of Southern California. . . . What has Flewelling tried to do here? He has made selections from the world's literature of thought about the fundamental values of life—the things that matter most," as he translates the 'ta timaiotata' of Plotinus, and has written friendly, inviting and enlightening introductions to each of the selections chosen. After preliminary definitions of value, suggested by the writings of men as diverse as Erasmus, Hawthorne and Cabot, he takes up five world concepts of human values: the Confucian, the Buddhist, the Stoic, the Epicurean and the Judeo-Christian. He then centers on six proponents of value: Socrates, Boethius, Dante, Rousseau, Nietzsche (of whom he thinks little) and Pasteur. In a brief concluding section he develops the theory of self-realization as value." Christian Century

"As Professor Flewelling has grown older, his writing has improved. His style has become more creative, his thought riper, his culture richer and broader. In The Things That Matter Most he has written a book worthy of reading and rereading; good for browsing or systematic study; for summer reading or winter research."

E. S. Brightman

+ Christian Century 64:14 Ja 1 '47 1000w

School & Society 64:303 O 26 '46 20w

FLEXNER, ABRAHAM. Daniel Coit Gilman, creator of the American type of university. 173p il $2 Harcourt

B or 92 Gilman, Daniel Coit, Education, Higher, Johns Hopkins university 46-7929

Not so much a biography of the first president of Johns Hopkins as an attempt to assess the value of his contributions to American education.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p5 Ja 12 '47 110w

Christian Century 63:1376 N 13 '46 20w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews

Commonweal 45:282 D 27 '46 110w

Kirkus 14:574 N 1 '46 120w

"No mere listing of factors can do justice to Gilman's achievement or to Dr. Flexner's penetrating analysis of that achievement. One must read the book in order to appreciate the interplay of Gilman's abilities and the conditions in which they were exercised. And no one can come away from reading it without reflecting that the same vision, the same boldness, and the same wisdom that gave Daniel Coit Gilman the power to create the American university of today will be needed in the executive who, even now, may be creating the American university of tomorrow." C. S. Joslyn

+ Sat R of Lit 29:24 D 28 '46 650w

School & Society 64:335 N 9 '46 40w

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. Flowing gold; the romance of oil. 256p il $2.50 Lippincott

665.5 Petroleum industry and trade 45-9857

A factual study of the oil industry. Includes processes of exploring and drilling for petroleum, the thrills of building pipelines, refining oil for various uses, and marketing oil. For Junior and senior high schools. No index.

Booklist 42:151 Ja 1 '46

"As in his other books, [the author] tells an absorbing story of the great industry which he has thoroughly studied over many months of personal investigation. . . . Young people will share the adventure with many who are older. The photographs are fine and clarify many points in the text." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:136 Mr '46 90w

"Floherly has done a good job in this extensive, lucid coverage of a vital subject."

+ Kirkus 13:371 Ag 15 '45 110w

Wis Lib Bul 42:61 Ap '46

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. Men against crime. 256p il $2.50 Lippincott

353.2 U.S. Treasury department—Juvenile literature. Crime and criminals—U.S.—Juvenile literature. Criminal investigation—Juvenile literature 46-7419

"Mr. Floherly's twentieth book for young readers . . . tells how United States Treasury Department operatives—the Secret Service, Customs inspectors, Intelligence agents, Border Patrol—catch smugglers, moonshiners, bootleggers, counterfeiters, drug peddlers. It tells how they have guarded Presidents, living and dead." N Y Times

Booklist 43:88 N 15 '46

"The inside story of the Treasury Department's Secret Services is told with fascinating detail and rich with dramatic incident taken from actual records of crime."

+ Kirkus 14:544 N 1 '46 80w

"A good job. . . . Frequent anecdote gives the volume lively pace. If someone hasn't already done it, the work suggests an exciting radio series. It has everything, most of all tense, dramatic situations, for the gunshot and lipcorner boys at the microphone. Mr. Floherty's book seems to have one weakness. Instead of saying, for example, that President George Washington asked Alexander Hamilton to organize the Treasury Department, Mr. Floherty uses up a good two pages to put this simple idea over." Meyer Berger

+ — N Y Times p26 N 3 '46 270w

Sat R of Lit 29:65 N 9 '46 40w

School & Society 64:318 N 2 '46 20w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p8 O 27 '46 320w

FLORENCE, PHILIP SARGENT, ed. Only an ocean between [Eng title: America and Britain]. 3v in 1 il maps $3.50 Duell [18s Harrap]

917.3 United States. Great Britain [46-8043]

Three volumes in one comparing England and the United States as to their customs, differences, size, achievements, etc. Contents: Only an ocean between, by L. S. Florence; Our private lives, by L. S. Florence; Our two democracies at work, by K. B. Smellie. The authors are an American journalist and a British economist, and the material was published in England during the war to further mutual understanding.

Booklist 43:88 N 15 '46

"Book could well be used as a textbook or for reference purposes, though unfortunately it does not include a full index. Recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 71:1462 O 15 '46 110w

FLORES, ANGEL, ed. Kafka problem [an anthology of criticism about Franz Kafka by Auden, and others]. 468p $5 New directions

B or 92 Kafka, Franz

"[The book] has been planned to give a general view of the man and his works, to present various attitudes toward recurrent Kafkaian themes, problems and influences. An effort has been made to include analyses of the literary, philosophical and social factors which left their mark on Kafka's work, as well as the reasons for his continuing and growing influence in the literature and thought of today." (p.x) Bibliography. Notes on contributors.

Reviewed by Eliseo Vilvas

Book Week p9 N 3 '46 550w

Reviewed by William Barrett

Nation 164:23 Ja 4 '47 1100w

"Though Mr. Flores in his introduction expresses the hope that Kafka will not remain a cult but become an organic part of contemporary letters, there is not a single piece in this anthology which alone would give the uninitiated a key to Kafka. . . It is interesting how often one essay which analyzes a single story, perhaps just because of the imposed restriction, gives a much more penetrating interpretation than those of a more general nature, which reveal a remarkable talent for forcing the poet into a metaphysical straight-jacket and letting him lie there." Richard Plant

N Y Times p6 D 8 '46 800w

"The revival of interest in the work of Franz Kafka, over whom controversy has existed since the death of this strange Czech writer in 1924, has produced two excellent studies of an artist who is described in 'The Kafka Problem' as destined to rank with the great figures of world literature. The editor supports this prediction with the fact [that] this anthology of critical writing about Kafka presents studies translated from almost every modern language. Kafka's genius, however, remains an enigma." W. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 20 '46 150w

"Most of the studies are of high quality, and may serve not only as an introduction to Kafka, but also as a philosophical guide to our contemporary spiritual situation."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:274 D '46 160w

"In shying away from material circumstances and stressing metaphysical implications, Mr. Flores's selection faithfully reflects a trend of criticism. It ends by reducing Kafka to a state of affairs much admired by the Existentialists: absurdity." Harry Levin

Yale R n s 36:354 winter '47 1050w

FLYNN, ERROL. Showdown. 308p $2.50 Sheridan

46-1162

The love story of a tramp steamer skipper, in the South Seas, and a sultry Hollywood actress.

Book Week p12 F 24 '46 90w

Kirkus 14:41 F 1 '46 170w

"'Showdown,' though it contains absurdities, is not all absurd. As an adventure tale it moves along at a good pace. The action scenes are well imagined and presented. Though Shamus is stock Byronic and most of the other chief characters are flat and unreal, the gamin-like Cleo is well realized. Lesser people in the tale are made distinct by grotesqueness. . . Like many another novel, 'Showdown' is most successful where it is straightforward story; weakest where it is most pretentious." J. P. Wood

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:20 Mr 16 '46 450w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Weekly Book Review p24 F 24 '46 180w

FOERSTER, NORMAN. Humanities and the common man; the democratic role of the state universities. 60p $1.50 Univ. of N.C. press

378 Education, Humanistic 46-3535

"A brief discussion of higher education based on the argument that the spirit of the humanities should dominate the entire program of a public university." (School & Society) This essay "first appeared as the concluding chapter of a volume entitled A State University Surveys the Humanities [Book Review Digest, Mr, 1946], which was issued as part of the sesquicentennial celebration of . . . the University of North Carolina." (Pref)

"There is much that is valid in [Foerster's] searching examination of current university and college courses, teachers and administrators, much that will abundantly reward the thoughtful reading of all who are interested in higher education." J. T. Frederick

+ Book Week p2 Ag 4 '46 360w

Christian Century 63:307 Mr 6 '46 140w

"Norman Foerster has again struck a blow for a kind of liberal education in our country that would be worthy of a civilized society. His book is brief, cogent, spacious-minded, and eloquent." Stringfellow Barr

+ Sat R of Lit 29:68 Je 8 '46 500w

School & Society 63:143 F 23 '46 90w

FOLDES, JOLAN. Golden earrings. 239p $2.50 Morrow [8s 6d Hale, R]

46-2890

Romantic novel about a reserved British colonel, escaped from a Nazi prison camp, who was making his way to freedom with difficulty until he met the gypsy, Lydia. She offered him the haven of her cart and her love. Together they made the trek toward the French border, the colonel losing his reserve by degrees as they went.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Book Week p8 Ap 14 '46 270w

Booklist 42:282 My 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '46

"A light rendition of an Englishman's interlude in the gypsy world. . . A quiet humor here, a continental flavor, though it lacks the pace and story interest that make Lady Eleanor Smith's romantic gypsy stories best sellers."

+ — Kirkus 14:48 F 1 '46 170w

"'Golden Earrings' is tame, disappointing and just plain boring. The theme of the passionate, richly wise child of nature who infuses a worldling with a new faith is too hackneyed to be endured calmly, as it is presented here." Catherine Maher

FOLDES, JOLAN—Continued

— N Y Times p20 My 5 '46 230w

"Miss Folders has a certain talent for sturdy, as opposed to subtly humorous, comedy."

New Yorker 22:115 Ap 13 '46 90w

"Here is another fantastic tale out of Nazi-occupied Europe, written with little concern for factual, or even credible, background material, but written with some gaiety and with so much gusto that one soon stops looking at the characters involved as really connected with the horrors of German tyranny and the heroism of the fight against it." Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 29:25 Jl 20 '46 420w

"Very shrewdly Yolanda Folders has composed a story that will appeal to the gypsy in you." George Conrad

+ Weekly Book Review p16 Ap 14 '46 400w

FOLEY, GEORGE F. Sinbad of the Coast guard; il. by George Gray. 157p $2.50 Dodd
636.78 Dogs—Legends and stories 46-419

The story of the famous dog mascot of the U.S.S. George W. Campbell. Sinbad was for eight years a part of the life on the Campbell, and did his share in the war. His story is told for boys and girls of nine to twelve.

Booklist 42:215 Mr 1 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 22:213 My '46 100w
Kirkus 14:68 F 1 '46 110w

"Recommended." G. E. Joline
+ Library J 71:408 Mr 15 '46 70w

"Boys and girls of 9 to 12 probably won't mind that some of the incidents are over-written, because his story is also a vivid account of life on a Coast Guard cutter." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p24 F 3 '46 80w

"No country other than America could have produced such a story. American boys and girls will love it." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:59 F 16 '46 300w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Weekly Book Review p7 Ap 28 '46 300w

Wis Lib Bul 42:62 Ap '46

FOLEY, MARTHA, ed. Best American short stories, 1946, and the Yearbook of the American short story. 586p $3 Houghton

Short stories—Collections

Contents: Jerry, by Charles Anoff; Out of line, by Warren Beck; The lovers, by John Berryman; The big black and white game, by Ray Bradbury; Bury your own dead, by Bessie Breuer; The valley of the shadow, by T. K. Brown; The ivory tower, by W. R. Burnett; The wind and the snow of winter, by W. V. T. Clark; Flesh and blood, by Laurence Critchell; A sense of danger, by Mary Deasy; In military manner, by Samuel Elkin; The norm, by Elaine Gottlieb; The mysteries of Eleusis, by Elizabeth Hardwick; Story without end, by J. W. Johnson; Old Bill bent to drink, by B. H. Lampman; The caller, by Meyer Liben; Run, run, run, by A. J. Liebling; The owl and the hens, by W. O. Mitchell; Time and ebb, by Vladimir Nabokov; Like a winding sheet, by Ann Petry; For a beautiful relationship, by Wentzle Ruml; The king's daughter, by Gladys Schmitt; The bridge, by Irwin Stark; The woman who was loved, by James Stern; Mrs. Razor, by James Still; The scout master, by Peter Taylor; The other Margaret, by Lionel Trilling; Love affair, by Henrietta Weigel; The singing lesson, by Jessamyn West; Death in a cathedral, by Glennlyth Woods.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p2 D 15 '46 430w

Booklist 43:155 Ja 15 '47

"Perhaps the most depressing thing about the collection is the fear of life that courses through its pages like a gray pulse. Too many of the stories dally with that despair, without really attempting to find the cause. Far too many hide their heads in rhetoric, like modish ostriches, when the chips are down." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p14 D 8 '46 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 5 '47 250w

"In her preface Miss Foley writes that there has been a coming of age of the American short story in this year and that the average quality has been unusually high. Since 1946 has already been labeled, with sufficient evidence, as 'the most arid year' in American literature since its renaissance thirty years ago, it would be extraordinary if this were so. That these thirty stories are admirable is true, though last year's volume contained in our opinion as good or better a crop. But in them you will search vainly for a new rare talent or flash of power that years ago first revealed a young Hemingway or a Steinbeck." Harrison Smith

Sat R of Lit 29:16 D 28 '46 1050w

FOLGORE DA SAN GIMIGNANO. Garland of months. See Aldington, R. Wreath for San Gimignano

FOLLETT, MRS HELEN (THOMAS). Men of the Sulu sea. 250p il $2.50 Scribner

919.14 Moros. Philippine islands—Social life and customs 46-25022

"This historical, descriptive account of natives of southern Philippines is of particular interest today because of the loyalty of Moro guerrillas to Americans during the war. Describes in informal narrative style the historical background and present-day customs of peoples of Sulu archipelago and shows how establishment of a school for Moro boys under the leadership of a fine and understanding American convinced the people of American friendship." Library J

"It is to be regretted that a book which contains so stirring and pertinent a story should have much of the telling obscured by the dull, informational style of the author. At times Helen Follett writes chapters which are worthy of her material, but a good part of this book is slow reading."

+ — Book Week p14 N 11 '45 340w

Booklist 42:201 F 15 '46

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:47 Ja '46 80w

"The Moros have played a vital part in the war, and this book is packed with important material on the brave fighters of the Sulu Sea. One could wish that the author had let their achievements speak for themselves, instead of making the pirates sound like rebellious boy scouts. And her excellent background material loses dramatic value by her rather ponderous style and slow sense of pace."

Kirkus 13:433 O 1 '45 90w

Reviewed by M. F. Cox

+ Library J 71:59 Ja 1 '46 130w

N Y Times p30 Ja 27 '46 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Weekly Book Review p5 F 17 '46 230w

FOLLIN, MAYNARD DAUCHY. Golden words of Moses. 668p $2 Humphries

222.11 Bible. Old Testament. Genesis 46-1104

"The author begins this long commentary upon the book of Genesis by stating certain presuppositions: The usual approach of the commentators is fruitless; the book is verbally inspired by God; it contains hidden prophecies of the future course of events; and the key which will unlock these... secrets is a knowledge of synbolism." Crozer Q

"Because of its highly technical treatment, this is a book for a small audience. It requires much more scholarship and Biblical background than most readers possess." J. O. S.

Book Week p23 Ap 14 '46 90w

"The book abounds in absurd interpretations read into clear statements of the book of Genesis. Its sole claim to a place of value is that it is a compendium of curiosities." J. B. Pritchard

— Crozer Q 23:206 Ap '46 350w

FOOTE, DOREEN. Modified activities in physical education. 101p il $2 Inor

371.74 Games. Physical education and training. Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc. 46-666

"A handbook of games, procedures, classification, and organization for pupils in junior and senior high school who cannot participate in the regular physical education activities." Subtitle

School & Society 62:407 D 22 '45 40w

"While this book is not an exhaustive treatise on the subject of recreational and informal physical activities, nor is it precisely definitive in the explanation of the games listed, nevertheless it is a valuable contribution to the literature of this field. It stresses diversification in planning, which creates excellent motivation for pupil participation, and it presents the needful physical and mental stimulation in attractive activities that cannot fail to capture the child's imagination and interest. Every physical-education teacher may read this volume with profit, for the sake both of the theory that is developed and of the practical activities that are outlined for immediate inclusion in the school program." C. P. Menge

+ School R 54:244 Ap '46 800w

FOOTE, JOHN TAINTOR. Dumb-Bell, and others 309p $3 Appleton-Century

Dogs—Legends and stories 47-81

Collection of dog stories, all from the works of one man. The stories were collected from books, magazines, and some from new material. Contents: Dumb-Bell of Brookfield; Allegheny; Pocono shot; Trub's diary; Jing; Dog upon the waters.

"Somewhat sentimental, but written with knowledge of dogs and the outdoors and of interest to the insatiable readers of dog stories. Recommended for young people's collections." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 71:1811 D 15 '46 100w

"The more I read dog stories the more I realize that 'A Dog of Flanders' is a good dog story and that next to pigs (no kidding) a dog is the most intelligent of our common animals." James Street

N Y Times p14 O 20 '46 600w

Weekly Book Review p46 D 1 '46 120w

FORBES, ESTHER. America's Paul Revere; pictures by Lynd Ward. 46p $2.50 Houghton

B or 92 Revere, Paul—Juvenile literature

The biography of Paul Revere for ages eight and over. The book is composed of distinguished text, and equally distinguished pictures in black and white and full color.

"Paul Revere comes alive in this book. There's a wealth of information with many little-known facts included." Ann Nicholson

+ Book Week p16 N 10 '46 130w

Booklist 43:89 N 15 '46

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 12 '46 240w

"Here at last is a biography which is historically sound and a pleasure to read in its well-chosen words and its superb pictures. It is a rare piece of collaboration on the imaginative plane." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 22:455 N '46 140w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 22:472 N '46 120w

Kirkus 14:527 O 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Johnson

Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 70w

"Dramatic pictures, many reproduced in glowing color, others strong in halftone, vividly recreate the world of Paul Revere in this picture biography. . . Miss Forbes, who probably knows more about Paul Revere than anyone else alive, has wisely eschewed any fictionalizing of her subject." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p2 N 10 '46 210w

"Esther Forbes' distillation of the years of the Revolution in Boston is clear, and her abbreviated story of Revere's part in them is effective. Lynd Ward's big, dramatic illustrations (made from oil paintings on gesso board) have unusual depth and brilliance of tone. A few of his New England landscapes seem almost too dramatic for that quiet countryside, but on the whole the pictures have distinction." K. S. White

+ New Yorker 22:146 D 7 '46 60w

"Using words pleasant to read and easy to understand, Esther Forbes has integrated Paul Revere's strong personality into the exciting social, economic and political circumstances surrounding him in colonial and revolutionary Boston. The forceful simplicity and rich coloring of Lynd Ward's illustrations give valuable emphasis to an expertly developed context that reflects discriminating choice of authentic historical source material." Edna Daniel

+ San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 10 '46 80w

"This book is twice blessed. The word pictures are drawn by a writer who is a rare combination of scholarly historian and sensitive storyteller. There are a generous number of pictures, many of them in color from the brush of a painstaking and yet imaginative artist. They are as unusual as they are realistic. There has been no more accurate, interesting, and beautiful book for a long, long time." R. A. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:66 N 9 '46 240w

"This [is a] truly magnificent picture book. . . It is an American book from start to finish. The color scheme is rich and mellow, many of the illustrations all but full page."

+ Weekly Book Review p9 N 10 '46 320w

Wis Lib Bul 42:170 D '46

FORBES, MURRAY. Hollow triumph. 339p $2.75 Ziff-Davis

46-4663

"In which Henry Mueller, after six years in prison for forgery and embezzlement, wins a parole for good behavior, murders Dr. Victor Bartok, a wealthy psychiatrist and Nobel Prize winner who could pass as his identical twin, and takes his place in life and science. You can see how this would be no mean feat, although Henry had studied psychology while a convict. Called into the Army, the supposed Bartok makes a hit with his narco-synthesis treatment, but all this is sure to be a hollow triumph." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Book Week p12 My 19 '46 280w

"The highly plotted, seasoned, and rather badly written story of an egotist and his perfect crime. . . This makes possible an almost impossible crime, has a certain curiosity appeal, if on the cheap side."

— + Kirkus 14:133 Mr 15 '46 180w

"In its writing the novel is uneven and shows the effects of hasty composition." Fredrick Brantley

— N Y Times p14 Je 2 '46 330w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Weekly Book Review p18 Je 16 '46 100w

FORBES, ROSITA (TORR) (MRS A. T. McGrath). Appointment with destiny. 303p il $3.75 Dutton

B or 92 Voyages and travels 46-2415

An account of the author's cosmopolitan wanderings during the years 1935-1943. She includes notes of her adventures in India, South Africa, Tunisia, Europe, the Bahamas, some parts of North America, and Great Britain. Index.

"Through the writing runs a sparkling thread of personal charm and wit; always there is evidence of a keen incisive mind. As adventure stuff, political history, or as documentary to the casus belli, 'Appointment with Destiny,' is very much worth while." F. N. Litten

FORBES, ROSITA—Continued

+ Book Week p12 Ap 21 '46 320w

"This is all good reporting, but no more. The self isn't in it. Mrs. Forbes never brings you up close to the places and people of which she writes. Her reader gets the impression that nothing she ever sees or does touches her deeply. She never gives herself to the life she is reporting. This detachment from the meaning of things gives the writing a cool, detached objective quality." Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p16 My 9 '46 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '46

"This is the record of a hyper-active life, that recounts encounters, meetings, and friendships with the great and near-great, that makes personal world happenings... a sometimes entertaining, if windified personal narrative by one who has been (almost) everywhere and tells all."

Kirkus 14:165 Ap 1 '46 140w

"Passable reading for an idle hour." M. C. Manley

Library J 71:584 Ap 15 '46 70w

"Miss Forbes' narrative ends with 1943. Her war chapters are written clearly and feelingly. Elsewhere the style is eccentric and obscure... The emphasis on such trivia as the clothes, beauty, divorces and genealogy of her friends makes for dull reading, except perhaps for her circle in London and Nassau. Apart from the chapters on England at war, scarcely, if ever, does the author portray with due sympathy or skill the peoples or the lands she visited." M. L. Akeley

+ N Y Times p34 Je 16 '46 550w

"The first third of the volume is strictly travelogue stuff—competent, colorful, informative. The rest deals with the war years. There is some good, vivid reporting about blitzed London, but again over-class-angled—too much emphasis on poor lady So-and-So, who has been bombed out of her palace at the height of the social season and now has to stand in a queue. If everyone mentioned in 'Appointment with Destiny' buys a copy, the book should have a wide sale." I. D. W. Tadmage

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 Ag 31 '46 600w

"It is generally assumed that a person who shuns fiction written in the first person can take an autobiography or travel book in his stride. But without even a slight allergy toward the first-person-singular, one might well balk at Rosita Forbes's latest, 'Appointment With Destiny'... In a single typical sentence one can count a 'me,' a 'my' and four 'I's.'" R. M. Morgan

— Spring'd Republican p4d Ap 28 '46 300w

"The book is, technically, well written; one may overlook the artistry in the choice and the arrangement of words through being fascinated by the vision they call up."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p504 O 19 '46 850w

Weekly Book Review p29 My 12 '46 180w

Wis Lib Bul 42:86 Je '46

FORBES, WILLIAM CAMERON. Philippine Islands. rev 1 v ed 412p il $5 Harvard univ. press [21s Oxford]

991.4 Philippine islands—History. Philippine islands—Politics and government A45-4967

"At the request of President Osmeña this two-volume work on the Island by former Governor-General Forbes has been condensed and to a certain extent revised." (Foreign Affairs) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1929.

"The condensing has been well done; and the brief sketch of early Philippine history and of the life and customs of the Filipino people provides an adequate framework for a well-written account of developments under American rule. In certain other respects, however, the revision has been less satisfactory, for the reader who expects to find here any satisfactory treatment of events since 1928 will be thoroughly disappointed." G. N. Steiger

+ — Am Pol Sci R 40:824 Ag '46 360w

Reviewed by L. A. Mills

Ann Am Acad 245:194 My '46 480w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 F 24 '46 50w

Foreign Affairs 24:562 Ap '46 30w

FORD, CLELLAN STEARNS. Comparative study of human reproduction. 111p pa $1.50 Yale univ. press

572 Reproduction. Society, Primitive

A46-966

"The aim of this study, begun in 1941 at the Yale Institute of Human Relations, was to obtain further insight into the origin and persistence of human customs in different cultures. Are group habits purely arbitrary or do they represent tested solutions to tangible life problems? Customs surrounding the reproductive cycle were chosen as those best suited to throw further light on this question. The literature of 64 societies was selected on the basis of location and fullness of information, with some attention given to the principle of random sampling. The culture of each group as related to menstruation, coitus, conception, pregnancy, childbirth and early parenthood was taken into account. The general conclusion is reached that a person acquires drives and values which are conducive to the social welfare of the group in which he lives." Am Soc R

"Ford has performed an exceedingly useful service in focusing attention on the various ways in which different cultures have solved the common problems that arise in connection with the human reproductive cycle. This is the best sort of proof that man's responses are learned." H. S. Mekeel

+ Am J Soc 52:78 Jl '46 850w

Am Soc R 11:376 Je '46 150w

"The study is carefully documented, and there is an excellent bibliography."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:196 S '46 180w

FORD, COREY, and MACBAIN, ALASTAIR. Cloak and dagger; the secret story of OSS. 216p $2.50 Random house

351.74 U.S. Office of strategic services. World war, 1939-1945—Secret service

46-1337

A "now it can be told" story of the organization of the OSS, headed by Major General Donovan, including some of the experiences of its members during World war II.

Reviewed by Quentin Reynolds

Book Week p3 Mr 10 '46 750w

Kirkus 14:27 Ja 15 '46 150w

"Authentic, graphic. Sure fire appeal to men and boys. Recommended for all libraries." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 71:180 F 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by A. J. Goldberg

Nation 162:348 Mr 23 '46 600w

"If the stories are told, at times, with melodramatic flourishes and superfluous atmosphere, they are nevertheless faithful to the events... Unfortunately, 'Cloak and Dagger' frequently blurs the distinction between achievements of the OSS and underground groups with whom it collaborated. Less dramatic but important theoretical activities carried on in Washington are barely mentioned. The style of the book is decidedly slick and appears to be, in many respects, a make-ready for Hollywood." David Dempsey

+ — N Y Times p4 F 24 '46 1100w

"The book is written in slick-magazine style (a good part of it has already appeared in Collier's) and there is an unfortunate air of superficiality about it; it is strange, too, to find that the Messrs. Ford and MacBain have become specialists in the cliché. They must have been in a hell of a hurry."

New Yorker 22:88 Mr 2 '46 120w

"'Cloak and Dagger,' the slick job here under review, utterly fails to do justice to the real OSS. The facts seem to be correct; the book is packed with exciting information served up in the smoothest journalistic imaginability. But the feel of the OSS as we knew it is not there." Courtlandt Canby

— + Sat R of Lit 29:23 Je 15 '46 800w

Reviewed by A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.
Weekly Book Review p1 F 24 '46 750w

FORD, COREY, and MACBAIN, ALASTAIR. Last time I saw them; ill. by William Von Riegen. 244p $2.75 Scribner

940.544 World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations. U.S. Army air forces 46-4007

"This random collection of the adventures, commonplace and stirring, of the men who served in the Army Air Forces catches well the strange spirit of the men who fought the war at hundreds of miles an hour, often flippant in the teeth of death in the sky, often scared on the ground at briefing time. Attached to Air Force Intelligence, Lieut. Col. Corey Ford and Maj. Alastair MacBain seem to have visited practically every field where American planes sat down, from the Aleutians to India, from the Marianas to Greenland and back to home base in the United States." N Y Times

Reviewed by Alan Cranston

N Y Times p7 My 19 '46 900w

"When the book is good—as in the chapter 'War Below Zero,' which tells about the hazards of flying in Greenland—it is very, very good, but when it deals with the contrived and overemotional 'human interest' stories which make up the bulk of the material, it comes close to being horrid."

— + New Yorker 22:110 My 18 '46 120w

"I should think that any man or woman in the United States who cares or has cared about any man in the Army Air Forces would read this book as a living log of the conduct, emotions and thoughts of the men who flew or serviced war planes. For those who did not know any such man this book is all the more valuable. They will know him after reading it." Edna Ferber

+ Weekly Book Review p2 My 26 '46 800w

FORD, EDWARD. David Rittenhouse, astronomer-patriot, 1732-1796. (Pennsylvania lives) 226p $2.50 Univ. of Pa. press [15s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 Rittenhouse, David 46-5428

"A biography of an internationally famous inventor and astronomer, and a civic and political leader in Philadelphia during the American Revolution." (Social Studies) Index.

School & Society 63:463 Je 29 '46 10w

Social Studies 37:288 O '46 20w

"To anyone who loves history, this brief, readable volume is packed with refreshing detail to add to one of the most fascinating periods in American history." Katharine Smedley

+ Social Studies 38:42 Ja '47 950w

"Despite his prominence the only biography of this great scientist and public servant has been the rather unsatisfactory one by his nephew, William Barton, published in 1813. Now, at last, this gap has been filled. Mr. Ford's volume, one of the University of Pennsylvania Press's admirable series of Pennsylvania Lives, gives an authentic picture of Rittenhouse and the stirring times in which he lived." James Stokley

+ Weekly Book Review p36 O 27 '46 360w

FORD, EDWARD HASTINGS (SENATOR FORD, pseud.), and others, comps. Can you top this? 237p il $2.50 Didier pubs.

817.08 Humor 46-905

"The many radio listeners who tune in 'Can You Top This?' on Wednesday and Saturday evenings each week can now enjoy some of the cream of the program's laugh crop in print. At the same time they may become better acquainted, through photographic reproductions . . . with the three star gagsters of the program, 'Sen' Ford, Harry Hershfield, and Joe Laurie, Jr. These 'knights of the clown table' have chosen for publication more than 250 of the yarns which, when they told them on the air, were registered as tops—1000, or close to 1000—on the electric 'laughmeter,' which records the volume of studio audience laughter. In addition, they have included hundreds of their snappy short 'warmup' jokes, or 'quickies,' which never are scored on the laughmeter, together with many witty samples of their 'clown-table discussions.'" Spring'd Republican

"An easy book that's perfect for a train trip or to have handy if you're figuring on spending a vacation in Florida. It's even all right for any time, if you like joke books." Dale Harrison

+ Book Week p11 Ja 20 '46 300w

Kirkus 13:488 N 1 '45 80w

Spring'd Republican p4d F 3 '46 300w

FORD, LESLIE, pseud. See Brown, Z. J.

FORD, SENATOR, pseud. See Ford, E. H.

FOREMAN, GRANT. Last trek of the Indians. 382p maps $4 Univ. of Chicago press

970.5 Indians of North America—Government relations A46-1351

"Presents facts beginning with the first treaty our government made with the Delaware Indians in 1778 and traces the history of the removal of the northern Indians to Oklahoma. Bibliography and index." School & Society

Reviewed by A. J. Lien

Am Pol Sci R 40:605 Je '46 400w

Am Soc R 11:377 Je '46 130w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Book Week p2 Ap 14 '46 180w

Booklist 42:279 My 1 '46

Reviewed by Kathleen Coburn

Canadian Forum 26:119 Ag '46 550w

"Mr. Foreman's study is a model of careful and thoroughgoing investigation. Generations of students of the American scene will profit from the information he has here made easily and pleasantly available." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 27 '46 600w

Current Hist 10:446 My '46 100w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman

N Y Times p35 My 5 '46 750w

"Through twenty chapters, the whole pitiful and sordid story of the uprooting of sixty tribes is set forth—often in the language of their contemporaries, and carefully documented. It is not a pretty picture of 'the winning of the West', but it is healthy reading for one who is interested in the Indians of today, or who is concerned with the survival of a minority group, which is classed as inferior in the thinking of an aggressive majority." W. W. Beatty

Pol Sci Q 61:468 S '46 1000w

School & Society 63:199 Mr 16 '46 90w

"The book is a mass of carefully authenticated and well arranged detail, whose greatest value lies in the lesson it teaches—that of the essential unity of the human race." E. G. Eastman

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Ap 20 '46 300w

"It may be regretted that the abundance of factual information given in the text, and the arrangement of material have prevented the telling of a story which would interest many who are rightly curious about the last trek of the Indians."

U S Quarterly Bkl 2:117 Je '46 160w

"The Last Trek of the Indians' is an invaluable work of reference. One wishes that it could also achieve popular circulation. One can hope that this ordering of a hitherto confusing and difficult phase of our history will lead the writers of text books to include some faintly adequate treatment of it. Even if the treatment be only a few pages long, if it be an honest summation it will offer school children a mirror to one aspect of America's face—an aspect which can act as a corrective to smugness." Oliver La Farge

FOREMAN, GRANT—Continued

+ Weekly Book Review p24 O 27 '46 700w

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. Lord Hornblower. 322p $2.50 Little [9s 6d Joseph, M.]

46-25176

Fifth in the author's series of novels dealing with the life and adventures of a British naval officer in the Napoleonic wars.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 178:148 O '46 700w

Reviewed by R. J. Bender
Book Week p3 S 29 '46 400w
Booklist 42:365 J1 15 '46
Cath World 164:284 D '46 200w

"This novel shows considerable gain in speed, at some cost of careful detail and the fascinating building up of background that were conspicuous merits of the earlier novels. Love stories are never Mr. Forester's strong point. He feels that he has to introduce the theme; and, in this instance, he gives Hornblower an interlude with Marie, but one that lacks depth and even plausibility. Ships and Hornblower commanding them or solving a dilemma and good history are what Mr. Forester's readers really want, and they get a fair measure of those elements here." W. K. R.

Christian Science Monitor p18 S 26 '46 450w

"There is no news in the announcement that this, the fifth and presumably the final chronicle of the adventures and loves of Horatio Hornblower, is an exciting, well-written tale by one of the few master craftsmen in the art of fiction. . . . No little of Forester's popularity may be traced to his projection of a 'modern' hero into a romantic background. For, despite his iron fortitude and his nautical talents, Hornblower is essentially a sensitive, uncertain, and complicated figure." F. X. Connolly

+ Commonweal 45:148 N 22 '46 700w

"Plenty of excitement—a warm and lovable character—a tying up of some loose threads—for the Hornblower fans and they are legion. But not tops in the series."

Kirkus 14:179 Ap 15 '46 190w

"This 'final Hornblower novel' is worthy of its predecessors." Scott Adams

+ Library J 71:1206 S 15 '46 70w

"All of [the book] is in best Hornblower tradition, although perhaps not the best of Forester. It is inconceivable that readers could tire of the Magnificent Horatio, but perhaps his creator can. There is a suggestion that the vein has run out." C. B. Palmer

N Y Times p4 S 29 '46 800w

New Yorker 22:125 O 5 '46 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 30 '46 750w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 29:32 S 28 '46 1000w

"Hornblower enthusiasts will welcome a new story about their hero containing a sea battle, the suppression of a meeting, the capture of Le Havre, and a narrow escape from death. Purists may be forgiven for thinking that the fictions are rather too large for a supposedly historical novel, but Mr. Forester maintains his fine habit of telling an adventure with the most careful attention to convincing detail and without a shadow of false excitement. The latter part of the story is disappointing, for Hornblower on land is nothing like as good as Hornblower at sea." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

+ Spec 176:618 Je 14 '46 180w

"This fifth and (according to the publishers) last of the series is the poorest of the lot. It involves too much dry-land maneuvering and lush love-making on Hornblower's part, too little Royal Navy salt and lore."

— Time 48:116 O 7 '46 280w

"It is a genuine pleasure to open another Hornblower novel by C. S. Forester; the old thrill begins to operate at once. And at once it becomes apparent that the old touch is there on every page: in fact one feels that parts, at least, of this book are superior to any of the Hornblower adventures we already know about. The story opens with a zest and plunges immediately into its plot; it opens, too, on a sea note, which is a great advantage." Lincoln Colcord

+ Weekly Book Review p4 S 29 '46 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 42:115 J1 '46

FORMAN, HARRY WILLARD. Rights of trains; a complete analysis of single track standard code rules; rev. by Peter Jossorand. 3d ed 561p $3.50 Simmons-Boardman

656 Railroads—Trainmen's manuals

45-11372

"Third edition covering all the rules and regulations of train operation and protection based on the Standard code of the Association of American railroads. Obsolete material has been deleted and some new material added." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 42:229 Mr 15 '46

N Y New Tech Bks 30:61 O '45

FORRESTER, GERTRUDE. Occupations; a selected list of pamphlets. 240p $2.25 Wilson, H.W.

016.371425 Occupations—Bibliography

46-1905

"The author has selected from several thousand pamphlets 1,000 titles of a nature that will enable the applicant to select a suitable position. The pamphlets are described, and price, publisher, and date of publication are given." (School & Society) Index.

Booklist 42:292 My 15 '46

School & Society 63:176 Mr 9 '46 90w

Wis Lib Bul 42:71 N 22 '46 700w

FORRESTER, JAMES DONALD. Principles of field and mining geology. 647p il maps $7 Wiley

550 Mining. Geology, Economic. Geology—Field work

46-5635

"The basic purpose of this book is to present an analysis of geological field techniques which will function as a working guide for the approach, pursuit, and solution of geological problems, particularly those of mining geology. It is the author's hope that not only will the book acquaint students with proper field procedures, but that it also will afford a convenient reference for practicing geologists." (Pref) The author is chairman, Department of mining engineering, Missouri school of mines and metallurgy. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:9 S '46

Library J 71:587 Ap 15 '46 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:41 J1 '46

FOSDICK, HARRY EMERSON. On being fit to live with; sermons on post-war Christianity. 219p $2 Harper

252 Sermons

46-11853

Twenty-five sermons delivered by the author at Riverside Church, New York, during the war years. Partial contents: On being fit to live with; Science demands religion; What the law cannot do; What does it really mean to be great; Our difficulty in forgiving our enemies; On worshipping things we manufacture; The great hours of a man's life; Resources for life's mastery.

Reviewed by Preston Bradley

Book Week p3 D 22 '46 450w

Booklist 43:128 Ja 1 '47

+ Christian Century 63:1504 D 11 '46 70w

+ Kirkus 14:563 N 1 '46 250w

"The persuasive value of these discourses for the Christianly illiterate, a group which includes many of our most highly self-esteemed cognoscenti as well as vast numbers of less clever victims of pragmatic and 'experiential' education, is perhaps dubious. For these a heavier hand and a more brutal tongue may be required. One does not feel that Dr. Fosdick's sermons would be effective either from a soapbox in Columbus Circle or in the faculty club of many a university. He strikes the pastoral note rather than the prophetic one. But once this limitation is admitted, one rejoices to see a job so effective in craftsmanship and so patently sincere." B. I. Bell

+ — N Y Times p5 Ja 12 '47 950w

FOSTER, ELIZABETH. Gigi in America; the further adventures of a merry-go-round horse; il. by Phyllis N. Coté. 123p $2 Houghton

46-3686

Continues the story of the gay merry-go-round horse who came from old Vienna. This time Gigi goes to Old Orchard Beach on the coast of Maine, and after many adventures, finally comes to Central Park. From there he goes to the home of his beloved Lili, and is turned into a rocking horse for Lili's little girl. For first book see Gigi (Book Review Digest, 1943).

Book Week p18 Je 2 '46 220w

Booklist 42:320 Je 1 '46

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 10 '46 120w

"Humor and a happy imagination give the Merry-Go-Round Horse reality and character." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:133 Mr '46 160w

"Charming, fanciful and satisfying, with real background and good characterization. Definitely above average level of story interest."

+ Kirkus 14:35 Ja 15 '46 110w

"Recommended for boys and girls from seven to twelve years of age." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 71:827 Je 1 '46 60w

"There is something alive and appealing about Gigi. The story moves a bit too leisurely in spots, but the tempo seems to suit the children." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p23 Je 2 '46 150w

"Throughout the story the conversation between Gigi and Rat is very amusing. If this book lacks the glamor of the scenes in Vienna before the war, it shows how the war affected us here in America, how even Gigi's adventures became a part of the war record. The drawings by Phyllis Coté are as attractive as those in the first book about Gigi." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:30 Ag 10 '46 320w

"Fanciful, entertaining story, beautifully illustrated by Phyllis Coté." E. H. Dexter

+ Spring'd Republican p8 Je 10 '46 180w

Weekly Book Review p18 My 19 '46 320w

FOSTER, ELIZABETH. The Islanders; il. by John O'Hara Cosgrave. 348p $3 Houghton

818 Maine. Country life. Dickson, Frederick

Stoeve 46-25005

Family chronicle centering around the building of a summer home on an island in Rangeley Lake, Maine. The builder was the author's grandfather, a Philadelphia lawyer, who decided that six month's law and six months on a Maine island were a perfect combination. For over fifty years the house, which was almost literally "carved out in the wilderness," was the beloved summer home of four generations of the family. In 1939 the house burned down, and the chronicle stops there.

"As a very pretty by-product of this account of a house and a family and a way of life through the second and third generations to the here and now, 'The Islanders' is, among many other nice things, a daydreamer's paradise for fishermen, gardeners, ornithologists and nature lovers in general, being full of authentic lore of the woods. And when Miss Foster writes finis to her excellent account of times past—when ultimately the big house catches fire and burns to the ground—she seems at the same time to be writing finis to an era." F. H. Bullock

+ Book Week p3 Ja 20 '46 750w

Booklist 42:181 F 1 '46

Bookmark 7:12 Mr '46

Christian Science Monitor p16 F 2 '46 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '46

"A return to a past, to memories and mementoes of a leisurely life of simple satisfactions and pleasurable people, for conservative tastes and particularly for people who love that part of Maine and that sort of life."

+ Kirkus 13:537 D 1 '45 170w

"Author has successfully captured the individuality of the house, the personalities in her entertaining family, the atmosphere of northern Maine (and other places), the enthusiasms for fishing and gardening of 'the Islanders.'" Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 71:120 Ja 15 '46 90w

"'The Islanders' is a good book, easy reading, enjoyable." John Gould

+ N Y Times p10 F 17 '46 550w

New Yorker 21:77 Ja 19 '46 120w

"It is a book to browse through leisurely, to ease the reader from the complexities of gadget households and above all to heighten one's admiration of what the state of Maine can offer." M. M. Dickey

+ Spring'd Republican p4d Ja 27 '46 600w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright

Weekly Book Review p3 F 3 '46 1100w

FOSTER, MICHAEL. House above the river. 358p $2.75 Little

46-6708

Against the background of the old South is told the story of John Conway and the slightly older Regan. Their love began when they were children, when John lived in the house above the river, and Regan in the nearby parsonage. For several reasons Regan married the wrong man, and it was not until she and John were both in their forties that the way for their marriage was cleared.

Reviewed by Clinton Textor

Book Week p6 O 27 '46 320w

"'House above the River' is substantial and weighty reading. It does not suffer from leanness. It does, however, suffer from excessive reflection, which intrudes into every episode. It suffers also from cynicism. . . In spite of a conclusion that borders closely on a futility not wholly realized by John Conway, and in spite of a wearying addiction to the fleshpots, [the book] has many phases of descriptive beauty and sensitivity. The major characters are astonishingly real, and John Conway has memories and present realizations that touch the heart." T. O. Sloane

+ — Commonweal 45:20 O 18 '46 1050w

Kirkus 14:259 Je 1 '46 160w

"As a father-to-son document, as a piece of solemn paternal counsel, the account may seem to finicky readers a little artificial, a little strange, a little incredible, as indeed any novel is likely to seem when it is set into a too elaborate frame; but if a device is ever needed, as a kind of justification for story-telling, this one is perhaps as good as any other." Richard Sullivan

N Y Times p5 S 15 '46 1050w

"Though it is overlong on talk (no dialect) and tends to show lesser characters only in profile, the effect is mature and, in its way, gratifying."

New Yorker 22:99 S 28 '46 90w

FOSTER, MICHAEL—Continued

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 30 '46
850w

"If a man spends a whole book in pointing out to his son a vanishing American dream, and warning him of certain fearful developments, then the essence of the dream and the essence of his fears are what count; they must determine what meaning the book possesses. I can add that there is a long love story spread across the novel, between John Conway and Regan Berkeley. He gets her, he loses her, he gets her. It is not very credible. But what John learns from his grandfather, and passes on to his son, is. That is the story, clearly written." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:30 O 5 '46 700w

"Much of the book is unfortunate in its style, which is luxuriant and excessively literary. Although Mr. Foster clearly intends this as part of his characterization of Conway, its ultimate effect is to muffle the impact of the ideas, and to smother the characters in folds of beautiful and sentimental language. The first half of the novel develops at so leisurely a pace and is so discursive that sometimes all sense of forward movement is lost. There is, too, a dismaying vagueness and unreality about these earlier chapters. . . . Michael Foster the story-teller, except for brief passages, isn't given a chance. Happily, though, he re-emerges somewhere just past the middle of 'House Above the River,' takes things into his own hands, and keeps a firm hold on them almost to the final page." Dan Wickenden

+ — Weekly Book Review p4 S 15 '46 950w

FOSTER, STEPHEN COLLINS. Treasury of Stephen Foster; foreword by Deems Taylor; historical notes by John Tasker Howard; arrangements by Ray Lev and Dorothy Berliner Commings; il. by William Sharp. 222p $3.95 Random house

784 Songs 46-7218

Words and music of fifty of Stephen Foster's best songs, with an illustration for each. There is a biographical essay and historical notes by John Tasker Howard.

Booklist 43:83 N 15 '46

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 21 '46
210w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '46

Kirkus 14:517 O 1 '46 90w

"Not only do we get from this 'Treasury' an impressive picture of Foster as the finest and quite possibly the most authentic melodist this country has yet produced, but, thanks to John Tasker Howard's biographical article and his historical notes to each song, we get a full-length and moving portrait of the man." M. C. Hastings

+ N Y Times p10 O 20 '46 500w

"This anthology has some rather bad features: a set of dreadful illustrations, one for each song and all full-page, and a plush trimming of barbershop chords which I am advised by a musical expert Stephen Foster could not possibly have written. There is perhaps room for scholarship here, too, in restoring the original versions. But Mr. John Tasker Howard has supplied a biographical introduction and historical notes on all the songs, which are both scholarly and illuminating, and there is a foreword by Deems Taylor." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 22:138 D 14 '46 600w

Springfield Republican p8 S 25 '46 360w

"In 'A Treasury of Stephen Foster,' a beautifully compiled book of fifty Foster songs, there is Deems Taylor's highly readable foreword. . . . The book's greatest value, always excepting the songs themselves, is the brief story about each of the songs by that authority on American music, John Tasker Howard." R. F. Adams

+ Weekly Book Review p2 N 10 '46 1200w

FOWLER, GENE. Solo in tom-toms. 390p $3
Viking

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 46-25106

Autobiography of a Denver newspaper man and Hollywood writer, friend of many picturesque westerners, who tells the story of Denver along with the story of his own life up to 1920. He writes of his Denver boyhood, his marriage, his regard for his stepfather, and his later meeting with his own father. He includes anecdotes of his friends and heroes, among them Scout Wiggins who was with Kit Carson, Ivy Baldwin, Judge Lindsey, Jack Dempsey, and others.

"Not as deeply humorous as H. L. Mencken's autobiographical 'Newspaper Days,' Fowler's chapters about his early experiences as a reporter in Denver are amusing, shot through with sentiment, and stand among the best in the field of journalistic memoirs. That 'A Solo in Tom-Toms' will do well seems obvious. It is bright, warm, companionable, and done with a modesty that can be very influential in many a rambunctious 'mountain man.'" Lloyd Lewis

+ Book Week p3 Ap 21 '46 600w

Booklist 42:281 My 1 '46

"Gene Fowler's love for people and his ability to tell a story produce a pleasant book. A constant stream of 'characters' and plain folk move through its pages." R. S. + Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 27 '46 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '46

"This has as much regional interest as Marquis James' Cherokee Strip and even more color, personality, and vivid history—a flair for intimate reporting, flashing humor, robust narrative. There's occasional posturing—but even that's entertaining."

+ Kirkus 14:90 F 15 '46 170w

"His narrative is rich in anecdotes and local color. Recommended for larger libraries." A. P. Eaton

+ Library J 71:584 Ap 15 '46 100w

Reviewed by McAllister Coleman

Nation 163:162 Ag 10 '46 420w

"Mr. Fowler views his boyhood through a golden haze, and sometimes you wish he would temper the joy of it all, and the poignancy of it all, and throw in a little ordinary unhappiness."

— New Repub 114:940 J1 1 '46 140w

"Mr. Fowler is a great man, and 'A Solo in Tom-Toms,' his bemused and amusing and vivid glance at himself when young, is quite a wonderful book. . . . The method is anecdotal, the style brisk, the mood gay, here as it was in that other Fowler epic of Denver, 'Timber Line.'" J. K. Hutchens

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 21 '46 850w

"The chapters toward the end, about the author's cub days on Denver papers, with a standard collection of city-room antics, crabbed editors, and braash, poker-playing, whiskey-drinking reporters, are in a now well-established tradition of newspaper reminiscence. They may seem less commonplace if you reflect that Mr. Fowler had an important part in establishing that tradition, that this is one of the masters speaking."

New Yorker 22:110 My 4 '46 140w

"It is a story warmly and sincerely told. . . . Gene Fowler's account of his career is told with a fine understatement." R. L. Neuberger

+ Sat R of Lit 29:10 Ap 27 '46 900w

Time 47:104 My 13 '46 750w

"It is wonderful. In several of his books Mr. Fowler has inserted interludes which had to do with his own youth in Denver; some of these were only slightly disguised, and some were factually true. Now the whole story comes out in all its eloquence, its humor and poignancy. It is an odd book, a rollicking and tender book, and the tale, like so many of the sagas concocted by Mr. Fowler, runs off into marvelously pleasant bypaths." Stanley Walker

+ Weekly Book Review p3 Ap 21 '46
1500w

Wis Lib Bul 42:86 Je '46

FOWLIE, WALLACE. Rimbaud. 160p $2.50
New directions

841 Rimbaud, Jean Nicolas Arthur 46-5998

Three interpretations of the French symbolist poet: biographical, critical, and philosophical. Chronology. Selected bibliography.

"[Mr Fowlie] has written a thoroughly interesting and valuable study of the miraculous poet, although the employment of a Freudian and post-Freudian mythos and vocabulary may cause it to be rather hard going for the common reader." Cuthbert Wright

+ Commonweal 44:506 S 6 '46 700w

"Mr. Fowlie gets pretty fancy in his literary psychoanalysis. . . . But if you are concerned with Rimbaud and his enormous influence on latter-day poetry, you will probably be interested."

New Yorker 22:75 J1 20 '46 100w

"Wallace Fowlie, a frequent contributor to the more serious 'little magazines,' the author also of three volumes of poetry and four of criticism, some of them in French, is obviously well equipped to give us a scholarly estimate of Rimbaud. In doing so, however, he is twice handicapped: first by the inevitable circumstance that he has been preceded in this task by a number of discerning critics and literary historians. . . . secondly, by the fact that being almost too serious in his approach, he shows an aspiration for the profound that at times leads him only to the pedantic." G. P. Meyer

+ Sat R of Lit 29:72 D 7 '46 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 4 '47 360w

"The present volume would be of more assistance in this task if the author had been content to write more directly, avoiding repetition and over-elaboration. . . . If Mr. Fowlie had taken the trouble to examine these rhythms and images in more detail, with special reference to their bearing on contemporary work, he would have made a more notable contribution than he has done by his breathless pilgrimage across the blistered landscape of Rimbaud's inferno." Babette Deutsch

Weekly Book Review p30 O 27 '46 1050w

FOX, GRESHAM GEORGE. American Jew speaks. 190p $2.50 Falcon press, 501 Plymouth court, Chicago 5

296 Jews—Political and social conditions. Jews in the U.S. 46-4297

"A scholarly and highly respected Chicago rabbi surveys the history of anti-Semitism—reviews and explodes the ancient calumnies—some of which, though often disproved, are still kept in circulation by the vicious and the ignorant—and indicates some of the services that Jews have rendered to America in peace and war." Christian Century

Reviewed by Benjamin Weintraub

Book Week p4 Mr 31 '46 320w

Christian Century 63:782 Je 19 '46 30w

FOX, MONROE L. Blind adventure. 205p $2 Lippincott

940.548173 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. Blind 46-6108

The author was blinded in February, 1945, when the ship he was on was struck by a Japanese bomb. His story tells of his experiences in the Navy hospital, his orientation programs at Philadelphia and at the Seeing Eye Institute, and later adjustments to life on his ranch in New Mexico.

Reviewed by George Dillon

Book Week p4 S 15 '46 390w

Booklist 43:15 S '46

Kirkus 14:267 Je 1 '46 160w

"Though youthful and sometimes naive, this very human document will be encouraging to the newly blinded and informative to their wives, parents and friends. . . . Recommended for second purchase." R. E. Kingery

Library J 71:1047 Ag '46 130w

"The author has set down unemotionally, and in a flat almost repetitious style, an amazing document of memory. . . . The very naïveté of the narration enhances the poignancy of blindness striking unexpectedly out of the night. Unfortunately that same naïveté becomes slightly wearing before the book is finished." Baynard Kendrick

N Y Times p6 S 1 '46 500w

School & Society 64:135 Ag 24 '46 90w

"Simple and sincere in the telling, 'Blind Adventure' is a quietly heroic story. It should be read by all those who have had near relatives blinded in the service; for it will not only give them a new insight into how the blind person feels, but will renew their own courage by destroying the false impression that to have lost one's sight is to have been incapacitated for a full life." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Ag 18 '46 1000w

FOX, PAUL HERVEY. Four men. 537p $3 Scribner

46-3948

Beginning in 1918, this novel covers the years to 1944 in the lives of four very different types of men. In 1918 they were together on a submarine which sank accidentally in a Massachusetts harbor. The four were among the few survivors and when it came to parting they agreed to meet in twenty-five years. The four men were Alfred Zacharias, an East side New York Jewish boy, who became a rich play-producer; Julian Gamble, of a very wealthy family, who went to Hollywood and became an art director and a confirmed drunkard; Will Giles, a potential doctor, who later went in for Yoga; and Adam Mallory, from a middle class home, who became a minister.

"Fox's style is mature and unobtrusive and his characters are interesting if not appealing. Readers with a taste for the Russian novelists may find moderate entertainment in this somber theme and variations." Jex Martin

+ Book Week p4 My 12 '46 360w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

Library J 71:758 My 15 '46 110w

Reviewed by R. G. Davis

N Y Times p4 My 12 '46 850w

"Mr. Fox is a vigorous writer, but he is also a man of relentless memory who tries to tell all he remembers. What he has to say is interesting, but there is enough of it for at least two more novels."

+ New Yorker 22:106 My 18 '46 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 24 '46 850w

"The structure of this novel is so arbitrary, so synthetic, that if it is to be regarded as Art, no magazine serial writer need ever blush again. Its language is of that sort which, by near misses in the attempt at fine phrase, often makes the reader aware of the author's effort. Yet the book is interesting and worth attention." Philip Wylie

+ Sat R of Lit 29:11 Je 1 '46 1100w

Spring'd Republican p4d My 26 '46 360w

"'Four Men' is a significant piece of work, not only for its imaginative sweep and the richness and variety of its material, but for its sure grasp of characters and situations. In the case of the four young men, it accomplishes that rather rare thing, true character development. . . . [It] is a book of revelations rather than affirmations, and the picture it presents of modern American civilization is on the gloomy side. Even so, the colors are not entirely dark, for at the end Adam Mallory, who has solved his own personal problems, looks ahead with tempered optimism." Jennings Rice

+ Weekly Book Review p8 My 12 '46 650w

FRAGONARD, JEAN HONORE. Fragonard drawings for Ariosto, with essays by Elizabeth Mongan [and others] pub. for the National gallery of art, Washington, D.C. [and] the Harvard college library, Cambridge, Mass. 80p 137pl $18 Pantheon bks. [84s Routledge]

741.91 Ariosto, Lodovico—Orlando furioso 46-199

"A hundred and thirty-seven wash drawings by the eighteenth-century French master of the rococo, all done as illustrations for Ariosto's 'Orlando Furioso,' which have only recently been brought together in their entirety and are now for the first time reproduced. . . . Introductory essays by Jeanne Seznec, Philip Hofer, and Elizabeth Mongan." New Yorker

"'Fragonard the Draughtsman,' by Elizabeth Mongan of the Rosenwald collections, is outstanding. Her essay blends sound art criticism, a concise account of Fragonard's life, and a brief but memorable glimpse of his times. Technical experts rarely write readable prose; Elizabeth Mongan's prose is not only readable: it has a distinctive style." Leo Lerman

+ Atlantic 178:155 J1 '46 420w

"The three introductory essays—'Fragonard the Draughtsman,' by Elizabeth Mongan, 'Illustrated Editions of Orlando Furioso,' by Philip Hofer, and 'Fragonard as an Interpreter of Ariosto,' by Jean Seznec—are to me, at least, pretty overwhelming in their learning, their great labor in research and their most intelligent deductions. This volume of theirs is such a one as does not appear in every decade. In its special way, it is monumental." Stark Young

+ New Repub 113:874 D 24 '45 900w

Reviewed by Benedict Nicolson

New Statesman & Nation 31:437 Je 15 '46 390w

"This is an important book, both historically and artistically, for the drawings are lively and spirited and the reproductions superb."

+ New Yorker 22:107 Mr 9 '46 80w

"Looking through the beautiful plates and noting with Mr. Seznec, who is Associate Professor of Romance Languages and Literature at Harvard, their extraordinary faithfulness to the indications of the text, one is immediately struck by their immense vivacity and freedom of movement and the ease with which they portray every indication of the poet's in his fabulous poem. . . . One cannot say that Fragonard added anything to the 'Orlando' which was not there already, but his attunement to the Italian is an amazing instance of one artist being inspired by another."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p273 Je 8 '46 1100w

U S Quarterly Bk1 2:80 Je '46 240w

FRANCIS, DEVON EARL. Story of the helicopter. 182p il $3 Coward-McCann

629.13335 Helicopters 46-4614

"The fascinating story of rotary-wing aircraft is unfolded from the Chinese top, Leonardo da Vinci, Cayley, to progress of today, engineering achievements made in face of diversity and derision. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 42:345 J1 1 '46

Kirkus 14:139 Mr 15 '46 90w

"Recommended." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:666 My 1 '46 140w

"In 'The Story of the Helicopter' Devon Francis has produced what is probably the best of the recent books on rotary wing aircraft. It is, so far as this reviewer knows, the only book that pulls the odds and ends of the helicopter's story into shape so that the layman can understand what it is all about." Frederick Graham

+ N Y Times p37 O 27 '46 460w

"The book is addressed primarily to the general reader, but the broad, accurate, critical treatment of the subject will interest technicians also."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 2:256 S '46 130w

FRANK, BRUNO. The magician, and other stories; with an introd. by W. Somerset Maugham. 271p $2.50 Viking

47-419

Nine short stories and a section of an unfinished novel, written by a German refugee author who died in Hollywood in 1945.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Book Week p22 D 1 '46 150w

"Quiet humor, a fine polish, and intelligence—stories which all who enjoy this form will find worth reading."

+ Kirkus 14:466 S 15 '46 120w

"Though none of the stories is dull a few of them fall below the general high level. 'The Concert' is, relatively, claptrap; and 'The Moon Watch,' though genuinely pathetic, is hardly complex enough to carry its own length. 'The Magician' seems randomly chosen to be the title piece of the book: it is a commonplace version of the escape theme. The translations of the stories are the work of several different hands, of somewhat uneven sureness. Somerset Maugham's introduction is unworthy of the quality of the book which is memorable because of Bruno Frank's sensitiveness and skill." C. T. Harrison

+ N Y Times p20 N 17 '46 600w

"None of the tales are at all startling, but most of them are written with grace, a nice irony, and an infectious pleasure in telling a good story. Considering the quality of current fiction, maybe these are startling qualities, after all."

+ New Yorker 22:124 N 9 '46 60w

Reviewed by F. C. Weiskopf

Sat R of Lit 29:27 D 14 '46 600w

"What readers are most likely to see in all these stories are qualities that make for engaging reading rather than great writing: a sure professional touch, quiet sophistication, an easy way with the ways of the world—the qualities of a Continental Somerset Maugham."

Time 48:112 N 18 '46 390w

Reviewed by F. T. Marsh

Weekly Book Review p4 N 17 '46 550w

FRANK, ERNEST. Pulsed linear networks. 267p $3 McGraw

621.319 Transients (electricity). Electric circuits 45-9696

"This text, for electrical engineering students and engineers, deals with the analysis of transient linear networks through the use of differential equations. The basic electrical and mathematical concepts involved in this method are briefly reviewed in the first two chapters. The remainder of the volume describes the analysis of series and series-parallel networks containing resistance and capacitance, resistance and inductance, or all three elements. Except for the final chapter, which discusses the applications of transient analysis to electrical networks, the treatment is largely theoretical. Problems are included." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 70:687 Ag '45 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:55 O '45

FRANK, LEONHARD. Dream mates; tr. by Maxim Newmark. 245p $3 Philosophical lib.

This study in contrasts concerns itself with the love stories of two beautiful, neurotic young women. One of them has had two "wrong" marriages, and finally discovers the "right" man. The other has a terror of physical love, and comes to a happy, but insane end. Many of the scenes are in an insane asylum, somewhere on the continent of Europe.

"Though the specialist may be interested in the book as a pleasant example of recent Continental literary expressionism (the German original was published in 1936) the common reader is more likely to be bored with its loose style, confused presentation, slight substance and over-delicate eroticism." C. C. Mish

Library J 71:1464 O 15 '46 140w

"A highly symbolic, intensely humorless fantasia, partly out of a woman's mental and emotional life, but mostly out of Dali." Catharine Brody

N Y Times p24 O 13 '46 320w

"Flushed and somewhat foggy novel... Neither [of the chief characters] is entirely believable and neither is examined very deeply, but followers of Mr. Frank's rather specialized interests will probably want to see him through again."

— New Yorker 22:113 O 12 '46 100w

"The author of 'Karl and Anna' has thrown almost everything into this casserole of sex and hate—brutal husband, unfaithful wife, suicides, maiden with mad moments, mental cases and horror symbolism. It may have made sense in the original, but the translation is jerky and the meaning is murky." Lisle Bell

— Weekly Book Review p36 O 27 '46 50w

FRANK, PAT. Mr Adam. 252p $2.50 Lippincott 46-6543

Satirical novel about the atomic age. On a certain day great nuclear fission plants explode with the result that all the world's males are left completely sterile. An exception is finally found in one Homer Adam, a geologist, who had been in the depths of a lead mine at the time of the explosion. The struggle for the continuation of the human race begins.

"If procreation, treated from a purely physical standpoint, can be called good clean fun 'Mr. Adam' could be so designated... You will get a good laugh with some sad truths beneath the jesting, all done in snappy dialogue with truthfully not a dull moment." D. K. Gottlieb

+ Book Week p4 S 29 '46 450w

Booklist 43:69 N 1 '46

"Contemporary comedy which carries beyond idea novelty, this will entertain a selected, superior audience."

+ Kirkus 14:329 J1 15 '46 160w

"A lively and original novel, ingeniously contrived and laconically told. Its tone, however is closer to Thorne Smith than to Wells or Huxley." H. W. Hart

Library J 71:1127 S 1 '46 100w

"From Mr. Frank's past experience with the OWI and as a war correspondent it is obvious that—along with several other writing fellows—he has seen much to gripe about. But his book goes far beyond sour satire. He has important things to say—and, in saying them, proves once again that a laugh is worth 10,000 words." Florence Crowther

+ N Y Times p5 S 15 '46 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 10 '46 170w

Reviewed by Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 29:38 N 16 '46 400w

"Mr. Frank has not paused to consider more than the superficial complications of a sterile humanity. His plot is full of holes and his humor is often horse-play. He has, however, seized firmly the basic comedy of the idea and caught it on the rise, dashing off a fast and bouncy job. The result is entertaining with some pleasant comedy, some excellent ribbing of Washington, and some rather worn business between the usual bright and understanding wife and the usual steadfast and slow-witted (though always triumphant) husband. Anything that discusses the danger of the atom and is readable is velvet for the world these days." Thomas Sugrue

+ — Weekly Book Review p16 O 6 '46 800w

FRANK, SEMEN LIUDVIGOVICH. God with us; three meditations; tr. from the Russian by Natalie Duddington. 296p $3 Yale Univ. press [12s 6d Cape, J]

201 Christianity—Philosophy A47-221

"Dr. Frank, professor of philosophy at Moscow, was expelled from Russia, with about two hundred leading representatives of Russian thought, art and learning, in 1922. He settled in Germany, where he was highly esteemed in academic circles, till 1936, when Hitler expelled him. Since then he has been living in France. As a young man he was an enthusiastic Communist, but gradually veered round to idealism, and was one of a remarkable group, Berdyaeff, Bulgakoff, Frank and Struve, who definitely embraced the Christian cause. This is the first of his books to be translated into English." (Hibbert J) "It is an interpretation by a fine mind of the experience, to quote his own words, 'of the immanence of God in the human soul—the apprehension of the spiritual depths in which man really enters into communion with God, the Divine powers are poured into the soul, and God Himself lives and acts in us.'"

"We owe gratitude to two persons besides the author—to his son in England, who copied out the whole book in a more legible script for the translator, and to Natalie Duddington, whose version does not read like a translation; it is written in lucid and vigorous English." W. R. Inge

+ Hibbert J 44:279 Ap '46 1300w

"Even those who in these days may well hesitate to call themselves Christians will find in it a reading of life which conforms to the deepest reality and which satisfies both heart and mind." H. I. A. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 6 '46 260w

"This is not a book that can be read and understood in a week; those who are in the habit of paying attention to religious experience will, I believe, find it a profound work well worth translating. Professor Frank is a serene mystic with a lucid intelligence and he deals fairly with all levels of life." Robert Waller

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:161 Mr 2 '46 600w

FRANK, WALDO DAVID. Island in the Atlantic. 503p $3 Duell

46-6710

The island is Manhattan, and the time covered by the novel is from the Civil war to the sinking of the SS Cosmopolis (Titanic) in 1912. The principal characters are three generations of the Hartt family, and three generations of an old New York family, the Cleeves.

"Waldo Frank's new novel, heroic in length and concept, will fascinate students of social revolution, exasperate readers of conventional fiction and alternately please and annoy connoisseurs of prose." Sterling North

+ Book Week p2 S 15 '46 400w

Booklist 43:35 O 1 '46

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46

"In this novel covering three generations in New York, there will be readers who will wish Mr. Frank could have created more flesh and blood individuals and not the waxwork, frozen figures appearing in a charade against an ever-changing panoramic background. Here we see the major shortcomings of his novel. All the more pity, since he shows less inclination to hyperbole and empty rhetoric than usual, and has laid on exciting incident and fascinating detail. In fact, his admirable recapturing of old New York often serves as too sharp and realistic a contrast to his static characters, Jonathan Hartt and Evan Cleeve, suitably gloomy symbols of defeat, in the battle between the flesh and the spirit." Richard McLaughlin

Commonweal 44:600 O 4 '46 850w

"Much of it is interesting, revealing; one gets a sense of seeing inside the workings of New York's political and social life, and it's not a pretty view, but one could wish for tighter construction, surer technique."

Kirkus 14:305 J1 1 '46 200w

"This is one of Mr. Frank's best novels though not different in type from the nine which preceded it. Local interest, but not of great importance." K. T. Willis

Library J 71:1127 S 1 '46 100w

FRANK, W. D.—Continued

"Perhaps one reason why Waldo Frank's 'Island in the Atlantic' seems such an old-fashioned novel is because, compared to the books of our new novelists, it is so far removed from its author: Mr. Frank is very much out of a narrative which unfolds entirely through the thoughts and actions of its varied characters. But unfortunately it is far removed from us too, and not merely because it deals with the past but because it creates no connecting chords with the present. . . . One suspects that if the people in Mr. Frank's novel were more significant as individual human beings, that would constitute all the bridge we need between their days and problems and ours." Diana Trilling
Nation 163:387 O 5 '46 270w

Reviewed by Lawrence Lee
N Y Times p4 S 8 '46 700w

"Mr. Frank attempts to demonstrate the dangers of a national philosophy of materialism and also offers a number of naive sermons on tolerance. The ideas are praiseworthy, but the results are sterile and two-dimensional." New Yorker 22:126 O 5 '46 80w

"Whatever the final verdict upon 'Island in the Atlantic' may be, two things are certain. It will not please admirers of facile fiction, and it deserves to be read with all the seriousness with which it has been written." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 29:18 S 21 '46 950w

"'Island in the Atlantic' is a novel on the grand scale, rich in events, scenes, and characters. Its central purpose, however, is not merely to tell a tale but to examine, through the lives of two men, the ethic of a man's relationship to others and to himself. Not always too clear in the pursuit of this purpose, the book nevertheless has warmth and immediacy. Obviously it has been a long time in the writing, and it bespeaks the thoughtful collaboration of the reader, not merely a passing interest in the Manhattan of goat pastures and gas lights. Rare among novels in the extent of its preoccupation with men and with problems that seem to have greater urgency for men than for women, it is an honest and thoughtful book." Mary Ross
+ Weekly Book Review p6 S 15 '46 1050w

FRANKEN, ROSE D. (LEWIN) (MRS WILLIAM BROWN MELONEY). Soldier's wife; a comedy in three acts. 167p il $2 French 812 45-7563

Sophisticated play based on a soldier's return from the war, and his readjustment to his wife and family.

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '46

"Will be popular with little theaters." George Freedley
+ Library J 71:407 Mr 15 '46 70w

FRANKEN, ROSE D. (LEWIN) (MRS WILLIAM BROWN MELONEY). Young Claudia. 279p $2.50 Rinehart 46-7213

In this fourth novel about Claudia, she struggles with the children, the farm, her young niece, and almost decides to go back to the stage. David's return from the war makes a high point in the story.

"Claudia is as real as hamburger with onions, but there's a piquant sauce, too, that is Claudia's own recipe—our Rose Franken's. Anyhow, she'll never go stale." O. C.
+ Book Week p14 N 17 '46 120w

Booklist 43:117 D 15 '46
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '46
Kirkus 14:435 S 1 '46 170w

"Those who already know the Naughtons (Claudia, David, two small fry) will be caught up afresh in her newfound happiness—David's return from the war." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p24 N 24 '46 120w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Weekly Book Review p36 N 17 '46 100w

FREEDMAN, SAMUEL. Two-way radio. 506p $5 Ziff-Davis

621.384 Radio telephone 46-1450

"This book provides a comprehensive survey of the applications and potential uses of two-way radio systems. Applications to railroads, police, fire, forestry service, motor buses, motor trucks, ships, airplanes, taxicabs, ambulances, personal cars, and farms are all discussed. . . . The book also treats the planning of two-way systems, the principles of and equipment for amplitude modulation and frequency modulation systems, and systems for special conditions such as carrier and induction systems. Maintenance of equipment is treated briefly, and there is one chapter on licenses and regulation. Although many technical problems are discussed, the book will be of more interest to persons concerned with exploring the uses of two-way radio and planning communication systems based on it, than to radio engineers concerned with research in the field." N Y New Tech Bks

Library J 71:183 F 1 '46 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:29 Ap '46

FREEMAN, ALLEN WEIR. Five million patients; the professional life of a health officer. 299p $3 Scribner

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Public health

Reminiscences of an American doctor who has spent most of his professional life as a public health officer and as a teacher of public health at Johns Hopkins.

"Dr. Freeman's narrative has many interesting facets. . . . I can recommend it if you are in need of a tonic for Americanism." Peter Williamson

+ Book Week p4 D 1 '46 400w

Booklist 43:168 F 1 '47

Reviewed by E. L. Keyes
Commonweal 45:150 N 22 '46 140w

Kirkus 14:447 S 1 '46 170w

"This informal and unpretentious book ranks well in the series of delightful books written by doctors and enjoyed by laymen. Each episode is a short chapterette (if one may coin a word), often summed up in a pleasant and perceptive sentence which one wants to remember." Fern McGrath

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 24 '46 150w

FREEMAN, ELMER STONE. The Lord's supper in Protestantism. 174p $1.75 Macmillan
265.3 Lord's supper 45-4581

"Mr. Freeman discusses Jesus' intention in instituting the communion by examining the New Testament accounts of the Last Supper. . . . He then shows how the Last Supper as an event gradually solidified into the Lord's Supper as a rite, using not only the New Testament but the earliest patristic writings with intelligence and reverent discrimination. . . . This necessary background takes the first third of the book. The second third begins with the Reformation. The contributions of Luther, Zwingli and Calvin are carefully evaluated. . . . The final third of the book discusses the relation of the Lord's Supper to Christian religion." Christian Century

"This is the best historical study of the Lord's Supper that has yet appeared in English. . . . In the volume under review, the minister of the First Congregational church in Menasha, Wisconsin, has combined adequate learning and a clear and simple style of writing with the working knowledge of a minister of religion. The result is a book whose insights should enrich the observance of the Lord's Supper in every Protestant church in the English-speaking world." H. E. Fey

+ Christian Century 63:144 Ja 30 '46 750w

"Besides his excellent academic qualifications, the author's experience in both Episcopalian and Congregational ministries brings him to his study with unusually fine appreciation of the needs of his readers." G. M. Gibson

+ J Religion 26:306 O '46 330w

"It is a scholarly treatise, reaching into the historic facts and boldly exploring religious parallels in the pagan mysteries. . . . There is much carefully selected liturgical material and instruction for celebration of the Lord's Supper in extra church observance, which should be useful to the Protestant minister."

+ Kirkus 13:61 F 1 '45 160w

FREEMAN, GRAYDON LAVERNE, and STERN, MRS EDITH (MENDEL). Mastering your nerves; how to relax through action. 24p $2 Harper

131.32 Nervous system—Hygiene SG46-125

Designed for "normal" people, who have nerves, and need cures for nervous tension. The book contains specific suggestions about the problem of outwitting the nerves. Glossary. Index.

Book Week p8 Mr 3 '46 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '46

Kirkus 13:556 D 15 '45 60w

"The basic idea behind this advice is sound enough, viz., that stimuli produce tension if there is insufficient outlet. But the therapy inferred from this principle is far too diagrammatic to be more than on the aspirin or daily dozen level." B. D. Lewin

Sat R of Lit 29:59 Mr 30 '46 150w

FREEMAN, LARRY. See Freeman, G. L.

FREEMAN, MRS MAE (BLACKER), and FREEMAN, IRA MAXIMILIAN. Fun with figures. 60p il $1.25 Random house

513.9 Mathematical recreations 46-6471

"In [these] pages you will become acquainted with some of the facts and uses of geometry by making drawings and cut-outs and by other interesting activities. Besides being fun to do, the projects will give you a real understanding of one of the most important branches of mathematics." (Intro) For grades seven to nine.

Booklist 43:38 O 1 '46

Kirkus 14:390 Ag 15 '46 120w

"Stimulating to young people, ages 12-14." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 71:1336 O 1 '46 70w

Sat R of Lit 29:66 N 9 '46 50w

FRENEAU, PHILIP MORIN. Last poems, ed. by Lewis Leary. 149p $3.75 Rutgers univ. press

811

46-5200

"In this volume Mr. Leary, who has already given us incomparably the best biography of Freneau, has assembled fifty poems which appeared in various periodicals between 1815, when the last collected edition of Freneau's work was published, and 1832, the date of his death. Much of Freneau's poetry in this volume as in others is topical. . . . Because he so frequently took occasion to comment in verse on the current events of his time, his writings remain today unusually well fenestrated toward the past. Among the fifty poems now assembled are lines to a pioneer aeronaut, a celebration of the Erie Canal then in process of construction, a poem on the reopening of the Park Theater in New York, an elegy on the wreck of the packet ship Albion off the Irish coast, a lament for the death of Robert Fulton." Weekly Book Review

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Book Week p13 Mr 24 '46 180w

"Philip Freneau was the first poet of our republic in the days when it was coming into being. He was the poetic voice of our Revolution and of the liberal party after the Revolution was accomplished. But he was also the bearer to us of the eighteenth century enlightenment, of its spirit of reason and released emotion, of its characteristically American blend of action and speculation. We today should know Freneau better and cherish him more fondly. The publication of these 'Last Poems' will not help in our rediscovery except, by their reprinting in book form, to remind us that he wrote more and better poetry than this." R. E. Spiller

Sat R of Lit 29:40 Mr 30 '46 1000w

"Freneau's reputation as a literary artist will not be enhanced by the rescue of these poems of his old age, but neither are these writings inferior to the general run of his previously published work. They serve to fill out the picture of a versatile and vigorous writer whose continued neglect would constitute a serious reproach to American literary scholarship." G. F. Whicher

Weekly Book Review p24 Ap 14 '46 550w

FREUCHEN, PETER. White man. 275p $2.50 Rinehart

46-6618

Historical novel based on life in Denmark and the Danish colony in Greenland in the time of Frederick the Fourth. In 1721 a Christian mission and trading settlement was established in Greenland. To it, among others, came Peter Haseman and his wife Karen, from a Danish prison. The clean stretches of the new country and the Eskimos fascinated Peter, and together he and Karen found a new life.

Reviewed by Stephen Elliston

Book Week p45 D 1 '46 270w

Booklist 43:155 Ja 15 '47

Kirkus 14:399 Ag 15 '46 200w

"Good historical novel with a grim picture of the horrible prison life of the era and the rough and adventurous life of the settlers. Author is a well-known explorer. For larger libraries." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 71:1464 O 15 '46 80w

"The climactic ice foray, it must be admitted, is inadequate, being grueling in the tradition of James Ramsey Ullman rather than that of Peary or Byrd. But most of what comes before is quite satisfactory. 'White Man' is a lusty novel and, at the same time, a novel without lust—even if that seems a paradox. Flogging and sex there are aplenty, but the latter is handled discreetly enough to soothe a Boston censor." Richard Match

N Y Times p25 O 27 '46 750w

"When the author gets to talking about Eskimos (a people he knows very well indeed), he is interesting, and even amusing. If he had only had more to say about these natives of Greenland and less about the brutality of white men, this book might have been as readable as his 'Arctic Adventure'."

New Yorker 22:115 O 26 '46 120w

"The various love stories and minor plots—they are all minor—in the book are completely subsidiary to the anthropological studies, the settings, and the brief examinations of psychology. The book is written by a man who is more an observer and analyst than a cunning contriver of plots." Phil Stong

Sat R of Lit 30:19 Ja 11 '47 360w

"Between the lines of this novel is Freuchen. The old Greenlandic pours what he himself learned in the north about a simple way of life and the essentials of morality. It never becomes a maudlin rejection of 'civilization' but presents a view of necessity; a lesson in adaptation, and a humorous catalogue of human frailties. And since this is an historical novel, we get a long glance back to the days of the Vikings, and the question is raised as to what became of the lost adventurers and whether they do not live in many a blue-eyed descendant eating blubber." Ernestine Evans

Weekly Book Review p20 O 27 '46 1050w

FREUND, PHILIP. Edward Zoltan; a novel. 256p $2.50 Beechhurst press

46-20798

Another volume in the author's chronicle of a wealthy Hungarian-American family. The principal character here is Edward, son of Jan Zoltan. Left to himself after the marriages of his father and his sister, Edward becomes interested in the artistic life of New York, falls in love with a ballerina, becomes the financial backer of a ballet school, but in the end is disillusioned.

Kirkus 14:282 Je 15 '46 160w

"In his undogmatic, dignified way, Philip Freund hints at a great many ponderable ideas. His fault is so often to be the victim of unexplorative thinking and formulation. As one who uses Freudian terminology, for example, he is guilty of explaining Edward's repressions and aversions very superficially. What is worse, as a creator of character, he has a weakness for neat, naive dualisms: 'laughing Laura' is actually hysterical, and desperate; practical pushing Jacob is fundamentally 'romantic.' As a writer who wants to convey a sense of his city, he is only structurally successful." Isa Kapp

N Y Times p18 O 6 '46 490w

"The writing is mannered and almost stilted, but, except for the author's preoccupation with reflecting surfaces, not unpleasing. . . On the whole, though, Mr. Freund shows to better advantage in his short stories."

+ New Yorker 22:117 S 21 '46 120w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p4d S 15 '46 440w

"Technically the book is flawed by the fact that it appears to be a sequel to a previous novel and the reader unfamiliar with that work is repeatedly disturbed by the mention and sometimes the intrusion of characters who have no apparent relevance here. . . The style inclines to be somewhat stilted, either overly flat or pretentious, with lapses into the pathetic fallacy. Most of the characters are two-dimensional, and the worlds in which they move, though recognizable, are also without depth. . . For all its suggestive talk about morality, this is not, by the Jamesian definition, a work that is suffused with moral significance, simply because not enough 'felt life' went to the producing of it. And there is just enough evidence of Mr. Freund's acquaintance with life on various planes and of his sensitiveness to it to make the reader the more impatient with him for his want of intensity." Babette Deutsch

— Weekly Book Review p32 O 6 '46 1150w

FREY, MRS RUBY (FRAZIER). Red morning. 380p $3 Putnam

46-6088

Historical novel of the Ohio country in the 1750's. The heroine is Jane Bell, who goes into the new territory when her first husband dies, and survives all the terrors of the frontier, including capture by the Indians. Her second husband, the trader, John Frazier, is based on a real frontier character, and Washington, Braddock, Franklin, and others appear in the story.

"'Red Morning' is long, and at times incongruously feminine in style, but it's carefully and competently done and should sell briskly. It contains enough sex to satisfy the best-seller reader, but Miss Frey, unlike many of the lady literati, has not squirted it on with a grease gun. In her battle scenes the author should learn the great writers' trick of slowing down high-speed action to the point where the reader can live in the story." Clinton Textor

+ Book Week p4 S 15 '46 240w

Booklist 43:16 S '46

"Excellent as much of it is, there's too much of it and the story bogs down in repetitive details and slow motion picture."

+ Kirkus 14:278 Je 15 '46 170w

"First novel by a new author of real promise. Recommended." R. P. Tubby
+ Library J 71:978 J1 '46 70w

"What makes this novel different from the usual costume romance is that by limiting herself to events within Jane's immediate range, the author has endowed another era with an air of everyday familiarity. The teeming and perilous life at the outpost is given vivid credibility through insistence on small details and faithful accounts of the endless comings and goings at the blockhouse. . . In her first novel, Mrs. Frey has managed splendidly the integration of her historic and emotional themes." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p14 J1 28 '46 550w

"The flavor of the lesser folk of the drama, the scouts and hunters and farmers and parsons, is intimately real. . . And men, such as Washington, Braddock, Ben Franklin, and Governor Dinwiddie talk and act like human beings in a situation they are creating right there in that fresh moment of time, instead of acting like characters in a historical tableau, with careful posturing. The history seems, I must confess, a little realer than the romance. But that is in itself a triumph, the reward of Miss Frey's labor among the records. Her novel is certainly going to have several simultaneous kinds of appeal, and the large audience she deserves." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 29:42 J1 27 '46 410w

"The French and Indian wars furnish the background for this vivid first novel, for which Mrs. Frey has drawn extensively from family records, as well as state papers and personal journals of the time." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p4d Ag 11 '46 360w

"Although the narrative was prolonged in preparation, it hasn't withered on the vine. Research has been pruned and the plot unfolds in dramatic tempo." George Conrad

+ Weekly Book Review p6 Ag 4 '46 360w

Wis Lib Bul 42:168 D '46

FREYRE, GILBERTO. The masters and the slaves; tr. from the Portuguese . . . by Samuel Putnam. 537p $7.50 Knopf

918.1 Brazil—Civilization. Slavery in Brazil. Negroes in Brazil. Indians of South America. 46-6716

Translation of the author's Casa Grande e Senzala published in Brazil in 1933. 'Its title, literally 'The Big House and the Slave Hut,' suggests the key to the secret of Brazil's formation. On the one hand, there was the great landholder in his plantation house, exercising a power greater than royal captains or bishops; in the shadow was the slave hut. The interplay between the two set the pattern for the population, its living and dying, its loving and eating, its singing and play. Three chief elements are considered by Mr. Freyre—the Portuguese conqueror, the aboriginal Indians, the imported Negro.' (N Y Times) Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. B. Watson

Book Week p4 N 24 '46 450w

Kirkus 14:406 Ag 15 '46 120w

"Freyre's analysis of Brazilian character has a candor seldom found among Latin-American writers. He credits the rough vigor of the pioneers, uncowed by Crown or Church; he sees democratic practice breaking through feudal forms. . . A word of thanks is due for the footnotes with which the book overflows; footnotes which, far from impeding the account, illumine the recital. Thanks, too, go to the translator, Samuel Putnam." Hubert Herring

N Y Times p16 O 6 '46 1300w

"Much has already been written concerning Gilberto Freyre and this study. Most of it has been glowing eulogy; and it is a great book, one of the greatest to appear in Latin America during our century. Yet it does have faults. Any specialist will find many points to quibble over and places where Freyre has not used sufficient criteria in his use of social theories." Charles Wagley

+ Pol Sci Q 61:625 D '46 1050w

"It is hard to convey to the American reader the importance and scope of this book, since there is nothing quite like it in our own literature. Rumors of its significance have preceded its translation for the last thirteen years, since the day its original publication won for its young author recognition as Brazil's leading sociologist. But it would be a pity if its size or its cost or its theme should limit its reading circle to sociologists, anthropologists and Latin-American specialists, for it is one of those rare scholarly works that is at the same time of general interest to any one who is concerned with man's quest for self-knowledge and self-understanding. And it throws the kind of light on human life, and is written with the literary skill, that is usually associated with the novel rather than with the sociological treatise." B. D. Wolfe

+ Weekly Book Review p2 O 6 '46 1250w

"Particular mention should be made of the magnificent job Samuel Putnam has done in translating the work. Glancing through the footnotes and the glossary, one is impressed by the amount of research he himself has done in presenting this masterpiece to an English-speaking public." C. M. Batchelor

+ Yale R n s 36:362 winter '47 700w

FRIEDLANDER, MORT. Yellow leaf. 185p $2
A. A. Wyn, inc, 67 W 44th st, N.Y. 18

46-11906

Quietly told story of life in an old people's home, where elderly men and women live out the last chapter of their lives, waiting with dignity for the inevitable.

"Some books are provocative and some are merely provoking. 'The Yellow Leaf' is unfortunately among the latter. Its subject matter, life in an old folks' home, is rich in possibilities, and it is provoking to contemplate the penetrating, poignant story this might have been as contrasted with the sentimental superficial concoction it actually is." D. S.

— Book Week p7 O 13 '46 110w

Booklist 43:70 N 1 '46

"The whole book is a good deal more sprightly than one might expect from its subject-matter. Inevitable moments of pathos are in it, of course, but they are offset by surprising interludes of wobbly gaiety that are pleasant to remember. . . . Without being saccharine or whimsical, Mr. Friedlander makes one like and enjoy his old people because he likes and enjoys them himself." E. S. Holsaert

+ N Y Times p10 S 29 '46 380w

"The prose is straightforward, the plot credible, and the care provided by the home well above the current fictional average for such institutions, which should come as a pleasant change."

+ New Yorker 22:99 S 28 '46 70w

Reviewed by Grace Frank

Sat R of Lit 29:21 N 9 '46 360w

"No one has yet reported on what takes place beyond the limits of time, but this simple story, whose shifting scenes reduce life to essentials, shows what goes on in the waiting-room of eternity." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p5 S 29 '46 360w

FRIEDMAN, MILTON, and KUZNETS, SIMON SMITH. Income from independent professional practice. 599p il $4.50 Nat. bur. of economic research 331.27 Fees, Professional. Income—U.S.

46-2729

"Five fields of endeavor—medicine, dentistry, law, certified public accountancy, and consulting engineering—are examined in this comprehensive survey of the forces which affect professional incomes. The emphasis is upon the determinants of income from independent professional practice, and the volume explores the influence of a number of diverse factors ranging from the difficulty encountered in entering a field, to the location of a man's practice, and the degree of his specialization." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The text is replete with apologies for the incompleteness of the material and with assumptions necessary to bridge over gaps in the process. Data secured by questionnaire, even when gained through the most expert questioning, are proverbially inaccurate and unreliable. . . . But however critical the lay reader may be of this work, as a whole, it must be accepted as a forthright, painstaking study in a sector calling for much study. The layman may not derive much benefit from a reading. The student of scientific research may study it with admiration." R. W. Kelso

+ — Ann Am Acad 247:202 S '46 440w

"The precise raison d'être of this timeless scholastic demonstration of virtuosity is not clear. The authors in the role of pure economists explicitly shy off from many interesting problems creditably raised by them, such as, for example, that of the forces more or less limiting recruitment of the professions to something like a socio-economic stratification of the population. That is understandable. Their almost complete ignoring, however, of the distinctly economic problem of gross income (cost to the public), and the ratio of gross to net (cost to the practitioner, or efficiency not only of the individual but of the given institution), is surprising and unfortunate. . . . It is impossible in a brief review to do justice to the book's excellent refinements, qualifications, and speculative considerations of numerous other facts and factors, including specialization, comparison of regions, large versus small communities, etc.—all more or less abortive." Isidor Lazarus

+ — Columbia Law R 46:680 J1 '46 900w

"Particularly interesting and informative is the attempt to assess in a quantitative manner the reasons for the higher level of income among professional personnel in comparison with those engaged in other pursuits."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:107 Je '46 280w

FRIEND, OSCAR JEROME (OWEN FOX JEROME, pseud). The corpse awaits. 256p $2 Curl

46-17425

Detective story.

"It is a wacky story if you ever read one. A fairly good guesser should be able to figure most of it out after a few chapters." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 Je 9 '46 120w

"A readily readable, if undistinguished story." Anthony Boucher

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p10 J1 4 '46 30w

Spring'd Republican p4d J1 14 '46 180w

FRIER, WILLIAM T., and HOLLER, ALBERT C. Introduction to industrial chemistry. 368p il $3 McGraw

660 Chemistry, Technical 45-9860

"Authors are both industrial chemists. This elementary textbook is written especially for training classes in industry and for students of limited scientific background. Fundamental chemical principles with largest part of book devoted to industrial applications." (Library J) Selected list of motion pictures. Index.

"[The book] has no application and is not intended by the authors for the more specialized and more thorough courses such as are given in our universities and colleges. . . . This being the first edition, undoubtedly the authors will make certain needful corrections in the next edition. . . . These criticisms should not be held to detract from this very excellent book which decidedly fills a need for the extension and night courses. The book is well printed with an adequate index and is bound nicely." R. N. Shreve

+ — Chem & Eng N 24:566 F 25 '46 450w

Library J 70:531 Je 1 '45 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 30:53 O '45

FRISKEY, MRS MARGARET (RICHARDS).
Adventure begins at home [pictures by children]. 48p $2 Childrens press

46-11854

The pictures for this book were made by children in the Chicago public schools, and Margaret Friskey made up a story to go with them. All royalties from the sale of the book scholarship fund.

Book Week p3 N 10 '46 150w

Reviewed by Nelle McCalla

Library J 71:1808 D 15 '46 90w

"Around these pictures Margaret Friskey has cleverly woven a story of a city boy who brought home a lost horse and his adventures in seeking its owner. There is a discrepancy here, for though 7 to 10 year olds will like the pictures for their brilliance and their subject matter it seems only fair, since all but one of the paintings were done by boys and girls in their teens, that the artists' contemporaries should have a text which would interest them too. Nevertheless, this unusual collection should spur children of all ages on to further experimentation with the paint box." E. L. Buell

N Y Times p27 D 15 '46 180w

"These full-color reproductions are of unusual fidelity; they seem painted on the page, defying black-and-white to do them justice, but in the book have the same effect as the originals."

+ Weekly Book Review p12 N 10 '46 330w

Wis Lib Bul 42:170 D '46

FRISKEY, MRS MARGARET (RICHARDS).
Chicken Little, count-to-ten; pictures by Katherine Evans. [28p] $1 Childrens' press, inc, Throop & Monroe sts, Chicago

46-1775

Picture story book about a little chicken who forgot how to drink, and in his process of learning, the child reader learns to count to ten.

"Katherine Evans' pictures are done in lovely deep tones of brown and gold and green, and there is an amazing amount of information running through the story." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p19 Mr 31 '46 180w

"Children will enjoy the counting game, and the gay simplicity of some of the pictures. The six fat toads, and the seven redcapped monkeys, have especial charm of design." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 24 '46 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '46

Kirkus 14:125 Mr 1 '46 130w

"Recommended for purchase if funds are not limited." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 71:1054 Ag '46 80w

"A distinctive picture book varying a nursery classic enough to make a new story."

+ Weekly Book Review p9 My 19 '46 400w

FRISKEY, MRS MARGARET (RICHARDS).
Johnny and the monarch; pictures by Katherine Evans; ed. by Illa Podendorf. [24p] $1 Childrens press

46-3968

Picture-story book about a small boy living on a farm, and his pets, a dog and a duck. They follow the life cycle of a butterfly among their other adventures. For the very young.

"An entertaining introduction to natural science."

+ Book Week p14 Je 2 '46 120w

Kirkus 14:251 Je 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by M. M. Clark

Library J 71:1131 S 1 '46 80w

"All this in bright hues, just enough like life to be taken for it by four-year-olds, and decorative in general effect. Do you remember the emergence of your first personal butterfly from the cocoon? There was a wonder worth a book for little people." M. L. Becker

+ Weekly Book Review p7 Je 16 '46 190w

FRISKEY, MRS MARGARET (RICHARDS).
Johnny Cottontail; pictures by Lucia Patton. [32p] $1 McKay

46-3807

Picture-story book about a lonely rabbit who adopted a family of four orphan bunnies and made friends with a dog.

"The pictures are in pink and black and white and Lucia Patton's bunnies are very cunning." P. A. Whitney

+ Book Week p11 Je 2 '46 100w

Kirkus 14:240 My 15 '46 100w

"Unimportant but agreeable and fairly durable for this kind of book. For the read-aloud-age and seven- and eight-year-olds." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 71:827 Je 1 '46 30w

FROESCH, CHARLES, and PROKOSCH, WALTER. Airport planning. 250p il $7 Wiley

629.136 Airports

46-5509

An analysis of basic problems in airport planning and design, presented from a functional viewpoint.

Booklist 43:9 S '46

"The great value of this book lies in the fact that it is written by two men of wide practical experience, the chief engineer and the architect of Eastern Air Lines. They know the type of information that is needed by anyone planning an airport to meet specific conditions and they present that information in concise and understandable form."

+ Eng N 137:112 JI 11 '46 120w

Library J 71:183 F 1 '46 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:35 JI '46

"The data which has been taken from various sources is up-to-date, well chosen, and clearly integrated to the text. The scant treatment given to the phase of airport planning concerned with personal flying, however, leaves incomplete the picture of an airport system handling all types of air traffic. Excellent illustrations and the logical organization make this book easy for the student and engineer to use."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:257 S '46 200w

FROST, ELIZABETH (HOLLISTER) (MRS W. D. BLAIR). Mary and the spinners. 191p $2.50 Coward-McCann

Mary, Virgin—Fiction

46-11922

According to an old manuscript there were five other maidens who were companions of the Virgin Mary, who lived together as child spinners at the Temple in Jerusalem. This story follows those five girls as one by one they grew to adulthood. At a moment in time when a crisis appeared in each of their lives they remembered the gentle Mary and called on her for help. And at that moment the Christ child was born.

"This beautifully imagined tale of what might have happened to the girls who were close to the Virgin Mary in her youth is based on the writings of the Early Fathers, in which the girls are mentioned by name and in which it is also recorded that a catalepsy of nature took place at the moment of Christ's birth. Written with an almost Biblical lyricness, 'Mary and the Spinners' brings ancient Palestine to life and gives to the birth of Christ a sense of warm immediacy without in the least distracting from its wonder and mystery—a perfect book for Christmas reading." Dorothy Sparks

+ Book Week p48 D 1 '46 450w

Cath World 164:380 Ja '47 150w

Reviewed by M. A. Johnson

Library J 71:1542 N 1 '46 80w

"A bright and moving portrait of the child who became the Mother of our Lord." Mary Ross

+ Weekly Book Review p13 N 17 '46 750w

FROST, FRANCES MARY. Mid-century. 99p
$2 Creative age
811 46-5106

Collection of short lyrics by an American poet. Some of them deal with simple country living; others with the war.

"In 'Mid-Century,' Frances Frost attempts a synthesis of peaceful rural scenery with the steel-pocked terror of war, but she fails. A deeply thoughtful poet such as Herbert Read or Richard Eberhardt does succeed, perhaps because he relies more on the long range of idea and less on the quick shorthand notation of mood employed by Miss Frost. Her attitudes seem, at times, both fatuous and sentimental, as when she advises children to be no more afraid of cockpits stuttering death than of the alighting gulls." Marguerite Young
N Y Times p12 J1 21 '46 320w

Reviewed by George Snell
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 11 '46 30w

"For the reader who enjoys delicately lovely poems . . . Frances Frost's 'Mid-Century' will prove a most satisfying volume. The author will be recognized by many as a writer of incidental poetry which has appeared in the better known women's magazines. Her new book merits attention, for she has something to say and does so in an arresting manner." C. M. Sauer

+ Springf'd Republican p5 Ag 2 '46 300w

Reviewed by M. L. Rosenthal
Weekly Book Review p30 N 17 '46 300w

